PSAL. LVI.

To the chief muſician upon Jonath-elem rechokim a. ‖ Michtam of David, when the * Philiſtins took him in Gath b. ‖ Or, a golden Pſalm of David. 1 Sam. 21. 11.

a Which is ſuppoſed to be the Name of a Song. But many render it, as the words ſignifie, Concerning the dumb Dove afar off. All which agrees very well to David in his preſent circumſtances. He calls himſelf a Dove for his innocency; and ſolly (which is aſcribed to the Dove, Hoſea 7. 11.) in caſting himſelf into this ſnare; and for his vexation and perſecution by his Enemies, thoſe birds of prey; and for his ſad and mournful poſture. Silent he was, and it was his prudence ſo to be in this place and condition; and he was in a place remote enough from his Fathers Houſe, and from Gods Sanctuary where his Heart was. b When being chaſed by Saul reſtleſs malice, he had put himſelf into the hands and power of the Philiſtins at Gath. Where when he was, the following Meditations came into his Mind, which after his eſcape he digeſted into this Order and Pſalm.

David, praying to God, complaineth of his ſufferings, and magnifieth his Word, 1—10. is confident of Gods fulfilling it, and promiſeth to praiſe him for it, 11, 12.

1 BE merciful unto me, O God, for man c would ſwallow me up d: he fighting daily oppreſſeth me.

c (i. e.) Men, weak and miſerable Men, as the word ſignifies, whom thou canſt cruſh in an inſtant; Saul and his Courtiers, who have driven me hither; and now Achiſh and the Philiſtins, who have oft fought my ruine, which now they have opportunity to effect. d Like wild and ravenous Beaſts, rather than Men. Heb. hath ſwallowed me up. The thing is begun, and in a manner done, if thou doſt not miraculouſly prevent it.

Pſal. mine Obſervers. 2 † Mine enemies e would daily ſwallow me up: for they be many that fight againſt me f, O thou moſt High g.

e Heb. my Obſervers, that narrowly look to all my paths, and watch for my Haltings, and for an Opportunity to deſtroy me. f They truſt to their great numbers; wherein they know themſelves to be much ſuperiour to me. g Who from thine high place beholdeſt all their plots, and canſt moſt eaſily diſturb and blaſt them.

3 What time I am afraid I will truſt in thee h.

h When I have the greateſt cauſe of Fear, I will relye upon thy Providence and Promiſe for my Deliverance.

* Ver. 10, 11. * Pſ. 118. 6. Heb. 13. 6 4 * In God I will praiſe his word i; in God I have put my truſt, I * will not fear * what fleſh k can do unto me.

i The Senſe is, either, 1. I will praiſe or boaſt in the Lords Word, or the Lord for his Word. Or 2. With or by the Lord (i. e.

By his favour or help.) I will praiſe his Word. Or rather, 3. This, a: I humbly conceive: There are many things to be praiſed and celebrated in God, his Power, and Wiſdom, &c. but amongſt all and above all, I ſhall at this time praiſe him for his Word, which he hath magnified above all his Name, as is ſaid Pſal. 138. 2. even for his promiſes of protection and deliverance, made to his people in all their exigencies, and particularly and eſpecially for that promiſe of the Kingdom made to me; for which I will now praiſe him, becauſe I am as ſure of its accompliſhment, as if I had it already in mine hand. k Infirm and mortal men, altogether unable to oppoſe thy infinite Majeſty; called Fleſh by way of contempt, as Pſal. 78. 39. Iſa. 31. 3. Jer. 17. 5.

5 Every day ‖ they wreſt my words l: all their thoughts are againſt me for evil m. ‖ Or, my words bring ſorrow.

l They miſconſtrue and pervert my moſt innocent expreſſions, and turn them into matter of Calumny, wherewith they may incenſe Saul againſt me. Or, They perplex my Affairs. m It is their whole ſtudy to do me miſchief.

6 They gather themſelves together n, they hide themſelves o, they mark my ſteps p when they wait for my ſoul q.

n After they have ſeverally imployed their Thoughts againſt me, they meet together to compare their thoughts, and to put them in execution. o They lurk ſecretly; either that they may pry into all my moſt private actions; or that they may ſurprize me with unlikely unawares. Compare Pſal. 10. 8. Prov. 1. 11. p (i. e.) All my goings and doings, that they may find ſome occaſion to reproach, or entangle and ſo deſtroy me. q Or Life, to take it away from me.

7 Shall they eſcape by iniquity r? in thine anger caſt down s the people t, O God.

r Shall they ſecure themſelves by ſuch injurious and malicious practices, whereby they do not only vex me, but provoke and deſpite thee? Shall they have ſucceſs inſtead of the punihments which thou haſt threatned, and they have deſerved? God forbid. But the words may be read without an Interrogation, By their iniquity they hope to eſcape; or, they do eſcape, at preſent: But Lord do not ſuffer them thus to eſcape. s This is oppoſed to their preſent exaltation and triumphs over poor David, and to their hopes and confidence of ſafety and ſucceſs. t (i. e.) Theſe people, of whom I am ſpeaking, to wit, my malicious and wicked Enemies, as well thoſe followers of Saul, as theſe Philiſtins amongſt whom I now am.

8 Thou telleſt my wandrings u, put thou my tears into thy bottle x: * are they not in thy book y? * Mal. 3. 16.

u Here I have been hunted from place to place, and am now driven hither. x Regard and remember, and pity them. y But why do I pray to God to do that which I am well aſſured he is of himſelf inclined to do, and hath already done?

9 When I cry unto thee, then ſhall mine enemies turn back z: this I know, for God is for me.

z When I have no other Arms or Force, which is my preſent caſe, my Prayers ſhall be ſufficient to overthrow mine Enemies.

10 * In God will I praiſe his word: in the LORD * Ver. 4. will I praiſe his word a.

a What I have already engaged to do, v. 4. that I do again and again promiſe to do, and I cannot ſufficiently praiſe thy Goodneſs in making Promiſes, and thy Faithfulneſs in keeping them.

11 In God have I put my truſt: I will not be afraid what man can do unto me.

12 * Thy vows are upon me b, O God: I will render praiſes unto thee. * Pſ. 61. 8.

b As I have prayed to thee, and am aſſured that thou wilt deliver me, ſo in confidence thereof I have made Vows to expreſs my gratitude to thee: and I acknowledge my ſelf obliged, and do reſolve to perform them.

13 For * thou haſt delivered my ſoul from death c: * Pſ. 116. will not thou deliver my feet from falling d, that I may walk before God e in * the light of the living f? 8, 9. * Job 33. 30.

c Which my Enemies deſigned, and my extream dangers threatned. d I am confident that thou wilt deliver, becauſe of thy promiſes, and my former experience. e (i. e.) That I may pleaſe, and ſerve, and glorifie thee, as this Phraſe implies, Gen. 5. 24. comp. with Heb. 11. 5. as alſo Gen. 6. 9. and 17. 1. 1 Sam. 2. 30. which is the great end for which I deſire Life. f Either 1. In Heaven. Or rather, 2. In this Life, which is here oppoſed to the Death laſt mentioned, as it is Job 33. 30. which is called Light, Job 3. 20. as Death is called Darkneſs, Job 10. 21, 22. and oft elſewhere, and which is expreſſed, by beholding the Light, and the Sun, Eccleſ. 11. 7.

*Pſal.138.8. 2 I will cry unto God moſt high: unto God that * performeth all things for me f.

f Heb. that performeth (or perfecteth or finiſheth, as this word is rendred, Pſal. 138. 8. (i. e.) will certainly perform or finiſh) for or towards, or concerning me. He doth not expreſs what he performeth, or perfecteth, or fulfilleth, but leaveth it to be underſtood, as being eaſie to be underſtood: He performeth, or perfecteth, to wit, all that he hath promiſed, engageth himſelf to perform, what he hath begun to do, or what is yet to be performed; it being uſual in the Hebrew Language to underſtand a Verbal Noun after the Verb. He implies that God is not like men, who make large promiſes, but either through inability or careleſneſs, or unfaithfulneſs, do not perform them, but will certainly be as good as his word.

|| Or, he reproacheth him that would ſwallow me up. 3 He ſhall ſend g from heaven, and ſave me || from the reproach of him that would ſwallow me up h; Selah. * God ſhall ſend forth his mercy and his truth i.

As Inſtruments of Deſtruction, as they are in Lyons. Or rather, 2. As Inſtruments of Speech, as they are in Men; for it here follows by way of explication, as the manner is, and their Tongue. And both ſeem to ſignifie their wicked and pernicious Calumnies, of which he every where complains, and particularly in the Hiſtory, to which this Pſalm ſeems to relate, 1 Sam. 24. 10. and by which they deſigned to promote his deſtruction. q (i. e.) They grievouſly wound my Name, and are deviſed to do me miſchief.

PSAL. LVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm was Compoſed, as very many others were, upon the occaſion of thoſe wickedly Calumnies, and unjuſt Cenſures, and Sentences which were paſſed upon him by Saul and his Courtiers.

To the chief muſician, || * Al-taſchith, Michtam of David. || Or, deſtroy me, a Golden Pſalm of David.

David reproving wicked Judges, deſcribeth their Nature, 1—5. and prayeth God to puniſh and deſtroy them, 6—9. for his own Glory, and the joy of the Righteous, 10, 11.

1 DO ye indeed ſpeak righteouſneſs a, O congregation b? do ye judge uprightly, O ye ſons of men c? * Pſal. 57. Tit.

a The queſtion implies a Denial: You cenſure me freely without any regard to Truth or Juſtice. b The word ſignifies a Band or Company of Men; and ſeems to point at Sauls Judges and Counſellers; who met together to conſult what they ſhould do againſt David; and probably paſſed a Sentence upon him, as guilty of Treaſon and Rebellion. c So he calls them; either, 1. In contempt and oppoſition to the ſons of God, or good Men. Or 2. By way of admonition, to mind them that they alſo were Men, and muſt give an account to God for all their hard ſpeeches, and unrighteous decrees againſt him.

2 Yea, in heart d ye work wickedneſs; ye * weigh the violence of your hands e in the earth f. *Pſ.82.2.

d Or, with your Heart, with free choice and conſent, and not only by conſtraint, and out of compliance with Saul. e Or, you weigh violence, or injuſtice with your hands. The Phraſe of weighing hath reſpect to their Office, which was to adminiſter Juſtice, which is uſually expreſſed by a pair of Ballances. So he intimates that they did great wrong under the pretence, and with the formalities of Juſtice, and whilſt they ſeemed exactly to weigh and conſider the true and fit proportion between the Actions and the Recompences allotted to them, they turned the Scale; and partly to curry Favour with Saul; and partly from their own Malice againſt David; pronounced an unjuſt Sentence againſt him. f Or, in this Land, where God is preſent, and where you have Righteous Laws to govern you, and you profeſs better things.

3 The wicked are eſtranged g from the womb h; they go aſtray ||, * as ſoon as they be born i, ſpeaking lyes. || From the Belly.

g To wit, from God, Eph. 4. 18. and from all Goodneſs. h Either, 1. Hyperbolically; even from their tender years. Or 2. Strictly and properly. So the Senſe is: No wonder they act ſo unrighteouſly, for their very Natures and Principles are corrupt, even from their Birth: They are the wicked off-ſpring of ſinful Parents. And this hereditary and native corruption, though too common to all Men, he particularly aſcribes to theſe men; either becauſe their immediate Parents were ſuch as did not only convey a corrupt Nature to them, but greatly improved it by wicked Counſel and Example: Or becauſe they themſelves had improved that ſtock of Original Corruption, and inſtead of mortifying it, had made it their great deſign, and conſtant buſineſs to gratifie and obey it. || By Actual ſins, the Fruit of their Original ſin. i From their Childhood, as ſoon as ever they were capable of the exerciſe of Reaſon, and the practice of ſinning.

4 * Their poiſon k is † like the poiſon of a ſerpent l: they are like the deaf || adder that ſtoppeth her ear: *Pſ.140.3. Eccl. 10. 11. † Heb. according to the life. || Or, Aſp.

k Their virulent and malicious diſpoſition. l Partly in it ſelf, being natural and inveterate, and incurable; and partly in its moſt pernicious effects.

5 Which will not hearken to * the voice of charmers, || charming never ſo wiſely m. *Jer.8.17. || Or, be charming never ſo cunning.

m This ſimilitude doth neither juſtifie the practice of Charming, which in the very word here uſed, is condemned, Deut. 18. 11. no more than thoſe which are drawn from the unjuſt Steward, Luke 16. 1. &c. and 18. 2. &c. and from a Thief, Rev. 16. 15. nor yet affirm the truth of what is reported, concerning the Aſps or Adders, which are ſaid to lay one Ear cloſe to the ground, and to cover the other with their Tail, that ſo they may avoid the danger of Enchantment; but only was taken from the common Opinion, which he Poetically mentions to this purpoſe: As they commonly ſay of the Aſps or Adders, &c. ſuch really are theſe Men: Deaf to all my Counſels, and to the Dictates of their own Conſciences, and to the Voice of Gods Law. And yet of the charming or inchanting of Serpents, mention is made both in other places of Scripture, as Eccleſ. 10. 11. Jer. 8. 17. and in all ſorts of Authors, Antient and Modern, Hebrew and Arabick, and Greek and Latin, [Of which ſee my Latin Synopſis.] And particularly the Arabick Writers (to whom theſe Creatures were beſt known) name ſome ſorts of Serpents; among which the Adder is one, which they call deaf, not becauſe they are dull of Hearing, but, as one of them expreſly ſaith, becauſe they will not be Charmed.

6 * Break their teeth n, O God, in their mouth: break out the great teeth o of the young lions, O LORD. * Job 4. 10.

n Their Power and Inſtruments of doing Miſchief. He mentions Teeth; partly, becauſe the Adders poiſon lyes in its Teeth; and partly, partly, to make way for the following Metaphor. o Called the Grinders; which are more ſharp and ſtrong than the reſt, and more uſed in breaking and tearing what they are about to eat.

7 Let them melt away as waters, which run continually p: * when he q bendeth his bow to ſhoot his arrows, let them be as cut in pieces r. *Pſ.58.7.

p As waters ariſing from melted Snow, or great Showers, or ſome other extraordinary cauſe, which at firſt run with great force and noiſe, and throw down all that ſtands in their way, but are ſuddenly gone, and run away and vaniſh, and return no more. q To wit, any or every one of mine Enemies, as appears from the foregoing and following words. r (i. e.) Like Arrows broken aſunder, whilſt a Man ſhoots, which can do no hurt.

8 As a ſnail which melteth s, let every one of them paſs away *: like the untimely birth of a woman, that they may not ſee the ſun t. *Pſ.58.8.

s Which thruſts forth; and ſeems to threaten with its Horns, but is quickly diſſolved: For when it goes out of its ſhell, it ſpends its vital moiſture, until by degree it waſte away and periſh. t Which indeavouring violently and unſeaſonably to break forth from the Womb is choaked in the attempt, and doth not live to ſee the Light of the Sun.

9 Before your pots can feel the thorns u, he ſhall take them x away as with a whirlwind y, † both living, and in his wrath z. *Pſ.58.9. † Heb. as with his living, as with his wrath.

u (i. e.) The heat of the Fire kindled by the Thorns put under them for that purpoſe: Before your Pots can be thoroughly heated. x To wit, mine Enemies; whoſe ſudden deſtruction he deſcribes under this ſimilitude. y (i. e.) Violently and irreſiſtibly. z Heb. as living (i. e. Alive, as he did Korah, Numb. 16. the Particle, as, being here not a Note of Similitude, but of Truth or Aſſeveration, as it is John 1. 14. and oft elſewhere, as hath been noted:) as in (which propoſition is frequently underſtood) wrath, (i. e.) As a Man moved with great Wrath deſtroys his Enemy without Mercy, and is ready to devour him alive, if it were poſſible: Or, both that which is raw (as the Hebrew word Chai ſignifies, Lev. 13. 16. 1 Sam. 2. 15. to wit, the raw Fleſh, which is ſuppoſed to be put into the pot, that it may be boyled) and the burning Fire. There is indeed great variety of conſtruction and interpretation of theſe Hebrew words; which is not ſtrange, eſpecially conſidering the conciſeneſs of the Hebrew Language, and that this is a Proverbial Speech; nor is it of any great importance, becauſe it is not in any great point of Faith, and becauſe the Senſe of it is agreed, the only difference being about the manner and ground of the Phraſe. The learned Reader may ſee more upon this place in my Latin Synopſis.

10 The righteous ſhall rejoyce when he ſeeth the vengeance: * he ſhall waſh his feet in the blood of the wicked ||. * Pſ. 2. 4. 37. 13.

* (i. e.) The Vengeance of God upon his implacable Enemies; not ſimply for himſelf, but for the bleſſed effects of it; the vindication of Gods Honour, and the deliverance of himſelf and of all good Men. || (i. e.) There ſhall be ſo great a ſlaughter of his Enemies that he might, if he ſo pleaſed, waſh his feet in their blood. See the ſame or like Expreſſions, Pſal. 68. 23. Iſa. 63. 3. Revel. 14. 20.

11 So that a man ſhall ſay, Verily there is † a reward for the righteous: verily he is a God that judgeth in the earth †. Heb. Fruit of the righteous.

† And theſe Adminiſtrations of Gods Providence ſhall be ſo evident and convincing, that not only good Men ſhall be ſenſible thereof, but any man that ſees them, yea, even ſuch as were apt to diſpute or doubt of Gods Providence, ſhall upon this eminent occaſion, break forth into ſuch Exclamations as this, Now I ſee that Religion is not a vain and unprofitable thing, and that there is a God who doth now obſerve and govern, and when he ſees fit, judgeth the Inhabitants of the Earth, and will hereafter judge the whole World in Righteouſneſs, and recompence every man according to his works.

PSAL. LIX.

The ARGUMENT.

THe matter and deſign of this Pſalm is the ſame in general, and for ſubſtance with the former, to wit, a declaration of the Cruelty and Treachery of his Enemies; and a Prayer to God to deliver him out of their hands.

To the chief muſician, || Al-taſchith, Michtam of David: * when Saul ſent and they watched the houſe to kill him. || Or, deſtroy me, a Golden Pſalm of David. * 1 Sam. 19. 11. Pſal. 57. Tit. *Pſ.18.48. † Heb. ſet me on high.

David, in danger, prayeth unto God for deliverance from his Enemies, 1, 2. relating his own Innocency and their Cruelty. He truſteth in God, and prayeth againſt them, 3—15. Promiſeth thankfulneſs to God for being his defence and refuge, 16, 17.

1 * DEliver me from mine enemies a, O my God: † defend me from them that riſe up againſt me.

a He chiefly underſtands Saul, but ſpeaks in the Plural Number, out of Reverence to his King, and that he might, as far as he could in Truth, derive the Envy and Hatred of theſe odious practices, upon thoſe that were about him; as he doth 1 Sam. 26. 19. and elſewhere.

2 Deliver me from all the workers of iniquity, and ſave me from bloody men.

3 For lo, they lye in wait for my ſoul; the mighty are gathered againſt me: not for my tranſgreſſion, nor for my ſin, O LORD b.

b Without any provocation, or cauſe given them by me. I am a ſinner before thee O Lord, but I have done them no injury.

4 They run c and prepare themſelves d without my fault: awake † to help me e, and behold. † Heb. to meet me.

c To and fro, firſt to receive Sauls Commands, and then to execute them with all ſpeed and diligence. d Or, diſpoſe themſelves, here and there round about my Houſe, that they may catch me when I go out of it. e Heb. to meet me, as I come abroad, and to conduct me away with Safety.

5 Thou therefore, O LORD God of hoſts, the God of Iſrael f, awake to viſit all the heathen g: be not merciful h to any wicked tranſgreſſors i. Selah.

f A God in Covenant with all true Iſraelites, whom thou haſt promiſed to protect and bleſs. g Or, theſe Heathens, or Gentiles: Who though they are called and accounted Iſraelites by their Birth; yet in Truth, and in their Diſpoſitions and Manners, are meer Heathens and Barbarians: In which reſpect ſuch men are elſewhere called Strangers, Pſal. 54. 3. Men of Sodom and Gomorrah, Iſa. 1. 10. and an Ethiopian, Amos 9. 7. As among us ungodly Chriſtians, are oft called Jews, or Turks, or Heathens. h For indeed thou canſt not with thine Honour, nor according to thy Word, be merciful to any ſuch incorrigible offenders. i Or, perfidious Tranſgreſſors, ſuch as perfecute me, and other good men, out of malice, and againſt their own Conſciences, which tell them that I am innocent, and with pretences of Friendſhip. He might well pray ſo vehemently againſt ſuch, not only for his own preſervation, but for the juſt and neceſſary vindication of Gods Honour, and for the publick good of Mankind; whoſe common intereſt it was, that ſuch vile Miſcreants ſhould be taken out of the way.

6 They return at evening k: they make a noiſe like a dog l, and go round about the city m.

k After they have been buſie all day; either in plotting againſt me, or in hunting after me. In the Evening, when they ſhould compoſe themſelves to reſt, they return to their old trade of watching for me: Which they did at this time all the Night long, 1 Sam. 19. 11. l Either when he is hungry and purſuing his prey, and howls for meat; or when he is enraged, and grins and ſnarles where he cannot, or dare not bite. m When they did not find him in his own Houſe, they ſought for him in other Houſes, and parts of the City, where they ſuppoſed him to lurk.

7 Behold, they belch out n with their mouth: ſwords o are in their lips; for * who, ſay they, doth hear p? *Pſ 10. 11.

n Or, they pour forth (to wit, words, for what elſe ſhould come out of the mouth? Even ſharp and bitter words, as the next Clauſe explains it) abundantly and vehemently, as a Fountain doth Waters, as this word ſignifies, ſee Prov. 15. 28. Jer. 6. 7. o (i. e.) Words as keen and miſchievous as Swords, as Pſal. 55. 21. and 57. 4. p David doth not hear us, either to diſcover, and ſo to prevent our plots, or to puniſh us for them: and God either doth not hear, or not regard what we ſay and do againſt David: And therefore we may ſpeak and act what we think fit. & 94. 7.

8 But thou, O LORD, * ſhalt laugh at them q; thou ſhalt have all the heathen in deriſion. * Pſ. 2. 4. 37. 13.

q Diſappoint their high confidences, and hopeful deſigns, and then deride them, and make them ridiculous and contemptible to others.

9 Becauſe of his ſtrength r will I wait upon thee: for God is † my defence. † Heb. my high place.

r (i. e.) Sauls ſtrength: Becauſe he is too ſtrong for me. Or rather, O my ſtrength, as it is v. 17. And all thoſe antient and venerable Tranſlators, the LXX. and Chaldee, and vulgar Latin, render it, my Strength. In the Hebrew it is, his ſtrength, (i. e.) Davids. For David ſpeaks of himſelf in the third perſon, as he oft doth. And ſuch ſudden changes of perſons are uſual, both in theſe Poetical Books (as hath been noted before) and elſewhere, as Dan. 9. 4. Mich. 1. 2.

10 The God of my mercy s ſhall prevent me t: God ſhall let * me ſee my deſire u upon † mine enemies. *Pſ.22.11. † Heb. have or hope for. Heb. of his Mercy.

s (i. e.) The giver of all that Mercy and Comfort which I either appears by comparing this with v. 17.) a change of the perſon, as ſometimes there was in the foregoing Verſe. t To wit, with the Bleſſings of Goodneſs, as it is more fully expreſſed, Pſal. 21. 3. Thou ſhalt help me, and that ſeaſonably, before it be too late, and ſooner than I expect. u In their diſappointment and overthrow, as it follows: Which was very deſirable to David, no leſs for the publick good, than for his own ſafety and happineſs.

11 * Slay them not x, leſt my people y forget z: * ſcatter them a by thy power; and bring them down b, 4. 14, 15: O LORD our ſhield. * See Gen.

x To wit, ſuddenly, or at once. y My Country-men; or thoſe over whom thou haſt appointed me to be Governour in due time. z Their former Danger, and thy Glorious Mercy in delivering them, and their own Duty to thee for it. Hereby it moſt plainly appears, that David in thoſe and the like Imprecations againſt his Enemies, was not moved thereunto by his private Malice, or deſire of Revenge, but by the reſpect which he had to Gods Honour, and the general good of his people. a Heb. make them to wander. As they wandred about the City and Country to do me miſchief, v. 6. ſo let their puniſhment be agreeable to their ſin; let them wander from place to place, to wit, for Meat, as it is expreſſed v. 15. that they may carry the Tokens of thy Juſtice, and their own ſhame to all places where they come. b From that Power and Dignity in which thou haſt ſet them, which they do ſo wickedly abuſe; and from the height of their carnal hopes and confidences of ſucceſs againſt me.

12 For the ſin of their mouth, and the words of their lips c, let them even be taken d in their pride e; and for curſing and lying f which they ſpeak g.

c For their ungodly and injurious, and pernicious Speeches, of which he speaks v. 7. and in many other places. d As in a snare in order to their ruine. Let thy Judgments overtake them. e For their proud and insolent Speeches against thee, v. 7. f For their Execrations and lying Reports, which they have raised or spread abroad concerning me. g Which they are ready to utter upon all occasions.

13 Consume them h in wrath, consume them, that they may not be i: and let them know k that God ruleth l in Jacob m, unto n the ends of the earth o. Selah.

b By degrees; and after thou hast made them to wander about, v. 11. i To wit, in the Land of the Living any more: As this Phrase is frequently understood; whereof divers instances have been given. k Experimentally, and to their cost. l Over and above them: That though Saul be King, yet God is his superiour in Power and Authority, and all things among us shall be disposed, not as it pleaseth Saul, which his Parasites are always suggesting to him, but as God will; and therefore I shall be preserved, and in fit time Crowned, in spight of all that Saul or his Forces can do against me. m In the Land, and over the people of Israel, whose King and Governour he is in a peculiar manner. n Or, and unto: The Conjunction, and, being oft underflood, as hath been noted before. These words may be referred; either 1. To Gods Ruling, let them know that God ruleth, not only in Jacob; but also to the ends of the Earth. Or 2. To mens knowing, let them, or let men know even to the Ends of the Earth, that God ruleth in Jacob: Let thy Judgments be so manifest and dreadful in the destruction of thy wicked Enemies, that not only Israelites, but even the remote Nations of the World may see it, and acknowledge thy Power and Providence in it. o Either of this Land; or rather, of the World. The Sense is, That by those eminent and extraordinary discoveries of thy Power and Wisdom, and Justice, it may be evident both to them, and to all that hear of it, that thou art no Puny or Inferiour, or Topical God, like the Gods of Heathens, whose Government is confined to a narrow compass, but the high and mighty God, and the great Ruler of the whole World.

14 And at evening let them return, and let them make a noise like a dog, and go round about the city p.

p What was their sin, and their choice to do with evil design, let it be their punishment to do it by constraint, and for Meat, as it follows v. 15.

† Heb. to eat. ‖ Or, if they be not satisfied, then they will stay all Night.

15 Let them wander up and down † for meat q; ‖ and grudge if they be not satisfied r.

q To get a Livelyhood. r When their Bodies are hungry, let their Minds be discontented. Or as others render the words, And lodge, or be forced to lodge all Night, when they are not satisfied. Let them go to their rest with an empty Stomach.

16 But I will sing of thy power; yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the morning: for thou hast been my defence and refuge in the day of my trouble.

17 Unto thee s, O my strength, will I sing: for God is my defence, and the God of my mercy.

s (i. e.) To thy Honour: Or rather, of or concerning thee; as that Particle is sometimes used.

PSAL. LX.

To the chief musician upon Shushan-eduth a, ‖ Michtam of David, to teach b; * when he strove with Aram-naharaim c, and with Aram-Zobah d, when Joab returned, and smote of Edom in the valley of salt, twelve thousand e.

‖ Or, a Golden Psalm. * 2 Sam. 8. 3, 13. 1 Chr. 18. 3. 12.

a This, like the rest, seems to be the Name of an Instrument, or Song, or Tune, then well known, but now quite unknown and forgotten; it may be, and is by some rendred, The Lilly, or Rose of the Testimony, or Oracle: But why it was so called, is a matter of meer conjecture, and of small importance to us to know. b To wit, in an eminent manner: Or for the special instruction of Gods Church and People in some points of great moment; as, concerning the grievous Calamities, to which Gods Church and People were obnoxious, v. 1. 2, 3. and concerning the certainty of Gods promises, and of their deliverance out of them, upon Condition of their Faith and Obedience. Which Doctrines were of great moment, especially to the Israelites, who were, and were likely to be exercised in the same manner, and with the same variety and vicissitudes of Condition, under which their Ancestors had been. Or, whereas other Songs were to be learned only by the Levites, or by some of them, this possibly was one of them, which the people also were to be taught, and were to sing upon occasion, because of the publick and general Concernment which they all had in the matter herein contained. c Or, the Syrians (so called from Aram, the Son of Sem, Gen. 10. 22.) of the two Rivers, or of Mesopotamia, the Country between those two great and famous Rivers, Tygris and Euphrates. d Or, the Syrians of Zobah, part of Syria so called, 2 Sam. 8. 5, 12. e This Report seems not to agree with the Historics to which this Psalm is supposed to relate, 2 Sam. 8. 13. and 1 Chron. 18. 12. neither in the persons slain, who are Edomites, 1 Chron. 18. 12. but Syrians here, and 2 Sam. 8. 13. nor in their numbers, which are here only twelve thousand, and there eighteen thousand; nor in the persons to whom this Victory is ascribed, who is Joab here, David, 2 Sam. 8. 13. and Abishai, 1 Chron. 18. 12. But these Difficulties may easily be resolved by these Considerations: 1. That David being King, and Joab Lord General of all his Forces, and Abishai his Lieutenant-General, as to a considerable part of his Army, the same Victory may well be ascribed to any, or every one of them; as it is usually done in like Cases in the Roman and Grecian Histories. 2. That the Edomites and Syrians were united in this War. 3. That twelve thousand might be slain in the pitch'd battel, and the rest by the pursuers in their flight. 4. That these several places may speak of several Fights. See more of this business in the Notes, on 2 Sam. 8. 13.

The Psalmist complaining of former sad Judgments, 1—3. acknowledgeth Gods present Mercy, 4. Comforting himself in the promises, he prayeth for help, and therein trusteth, 5—12.

1 O God, * thou hast cast us off f, thou hast † scattered us g, thou hast been displeased; O turn thy self to us again. * Ps. 44. 9. † Heb. broken.

f Or rejected, or forsaken us, as to thy gracious and powerful presence, not only in the time of the Judges, but also during Sauls Reign. g Heb. broken us; partly by that dreadful overthrow by the Philistins, 1 Sam. 31. and partly by the Civil War in our own Bowels, between me and Ishbosheth.

2 Thou hast made the earth to tremble h; thou hast broken it: heal * the breaches thereof i, for it shaketh. * Ps. 69.

h A Poetical and Hyperbolical Expression, signifying great and dreadful changes among the people, as Hagg. 2. 7. comp. with Heb. 12. 26, 27. See also 1 Sam. 14. 15. i Reconcile all those differences which our Civil Wars have made among us.

3 Thou hast shewed k thy people hard things: thou hast made us to drink the wine of astonishment l.

k Heb. Made them to see, (i. e.) to experience or feel, as seeing is oft put, as Psal. 40. 10. and oft elsewhere. l Thou hast filled us with no less horrour and trembling, than men intoxicated with strong and stupifying Drink, which they are forced to drink. Compare Isa. 51. 17, 21.

4 Thou hast given m a banner n to them that fear thee o: that it may be displayed because of the truth p. Selah.

m Either, 1. Formerly. As thou hast sometimes afflicted thy people, so at other times thou hast delivered them. Or rather, 2. Now lately by and under me. n Which is a Sign and Instrument. 1. Of Union. This people who were lately divided and under several Banners, thou hast now gathered together and united under one Banner, to wit, under my Government. 2. Of Battel. Thou hast given us an Army, and power to oppose our Enemies. We had our Banner to set against theirs. 3. Of Triumph. We have not lost our Banner, but gained theirs, and brought it away in Triumph: Compare Psal. 20. 5. e Or for, or on the behalf of them that fear thee. An emphatical passage implying, that God gave so great a Blessing to the people of Israel, for the sake of those few sincere Israelites which were among them. p Not for any merit of ours, but to shew thy faithfulness in making good thy promises which thou hast made, both to me, concerning the establishing of this Kingdom to me, and to my seed for ever, and to thy people in general; whom thou hast frequently promised to hear and help when they call upon thee in times of trouble.

5 * That thy beloved q may be delivered, save with thy right hand, and hear me. * Psa. 108. 6, &c.

q Thy beloved people so last mentioned.

6 God hath spoken r in his holiness: I will rejoyce s; I will divide u Shechem x, and mete out the valley of Succoth y.

r Having prayed that God would save and hear him, he now intimates that God had done it already, and had prevented his prayers, and had spoken to him, and of him, about the stablishing of his Throne. s Or, in the Sanctuary, or Holy place, to which David used to resort to ask Counsel, and from whence God usually gave out his Oracles. Or rather, by his Holiness as this very Word is rendred, Psal. 89. 35. which carries the form of an Oath, and implies that God did not finally speak, but swore by his Holiness, as it is there expressed. t Therefore I will turn my prayers into praises, and Rejoycings for what God had already done and as I am assured, will further do on my behalf. u Or, Distribute; which supposeth possession and dominion. x A place within Jordan, in Mount Ephraim. See Gen. 33. 18. Jos. 20. 7. y A place without Jordan. See Gen. 33. 17. Jos. 13. 27. He mentions Shechem, and Succoth; either, Synecdochically for all the Land of Canaan, within and without Jordan; which having been formerly divided between him and Ishbosheth, was now intirely in his possession: Or because these two places had been in Ishbosheths hands, and possibly were extraordinarily devoted to Sauls House, and utterly averse from David; or for some other Reason now unknown.

7 Gilead z is mine, and Manasseh a is mine; Ephraim also is the strength of mine head b; * Judah is my lawgiver c. * Gen. 49. 10.

z All their Land beyond Jordan, which was possessed by Reuben and Gad, and half of the Tribe of Manasseh, Numb. 32. 29, 39, 40. Deut. 3. 10. &c. Jos. 13. 25, &c. a The other half of that Tribe within Jordan. b Either, 1. Mine Horns wherewith I shall push mine Enemies, according to Moses his prophecy of that Tribe, Deut. 33. 17. Or, 2. The keeper of mine Head, as Abijah spake, 1 Sam. 28. 2. A chief part of my strength, either to offend mine Enemies, or to defend my self. For this Tribe was very numerous, and valiant and rich. See Gen. 48. 19. Deut. 32. 11. Psal. 78. 9. c The chief Seat of my Throne and Kingdom, and of the inferiour Thrones of Judgment, Psal. 122. 5. the Tribe to which the Royal Scepter and Law-giver, are appropriated by Gods appointment, Gen. 49. 10.

8 Moab is my wash-pot d; over Edom e will I cast out my shooe f: Philistia, ‖ triumph thou because of me g. ‖ Or, triumph thou.

d In which I shall wash my Feet. I shall bring them into the lowest degree of Servitude, and make them contemptible and miserable. See 2 Sam. 8. 2. e An old and proud, and insolent and cruel Enemy of Israel. f (i. e.) I will use them like Slaves; either, holding forth my Shoes, that they may pluck them off, or throwing my Shoes at them; either in anger or contempt, as the manner ner of many Masters was, and is in such Cases. Or, I will take possession of them; which was done by treading upon their Land. Or, I will tread upon their Necks; as they did in like Case, Jos. 10. 24. But these Notions suit not with this phrase, of casting or throwing the Shoe. g Or, over me, as thou didst in former years use to triumph and insult over the poor Israelites. It is an Ironical expression, signifying that her Triumphs were come to an end.

9 Who will bring me h into the † strong city i? * who will lead me into Edom k? * Psa. 108. 10.

h None can do it but God, as he declareth in the following Verses. i (i. e.) The Cities; the singular number for the plural, which is usual. Having beaten his Enemies out of the Field, and into their strong Cities; from whence they hoped to renew the War, he desires Gods Assistance whereby he may take their strong Holds, and so secure himself from further Attempts against him. k Which was an high and rocky Country, Obad. v. 3. fortified by Nature, as well as by Art, and therefore not to be invaded, and subdued without a Divine Hand. † Heb. city.

10 Wilt not thou O God, which * hadst cast us off? and thou, O God, which didst not go out with our armies l? * Psa. 44. 9.

l To wit, in former times; but now hast graciously returned to us. He brings to his own and peoples minds, their former Calamities, that they may be more thankful for present Mercies and Deliverance.

11 Give us help from trouble: for vain is the † help of man m.

m Though I have some Reputation for Valour and Conduct, and though my People are very numerous, and now united under me, yet all this will avail little or nothing without thy Almighty help. † Heb. help.

12 Through God * we shall do valiantly: for he it is that shall tread down our enemies. * Psa. 108. 13.

PSAL. LXI.

The ARGUMENT.

THe occasion of this Psalm, was some great distress of Davids; either by Saul, or by Absalom; though it might be Composed some time after it was past.

To the chief musician upon Neginah, a Psalm of David. David, in great danger, fleeth to God for deliverance, upon experience of his former Love, 1—3. promising him perpetual Service for hearing his Prayers, 4, 5. And assuring himself a long Life, he voweth thankfulness, 6—8.

1 HEar my cry, O God, attend unto my prayer.

2 From the end of the earth a will I cry unto thee, when my heart is overwhelmed: lead me to the rock that is higher than I b.

a Or rather, of the Land: To which David was driven by the Tyranny of his Enemies. b Convey me into some high and secure Fortress, which I could not reach without thy succour, and where mine Enemies cannot come at me. He alludes to their custom of securing themselves in Rocks, 1 Sam. 13. 6. &c.

3 For thou hast been a shelter for me, and a strong tower from the enemy.

4 I will abide in thy tabernacle for ever c: I will † trust in the covert of thy wings d. Selah. † Heb. in the secret place of.

c I shall, I doubt not, be restored to the Tabernacle from which I am now banished, and, according to the desire of my Heart, worship and enjoy thee there all my days. d In the mean time, whilst I am in danger and trouble, I will cast my self upon thy protection with full confidence.

5 For thou, O God, hast heard my vows e: thou hast given me the heritage of those that fear thy name f.

e My fervent Prayers, attended with many Vows and Promises, as was usual, especially in cases of great danger or difficulty, Gen. 28. 20. Judg. 11. 30, 31. f Thou hast allotted me my portion, with and amongst them that fear and worship thee, who are the excellent ones, in whom is all my delight: And upon that account I must acknowledge it to thy praise, that the Lines are fallen to me in pleasant places: Yea, I have a goodly Heritage, Psal. 16. 3, 6. Thou hast granted me this singular Mercy, to live in Gods Land, and to enjoy his Presence and Favour, and to worship in his Tabernacle; which is the Heritage that I and all that fear thee, prize and desire above all things in the World.

6 † Thou wilt prolong the kings life g, and his years h, † as many generations i. † Heb. days upon days.

g (i. e.) My Life. He calls himself King; either, 1. Because he was actually King, though Absalom usurped the Throne: Or 2. Because he was designed and anointed to be King; and by calling himself King, he supports himself under his present straits, and declares his confidence in Gods promise of the Kingdom to him. Yet we must not think that David did commonly and publickly call, or own himself to be King, which had neither been true nor convenient for his Affairs: But this Psalm, either was not Composed whilst Saul lived, or at least was penned only for his private use and Comfort, and not committed to the chief Musician; which indeed it could not be till David had the Kingdom, and the inspection of the sacred Musick and Service of the Tabernacle. h (i. e.) The years of my Life and Reign. i As long as if I had a Lease of it for many Ages. Thus he speaks; partly, because his Kingdom was not like Sauls, a matter of one Age, expiring with his Life, but established to him and his Heirs for ever; and partly, because Christ, his Son and Heir, should actually, and in his own person possess the Kingdom for ever.

7 He shall abide k before God l for ever: O prepare m * mercy and truth n which may preserve him.

k Or, sit, to wit, in the Throne, Jer. 13. 13. l Living and ruling as in Gods presence, and serving God with his Royal Power, and Worshipping him in his Tabernacle. m Or, order or appoint, as this word signifies, Jonah 1. 17. and 4. 6. n Either, 1. The Graces of Mercy or Compassion, and Truth or Faithfulness; which are the great supporters of Thrones, Prov. 20. 28. and 29. 14. Or rather, 2. Thy Mercy and Truth, (i. e.) The effects of them. Thy Truth in giving me those Mercies which thou hast promised to me; and thy Mercy in giving me such further Blessings, as I need, and thou seest fit to give me.

8 So will I sing praise unto thy name for ever, that I may daily perform my vows o.

o That so I may pay unto thee those Services and Sacrifices, which I vowed to thee when I was in trouble.

PSAL. LXII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm was made in a time of great Danger and Distress, or at least with respect to it, as is manifest from v. 3, 4.

To the chief musician, † to Jeduthun a, A Psalm of David. † Heb. upon.

a A famous Musician; of whom see 1 Chron. 9. 16. and 16. 42. Heb. Upon Jeduthun. Which might be the Name of a Musical Instrument, or Tune invented by that Jeduthun, and therefore called by his Name.

David testifieth his safety and quietness in God, to the discouragement of his Enemies, 1—7. but to the encouragement of the Godly, 8. No trust to be put in Man, or Worldly things, but in God, 9, 10. to whom Power, Mercy and Justice belong, 11, 12.

1 † TRuly b my soul † waiteth c upon God: from him cometh my salvation d. † Heb. Or, only. † Heb. is silent.

b Or, Surely. This is my certain and fixed resolution. Or, Nevertheless, as this Particle is oft rendred. So the beginning of this Psalm is abrupt, as it is in some other Psalms. This seems to be the Conclusion of a long and hard Conflict, which David had within himself, as he often had, what course he should take to get out of his trouble. c Heb. is silent, as it is also Psal. 37. 7. (i. e.) silently, quietly and patiently looks up to God for deliverance, and that in his time and way, without murmuring or despair, or using indirect and sinful practices. d I have no hope of deliverance, but from and by him.

2 He only is my rock, and my salvation: he is my † defence; I shall not be greatly moved e. † Heb. high place.

e Though I may be shaken, yet I shall not be overthrown. Compare Psal. 37. 24. 2 Cor. 4. 9.

3 How long will ye f imagine mischief against a man g? ye shall be slain all of you h: * as a bowing wall shall ye be, and as a tottering fence i. * Isa. 30. 13.

f Mine Enemies; to whom now he turneth his Speech. g (i. e.) Against me, a Man like your selves, whom common Humanity obligeth you to pity; a single Man, who is no fit match for you; a poor, contemptible, miserable and impotent Creature; as the word Man is oft used, as Psal. 9. 20. and 82. 7. &c. a dead Dog, or a Flea, or a Partridge, as upon the same account he calleth himself, 1 Sam. 24. 14. and 26. 20. whom you cannot thus pursue, without reflecting disparagement upon your selves, as he there saith. h The mischief which you design for me shall fall upon your own heads. And accordingly Saul and the generality of these Men were slain, 1 Sam. 31. i (i. e.) As suddenly and easily overthrown as these are.

k To wit, the man mentioned v. 3. (i. e.) himself: Of whom he continues to speak in the third Person. l From the hopes and attainment of that Royal Dignity, to which God hath designed and anointed me. m In secret Slanders and Execrations covered with Flatteries and fair Speeches, as it here follows.

5 My soul, wait thou only upon God: for my expectation is from him.

6 He only is my rock and my salvation: he is my defence; I shall not be moved.

7 In God n is my salvation and my glory o: the rock of my strength, and my refuge is in God.

n Heb. upon or with God. It depends upon him, and his Favour and Help. o Either, 1. The matter of my Glorying. Or 2. That Honour which I either have or hope for.

8 Trust in him at all times, ye people p; pour out your heart q before him: God is a refuge for us. Selah.

p By my Example be encouraged, and learn to trust God. q (i. e.) Make known all the desires, and cares, and griefs, of your hearts to him, freely and frequently, with confident expectation of obtaining what you want or desire from him.

9 * Surely men of low degree are vanity r, and men of high degree are a lye s: to be laid in the ballance, they are ‖ altogether lighter than vanity. * Psal. 39. 5. Rom. 3. 4. ‖ Or, alike.

r (i. e.) Most vain, impotent and helpless Creatures in themselves. This he delivers as a Reason or Argument, to enforce his foregoing Exhortation, Trust in God, because there is no other person or thing to which you can safely trust. s Because they promise much, and raise Mens expectations upon consideration of their great Power and Dignity, but are not able to perform, and generally deceive those who trust in them. In which respect Lying is ascribed to a Fountain, Jer. 15. 18. to Wine, Hosea 9. 2. to the Olive, Habak. 3. 17. when they do not give what they promise.

10 Trust not in oppression t, and become not vain u in

* Job 31. 25. in robbery: * if riches increaſe, ſet not your heart upon them x.

Luk. 12. 15. 1 Tim. 6. 17. t As you may not truſt any other Men, ſo neither muſt you truſt to your ſelves, nor to your own Wit or Induſtry, or Courage by which you may oppreſs others, and ſo think to ſecure and enrich your ſelves. u Lifting up, and feeding your ſelves with vain Hopes, and Expectations of ſafety and felicity, from thoſe Riches which you take from others by Robbery or Violence. x So as to pleaſe your ſelves immoderately in them, to place your Hope and Truſt, and chief Joy in them, or to grow proud and inſolent becauſe of them.

11 God hath ſpoken once: twice y have I heard this, that || power belongeth unto God z.

|| Or, Strength. y (i. e.) Frequently, as Job 33. 14. both immediately as at Sinai, and by his holy Prophets, from time to time. z That Power is God's Prerogative; and Conſequently all Creatures, either againſt or without him, are poor Impotent things, to which no Man can truſt without certain Diſappointment, and God alone is fit to be truſted.

* Job 34. 11. Pr. 24. 12. Jer. 32. 19. Ezec. 7. 27. & 33. 20. Mat. 16. 27 Rom. 2. 6. 1 Cor. 3. 8. 2 Cor. 5. 10 Eph. 6. 8. Col. 3. 25. 1 Pet. 1. 17. Re. 22. 12. 12 Alſo unto thee, O LORD, belongeth mercy a; for || * thou rendreſt to every man according to his work †.

a Or, Benignity, or Readineſs to do good. Thou art no leſs willing than able, to defend and preſerve all that put their Truſt in thee. || Or, therefore. For the following Words ſeem to be either a Reaſon, or Proof of, or an inference from, the two foregoing Properties of God, Power and Mercy. God is Almighty, therefore he can eaſily ſubdue and deſtroy all his and mine ungodly Enemies, and Recompence unto them all their Malicious and wicked Practiſes. He is alſo mild and merciful, and therefore will pardon good Mens failings, and graciouſly reward me and others of his people according to our Integrity. † According to the Nature and quality, though not according to the proportion, of their Works, whether they are good or bad. And this as he is obliged to do by his holy Nature, and by that Reſpect which he oweth to his own Glory, ſo he is able to do it, being Omnipotent, and willing to do it to the godly (which was the only thing that might be doubted, becauſe of their manifold and great Corruptions, and Imperfections, and Miſcarriages) becauſe he is merciful and gracious.

PSAL. LXIII.

A Pſalm of David when he was in the wilderneſs of Judah a.

a Where he hid himſelf from Saul, 1 Sam. 22. 5. and 23. 14, 15. and 26. 1, 2.

David in the Wilderneſs complaining bitterly of his Baniſhment from Gods Houſe, thirſteth and longeth for it, 1—3. His manner of beſeeching God. His Experience, Hope and Delight in God, 4—8. comforteth himſelf, that his Enemies ſhall be deſtroyed, and that he ſhall be in Safety, 9—11.

* Pſ. 42. 2. & 143. 6. † Heb. weary. † Heb. without Water. 1 O God, thou art my God b, early c will I ſeek thee: * my ſoul thirſteth for thee d; my fleſh longeth e for thee in a dry and † thirſty land, † where no water is f.

b In Covenant with me. c Heb. in the Morning. Which implies the doing it with greateſt Diligence and Speed, taking the firſt, and the beſt time for it, as Job 8. 5. Pſal. 78. 34. Prov. 1. 28. d (i. e.) For the Preſence and Enjoyment of thee in thine Houſe and Ordinances, as the next Verſe declareth it. e Or, languiſheth, or Pineth away. The deſire of my Soul after thee, is ſo Vehement and inſatiable, that my very Body feels the Effects of it, as it commonly doth of all great Paſſions. f So called; Either, 1. Metaphorically; In a Land where I want the refreſhing Waters of the Sanctuary. Or, 2. Properly: I thirſt not ſo much for Water (which yet I greatly want) as for thee.

2 To ſee g thy power and thy glory h, ſo as I have ſeen thee i in the ſanctuary.

g (i. e.) To enjoy, as ſeeing is oft taken. h Either, 1. The Ark, which is called God's Strength and Glory, 1 Sam. 4. 21. 1 Chron. 16. 11. Pſal. 78. 61. Or rather, 2. The powerful and glorious Effects, and Evidences of thy gracious preſence there. i Whereof I have formerly had great and comfortable Experience; which makes me more ſenſible of my preſent loſs, and more Thirſty after thoſe enjoyments.

3 Becauſe k thy loving kindneſs l is better than life m, my lips ſhall praiſe thee n.

k This is the Reaſon of the foregoing thirſt after God. l (i. e.) The Diſcoveries and Influences of thy Grace and Favour, which thou uſually imparteſt to thy people in the Sanctuary. m Is more durable and comfortable, and ſatisfactory than the preſent Life, with all imaginable Advantages belonging to it. n Both for my former Taſts and Experiences of this Truth; and for the Aſſurance of my Reſtitution to the ſame bleſſed Enjoyments.

4 Thus o will I bleſs thee while I live: I will lift up my hands p in thy name q.

o (i. e.) So as I have done and now do. Or, upon that occaſion, when I ſhall be reſtored. Or, for this Reaſon, being ſo ſenſible of the ſweetneſs of thy Favour. Or, certainly: For this Particle is ſometimes uſed as a note of Aſſeveration, as it is, Pſal. 127. 2. Iſa. 16. 6. p Towards thee in Heaven, in Prayers and Praiſes. q According to thy Command. Or, with Confidence in thy Name.

*Pſ. 103. 5. † Heb. Fatneſs. 5 * My ſoul ſhall be ſatisfied r as with † marrow and fatneſs; and my mouth ſhall praiſe thee with joyful lips.

r When thou ſhalt fulfil my earneſt Deſire of enjoying thee in the Sanctuary: though now in my exile I Groan and Pine away for want of that Mercy.

6 When * I remember thee s upon my bed t, and meditate on thee in the night-watches u. * Pſ. 42. 8. & 119. 55.

7 Becauſe thou haſt been my help; therefore in the ſhadow of thy wings will I rejoyce x.

s In the mean time, whilſt I cannot enjoy thee, I will Quiet and Comfort my ſelf with the Thoughts, and Remembrance of thy Kindneſs to me. t Heb. Upon my Beds, implying that he was frequently forced to change his Bed and Lodging, being driven from place to place. u In the ſeveral ſeaſons of the Night, which was divided into three or four Watches; of which ſee Exod. 14. 24. Judg. 7. 19. Mark 13. 35. When others ſleep ſecurely, my ſleep is interrupted by my Perplexity and Grief for my abſence from thy Houſe, and when I awake, my Thoughts are fixed upon thee, &c. x I will reſt ſecurely and joyfully in thy Protection.

y (i. e.) Purſueth thee Eagerly and Diligently, and Reſolvedly, and as it were ſtep by ſtep, when thou ſeemeſt to run away from me: Which is the Emphaſis of this Hebrew word. My Soul and Spirit cleaveth to thee, as this Verb ſignifies, Gen. 2. 24. Jer. 13. 11. when my Body is abſent from thy Sanctuary. z I do not loſe my Labour in following hard after thee; for though I am not yet reſtored to the Enjoyment of thy Preſence in thy Houſe, yet I have preſent ſupports from thee, whereby my Spirit is kept from fainting under my manifold Preſſures, and is enabled with Faith and Patience to wait upon thee, till thou ſeeſt fit to deliver me.

9 But thoſe that ſeek my ſoul to deſtroy it a, ſhall go into the lower parts of the earth b.

a (i. e.) To take away my Life. b Either, 1. Into Hell. Or rather, 2. Into their Grave, as this Phraſe is uſed, Ezek. 31. 14, 18. But how is this true, when they are ſuppoſed to be devoured by Foxes, v. 10. Anſw. This may be underſtood; Either, 1. Of divers Perſons. Some of their ſlain might be Buried, and others lye unburied. Or, 2. Of the ſame Perſons; they did go into the Earth, but not immediately, but were firſt devoured of Foxes, and the remainders of them were Buried, as is frequently done in ſuch Caſes. Or, this Phraſe may note not ſo much the Place, as the State, of the Dead; this being univerſally ſaid of thoſe that dye, whether they are buried or unburied, that they return to the Earth or Duſt, Job 1. 21. Eccleſ. 12. 7.

c (i. e.) Dye in battel, as David foretold, 1 Sam. 26. 10. and as was Accompliſhed in Saul, and his followers, who were David's greateſt Enemies, 1 Sam. 31. d Their Carkaſſes ſhall be unburied upon the Earth, and thereby become a prey to Wild and Ravenous Creatures, and eſpecially to Foxes, which were in thoſe Parts in great abundance; and which did and do feed not onely upon fruits, Cant. 2. 15. but alſo upon Fleſh, as Experience ſheweth. Beſides ſome very Learned men think that the Word rendred, Foxes, is more general, and comprehends, beſides Foxes, another ſort of Creatures, like unto them called Toxes, which were very numerous in this Country: Of which ſee on Jud. 15. 4.

11 But the king e ſhall rejoyce in God, every one that ſweareth by him f ſhall glory g: but the mouth of them that ſpeak lyes h, ſhall be ſtopped i.

e I who am already anointed King, and who ſhall be actually King, when theſe mine Enemies are fallen by the Sword. He ſpeaks of himſelf in the third Perſon, either out of Modeſty; or out of Prudence, becauſe it was Ambiguous, and might be underſtood; Either of himſelf, or of Saul, whereby he might avoid the Envy of the Expreſſion; if this Pſalm was Compoſed before he was King. f Either, 1. By the King; by whom they ſometimes did ſwear, as Gen. 42. 15. 2 Sam. 15. 21. But they did alſo ſwear by ſome other Perſons, of Eminent Place and Authority, though under the King, as 1 Sam. 1. 26. and 20. 3. Nor is it likely, that the Pſalmiſt would juſtifie thoſe kinds of Oaths, this Practice of ſwearing by ones Name, being Accounted a part of that Worſhip which is proper to God, both in the Old and New Teſtament. If this were meant of the King, it might better be rendred, that ſweareth to (for ſo the Particle Beth is ſometimes uſed) him, as Subjects uſed to ſwear Homage to their Prince. So the Sence is: All thoſe that ſhall own me for their King. Or, 2. By God, who was laſt mentioned, that ſweareth by the Name of God, to wit, in Truth, and Judgment, and Righteouſneſs, as it is expreſſed, Jer. 4. 2. (i. e.) Every ſincere Servant and Worſhipper of God; Swearing, being oft put for the whole Worſhip of God, whereof it is a Conſiderable part, and Swearers by God for Worſhippers of him, as Iſa. 19. 18. and 45. 23. Compared with Rom. 14. 11. and Iſa. 65. 16. g Shall rejoyce in my Deliverance and Exaltation, both for their Reſpect to the Honour and Service of God, which I ſhall advance, and for the Benefits which all good Men, and the whole Kingdom ſhall feel by my Government; whereas in Saul's time the vileſt Men were exalted, and good Men oppreſſed and perſecuted, and the whole Kingdom Groaned under his Tyranny. h That now make it their Buſineſs to invent or ſpread lying and ſlanderous Reports concerning me and others of God's People. i I ſhall ſeverely reſtrain and puniſh ſuch wicked Practices.

PSAL. LXIV.

The ARGUMENT.

THe Matter of this Pſalm plainly declares that it was made in a time when David was greatly Diſtreſſed and Reproached: Which he was both under Saul, and in the time of Abſalom's Rebellion.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm of David.

The Pſalmiſt complaining of his Enemies, and deſcribing their crafty and wicked Practices, prayeth unto God for guard and deliverance, 1——5.

1——6. foretelleth alſo their utter ruine, to the Honour of God, and Joy of the Righteous, 7——10.

HEar my voyce, O God, in my prayer; preſerve my Life from fear a of the enemy.

a (i. e.) From Danger: The Act or Paſſion of Fear, being oft put for its Object, Danger, as Pſal. 14. 5. 1 Pet. 3. 14. and oft elſewhere.

2 Hide me from the ſecret counſel b of the wicked; from the inſurrection of the workers of iniquity.

b (i. e.) From the ill Effects of their Plots againſt me.

Pſ. 11. 2. * Pſ. 57. 4 3 * Who whet their tongue like a ſword, and * bend their bows to ſhoot their arrows c even bitter words d.

c Of which Phraſe ſee the notes on Pſal. 58. 7. d Slanderous and pernicious Speeches againſt me.

4 That they may ſhoot in ſecret e at the perfect f: ſuddenly g do they ſhoot at him, and fear not h.

e Lying in Ambuſh, or hiding themſelves in ſecret places, as Fowlers commonly do. f Or, upright Man; (i. e.) At me, who in ſpight of all their Calumnies, dare avow that my Heart is perfect with God, and that I am blameleſs as to them, having given them no juſt Provocation. g At the very firſt Opportunity. h Neither men, becauſe they conceal it from them, as appears from the foregoing and following Words; nor God, whoſe Judgments they deſpiſe.

Or, Speech Heb. to hide. 5 They encourage themſelves i in an evil || matter, they commune † of laying ſnares privily: they ſay, who ſhall ſee them k?

i Heb. They ſtrengthen, or fortifie themſelves, by firm Reſolutions, by aſſured Confidence of Succeſs, by uniting their Counſels and Forces together, and by mutual Encouragements and Exhortations. k Their ſnares are ſo ſecretly laid that David cannot diſcern, and therefore not avoid them.

Or, are ſtedfaſtly reſolved. Heb. a matter. Heb. they have ſtrengthened. 6 They ſearch out iniquities l; || they accompliſh † a diligent ſearch m; both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart is deep n.

l They ſtudy Diligently and Conſtantly, to find out either Matter, which they may lay to my Charge, or new Ways and means of doing me Miſchief. m They have long and accurately ſearched, till at laſt they have Ripened and perfected their Thoughts, and found out a very cunning and deep Plot. Or, they ſay, We have accompliſhed our accurate ſearch. By long ſearching we have at laſt found what we deſired. n Mine Enemies are not onely Cruel and Malicious, but alſo very Cunning, both to contrive and conceal, and to execute their Plots.

Heb. their God ſhall ſhoot. 7 But God ſhall ſhoot at them o with an arrow, ſuddenly † ſhall they be wounded.

o Though I can neither ſearch out, or prevent their ſubtil Deviſe, yet God can and will certainly do it. p Shortly and unexpectedly.

8 So they ſhall make their own tongue to fall upon themſelves q; all that ſee them, ſhall flee away r.

q The Miſchief of their hard Speeches and Threats, and Crafty Counſels againſt me, ſhall be turned againſt themſelves. r Partly, through Abhorrency of them; and Partly, through Fear of being involved in their Deſtruction.

9 And all men s ſhall fear, and ſhall declare the work of God t; for they ſhall wiſely conſider of his doing u.

s (i. e.) A greater number of thoſe who ſhall ſee theſe Events. t (i. e.) This admirable work of Divine Power and Wiſdom, and Faithfulneſs. u Learning Wiſdom by their Folly and Miſery, and avoiding thoſe Evil Courſes, which brought them to Ruin.

10 The righteous ſhall be glad in the LORD x, and ſhall truſt in him; and all the upright in heart ſhall glory y.

x Or, for the Lord, (i. e.) Not out of Malice or ill Will to the Perſons of their Enemies, but for the Honour of God, which by this means is fully Vindicated, and greatly advanced. y To wit, in God, as their ſure Rock and all-ſufficient Portion.

PSAL. LXV.

The ARGUMENT.

THe Deſign of this Pſalm, ſeems to be to declare the Great and Glorious work of Divine Providence, both towards his Church, and the Land of his People, and towards the reſt of Mankind.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm and ſong of David.

David praiſeth God for ſpiritual Bleſſings, as hearing Prayer, and purging away ſin, 1—3. and for the bleſſedneſs of thoſe that dwell in his Courts, 4. and alſo for temporal Bleſſings, as governing the World, and the abundance of all worldly Enjoyments, 5——15.

a Heb. is ſilent or ſilence, (i. e.) Quietly waits, as this Phraſe is uſed, alſo Pſal. 62. 1. And praiſe may be here put for the Perſon or Perſons, who uſe to praiſe God upon all occaſions, and who are now prepared and ready to do ſo: as Deceit is put for a deceitful Man, as Prov. 12. 24. and ſin for the Sinner, Prov. 13. 6. and Dreams for Dreamers, Jer. 27. 9. So the meaning may ſeem to be this, God's people Patiently and believingly wait for an Opportunity, to offer their Praiſes to God: For at preſent they ſeem to be in ſome ſtraits, as divers Paſſages of this Pſalm do intimate. b Tho' all the People of the World have great cauſe to Praiſe thee, yet none pay thee this Tribute, but thy People in Sion; and they indeed have many peculiar and Eminent Obligations, and Occaſions to perform this Duty. c All the thank-offerings which thy People vowed unto thee in the time of their Danger, ſhall be faithfully paid, to wit, in Zion: Which is to be repeated out of the firſt Clauſe of the Verſe.

d That uſeſt and delighteſt to hear and Anſwer the Prayers of thy People in Zion. Which he juſtly mentions, as one of the chiefeſt of God's Favours, and Privileges vouchſafed to his Church. e (i. e.) Men of all ſorts and Nations, who were allured by this and other ſingular Benefits, to joyn themſelves to the Jewiſh Church, according to Solomon's Prediction, 1 Kings 8. 41, 42, 43. Withal this may be a Tacit Prophecy of the Converſion of the Gentiles.

† Heb. Words and Matters of iniquities. † Heb. atone, Or, expiate. 3 † Iniquities prevail againſt me f: as for our tranſgreſſions, thou ſhalt † purge them away g.

f They are a burden too heavy for me, as he Complains, Pſal. 38. 4. They are ſo many and great, that for them thou mighteſt juſtly reject my Prayers, and deſtroy my Perſon. g But this is another glorious Priviledge granted to thy people; and that, in Anſwer to their prayers, thou doſt graciouſly pardon and purge away their ſins.

4 Bleſſed is the man whom thou chooſeſt h, and cauſeſt i to approach unto thee k, that he may dwell in thy courts l: * we ſhall be ſatisfied m with the goodneſs of thy houſe n, * Pſ. 36. 8. even of thy holy temple.

h Out of the Lump of Mankind, to be one of thy peculiar people. i (i. e.) Permitteſt and Commandeſt, and by the diſpoſal of thy Providence, and the Influences of thy Grace, procureſt and ordereſt. k To draw near to God in his Houſe and Ordinances, by prayer and praiſes, and other Acts of Acquaintance and Communion with him. l In the Courts of thy Houſe. He mentioneth Courts, becauſe the people were permitted to go no further into God's Houſe. m For they onely get that ſolid Satisfaction which all Men deſire, but no other perſons or people can find elſewhere. n With the ſpiritual and everlaſting Bleſſings there conferred upon thy people, the Grace and Favour and fellowſhip of God, Remiſſion of ſins, Renovation of Heart and Life, the knowledge of God, and of our ſelves, and of our Duty, and true Intereſt, Joy and peace, and well-grounded Hopes or aſſurance of eternal Life: In Comparifon whereof all the Enjoyments of this World, are but Droſs and Dung.

5 By terrible things o in righteouſneſs p wilt thou anſwer us q, O God of our ſalvation: who art the confidence r of all the ends of the earth s, and of them that are afar off upon the ſea t.

o Or, In a Terrible manner; (i. e.) So as to ſtrike thy people with an holy Awe and Reverence of thee and of thy Judgments, and thine Enemies with Dread and Horror. Or, In a wonderful manner, as this Word is rendred in the Chaldee, Deut. 10. 21. things wonderful and Terrible, being put together, as expreſſing the ſame thing, Pſal. 106. 22. p (i. e.) By Vertue of thy Juſtice, or Faithfulneſs, or Goodneſs; whereby thou art inclined, and engaged to help thy people when they are in Diſtreſs, and reſort unto thee by prayer. q Thou wilt graciouſly Anſwer and grant our prayers and Deſires: r (i. e.) The onely Object of a ſafe and undeceiving Confidence; for there is no other perſon, or thing in the World, that any man Living can truſt to without Fear and certainty of Diſappointment. Or, Thou art the ſtay and ſupport of all Mankind, by thy powerful and gracious Providence, Pſal. 104. 27. Acts 17. 28. Heb. 1. 3. Others refer this to the Calling of the Gentiles. But that ſeems not to ſuit with the following Verſes, which manifeſtly ſpeak of God's general Providence. s Not onely of thy people Iſrael, but of all perſons and Nations, even as far as to the End of the Earth, or of this vaſt Continent in which we Live. t Or, in the Sea, (i. e.) in the Iſlands of the Sea, which are here diſtinguiſhed from the Continent; and under thoſe two Heads, are Comprehended all the Inhabitants of the World.

6 Which by his ſtrength ſetteſt faſt the mountains u; being girded with power x.

u That they are not overthrown by Floods or Winds, or Earthquakes, or other natural or violent Cauſes: Which ſtability they have onely from God's Providence, which ſuſtains all perſons, and all things. x This our God being able to do it, and that with one ſingle Word.

* Pſ. 89. 9. 7 * Which ſtilleth the noiſe of the ſeas, the noiſe of their waves y, and the tumult of the People z.

y When the Sea is Tempeſtuous, and Threatens to ſwallow up Ships and Men that are in it, or to overflow the Earth. z And as he ſtills the Natural, ſo alſo he quiets the Metaphorical Seas, Tumultuous and unruly people, for multitudes of people are oft called Seas, in prophetical Writings, as Iſa. 17. 12, 13. Jer. 51. 42. Rev. 17. 15.

8 They alſo that dwell in the uttermoſt parts a are afraid at thy tokens b: thou makeſt the out-goings of the morning and evening c || to rejoyce. || Or, to ſing.

a To wit, of the Earth, which is added to this Word, v. 5. b Or Signs: Either, 1. At the Sun and Moon and Stars, which are called Signs, Gen. 1. 14. But theſe are not Matter of Terror, but of delight to Men; and the Commonneſs and Conſtancy of their Courſes, makes moſt Men neither fear nor much regard them. Or, 2. At the great and terrible Judgments, which God inflicts upon wicked Men, and particularly upon the Enemies of his people. Or rather, 3. At thoſe terrible Thunders and Lightning, and Earthquakes, and Comets, or other ſtrange Meteors, or Works of God in the Air: For he is here ſpeaking of the natural Works of God. c By which he underſtands; Either, 1. The Eaſt, from whence the Morning or the Sun, the cauſe of it, goeth forth, as it is expreſſed, Pſal. 19. 6. and the Weſt, from whence the Evening or Night, is Poetically ſuppoſed to come forth. So the meaning is, That God gives all the People of the World from East to VVest, occasion to rejoyce in the Effects of his Bounty and Goodness to them. But if the Psalmist had meant this, it is not probable that he would have expressed it in such a dark and doubtful Phrase, which is never used in that Sence, but rather by those known and usual Expressions, from East to West, or, from the rising of the Sun, to the going down thereof, which Phrase he useth, Psal. 50. 1. and 113. 3. Or rather, 2. The successive Courses of the Morning and Evening; Or of the Sun and Moon which go forth at those times, thereby making the Morning and Evening; both which are said to Rejoyce poetically, because they give Men occasion of Rejoycing, which the Sun or the Morning doth, because it gives them Opportunity for the dispatch of Business, and for the Enjoyment of manifold Recreations and Delights; and the Moon or Evening doth so, because it invites men to that rest and sleep, which is both refreshing and necessary for them. Thus this the whole Verse speaks of the natural Works of God, the former Clause of such as are extraordinary and Terrible, the latter of such as are ordinary and delightful.

‖ Or, after thou hadst made it to desire Rain, or thou desirest it. * Psal. 68. 5, 10.

9 Thou visitest d the earth e and ‖ * watereſt it f: thou greatly enricheſt it with the river of God g which is full of water: thou prepareſt h them i corn, when thou haſt ſo provided for it k.

d To wit, in mercy or with thy Favour, as this Word is oft used. e The whole Earth, which is full of thy Bounty. So he continues to declare the general Providence of God, to all men and people. Or rather the Land, or this Land, for here is an Emphatical Article. And so he comes from God's general Providence over all places and Nations, to his particular and special Providence over his people in the Land of Canaan, whereof he gives one Eminent and Considerable instance, to wit, his giving them Rain and fruitful Seasons, and that after a time of drought and scarcity, to which it is not improbably supposed that this Psalm relates. And this may be the particular occasion, for which the Psalmist said, that Praise waited for God in Zion, v. 1. f This is added to determine and explain the former general Word, or to shew how or wherein God visited it. g Either, 1. With the Rivers which God hath made in the several parts of the Earth, to make it moist and fruitful. Although the fertility of the greatest part of the Earth, doth not depend so much upon the Rivers below, as upon the Rains from above. Or, 2. With the River Jordan, which sometimes overflowed its Banks. But that overflow reached onely to a small part of the Land. Or rather, 3. With showers of Rain, which he very significantly calls a River for their plenty, and the River of God, (i. e.) Of God's immediate making and providing when he sees fit; which is opposed both to those little Rivolets or Channels, which Husbandmen or Gardiners cut for the watering of their Grounds; and to those greater Rivers, which run with a constant Course, and by their little Channels derived from them, or by their overflows do Water and inrich the Earth, as Nilus did Egypt; to which these Words may seem to have a special Reference, especially if they be Compared with Deut. 11. 10, 11, 12, &c. h By this means thou prepareſt the Earth, for bringing forth Corn, and Ripeneſt the Corn in the Earth. i For them; To wit, the Inhabitants of the Earth, or Land here mentioned, for their use and Benefit. k Or, disposed or ordered, or prepared it, to wit, the Earth, which without this would be hard and Barren.

10 Thou watereſt the ridges thereof abundantly: ‖ thou ſettled l the furrows thereof: † thou makeſt it ſoft with ſhowers, thou bleſſeſt the ſpringing thereof m.

l To wit, in that Condition which is fit for Fruit. Or, thou bringeſt down: for the Rain diſſolves the high and hard Clods of Earth. m When all is done, the Fruitfulneſs of the Earth muſt not be aſcribed to the Rain or Sun, or any ſecond Cauſes, but to thy Bleſſing alone.

11 Thou crowneſt † the year with thy goodneſs n, and thy paths o drop fatneſs p.

n Thou by thy powerful Goodneſs, doſt inrich and adorn all the Seaſons of the Year, with their proper Fruits and Bleſſings. o The Clouds, upon which God is frequently ſaid to Walk or Ride, as Job 36. 28. and 38. 25, 27. Pſal. 104. 3. Nah. 1. 3. Which Sence is favoured by the next Verſe, where theſe Paths are ſaid to drop, &c. p Make the Earth Fat and Fruitful.

12 They q droop upon the paſtures of the wilderneſs r; and the little hills s † rejoyce on every ſide t.

q God's paths. r Which though neglected by Men, are furniſhed by God with Food for wild Beaſts, which being his Creatures, he careth for by this means. s The Hills of Canaan, which for the generality of them, were but ſmall, if Compared with the great and high Mountains in divers parts of the World. He mentions the Hills, becauſe theſe being moſt dry and parched with the Sun, moſt need and are moſt refreſhed with the Rain. t As being moiſtened and ſatisfied with Rain, in all parts and ſides of them.

13 The paſtures are clothed with flocks, the valleys alſo are covered over with corn u, they ſhout for joy, they alſo ſing x.

u This is added as the Effect of theſe Comfortable Rains, that they fill the Paſtures with Graſs for Cattel, and the Valleys (which he mentions as the moſt Fruitful places, though he doth not exclude the reſt) with Corn for the uſe of Man. x (i. e.) They are abundantly ſatisfied with thy Goodneſs, and in their manner ſing forth the Praiſes, and declare the Goodneſs of their Creator and Benefactor. Compare Pſal. 147. 8. ſuch Paſſions or Actions, as theſe are oft figuratively aſcribed to Life-leſs Creatures, both in Sacred and profane Poetical Writings; which are ſaid to Rejoyce or Mourn, &c. when their Condition is ſuch as calls for Rejoycing or Mourning, and would cauſe them to do ſo, if they were Capable of ſuch Actions.

PSAL. LXVI.

The ARGUMENT.

THe Author and time of the Compoſing of this Pſalm are uncertain. This is manifeſt and ſufficient for our underſtanding of it, that it was made upon the occaſion of ſome great and glorious Deliverance afforded to the Iſraelites, after and out of ſome grievous and general Calamity, and, as ſome not improbably conceive, that out of Babylon.

To the chief muſician, a Song or Pſalm.

The Prophet exhorteth all to praiſe God for his wonderful Works, 1—8. eſpecially for delivering his Church out of all trouble, 9——12. He promiſeth unto God Thankſgiving, and to pay the Vows he made in Trouble, 13—15. calling to others to ſee God's Goodneſs to his Soul, bleſſeth him for it, 16——20.

1 MAke a joyful noiſe unto God, † all ye lands a. † Heb. all the Earth.

a Ye people of all Nations, who have ſeen the wonderful Power and Wiſdom, and fidelity, and goodneſs of God in our Deliverance; it becomes you to acknowledge it with Admiration and Rejoycing. Or, all the Land, or this Land. But the former Sence is more probable from v. 4. where this Word is ſo uſed. And it is very proper in this place, and uſual in other places of Scriptures, to invite the Gentile World, to the Contemplation and Celebration of God's Works, to and for his people. See Deut. 32. 43. 1 Chron. 16. 23, 24.

b (i. e.) Praiſe him in an extraordinary and Eminent degree, ſo as he may have much Glory from you.

3 Say unto God, How terrible are thou in thy works c! through the greatneſs of thy power ſhall thine enemies ‖ † ſubmit themſelves unto thee d.

c To wit, to thine Enemies, as it follows. d Heb. Lye unto thee. (i. e.) Profeſs ſubjection to thee, not ſincerely and freely, but by Conſtraint, and out of a ſervile Fear.

4 All the earth ſhall worſhip thee, and ſhall ſing unto thee e; they ſhall ſing to thy Name, Selah.

e Many people of divers Nations ſhall be ſo affected with thy ſtupendious Works, that they ſhall worſhip and praiſe thee for them, and all people ſhall do ſo, and ſhall have juſt cauſe to do ſo; and the time will come when all Nations will actually do ſo, to wit, in the days of the Meſſias.

5 * Come and ſee f the works of God; he is terrible * Pſ. 46. 8. in his doing toward the children of men g.

f Conſider them wiſely and ſeriouſly, for God's Glory, and for your own good. g To all his Enemies; whom he calls the Children of Men; partly, in way of Contempt, to ſhew how unable they are; Either, to avoid or reſiſt the great God; and partly, in oppoſition to his own people, who are frequently called the Children of God.

6 * He turned the ſea into dry land; * they went * Exo. 14. 21. through the flood h on foot; there did we i rejoyce in * Joſh. 3. 17. him.

h Or River, to wit, Jordan. i (i. e.) Our Nation, or our Anceſtors, in whoſe Loyns we then were, and the Benefit of which Antient Deliverance we at this day enjoy. See the like Expreſſions, Pſal. 81. 5. Hoſea 12. 4. The whole people of Iſrael are oft Conſidered as one Body, continued through all ſucceeding Generations, United in the Bond of the ſame Covenant and Worſhip, and in the poſſeſſion of the ſame Promiſes, and Priviledges, and Bleſſings, and Acted by one and the ſame Spirit; and therefore ſeveral and contrary things may reaſonably be aſcribed to them, in regard of their ſeveral Parts and Ages, and what was done in one Age, may be imputed to another by Vertue of their ſtrict Conjunction with the ſame Body.

7 He ruleth by his power for ever i; * his eyes be- * Pſ. 11. 4. hold the nations k: let not the rebellious exalt themſelves l. Selah.

i The ſame Power which God had and put forth for his people in Antient time, he ſtill hath in as great Vigour as ever, and is not at all weakened by Age, and is as able and ready to Act for them now, as ever he was: which he hath ſhewed by this Late and Glorious inſtance. k He ſees all their ſecret and ſubtil Devices, and can and will defeat them, when he ſees fit. l Lift up their Hands againſt God, or againſt his people. Or, the Rebellion (i. e. Thoſe people which rebel againſt this Almighty God and his Laws) ſhall not exalt themſelves, as they Vainly hope and Deſign to do, but ſhall be brought down and deſtroyed, as is hereby implyed.

8 O bleſs our God, ye people m, and make the voyce of his praiſe to be heard.

m Of other Nations, that have ſerved, or yet do ſerve other Gods.

9 Which † holdeth our ſoul in life n, and ſuffereth not † Heb. putteth. our feet to be moved o.

n Who by a Succeſſion of Miracles of Mercy, hath kept us alive in the midſt of a thouſand Deaths, to which we were expoſed, and hath reſtored us to Life, when we were like Dead men and dry Bones ſcattered at the Mouth of the Grave. o To wit, ſo as to fall into Miſchief and utter Ruin, as our Enemies deſigned.

10 For p * thou, O God, haſt proved us, thou haſt * Pſ. 17. 3. tryed us, as ſilver is tryed q.

p Or, Yet or Nevertheleſs. Though thou haſt hitherto helped us, and now delivered us, yet for a ſeaſon thou haſt ſorely afflicted us. q (i. e.) Severely, as if it were in a burning Furnace; and with a Deſign to try our ſincerity, and to purge out the Droſs, or the wicked from among us.

11 Thou broughteſt us into the net r; thou laidſt affliction upon our loyns.

r Which our Enemies laid for us, and which could never have taken or held us, but by the Permiſſion and Diſpoſal of thy Providence, which gave us into their hands.

12 Thou haſt cauſed men s to ride over our heads t; we went through fire, and through water u; but thou broughteſt us out into a † wealthy place x.

s Weak and Mortal, and miſerable Men, as the Word ſignifies, no better nor ſtronger than we, if thou hadſt not given them Power over us. t To Ride upon our Shoulders. By thy Permiſſion they have uſed us like Slaves, yea like Beaſts, to carry their Perſons or Burdens. Compare Iſa. 51. 23. u (i. e.) Through various and dangerous Tryals, and Calamities. See Pſal. 32. 6. and 69. 2. Ezek. 16. 7. and 30. 8. x Heb. Into a moiſt, or Well-watered place, ſuch as Canaan was, both in a Proper Sence, and figuratively, as being repleniſhed with Divine Graces and Bleſſings.

13 I will go y into thy houſe with burnt-offerings: I will pay thee my vows, 14 Which my lips have † uttered, and my mouth hath ſpoken when I was in trouble.

15 I will † offer unto thee burnt-ſacrifices of † fatlings, with the incenſe of rams z: I will offer bullocks with goats, Selah.

y Hitherto he ſpoke in the plural Number, but now he begins to ſpeak in the ſingular Number, but ſtill the Speech is continued of the ſame Perſon or Perſons: onely ſometimes the whole Body ſpeaks; and ſometimes one Man ſpeaks in the Name of all the reſt. z with the fat of Rams, which in theſe Peace-offerings was burnt upon the Altar, and ſo vaniſhed into Smoke like Incenſe, and which is no leſs pleaſing to God than Incenſe.

16 Come and hear, all ye that fear God a, and I will declare what he hath done for my ſoul b.

a Whether Iſraelites or Gentiles proſelyted to them. Let every Iſraelite take notice of what God hath done for the Nation in general, and let the Gentiles obſerve God's goodneſs to the Children of Iſrael. b Which he hath held in Life, as he ſaid v. 9. in the greateſt dangers of Death.

17 I cryed unto him with my mouth c, and he was extolled d with my tongue.

c With a loud Voyce and great Fervency: Or it is a Pleonaſme, as Pſal. 44. 1. We have heard with our Ears. d (i. e.) Praiſed by me; To wit, for Anſwering my Prayers.

Pſ. 18. 9. Job. 15. 31. Iſa. 59. 2. 18 If * I † regard e iniquity f in my heart g, the LORD will not hear me h.

† Heb. If I have or had ſeen, or looked upon, to wit, with approbation and affection, as Job 31. 26. Hab. 1. 13. Men look upon what they like, and turn away their Face from what they loath or hate. f Any ſin whatſoever, and eſpecially Idolatry, which is oft expreſſed by this Word, to which the Iſraelites were very prone, and to which they had moſt powerful Temptations from the Examples, and Counſels, and Promiſes, and Threats of the Idolaters, in whoſe Land and Power they had been. And ſo this is a Purgation of themſelves from that Crime, ſomewhat like that Pſal. 44. 20, 21. and in general, from thoſe groſs and Reigning ſins, whereof they had been guilty formerly. g If my Heart was falſe to God, and did cleave to Idols, or to any Wickedneſs, although I might for ſome prudential Reaſons forbear the groſs and outward Acts. Compare Pſal. 44. 17, 18. If I had been guilty of that Hypocriſie, wherewith mine Enemies charged me, and had been a ſecret Favourer of Wickedneſs when I pretended great Piety. Or, If I did not Cry unto God with my Heart, but onely howled for Corn and Wine, &c. and whilſt I cryed to God with my Tongue, my Heart was ſet upon ſin, or I deſired onely that which I reſolved in my Heart to ſpend upon my Luſts. h Or, Would not have heard me; as divers learned Interpreters tranſlate it, the Future being put Potentially, as is uſual among the Hebrews. For God heareth not ſinners, John 2. 31. nor Hypocrites, Job 27. 8, 9. Prov. 15. 29.

19 But verily God hath heard me i; he hath attended to the voyce of my prayer.

i Which is a publick Vindication, and a divine Teſtimony of my Integrity, againſt all my Calle Accuſers.

20 Bleſſeth be God, which hath not turned away k my prayer, nor his mercy l from me.

k Or, rejected or removed, to wit, from his ſight and Audience, but hath received and granted it. l Though he had now aſſerted his own Innocency, and ſincere Piety, yet he imputeth not God's hearing of his Prayers to that, but ſolely unto God's Grace and Mercy.

PSAL. LXVII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm contains a Prayer for the Church of Iſrael, as alſo for the Gentile-World, whoſe Converſion he Prophetically deſcribes.

To the chief muſician on Neginoth, a Pſalm or Song.

The Church prayeth for the Enlargement of the Kingdom of God, 1, 2. to the Joy of the Nations, 3—5. and for the increaſe of Spiritual and Temporal Bleſſings, 6, 7.

Pſ. 4. 6. Heb. with us. 1 GOd be merciful unto us a, and bleſs us, and * cauſe his face to ſhine † upon us b. Selah.

a Thy People of Iſrael. b As thou haſt hid thy Face and Favour from us, ſo now do thou manifeſt it to us. For the Phraſe ſee Numb. 6. 25, 26. Pſal. 31. 16.

2 That thy way may be known upon earth c, thy ſaving health among all nations.

c Nor do we deſire this Mercy onely for our Comfort, but alſo for the Advancement of thy Glory, and the Propagation of the true Religion among all Nations, who by the Contemplation of thy Gracious and wonderful Works, to and for us, will be induced to Love and ſerve thee, and to lift themſelves among thy People. By God's way he underſtands; Either, 1. That way wherein God Walks; or the manner of his dealing with his people, how Gracious and bountiful a Maſter thou art to all thy Servants. Or rather, 2. That way wherein God requires Men to walk, the way of God's Precepts, the way of Truth, or the true Religion; as the way or ways of the Lord, are frequently taken, Gen. 18. 19. Judg. 2. 22. Pſal. 18. 21. and 119. 1. Acts 18. 25. 26, &c. the ſame which in the next Clauſe is called his Saving Health, Heb. Salvation, and both together ſignifie the way of Salvation, which the Pſalmiſt deſires may be known among all Nations; which was expected by the Antient and godly Jews, at the coming of the Meſſias, who is called the Way, John 14. 6. and God's Salvation, Luke 2. 30. And ſo the Sence of the place is this, Deal ſo graciouſly with thy People Iſrael, that thereby the Gentile-World may at laſt be allured to joyn themſelves with them, and to embrace their Religion and Meſſias; according to that famous Prophecy, Zech. 8. 23. In thoſe days ten Men——out of all——Nations ſhall take hold of the skirt of——a Jew ſaying, We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you.

3 Let the people praiſe thee, O God; let all the people praiſe thee d.

d O haſten that time, when all the Gentiles ſhall forſake their dumb Idols, and ſerve and Praiſe thee the Living God, as they will have abundant cauſe to do.

4 O let the nations be glad and ſing for joy e; for thou ſhalt judge f the people righteouſly g, and † govern h the † Heb. Lead. nations upon earth, Selah.

5 Let the people praiſe thee, O God, let all the people praiſe thee.

e For thy Tranſcendent Mercy to them, in reſcuing them from the Vanities and damnable Errors of their Fathers, and in bringing them to the knowledge of the true God, and of eternal Life. f (i. e.) Rule and govern them, as it is explained in the next Clauſe, and as this Phraſe is uſed. g Which is the great Commendation of any Government, and the greateſt Argument and Encouragement to the Gentiles to put themſelves under it; the rather Becauſe they had found the Miſery of Living under the unrighteous and Tyrannical Government of the Devil, and of their Idolatrous and heatheniſh Rulers. h Heb. lead; To wit, gently, as a Shepherd doth his Sheep; and not rule them with Rigour, as other Lords had done.

Pſal. 85. 12. 6 * Then ſhall the earth yeild her increaſe i, and God, even our own God k ſhall bleſs us.

i When the people of the Earth ſhall be Converted to the Worſhip and Service of the true God, God will take away his Curſe from the Earth, and cauſe it to yield them abundance of all ſorts of Fruits. Under which one Bleſſing, promiſed under the Law to them that obey God, all other Bleſſings both Temporal and Spiritual are Comprehended, as is very uſual in the Old Teſtament. k He who is Iſrael's God in a peculiar manner, by that everlaſting Covenant which he hath made with us.

7 God ſhall bleſs us, and all the ends of the earth ſhall fear him.

PSAL. LXVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THe occaſion of this Pſalm ſeems to have been David's Tranſlation of the Ark to Zion, which was managed with great Solemnity and Devotion, and Celebrated with ſome Pſalms, and this among the reſt. For the firſt Words are the very ſame which Moſes appointed for ſuch occaſions, Numb. 10. 35. and the following Verſes purſue the ſame Matter with the firſt. Thence he falls into a Deſcription of ſome of the excellent Properties and glorious Works of the God to whom this Ark belonged. But becauſe David very well knew that both himſelf and the Ark were Types of Chriſt, and that the Church and people of Iſrael were a Type of the Catholick Church, conſiſting of Jews and Gentiles, and that the legal Adminiſtrations and Actions were Types of thoſe of the Goſpel, he therefore by the Spirit of Prophecy, looked thorough and beyond the preſent Actions and Perſons, unto the great Myſteries of Chriſt's Reſurrection and Aſcenſion into Heaven, and of the ſpecial priviledges of the Chriſtian Church, and of the Converſion of the Gentiles unto God, and therefore intermixeth ſome paſſages, which directly and immediately belong to theſe things, although the Words be ſo ordered, that they carry a manifeſt Alluſion to the preſent Actions, and may in ſome ſort be applied to them, though in a more obſcure and improper and ſecondary Sence. Nor is it at all ſtrange, that in the ſame Pſalm there is ſuch a mixture of things, whereof ſome belong onely to the Actions or Events of that time, and ſome onely to Chriſt, and the Goſpel times; If it be conſidered, that the Pſalmiſt in himſelf doth frequently expreſs divers, and thoſe contrary Paſſions and Diſpoſitions, as Hope and Fear, &c. in the ſame Pſalm, and ſometimes in the ſame Verſe, and eſpecially that the ſacred Pen-Men in the Compoſition of theſe Writings were Men wholly inſpired and governed, and moved by the Holy Ghoſt, 2 Pet. 1. 21. by whom they were Variouſly tranſported, as he ſaw fit, and ſometimes carried away to ſpeak of the higheſt Myſteries of the Goſpel, even ſuch things as they themſelves did not fully underſtand, as appears from 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm or Song of David.

At the removing of the Ark, David exhorteth to praiſe the Lord, 1—6. for his wonderful Power and Love in delivering his people out of Egypt, 6. leading 'em through the Wilderneſs, 7—11. ſubduing their their Enemies, 12. and chuſing Zion for his Habitation, 13——18. He bleſſeth God for his Judgments on the Churches Enemies, 19, 20. for his promiſes to his people, 21——29. and for his Toreats to the Cruel, 30, 31. The Kingdoms of the Earth are called to ſing to the Lord, whoſe Power and Majeſty is heard in the Heavens, and whoſe Strength and Excellency is over Iſrael, 32——35.

* Num. 10. 35. † Heb. from his face.

LEt * God ariſe a, let his enemies be ſcattered: let them alſo that hate him b, flee † before him.

a O that God would ariſe from his Seat, and beſtir himſelf and go forth to fight with his Enemies, who, if he do ſo, will eaſily and ſuddenly be ſcattered. Or, God will ariſe. And ſo the other Verbs following may be rendred, as being of the Future Tenſe: Shall be ſcattered, ſhall flee, &c. Although the Futures are frequently rendred Imperatively; and ſo they are truly rendred, Numb. 10. 35. whence this Verſe is taken. b All God's Enemies are here ſaid to hate God, not directly and formally, for there are few ſuch perſons, but becauſe they hate his Laws and Government, and his people and Image, and becauſe they fight againſt him and his, which is juſtly taken for an Evidence of Hatred.

2 As ſmoke is driven away c, ſo drive them away; as wax melteth before the fire, ſo let the wicked periſh at the preſence of God.

c As ſmoke at firſt mounts high and fills a great ſpace of Air, but ſpeedily Vaniſheth into Air, or is diſperſed with the Wind.

3 But let the righteous be glad, let them rejoyce before God; yea, let them † exceedingly rejoyce d.

4 Sing unto God; ſing praiſes to his name: ‖ extol him e that rideth upon the heavens f by his name I A H g, and rejoyce before him h.

‖ Or, prepare the way for him. So Gr.

d For God's gracious appearance on their behalf, and for his ſetled preſence with them. e By praiſing him, of which this Verb is uſed, Prov. 4. 8. Or rather, raiſe up or prepare the way for him; For ſo this Word is commonly uſed, as Iſa. 57. 14. and 62. 10. and elſewhere. And this doubtleſs they did for this Solemnity of bringing the Ark to Zion. Compare Iſa. 40. 3. f Which phraſe is uſed, below v. 33. though in differing Words. Or, that did Ride in the Deſert, where the Ark was carried, and God marched along with it in the Cloudy Pillar. Or, that now Rideth as (which particle is frequently underſtood) in the Deſert, (i. e.) That is now carried from place to place as it was in the Deſert. The word here rendred Heavens, doth generally ſignifie the Deſert or plain Fields, as Numb. 33. 48. 50. and 36. 13. Joſ. 5. 10. 2 Sam. 4. 7. Iſa. 40. 3. Compared with Luke 3. 4. g Whereby he is known and diſtinguiſhed from all falſe Gods. For Jah is generally conceived to be an Abbreviature of the Name Jehovah, which the Heathens pronounced Jao. h Before the Ark where he is preſent, as David himſelf is ſaid to Dance before the Lord, upon this Occaſion, 2 Sam. 6. 14.

Compared with 1 Chron. 11. 15. and Pſal. 74. 19. Or, the proper ſignification of the Word may be retained, and it may be rendred, thy Flock: For God oft Compares himſelf to a Shepherd, and his people to Sheep, and particularly, he is ſaid to have led his people like a Flock, by the Hand of Moſes and Aaron, Pſal. 77. 20. To wit, in the Wilderneſs: and Conſequently he may be here ſaid to have brought his Sheep into, and made them to dwell in Canaan, as in a Green and good Paſture, as God ſpeaks of his people under this very Metaphor, Pſal. 23. 2. ℸ Or, prepared it, which pronoun is oft underſtood, and here moſt eaſily out of the foregoing Clauſe of this Verſe, where it is expreſſed: Prepared it, to wit, this Land for the uſe of thy people: which God did many ways; partly, by deſigning it for them, and expelling the old Inhabitants to make way for them; and partly, by furniſhing it with all ſorts of proviſions, both for neceſſity and delight, and making it fruitful by his ſpecial Bleſſing, in giving Rain in its proper Seaſons. a By thy free and ſingular Goodneſs. Which may be referred both to the Cauſe of this preparation, God did it not for their Righteouſneſs or Worthineſs, but out of his meer Mercy, as God oft telleth them; and to the manner and Meaſure of it, God did wonderfully increaſe the Fruits of it, that it might ſuffice for the ſupply of ſuch a numerous people; which without his extraordinary Bleſſing it would not do, as appears by the ſtate of that Land at this Day, as it is Reported by Travellers and Eye-witneſſes of it. b To wit, for thy people of Iſrael, whom he here calls poor; partly, to repreſs that pride and Arrogance, to which they are exceeding prone; and to mind them of the Dependance upon God for all that they have and Hope for: and partly, becauſe they really were, when God undertook the Conduct of them into Canaan, a very poor and beggerly people, and ſo they would have ſtill been, if God had not provided for them in a ſingular manner.

c (i. e.) The Matter of the Word or Diſcourſe here following. He put this Triumphant Song into their Mouths; he gave his people all thoſe Succeſſes and Victories, which are here Celebrated. Or, gave the Matter or thing, which was publiſhed. d The works of God on the behalf of his people were ſo glorious and wonderful that all ſorts of perſons, both men and women, that heard of them, broke forth into Songs of praiſe to God for them. The Hebrew word is of the Feminine Gender, becauſe it was the manner of the Hebrews, that when the Men returned Victorious from the Battel, the Women went out to meet them with Songs of Triumph; v. 25. Exod. 15. 20. Judg. 11. 34. 1 Sam. 18. 6.

This Verſe, and that which follows may be taken; Either, 1. For the Triumphant Song ſung by thoſe Publiſhers mentioned, v. 11. Or, 2. For the Words of David, continuing the Relation of the Victories granted by God to Iſrael over their Enemies.

Though you have been filled with Affliction, and Contempt. i Or, ye have been. Which may ſeem more ſuitable to the Context both foregoing and following, wherein he doth not ſpeak prophetically of things to come, but Hiſtorically of things paſt. So the Sence of the Verſe is; Though you have formerly been expoſed to great Servitude and Reproach, and Miſery, to wit, in Egypt, yet ſince that time God hath changed your Condition greatly for the better. k Beautiful and Glorious, like the Feathers of a Dove, which according to the Variety of its poſtures, and of the light ſhining upon it, look like Silver or Gold.

The Land was as white as Mount Salmon is with the Snow, which falls and lies for a long time upon it; which is oppoſed to the Native obſcurity of that Mountain by the many ſhady Trees which were there, Judg. 9. 48. But becauſe there is nothing certain; Either, concerning the great height of this Mountain, or, concerning its Snow, as we do read of Snow of Lebanon, Jer. 18. 14. other Interpreters, both Hebrew and Chriſtian, and the Chaldee among the reſt, take this Word Salmon for a Common, and not a Proper Name, ſignifying Darkneſs or a Shadow, as the Root, from whence it comes, unqueſtionably ſignifies. Nor is it ſtrange, if this Word be no where elſe taken in that Sence but here, becauſe that is the Lot of many Hebrew Words, or of ſome ſignifications of them, that they are to be found but in one Text of Scripture. This being granted, the Words are or may be rendred thus, it was Snow-white, or thou madeſt it Snow-white in Darkneſs, or as the Chaldee renders this Word, in the ſhadow of Death; (i. e.) Thou didſt cauſe Light to ſhine out of Darkneſs; When the ſtate of thy people, and of the Land of Canaan which thou hadſt given to them, was Dark and Diſmal or Bloody, by reaſon of the Wars raiſed againſt them by the p Why do you triumph and boaſt of your height, and look upon poor Zion with ſcorn and contempt, as an obſcure and inconſiderable Hill, if compared with you? He ſpeaks to the Hills by an uſual Figure called Proſopopeia. q This Hill, though deſpicable in your Eyes, is precious and honourable in Gods Eyes, and choſen by him for his ſettled and perpetual reſidence. For though the Ark was removed from this particular place, in which it was now to be placed, to the Hill of Moriah, upon which the Temple was built, yet it muſt be remembred, that Zion and Moriah ſtood one near to the other, being both in Jeruſalem, and are by ſome ſaid to have been but two tops of one and the ſame Hill.

r (i. e.) The Hoſts or Armies (whereof Chariots were a great and eminent part in thoſe times and places) which attend upon God to do his pleaſure, and to fight for him and for his people. s (i. e.) An innumerable company, a certain number being put for an uncertain, as Pſal. 3. 6. and 91. 7. and in many other places. t Here is not only the preſence of the Angels, but of the great and bleſſed God himſelf. And here the Pſalmiſt ſeems to be tranſported by the Prophetical Spirit, from the Narration of thoſe external Succeſſes, and Victories of which he had been ſpeaking in the former part of the Pſalm, unto the prediction of higher and more glorious things, even of the coming of the Meſſiah; and of the happy and tranſcendent Priviledges and Bleſſings accruing to Mankind by it, deſcribed in the next Verſe. And the connexion of this new matter with the former, is ſufficiently evident. For having preferred Zion before other Hills, v. 15, 16. he now proves its excellency by an invincible Argument, becauſe this is the place to which the Lord of Hoſts himſelf, the Meſſiah, God manifeſted in the Fleſh, was to come, as is manifeſt from Pſal. 2. 6. and 110. 2. Iſa. 2. 3. and 28. 16. compared with 1 Pet. 2. 6. Iſa. 59. 20. compared with Rom. 11. 26. and many other places of Scripture. And when he did come into the World, he was attended with a multitude of holy Angels, which celebrated his Birth, Luke 2. 14. ℸ God is no leſs gloriouſly, though leſs terribly, preſent here than he was in Sinai, when the great God attended with Thouſands of his Angels, ſolemnly appeared there to deliver the Law. Heb. Sinai is in the Sanctuary, or holy place. Which is a Poetical and a very Emphatical Expreſſion, and very pertinent to this place. For having advanced Zion above all other Hills, he now equals it to that venerable Hill of Sinai, which the Divine Majeſty honoured with his glorious Preſence. Here, ſaith he, you have in ſome ſort Mount Sinai it ſelf, to wit, all the Glories and Priviledges of it, the preſence of Jehovah attended with his Angels, and the ſame Law and Covenant, yea, and a greater Priviledge than Sinai had, to wit, the Lord Jehovah deſcending from Heaven into an Humane Body, as appears by his aſcending thither again, which the next Verſe deſcribes, and viſibly coming into his own Temple, as it was prophecied concerning him, Mal. 3. 1.

Eph. 4. 8. Heb. To Him.

18 * Thou haſt aſcended on high u; thou haſt led captivity x captive; thou haſt received gifts y † for men z, yea, for the rebellious alſo a, that the LORD God might dwell among them b.

u Having ſpoken of the Lord, and of his preſence upon Earth, he now turneth his Speech to him, as is moſt uſual in this Book. And the Contents of this Verſe do not agree to the preſent occaſion of carrying the Ark to Zion, but have a manifeſt reference to Chriſt, and to his Aſcenſion into Heaven, in whom, and in whom alone they are literally and fully accompliſhed, and to whom therefore they are aſcribed, Eph. 4. 8. Although the Expreſſions here uſed, are borrowed from the Antient Cuſtom of Princes, or Generals of Armies, who, after ſome glorious Atchievments and Victories, uſed to go up into their Royal Cities in triumphant Chariots, being attended by their captive Enemies, and afterward to diſtribute divers gifts to their Soldiers and Subjects, and ſometimes to do ſome Acts of Grace and Clemency even to their Rebels and Enemies, and to receive them into the number of his own people. x Either 1. Thoſe who did formerly take thy people Captives. Or rather 2. Thoſe whom thou haſt taken captive, as this word is moſt commonly uſed, as Numb. 21. 1. Deut. 21. 10. Judg. 5. 12, &c. So poverty is put for the poor, 2 Kings 24. 14. This is meant of Death and Sin, and the Devil, and all the Enemies of Chriſt, and of his People, whom Chriſt led in triumph, having ſpoiled them, and making a ſhew of them openly, as it is expreſſed Col. 2. 15. y Though as thou art God thou art uncapable of receiving any thing more than thou haſt, yet according to thy Manhood thou haſt received from God all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge, and all thoſe Gifts and Graces of the Holy Spirit which are neceſſary either to the perfection of thy Nature, or to the diſcharge of thine Office, or to the ſervice and good of thy Church and People. ℸ Not for thy ſelf, for thou didſt not need them, having the fulneſs of the God-head dwelling in thee bodily, Col. 2. 9. but for the ſons of men, or which thou mighteſt give unto men; whence for receiving for men, the Apoſtle juſtly ſaith, gave unto men, Eph. 4. 8. becauſe he received them for no other end but to give them, and in ſuch caſes receiving or taking is oft put for giving, or for taking and giving, as Exod. 25. 2. Judg. 14. 2. 1 Kings 3. 24. and 17. 10, &c. a Nor didſt thou only receive Gifts for, and give them to thy Friends and People, as the manner of other Conquerors is, but alſo to thy moſt ſtubborn and rebellious Enemies, whether Jews or Gentiles, who reſolved to break thy bands aſunder, and to caſt away thy cords from them; as is ſaid Pſal. 2. 3. And would not have thee to reign over them, Luke 19. 14. Who crucified him, and put him to open ſhame; and yet to theſe, as well as others, thou didſt give thoſe ſaving Gifts and Graces, as we read Acts 2. and elſewhere. b That having received ſuch Gifts, and thereby being made fit habitations for God, he who as man is aſcended into the higheſt Heavens might, as God, come down to them, and dwell with them, not only in and by his Ordinances in which he is preſent, but alſo by his Spirit dwelling in their Hearts by Faith. Or, that they might dwell with the Lord God; the Particle with being either underſtood, as it is in many places, or being contained in the Hebrew Verb Shacan, which, as ſome Hebrew Criticks obſerve, ſignifies not only to dwell, but to dwell with another; of which the Learned may ſee many inſtances in Forſterus his Hebrew Lexicon. So the ſenſe is, that they who were eſtranged, and at a diſtance from God, and Enemies to him, might draw near to him, and dwell with him both here and in Heaven.

26 Bless ye God in the congregations; even the Lord, ‖ from the fountain of Israel u.

u Or, as it is rendred in our Margent, and by many others, ye that are of or from the fountain of Israel, or Jacob, (i. e.) All ye people of Israel, who are called the fountain of Jacob, Deut. 33. 28. and said to come forth out of the waters of Judah, Isa. 48. 1. and consequently of Jacob, or Israel. See also Prov. 5. 18. Isa. 51. 1. And this sense seems to be confirmed by the following Verse, wherein this fountain is distributed into its several streams, the Tribes of Israel. But these words may be, and are by some joyned with the former, either thus, Bless——the Lord for the fountain of Israel, (i. e.) for that fountain which God hath opened to Israel for the purging away of sin and uncleanness, as it is expressed Zech. 13. 1. even the Blood and Spirit of Christ and all those Spiritual Blessings which God confers upon his people in his Sanctuary, and by his Ordinances; which are oft compared to waters, as Isa. 12. 3. Ezek. 47. 1. and to a Fountain or Well, as Joel 3. 18. John 4. 14. See also Prov. 14. 27. Jer. 2. 13. Or thus, Bless——the Lord who is of the fountain of Israel, (i. e.) who though he be the most high God, yet according to the Flesh is descended from Israel, as is noted Rom. 9. 5. But the first sense seems most natural and easie.

27 There is x little y Benjamin z with their ruler a; ‖ Or, with their company. the princes of Judah ‖ and their council b, the princes of Zebulun, and the princes of Naphtali c.

x Present in this solemn pomp of carrying the Ark to Sion under the conduct of David their King. y That Tribe is called little, partly because it was the youngest, as being descended from Jacobs youngest Son Benjamin; and principally because it was exceedingly diminished and almost extinguished under the Judges, Judg. 20. and 21. He mentions this Tribe, partly because they were neareſt unto Judah, and to the place whither the Ark was going; and partly to note their reconciliation and submission to David, against whom they had flood out with more obstinacy than any other Tribe, as having been so long used to govern, and loth to part with the Regal Dignity which was by Gods appointment first seated among them. a With the Prince of their Tribe, who marched in the head of them. Heb. the ruler, (i. e.) the Tribe which had lately swayed the Scepter, but now submitted themselves to David, and waited upon him in this Expedition. But the first sense seems the truest, because the Princes of all the following Tribes are here mentioned. b Their Counsellors; or rather, their company, as it is in the Margent, the people of that Tribe who waited upon them in that action. Which may seem to be here noted to intimate, that though the Princes only of the following Tribes be named, yet the people are comprehended under them, and were present with them in that solemnity. c He mentions these Tribes, either 1. Because they excelled in Learning and Knowledge, as is gathered from Gen. 49. 21. Deut. 33. 19. Judg. 5. 14. Or 2. Because they were more hearty and forward in complying with David, and in his service than the rest, as may seem from the great number of them which came from the ends of the Land to David in Hebron, 1 Chron. 12, 33, 34. Or 3. Because they lived in the remotest parts of the Land of Canaan. And so by naming two of the neareſt Tribes, and two of the furthest, he leaves it to be understood that the other Tribes also did come upon this occasion, as is manifest from 2 Sam. 6. 15, 19. and 1 Chron. 13. 2, 5, 6, 8. and 15. 3, 28.

28 Thy God d hath commanded e thy strength f:

Hath ordained or effectually procured, as this word is oft used, as Levit. 25. 21. Deut. 28. 8. Pſal. 42. 8. and 44. 4. f All that strength and power which thou hast put forth at any time in fighting with thine Enemies, and which is now greatly increased by the recollection and union of all the Tribes under one head, which is the work of God himself, without whom all the differences and animosities which had for many years been among them could never have been composed and quieted. g Seeing therefore all our strength is in thee and from thee alone, we pray unto thee for the continuance and increase of our strength, and that thou wouldst proceed to finish that good work which thou hast begun among us, by preserving and confirming and perpetuating this blessed union, and by giving us a more full and universal deliverance from our Enemies.

*Pſ. 72. 10. 29 Because of thy temple h at Jerusalem, * shall kings i bring presents unto thee.

h Either 1. The old Tabernacle which then was; which is oft called by this name. But that was now at Gibeon, not at Jerusalem. Or rather 2. The Temple which Solomon should build, which David knew should be very magnifical, of fame and of glory throughout all Countries, as he saith, 1 Chron. 22. 5. and such as would command esteem and reverence even from Heathenish Princes and People, and that not only for its most splendid and glorious Structure, but especially for the wonderful works of the God of that Temple wrought by him on the behalf of his people, and in answer to the Prayers made in the Temple, of which see 1 Kings 8. 41, 42, 43. i Kings of the Gentiles: which was done in part in the times of Solomon and Hezekiah, 1 Kin. 10. 11, 24, 25. 2 Chron. 32. 23. and afterwards by others; but more fully when the Lord Christ was come into his Temple, according to that Prophecy Mal. 3. 1. and had built a better Temple instead of it, even the Christian Church, to which the Kings and Nations of the Earth were to flow in great abundance, according to the tenour of many Prophecies in the Old Testament.

‖ Or, the beast of the reeds. 30 Rebuke k ‖ the company l of spear-men m, the multitude of the bulls n, with the calves of the people, till every one submit himself with pieces of silver o: ‖ Or, be scatterd. scatter thou p the people that delight in war q.

k To wit, really: humble and chastize those that will not bring presents to thee, as the Kings did, v. 29. till they see their error and submit themselves, as it here follows. l So this word signifies here above, v. 11. and 2 Sam. 23. 11. Pſal. 74. 19. Or, the beast, or wild beast, as this word is elsewhere used, (i. e.) the Beasts; the singular being put for the plural: so the sense is the same. m Heb. Of the reed, (i. e.) that use Spears or Arrows; which may be called reeds, either because in length and form they resemble reeds; or because antiently they were made of reeds. And this sense seems favoured by the last words of this Verse, in which he explains this and the other Metaphors of Warriors. Or the reed may be taken properly; and by the beast of the reed he may understand the King of Egypt, who then was a very potent and a most Idolatrous King, and a great and old enemy to the true Religion, and to the people of Israel, whom therefore he desires God to rebuke and humble, that he may acknowledge the true God, which is foretold that he shall do, v. 31. As for this enigmatical designation of this King, that is agreeable enough both to the usage of the Prophets in such cases, and to the rules of prudence; and upon the same account the Prophet Jeremy threatning destruction against Babylon, calls it enigmatically Sheshach, Jer. 25. 26. and 51. 41. and S. Paul calls Nero, the Lyon, 2 Tim. 4. 17. But then this one King, being eminent in his kind, is by an usual Synecdoche put for all of them which were enemies to Gods people. n By which he doubtleſs understands Men of War, as the following words expound it; the great and potent and fierce and furious Adversaries of God, and of his Church, as this word is used Pſal. 22. 12. Isa. 34. 7. And consequently the calves must be their People or Soldiers depending upon them, and joyning with them in these acts of hostility against thine Israel. o This he adds as a limitation of his request, Rebuke them, O Lord, not to utter destruction, but only till they be humbled and submit themselves, and in token thereof bring pieces of silver for presents, as was foretold, v. 29. For submit himself, it is in the Hebrew cast himself down, or offers himself to be trod upon. But because this supplement may seem too large, and not necessary, the words are and may be rendred otherwise, that tread upon, or walk proudly in, or with fragments or pieces of silver, wherewith eminent Captains used to adorn themselves and their very Horses. And so this belongs to the bulls and calves, whose pride and wealth and power is described in this manner. p Heb. He hath scattered, (i. e.) He will certainly scatter, according to the Prophetical Style. So this may contain an answer, or his assurance of an answer to his prayer: I prayed, Rebuke the company, &c. and God hath heard my prayer, and I doubt not, will rebuke or scatter them. q That without any necessity or provocation, and merely out of a love to mischief and spoil make war upon others, and upon us particularly. Now that thou hast given thy people rest, and settled the Ark in its place, O Lord rebuke all our malicious and bloody Enemies, and give us assured peace that we may worship the Lord without disturbance. And withal David may seem to utter this for his own vindication. It is true, O Lord, I have been a Man of War, and therefore have lost the honour of building the Temple, and am now forced to lodge the Ark in a mean Tabernacle, which I have erected for it, but this thou knowest, that I have not undertaken any of my Wars out of wantonness, or ambition, or love to War and Mischief, but only by constraint and necessity for the just defence of my self and of thy people; and therefore do not lay my Wars to my charge.

31 Princes shall come out of Egypt; Ethiopia r shall soon stretch out her hands unto God s.

r He names only these, as the great and Antient Enemies of God, and of his People, and as a most wicked and idolatrous and incorrigible sort of men, see Jer. 13. 23. Amos 9. 7. but by them he Synecdochically understands all other Nations, and people of the like Character. s Either in way of humble supplication and submission, begging Mercy of him: Or to offer up the presents expressed v. 29. But this Prophecy, as also the next Verse, evidently belongs to the times of the Messiah, when the Gentiles were to be brought in to the knowledge and worship of the true God: with the thoughts and hopes whereof David oft comforteth himself in that confined and afflicted state of the Church in his time.

32 Sing unto God, ye kingdoms of the earth t: O sing praises unto the Lord. Selah.

t Not only Egypt and Ethiopia, but other Kingdoms and Nations also, who shall partake of the same Grace with them.

*Pſ. 18. 10. & 104. 3. † Heb. give.

33 To him * that rideth upon the heavens u which were of old x; lo, he doth † send out his voice, and that a mighty voice y.

u Upon the highest Heavens, as Deut. 10. 14. his truest and best Sanctuary. By which Expressions, he prevents all mean and carnal conceptions of God, as if he were confined to the Ark or Tabernacle, and lifteth up the Minds, both of Jews and Gentiles to Heaven, and representeth God as dwelling there in infinite Glory and Majesty, and from thence looking down upon all the Inhabitants of the Earth, and ruling them by his Almighty Power, and therefore most fit to be owned and received by all Kings and Kingdoms, as their Lord and Governour. x (i. e.) From the very beginning of the World; whereas the Ark was only some hundred years old. Or, which are everlasting; for this Hebrew word answers to Olam, which looks not only backward to time past, but forward to the future, of which this word is by divers understood, Deut. 33. 15. This is also opposed to the condition of the Ark and Tabernacle, and Temple; all which, as David by the Spirit of Prophecy well knew, would be abolished and dissolved. y By which he understands; either, 1. The Thunder called Gods Voice, Pſal. 29. 3. and elsewhere. Or rather, 2. His Word, to wit, the Gospel, published by Christ and by his Apostles, assisted by the Holy Spirit sent from Heaven; which might well be called Gods Voice, and that a mighty Voice, because it produced such great and wonderful Effects, as are here above-mentioned, in converting all the Kings and Kingdoms of the Earth.

34 Ascribe ye strength unto God z: his excellency a is over Israel b, and his strength is in the ‖ clouds c.

z Acknowledge that he is mighty and able to do whatsoever he pleaseth for his people, or against his and their Enemies. a His excellent Power and Goodness. b Dwells among them, and is employed for them, as occasion requires. He is indeed the universal Lord of the whole Heaven and Earth, but in a special and excellent manner, he is the God of Israel. c Or, in the Heavens. He hath two dwellings and Thrones, the one in his Church and People, and the other in Heaven. See Isa. 57. 15.

35 O God, thou art terrible d out of thy holy places e: the God of Israel is he that giveth strength and power unto his people f: blessed be God.

d Or, Venerable, deservedly to be both reverenced and feared. e Or, Sanctuaries. He useth the plural number; either, 1. Of the Sanctuary in Sion, because the Tabernacle and Temple consisted of three parts, the Court, the Holy Place, and the Holy of Holies. Or rather, 2. With respect to that twofold Sanctuary here mentioned, one in Sion, and the other in Heaven. And out of both these Holy places God appeared, and put forth such Acts of his Power, as might justly terrifie his Enemies. f The strength which the Kingdom of Israel now hath, is not to be ascribed to my Valour or Conduct, nor to the Courage or numbers of the People, nor to that happy Union now made, and established among all the Tribes, but only to the might and Grace of God.

PSAL. LXIX.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm of David, consists of his Complaints and fervent Prayers, and comfortable predictions of his Deliverance, and of the ruine of his Enemies. But the condition of this Psalm is like that of divers others, wherein although the matter or substance of it agree in some sort to David, yet there are some singular passages, which he delivers with a particular respect unto Christ, of whom he was an eminent Type, and upon whom his Thoughts were much and often fixed, and of whom they are more fully and fully understood: and therefore they are justly applied to him in the New Testament, as we shall see.

To the chief musician upon Shoshannim, a Psalm of David.

David (as a Type of Christ) complaineth of his heavy and manifold Afflictions, 1–12. Fervently prayeth for help and deliverance, 13–21. Giveth over his Enemies to destruction, 22–29. And praiseth God in confidence of being accepted, 30–34. and Sins, saved, 35, 36.

Pſal. 5. 1. SAve me, O God, for * the waters a are come in unto my soul b.

a (i. e.) Tribulations, which are oft expressed by Waters; as hath been observed. b (i. e.) To my Vital parts; so that I am ready to be choaked with them. My Soul is exceeding sorrowful even unto Death.

Pſal. 40. 2. 2 * I sink in † deep mire c, where there is no standing d: I am come into † deep waters, where * the floods overflow me.

c Heb. In the Mire of the deep Waters. I am not in the Shallows, or nigh the Bank, but in the middle, and deepest parts, and in the very Mire, which is at the bottom of the Waters. d No firm and sure footing, but I sink in deeper and deeper, and, without thy speedy and almighty help, shall be overwhelmed and destroyed.

3 I am weary of my crying e, my throat is dried f: mine eyes fail g while I wait for my God.

e I have prayed and cryed to God, long and fervently, and yet God seems to neglect and forsake me. f With loud and frequent cryes. g With looking to God for that assistance which he hath promised, and I confidently expected, but in vain.

Pſal. 69. 4. 4 They that * hate me without a cause g, are more than the hairs of mine head: they that would destroy me being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty: then I restored that which I took not away h.

g Without any injury or occasion given them by me. h Either, because they unjustly and violently forced me to it: Or, because I was willing to do it to my own wrong for peace sake. By this one kind of wrong, he understands all those injuries and violences, which they practiced against him.

Pſal. 38. 5. 5 O God, thou knowest my foolishness, and my † sins are not hid from thee i.

i This is added; either 1. As a proof of his Innocency which he had now asserted by way of appeal to God; do thou, O Lord, judge between me and them, whether I be guilty of those Follies and Sins, which they lay to my Charge. And such Appeals indeed David useth, Pſal. 7. 3, 4. and elsewhere: But then they are delivered in form of a Supposition, and not a positive Assertion, as this is. Or rather, 2. As an exception to what he last said. But. O Lord, although I have been innocent to mine Enemies, and have given them no cause to hate or persecute me, as they do, yet I must confess, I am guilty of many Sins and Follies against thee, and have given thee just cause to punish me, and to give me up into their hands, and to deny or delay thine help unto me. By Foolishness he means Sin, as he explains it, which is commonly so called in Scripture; or by his Foolishness, he means lesser Sins committed through Ignorance or Inconsiderateness, and by Sins, those of a grosser Nature.

6 Let not them that wait on thee f, O LORD GOD of hosts, be ashamed g for my sake h: let not those that seek thee, be confounded for my sake, O God of Israel.

f (i. e.) Thy godly people, who relye upon thy promises, which thou hast made to all thine in general, and to me in a special manner, wherein they also are concerned. g (i. e.) Frustrated of their just hopes; which will make them ashamed either, to look up unto God, or to look upon their Enemies, when they shall reproach them for their Confidence in God. h Either, 1. For the sake of my sins last mentioned; let not all good men suffer for my sins. Or 2. Because of my sad disappointments. For if they see me rejected and forsaken of God, whom they have esteemed a great example of Faith, and Prayer, and all Vertue and Piety, they will be exceedingly discouraged by this Example; which will tend much to thy dishonour and differvice.

7 Because for thy sake i I have born reproach: shame hath covered my face k.

i For my trust in my Promise, and Obedience to thy Commands, and Zeal for thy Glory, and against all Wickedness: All which they turn into matter of derision and reproach. k In which Mans Majesty and Glory is most evident, which I am in a manner ashamed to shew amongst men.

Pſal. 31. 11. 8 I * am become a stranger unto my brethren, and an alien unto my mothers children l.

l My neareſt Kinsmen estranged themselves from me; partly, out of fear, lest they should be involved in my sufferings; and chiefly, out of dislike of his Piety and excessive Zeal in Religion, as it here follows.

Pſal. 119. 139. Joh. 2. 17. Rom. 15. 3. 9 * For m the zeal of thine house n hath eaten me up o, * and the reproaches of them that reproached thee p, are fallen upon me q.

m This is the Reason of that alienation of my Brethren and others from me, because there is a vast difference and contrariety in our Tempers. They mind not the concerns of God and of Religion, but are wholly intent upon Wealth and Honour, and Worldly greatness. n That fervent Passion which I have for thy House and Service, and Glory, and People. o Exhausted and wasted my Natural Moisture, and Vital Spirits, which is oft effected by Grief and Anger, and fervent Love and Desire; of which Passions Zeal is composed. p That speak contemptuously or wickedly of thy Name or Providence, or Truth, or Worship and Service. q Either, 1. By imputation: They reflect upon me, because I am engaged in the defence of thy Cause and Glory, which wicked men oppose and despise, and therefore must needs suffer in it, and with it. Or 2. By Choice and Affection. I have been as deeply affected with thy Reproaches, as with mine own. This whole Verse, tho' truly belonging to David, yet was also directed by him, or at least by the Spirit of God in him, to an higher use, to represent the disposition and condition of Christ, in whom this was more truly and fully accomplished then in David, to whom therefore it is applied in the New Testament, the first part of it, John 2. 17. and the latter, Rom. 15. 3.

10 † When I wept r, and chastened s my soul † with fasting, that was to my reproach u, r For their Impiety and Reproaches, which they cast upon God and Godliness. s Which word is here understood, out of Pſal. 35. 13. as it is also in 2 Chron. 10. 11, 14. out of 1 Kings 12. 11. where it is expressed. t Either my Body; or my self, the Soul, being oft used both ways. u They derided me for my Piety and Devotion, and for my Faith in Gods promises, and hopes of assistance from him.

11 I made sackcloth also my garment x, and I became a proverb to them y.

x Wearing it next to my Skin, in token of my Humiliation and hearty Sorrow, as the manner then was in days of Fasting. y They used my Name proverbially of any person, whom they thought vainly and foolishly Religious.

Pſal. 35. 15, 16. † Heb. drinkers of strong drink. 12 They that sit in the gate z, speak against me, and * I was the song of the † drunkards a.

z Either, 1. Vain and idle persons, that spend their time in the Gates and Markets, in which there used to be a confluence of people. Or rather 2. The Judges and Magistrates, who used to sit (which was their posture, Exod. 18. 14. Prov. 20. 8. &c.) in the Gates of Cities, the usual places of Judicature: For David oft complains of his hard usage from these men, as Pſal. 58. 1, 2. and 119. 23. and elsewhere; which was the more grievous, because these who were obliged by their Office to protect and right him, did joyn with others in reproaching and oppressing him. a Of the scum of the people; of all lewd and debauched persons. Thus both high and low conspired against him.

Isa. 49. 8. 2 Cor. 6. 2. 13 But as for me, my prayer is unto thee b, O LORD, * in an acceptable time: O God, in the multitude of thy mercy hear me, in the truth of thy salvation c.

b But whilst they scoff I will pray, and not be driven from God, and from my Prayers and other Duties, by all their Reproaches or other discouragements. c Heb. In a time of Acceptation, or Grace; or thy good Will, or good Pleasure. These words may be joyned either 1. With the following words, by way of limitation: Hear me in thy accepted time, (i. e.) I do not limit thee to a day or time, but when thou seest fit, hear and help me. Or rather 2. With the foregoing, as an Argument to enforce his Prayer, I pray in a time of Grace or Acceptation, I seek thee, when thou mayst be found, as Pſal. 32. 6. Isa. 55. 6. in a good Day, as they said, 1 Sam. 25. 8. in the day of Grace and Mercy, in a time of great Trouble, which is the proper season for Prayer, Pſal. 50. 15. and whilst I have thee engaged to me by Promises, which thy Honour and Truth oblige thee to perform, I come not too late, and therefore do thou hear me. c Or for, or according to thy saving Truth, or Faithfulness; whereby thou art obliged to grant unto me that Salvation which thou hast graciously promised.

14 Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not ſink: let me be delivered from them that hate me d, and out of the deep waters.

d Whereby he explains his meaning in theſe Metaphors of Mire, and Waters, and Deep, and Pit.

15 Let not the water-flood overflow me, neither let *Pſ.55.23. the deep ſwallow me up, and let not * the pit ſhut her mouth upon me.

16 Hear me, O LORD, for thy loving kindneſs is good e, turn unto me according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.

e (i. e.) Is eminently and unſpeakably good: the poſitive degree being put for the Superlative, as it is Luke 1. 28. 1 Cor. 12. 23, &c. It is moſt ready to communicate it ſelf to indigent and miſerable Creatures.

17 And hide not thy face from thy ſervant, for I am
make haſte to hear me.

18 Draw nigh unto my ſoul f, and redeem it: deliver me becauſe of mine enemies g.

f To ſupport and relieve it, O thou who ſeemeſt to be departed far away from me. g Partly, becauſe they perſecute it, and greedily ſeek to deſtroy it; and partly, becauſe they are thine as well as mine Enemies, and if they ſucceed, will triumph not only over me, but in ſome ſort over thee, and over Religion.

*Pſal. 22. 6, 7. Iſa. 53. 3. Heb. 12. 2. 19 Thou haſt known * my reproach, and my ſhame, and my diſhonour h: mine adverſaries are all before thee i.

h Thou ſeeſt how much of it I ſuffer, and that for thy ſake; as he ſaid v. 7. i Thou knoweſt them thoroughly, and all their injurious and wicked devices, and implacable malice againſt me, and all their impiety and contempt of thee; for which they deſerve to be utterly and ſpeedily deſtroyed.

20 Reproach hath broken my heart k, and I am full † Heb. to lament with me. of heavineſs: and I looked for ſome † to take pity, but there was none l, and for comforters, but I found none.

k For reproach is moſt grievous to the moſt generous and noble Souls; and beſides, this was the higheſt degree, and the worſt kind of Reproach, being caſt upon him for Gods ſake, and upon God alſo for his ſake. l (i. e.) Few or none, as that word is frequently uſed, both in ſacred and profane Writers. For whether you underſtand it of David, or of Chriſt, there were ſome who pitied both of them.

*Mat. 27. 34, 48. 21 They gave me alſo gall m for my meat, * and in my thirſt they gave me vinegar to drink n.
Mar. 15. 36 Joh. 19. 29

m Or, Poiſon; or bitter Herbs, Hoſea 10. 4. See Deut. 29. 18. Jer. 9. 15. Lamen. 3. 19. Inſtead of giving me that pity and comfort which my Condition required, they barbarouſly added to my Afflictions. n Theſe things were Metaphorically fulfilled in David, but Properly and Literally in Chriſt, the deſcription of whoſe Sufferings was principally intended here by the Holy Ghoſt, who therefore directed Davids Pen to theſe words, and poſſibly informed him, that this ſhould be accompliſhed in Chriſt. Which may not ſeem improbable to him that conſiders the following Imprecations, which are ſo many and ſo ſevere, that they may ſeem to exceed the bounds of Juſtice and Charity, if they be applied to Davids Enemies, as a recompence for their Injuries done to him; whereas they moſt deſervedly and fitly belong to the Enemies, and Murderers of Chriſt.

*Rom. 11. 9, 10. 22 * Let o their table p become a ſnare before them q: and that which ſhould have been for their welfare, let it become a trap r.

o Theſe and the following Words, which are expreſſed in the form of Imprecations, are thought by divers to be the only Predictions, and that the Imperatives are put for the Futures, as ſometimes they are. And accordingly they tranſlate the words thus; Their Table ſhall become a Snare, &c. But if they be Imprecations, here was ſufficient Cauſe for them. And beſides it is apparent, that they were not the Dictates of Humane Paſſion, but of Divine Inſpiration, and proceeded from a juſt Zeal for Gods Glory, as hath been obſerved before. p (i. e.) Their Food and all their Proviſions for Neceſſity or Delight; either for Body or Soul; for the Curſes here following are Spiritual and Eternal, as well as Temporal. And ſo this may comprehend their Sacrifices and other Legal Ordinances, and the Word of God: all which became to the Jews through their own default, a great occaſion of ſtumbling at Chriſt. And this puniſhment in their Table, exactly anſwers to their ſin, in giving Chriſt Gall for his Meat, v. 21. q Heb. Before them (i. e.) Their Table or Meat, which is ſet before them, which is the uſual expreſſion in this caſe, as Gen. 18. 8. 2 Kings 6. 22.) become a Snare, (i. e.) The occaſion or inſtrument of their deſtruction. It is a Metaphor taken from Birds, or Fiſhes, that are commonly enſnared and taken with their Baits. r Heb. And as for their great Peace (which the Plural Number ſeems to import, all that Tranquility and Proſperity which they do or may enjoy) let it be a Trap. Or, And their Peace-offerings (which Sacrifices may be here mentioned, becauſe the offerers did partake of them, and feaſt upon them; and ſo this agrees with the Table expreſſed in the former Clauſe) a Trap. And ſo they were to the unbelieving Jews, whoſe falſe conceit of the everlaſtingneſs of the Moſaical Diſpenſation, was one Cauſe of their Rejection of Chriſt. Or thus; And for Recompences, (i. e. An abundant compenſation of all their Injuries) and for a Trap. For thus it is rendred by divers, both Antient and Modern Interpreters, and which is more conſiderable, by the Apoſtle, Rom. 11. 9.

23 Let their eyes s be darkned that they ſee not: and make their loins continually to ſhake t.

s Not the Eyes of their Bodies (for ſo this was not accompliſhed in Davids, nor in Chriſts Enemies) but of their Minds, that they may not diſcern Gods Truth, nor their own Duty, nor the way of Peace and Salvation. Puniſh them in their own kind: As they ſhut their Eyes and would not ſee, ſo do thou judicially blind them. This was threatned and inflicted upon the Jews, Iſa. 6. 10. John 12. 39, 40. t This alſo belongs to the Loyns of their Minds or Souls; of which we read Luke 12. 35. 1 Pet. 1. 13. The Loyns of the Body are the ſeat of Strength, and the great Inſtrument of Bodily Motions and Actions. Which being applied to the Mind, the Senſe may be; either, 1. Take away their Courage and Alacrity, and give them up to Puſillanimity, and Terror, and Deſpair: Or rather, 2. Take away their Strength and Ability for Spiritual Actions. In the former branch, he wiſheth that they may not be able to ſee, or chuſe their way; and here, that they may not be able to walk in it, nor to execute the good Counſels which others may give them. As on the other ſide, when God gives Men ſtrength, they are able not only to Walk, but to Run in the ways of God, Pſal. 119. 32. Cant. 1. 4. Iſa. 40. 31.

24 Pour out thine indignation upon them u, and let thy wrathful anger take hold of them.

u In ſuch other ways and judgments, as thou ſhalt think fit.

z Which is an act of barbarous Cruelty, and inhumane Malice. a Reproaching them with, and inſulting and triumphing in their Calamities.

27 Add ‖ iniquity to their iniquity b; and let them not ‖ Or, Puniſhment to iniquity. come into thy righteouſneſs c.

b Give them up to their own vain Minds and vile Luſts, and to a reprobate ſenſe, and take off all the reſtraints of thy Grace and Providence, and expoſe them to the Temptations of the World, and of the Devil, that ſo they may grow worſe and worſe, and at laſt may fill up the meaſure of their ſins; as is ſaid Mat. 12. 32. compare Rom. 1. 28, 29. Or, Add Puniſhment to their Puniſhment; as this Word is oft taken: Send one Judgment upon them after another, without ceaſing. c Let them never partake of thy Righteouſneſs, (i. e.) Either, 1. Of thy Faithfulneſs, in making good thy promiſes to them. Or, 2. Of thy Mercy and Goodneſs. Or rather, 3. Of thy Righteouſneſs; properly ſo called, of that everlaſting Righteouſneſs, which the Meſſiah ſhall bring into the World, Dan. 9. 24. which is called the Righteouſneſs of God, Rom. 1. 17. Phil. 3. 9. &c. Which is ſaid to be Witneſſed by the Law, and the Prophets, Rom. 3. 21. by, and for, which God doth juſtifie or pardon ſinners, and accept them in Chriſt as righteous perſons. For this was the Righteouſneſs which the Jews rejected to their own ruin, Rom. 10. 3. according to this prediction. Thus as the firſt branch of the Verſe maketh, or ſuppoſeth them guilty of many Sins, ſo this excludes them from the only remedy, the remiſſion of their Sins. And that juſtifying rather than ſanctifying Righteouſneſs is here meant, ſeems moſt probable from the Phraſe, which ſeems to be a judicial phraſe, as we read of coming, or entering into Judgment, Job 22. 4. and 34. 23. and into Condemnation, Joh. 5. 24. oppoſite unto which is this phraſe, of coming into Juſtification; or which is all one, into thy Righteouſneſs.

and not be written with the righteous e.

d Or, Of Life. Either, 1. Of this Life: Out of the number of living men; which antiently uſed to be written in Catalogues, out of which the Names of thoſe who died were blotted: Or rather, 2. Of Eternal Life, as both Jewiſh and Chriſtian Interpreters commonly underſtand it. Which agrees beſt, 1. To the uſe of this phraſe in Scripture: For in this ſenſe men are ſaid to be written in the Book, Dan. 12. 1. or in Gods Book, Exod. 32. 32. or in the Book of Life, Phil. 4. 3. Rev. 3. 5. and 13. 8. and 17. 8. and 20. 12. and 21. laſt. 2. To the laſt Clauſe of the Verſe, which explains it, of that Book, wherein none but the Righteous are written; whereas this Life, and that attended with health and proſperity, is promiſcuouſly given to and taken from good and bad men. 3. To the quality of the perſons of whom this is ſaid; which are the malicious enemies of God, and of his people, and the murderers of the Lord of Glory; who ſhall be puniſhed with eternal Death. In this Book Men may be ſaid to be written: Either 1. In reality, by Gods Election or Predeſtination. Or 2. In appearance, when a Man is called by God to the profeſſion and practice of the true Religion, and into Covenant with himſelf, and profeſſeth to comply with it; and ſo is written, in the writing of the Houſe of Iſrael, which is ſaid of all that are in the Aſſembly of Gods People, Ezek. 13. 9. and ſo ſeems to others, and it may be to himſelf; to be really written in the Book of Life. And when a Man renounceth this Profeſſion and Religion, he may be ſaid to be blotted out of that Book, becauſe his Apoſtacy makes it evident, that he was not written in it, as he ſeemed to be. For this is a known and approved Rule for the underſtanding of many Texts of Scripture, that things are oft ſaid to be done when they only ſeem to be done, and are not really done; as he is ſaid to find his Life, Mat. 10. 39. who falſly imagined that he did find it, when in truth he loſt it; and to have, Mat. 13. 12. who only ſeemed to have, as it is explained in the parallel place, Luke 8. 18. and to live, Rom. 7. 9. when he vainly conceited himſelf to be alive. And in like manner Men may be ſaid to be written in, or blotted out of this Book, when they ſeem to be ſo, by the courſe of their Lives and Actions. But that that this blotting out is not meant, properly and poſitively, is clear from the laſt branch of this Verſe; which, after the manner of theſe Books, expounds the former, wherein this doubtful phraſe is explained, by one which is evident and unqueſtionable, even by his not being written in it. For it is impoſſible that a Mans Name ſhould be properly blotted out of that Book in which it was never written. The Senſe of the Verſe ſeems to be this: Let their Wickedneſs be ſo notorious, and the tokens of Gods Wrath upon them ſo manifeſt, that all men may diſcern that they are blotted out; that is, that they never were written in the Book of Life, in which the Righteous are written. e (i. e.) In the Book of Life, in which all righteous or holy perſons, and only they are written, whereby it may appear that whatſoever ſhew or profeſſion they once made, yet they neither are nor were truly righteous perſons.

The ARGUMENT.

THe Contents of this Pſalm are almoſt all to be found Pſal. 40. 13. &c. Nor is it ſtrange that they are here repeated, becauſe the ſame or like Occaſions were oft repeated; and Davids returning Diſtreſſes might well make him ſometimes repeat the ſame Words. And as theſe things were joyned with many other paſſages in Pſal. 40. ſo they are diſtinctly repeated, as a Form of Prayer, which himſelf or others might uſe in ſuch a Condition. What is neceſſary for the underſtanding of this Pſalm, the Reader may find in the Notes on Pſal. 40.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm of David, to bring to remembrance.

The ARGUMENT.

THe matter of this Pſalm plainly ſheweth that it was written in a time of Davids great diſtreſs, and his Old Age, mentioned v. 9. and 18. which proves that it belongs not to Sauls time; but rather to the time of Abſalons Rebellion, which happened in his Old Age.

They wondred both at the Calamities themſelves which befel me; which were great and various, and ſtrange; and that they ſhould befal me, one who have made it the chief care and buſineſs of my Life to pleaſe and ſerve and glorifie God; and one who God hath owned in ſo eminent a degree, and crowned with ſuch a conſtant ſucceſſion of Bleſſings and Deliverances from time to time. That ſuch a Man ſhould be forſaken by ſo gracious a God; and perſecuted even to Death by his own Son, whom he had ſo tenderly loved; and deſerted by the body of his own people, who had generally expreſſed ſo great an opinion of him, and affection to him, and had ſo many obligations to him, and ſuch ſingular benefits, by his wiſe and juſt, and pious Government; this was indeed cauſe of wonder. f But although men deſert me, and look askew at me, God is a ſure refuge to me.

PSAL. LXXII.

The ARGUMENT.

That this Psalm was made by David is Evident, from v. 20. and that it was made with Respect to Solomon, is no less certain from the very Title of it. And that David, or at least the Holy Ghost which dictated this Psalm, did look beyond Solomon, and unto the Messiah, of whom Solomon was an Illustrious and unquestionable Type, seems as manifest from divers passages of this Psalm, which do not agree to Solomon, nor to any other King but the Messiah, and from the Confession of the Jewish Doctors themselves, who so understand it. It must therefore be acknowledged, that, as many others are, so this Psalm is also a mixt Psalm, belonging to Solomon in part, and obscurely and imperfectly, but unto Christ, more clearly and fully; divers Expressions being designedly so ordered, that the Reader might be led by them to the Contemplation of Christ, and of his Kingdom upon this occasion. Which was the more necessary for the support and Comfort of God's true Israel, because the Spirit of God foresaw Solomon's dreadful Apostacy, and the great Miscarriages and Calamities of his Successors, and of the Kingdom under their hands, and therefore was pleased to fortifie their Hearts with that glorious Condition, which they should certainly enjoy under the Messiah, who should certainly come.

A Psalm ‖ for Solomon.

David praying for Solomon, sheweth the blessed and glorious State of his Kingdom (as Typifying Christ's) in its duration, 1——7. Largeness, 8——11. and graciousness, 12——17. and concludeth all with a hearty Thanksgiving, 18——20.

1 Give the king a thy judgments b, O God, and thy righteousness c unto the kings son.

a Solomon, who was now anointed King, his Father yet Living, 1 Kings 1. 39. And this Psalm may seem to be made for that great and solemn Occasion. b (i. e.) Either, 1. Thy Statutes and Precepts, which are oft called God's Judgments; which as thou hast given already in thy Book, so give them to him a second, and a better way, by writing them upon his Heart, or by giving him a solid knowledge of them, and an hearty Love and Obedience to them. Or rather, 2. Thy manner of Government or Administration, which is oft called Judgment, as Psal. 94. 15. Isa. 28. 6. &c. that he may follow thy Example in governing thy people, as thou governest them, to wit, in Righteousness, as it follows. He saith Judgments in the plural Number, because though the Office of judging and ruling was but one, yet there were divers parts and Branches, and Acts of it; as to acquit the Innocent, to Condemn the Guilty, &c. in all which he begs that Solomon may be directed to do as God doth, or would have him to do in such Cases. c That Grace of Righteousness, which is a part of thine Image, and is absolutely necessary for good Government.

2 He shall judge d thy people e with righteousness, and thy poor f with judgment.

d To wit, if thou givest him what I have desired. And by this prediction he doth tacitly admonish him of, and oblige him to the performance of his Duty herein. Or, Let him Judge, the Future being put for the Imperative, as hath been oft observed. So it is a Prayer. e For they are thine more than his; and therefore he must not govern them according to his own Will and pleasure, but according to the Rules of thy Word, and for thy Service and Glory. f Or, thy afflicted, or oppressed ones, for such are thine in a special manner, thou art their Judge and Patron, Psal. 68. 5. and hast Commanded all thy people, and especially Kings and Magistrates, to take a singular Care of them, because they have few or no Friends.

3 * The mountains g shall bring peace h to the people, and the little hills by righteousness.

* See v. 16. Jer. 3. 23.

g He mentioneth the Mountains and Hills, as bringing forth this blessed Fruit: Either, because such places are usually Barren, and therefore this was an Evidence of extraordinary Fruitfulness, and a special blessing of God: Or, because they are dangerous to passengers, in Regard of the Robbers and Wild beasts, which commonly abide there. Whereby it is implyed, that other places should do so too, and that it should be common and universal. h All manner of prosperity and Felicity, which the Hebrews frequently express by that word.

4 He shall judge i the poor of the people; he shall save the children of the needy k, and shall break in pieces the oppressour.

i (i. e.) Vindicate them from their potent oppressours, as judging is used, Psal. 43. 1. and oft elsewhere. k Whom the Rich peradventure did seize upon for Bond-men, upon some pretence or other.

5 They shall fear l thee m as long as the sun and moon endure, * throughout all generations.

l Or Reverence, or Worship, as this Word is used, Isa. 29. 13. 36. 37. Compared with Mat. 15. 9. and elsewhere. m Either, 1. Thee, O King, to whom he suddenly turneth his Speech. And so this is Hyperbolically true of Solomon, but truly and litterally of Christ. Or rather, 2. Thee, O God, of whom he had spoken before, and that in the second Person, v. 1, 2. as it is here; whereas he never speaks of the King in the whole Psalm, in the second Person, but constantly in the third. And so the Sence is, This shall be another blessed Fruit of this righteous Government, that together with peace true Religion shall be established, and that throughout all Generations, as it here follows. Which was begun in Solomons days and continued, though not without Interruption, in the time of his Successors, the Kings of Judah, and afterwards until Christ, in and by whom this prediction and promise was most fully accomplished. m Heb. With the Sun and before the Moon, (i. e.) Whilst they continue in the Heavens. Others expound it thus, both Day and Night, as the twelve Tribes are said to serve God, Acts 26. 7. But the former Interpretation seems more probable, by Comparing this Verse with v. 17.

6 * He shall come down n like rain upon the mown grass o: as showers that water the earth.

n To wit, by the influences of his Government upon his people under him. But this phrase doth much better agree to Christ, who was yet to come, and who did come down from Heaven, and brought or sent down from Heaven his Doctrine, which is oft Compared to Rain, and the sweet and powerful influences of his Spirit. o Which it both refresheth and improveth, or causeth to grow and flourish, and therefore was very acceptable, especially in Canaan, where Rain was more scarce, and more necessary than in many other places, because of the scorching Heat, and the natural dryness of the Soyl, and the want of Rivers to overflow, or water the Land.

7 In his days shall the righteous flourish p, and abundance of peace † so long as the moon endureth.

p As the wicked shall be discountenanced and punished, so good men shall be encouraged and advanced, and multiplyed. q (i. e.) Most. As long as time and the World shall last. Which neither was nor could be true of Solomon, who lived not long, and the Peace of whose Kingdom was sadly disturbed, and in a manner wholly lost presently after his Death, but was undoubtedly and Eminently accomplished in Christ, who brought peace upon Earth, Luke 2. 14. and left it as his Legacy to his Disciples, John 14. 27.

8 He shall have dominion also from sea to sea r, and from the rivers s unto the ends of the earth t.

r Either, 1. From the Dead Sea, or the Lake of Sodom, or from the Red-Sea, to the Midland Sea. For so far did Solomon's Dominion extend: but so did David's also; and therefore in that Respect Solomon hath not that Pre-eminence, which this Promise plainly seems to give him above his Predecessours. Or, 2. More generally from one Sea to another, or in all the parts of the habitable World. So it was truly and fully accomplished in Christ, and in him onely. s To wit, Euphrates: which was the Eastern border of the Kingdom of Canaan allotted by God, Exod 23. 31. Numb. 34. 2. but enjoyed onely by David and Solomon, and afterwards by Christ. Of whose Kingdom this may be here mentioned, as one of the Borders; partly, because the Kingdom of Christ is here described under the Type, and Shadow of Solomon's Kingdom, whose bound this was: and partly, because though Christ's Kingdom did for a time extend it self beyond Euphrates, yet the chief part, and almost the whole Body of it, both did and doth lye on this side of it: and things do generally receive their Denomination from the greatest part. t Either, 1. Of the Land of Canaan. Or, 2. Of the World.

9 They that dwell in the wilderness u shall bow before him: and his enemies shall lick the dust x.

u In solitary places: Even rude and barbarous people, who lived without Order and Government among themselves: Of which sort great numbers submitted to Christ, and received the Gospel. x (i. e.) Shall prostrate themselves to the ground, in token of Reverence Reverence and Subjection, as the Custome of the Eastern people was. See Isa. 49. 23. Mich. 7. 17.

Psa. 68. 29. & 72. 10. 10 * The kings of Tarshish and of the isles y shall bring presents: the kings of Sheba and Seba z shall offer gifts.

y Or, of the Sea (as Tarshish is understood, 1 Kings 22. 48. Psal. 48. 7.) and, (Or, that is: for that Conjunction is oft used Exegetically) of the Isles. (i. e.) Of remote Countries, to which they used to go from Canaan by Sea; all which are frequently called Isles in Scripture, as hath been noted before. The Kings that Rule by Sea (where Solomon had no great Power) or by Land. z Two Arabian Countries: unless the one be Arabia, and the other Ethiopia beyond Egypt.

11 Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him a.

a Which cannot be said of Solomon with any Truth or Colour, but was unquestionably verified in Christ; of whom therefore this must be understood. For what is said, 1 Kings 4. 21. that Solomon Reigned over all Kingdoms, is there limited to them that Reigned from the River unto —— Egypt: Whereas the Expressions here are unlimited and universal.

12 For he * shall deliver the needy when he cryeth: the poor also, and him that hath no helper b.

* Job 29. 12.

b The Fame of his just and merciful Government shall induce multitudes either to put themselves under him, or to shew great Respect and Reverence to him.

13 He shall spare the poor and needy, and shall save the souls c of the needy.

c Properly so called; this being Christ's proper Work to save Souls: Or, the Lives, which Oppressours shall endeavour to take away.

14 He shall redeem their soul from deceit and violence d: and * precious shall their blood be in his sight e.

* Ps. 116. 15.

d The two ways whereby the Souls or Lives of Men are usually destroyed. e He will not be prodigal of the Lives of his Subjects, casting them away meerly to gratifie his own Revenge, or Covetousness, or insatiable Desire of enlarging his Empire, as earthly Kings commonly do, but like a true Father of his people, will tenderly preserve them, and severely avenge their Blood upon those who shall shed it.

15 And he shall live f, and to him † shall be given of the gold of Sheba g; prayer also shall be made for him h continually, and daily shall he be praised.

f To wit, long and prosperously, as Solomon did; yea Eternally, as Christ did. Other Kings must lose both their Lives and Kingdoms: but this King, whom Solomon typified, shall Live for ever, and his Kingdom shall have no end. g As a Present, or Tribute. This was done to Solomon, 1 Kings 10. 15. and to Christ, Mat. 2. 11. and afterwards as need required. Although such Expressions as these being used of Christ and his Kingdom, are commonly understood in a spiritual Sence. h His Subjects shall be obliged and excited by his righteous and happy Government, to pray heartily and frequently for him; Either, 1. For Solomon. Or, 2. For Christ; not so much for his person, which needed not their prayers, as for the protection and propagation of his Kingdom and Gospel, and Interest in the World.

16 There shall be an handful of corn i in the earth k upon the top of the mountains l; the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon m, and they of the city n shall flourish like grass of the earth o.

i Which intimates the small beginnings of this Kingdom; and therefore doth not agree to Solomon, whose Kingdom was in a manner as large at the beginning of his Reign, as at the End; but it exactly agrees to Christ and his Kingdom, Mat. 13. 31, 32. k Sown in the Earth. l In the most Barren grounds; and therefore this was an Evidence of extraordinary and prodigious Fertility. m It shall yeild such abundance of Corn, that the Ears being thick and high and full of Corn, shall, when they are shaken with the Wind, make a noise not unlike that which the tops of the Trees of Lebanon, sometimes make upon the like occasion. Which Expressions, as well as many others of the like Nature in the Prophets, being applied to Christ, are to be understood in a spiritual Sence, of the great and happy Success of the preaching of the Gospel. n The Citizens of Jerusalem, which are here Synecdochically put for the Subjects of this Kingdom. o Shall both encrease in number, that there may be mouths to receive the Meat provided, and enjoy great prosperity and Happiness.

17 His Name p † shall endure for ever: † his Name shall be continued q as long as the Sun r, and * men shall be blessed in him s; all nations shall call him blessed.

p The Honour and Renown of his eminent Wisdom, and Justice, and Goodness. Which agrees but very obscurely, and imperfectly to Solomon, who stained the Glory of his Reign, by his prodigious Luxury and Oppression, and Apostacy from God, into which he fell in the latter part of his days. q Or, shall be Propagated, or Transmitted to his Children. Which suits much better to Christ, from whom we are called Christians, than to Solomon. r Heb. before the Sun; Either, 1. Publickly, and in the Face of the Sun. Or, 2. Perpetually; as a constant and inseparable Companion of the Sun; as long as the Sun it self shall continue. See before on v. 5. s Either, 1. As a Pattern of Blessedness. When any man shall wish well to a King, he shall say: The Lord make thee like Solomon. See on Gen. 22. 18. Or rather, 2. As the Cause of it, by and through his Merits and Mediation.

t Who hath given to his people such a Glorious and excellent King and Governour, and such wonderful Blessings as they do, and shall enjoy under his Government.

19 And blessed be his glorious name for ever, and let the whole earth be filled with his glory u, Amen and amen.

u Heb. The whole Earth shall be filled with his Glory. For this may be either a Prayer for, or a Prophecy of the spreading of the true Religion in the Gentile-World. Which evidently relates to Christ and his Kingdom.

20 The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended x.

x This Psalm is called the last of David's Psalms (which are called Prayers, because they consist very much of Prayers) Either, 1. The last of that part, or Book of the Psalms, which reached from the beginning of the Psalms hitherto, whereof the far greatest number were Composed by David, and all of them digested into this Order; the rest of which follow, being Collected by some other holy Man, or Men of God after David's Death, and Composed part by David, and part by other Prophets. Or rather, 2. The last Psalm which David Composed: For this was done but a little before his Death, of which see the first Note on this Psalm.

PSAL. LXXIII.

The ARGUMENT.

The Subject of this Psalm is the same with Psal. 37. concerning the promiscuous Carriage of God's Providence towards good and bad Men.

a Or, for Asaph, the famous Musician, to whom divers of David's Psalms for Psalms were committed, as Psal. 50. 1. &c. But because Asaph Asaph. was not onely a skilful Musician, but also was Divinely inspired, and the Author of some Psalms, as is manifest from 2 Chron. 29. 30. and the style of this Psalm may seem to be something differing from that of David, it may be thought not improbable that Asaph was the Author or Pen-man of it.

The Prophet under Temptation by reason of wicked Mens Prosperity, 1——12. his diffidence thereupon, 13——16. his way to overcome such Temptations, i. e. The Knowledge of God's Purpose in destroying the Wicked, 17——20. and that the Faithful might be contented alone with God, and communion with him, 21——28.

1 ‖ Truly † God is good to Israel c, even to such as are † of a clean heart d.

‖ Or, yet. † Heb. clean of Heart.

b Or, Nevertheless. The beginning is abrupt, and sufficiently intimates that he had a great conflict within himself about this Matter, and that many doubts and Objections were raised in his mind concerning it. But at last he breaks forth like the Sun out of a Cloud, and having by God's Grace silenced and Conquered his scruples, he lays down this following Conclusion. c Though he may sometimes seem negligent of, and harsh and severe to his people, yet if all things be considered it is most certain, and another day will be made manifest, that God is Really and Superlatively good, (i. e.) Most kind and bountiful and a true Friend to them, and that they are most happy in him, and have no Reason to Envy sinners, their prefent and seeming Felicity. d To all true Israelites, who love God with their whole Heart, and serve him in Spirit and Truth, and uprightness. See John 4. 23. Rom. 2. 28, 29. So this Clause limits the former, and takes off a great part of the force of the Objection, even all that concerns the Calamities which befel the profane or False-hearted Israelites, which were vastly the greatest number of that people.

2 But as for me e, my feet were almost gone f: my steps had well nigh slipt g.

e Yet I must acknowledge this with grief and shame concerning my self, notwithstanding all my Knowledge of this Truth, and my own Experience and Observation of God's gracious dealings with me, and other good Men. f My Faith in God's Promises and Providence, was almost overthrown by the force of this Temptation; and I was almost ready to repent of my Piety, v. 13. and to follow the Example of ungodly Men. g Heb. Were almost poured forth, like Water upon the ground which is unstable, and Runs hither and thither, with great disorder and uncertainty, till it be irrecoverably lost. So was I almost Transported by my own unruly Passions, into unworthy Thoughts of God, and a sinful Course of Life.

3 * For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked h.

* Job 21. 7. Psal. 37. 1. Jer. 12. 1.

h I grudged and murmured at it, and had a secret Desire to partake of their Delicates.

4 For there are no bands in their death i, but their strength is † firm k.

i They are not dragged to Death, neither by the Hand and Sentence of the Magistrate, which yet they deserve; nor by any lingring and grievous Torments of Mind or Body, which is the Case of many good Men; but they enjoy a sweet and quiet Death, dropping into the Grave, like ripe Fruit from the Tree, without any Violence used to them. Compare Job 5. 26. and 21. 13. k Heb. and their strength is fat, (i. e.) Sound and good: the best of any thing being called Fat in Scripture, as Gen. 41. 2. Dan. 1. 15. And in their Life-time they have great Ease and Health, and Content, till they expire like a Lamp, meerly for want of Moysture.

5 They are not † in trouble as other men l: neither are they plagued † like other men.

l Either, 1. As good Men frequently are. Or, 2. As Men generally are. They do by a secret and favourable Providence of God, escape even common Calamities.

6 Therefore pride compaſſeth them about as a chain m; violence covereth them as a garment.

m This Phraſe notes both the extent of their Pride, which appears on every ſide of them, in their Countenances, Diſcourſes, Geſtures, &c. and their glorying in it. The like may be ſaid of the next phraſe.

*Pſal. 119. 70. 7 * Their eyes ſtand out with fatneſs n; † they have more than heart could wiſh.

n As they do in ſome fat perſons, though not in others. The meaning is: They live in great plenty and proſperity, as the next Clauſe explains it.

8 They are corrupt o, and ſpeak wickedly concerning oppreſſion p: they ſpeak loftily q.

o Or, diſſolved in pleaſure. Or, very Corrupt themſelves. p Wickedly boaſting of their Oppreſſions; Either, of what they have done; or of what they intend to do, in that kind. q Arrogantly preſuming upon their own ſtrength, and deſpiſing both God and Men.

9 They ſet their mouth againſt the heavens r, and their tongue walketh through the earth s.

r (i. e.) Againſt God, blaſpheming his Name, denying or deriding his Providence, reviling his Saints and Servants. s Uſing all manner of Liberty, introducing and reproaching all ſorts of Perſons, not caring whom they diſpleaſe, or hurt by it.

10 Therefore his people t return hither u: and waters of a full cup are wrung out to them x.

t Either, 1. The people of thoſe wicked Blaſphemers; all their Children and Servants, and Friends, encouraged by their Example. Or rather, 2. The people of God, who is oft underſtood under the pronoun Relative, he: or his, though he be not expreſſed, as Pſal. 105. 15. Ex. 30. 23. See the like, Pſal. 87. 1. Cant. 1. 2. But then as God's People are of two ſorts, ſome that are ſo really and ſincerely, and others that are ſo only in Profeſſion and ſhew, in which Senſe the Pſalmiſt's reflection and Conſideration upon the whole Matter, from ver. 13. to the end. u Or, turn hither, (i. e.) To this wicked Company, or to their Courſe. x Waters in Scripture, do oft-times ſignifie Affliction, and as oft Comforts and Mercies. So the Senſe may be; Either, 1. And whilſt the wicked proſper, God doth wring out Waters out of the Cup of Tribulation, and cauſeth his holy Ones to drink them up: Compare Pſal. 75. 8. and 80. 5. Iſa. 51. 17. Jer. 25. 15. &c. Or rather, 2. And thoſe Hypocritical Iſraels, find themſelves gainers by their Apoſtacy, and they partake of the ſame proſperity with their Leaders, and God ſeems to give them a full Cup of Conſolation, and to pour forth his Mercies upon them in ſuch abundance, as if he would wring or ſqueeze out all his Bleſſings, out of his ſtores, to beſtow upon them. And meeting with ſuch ſucceſs to their Wickedneſs, it is not ſtrange if they put that queſtion, v. 11.

11 And they y ſay, How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the moſt High z!

y Either, 1. The godly. Or rather, 2. Thoſe wicked ones, whoſe Words and Actions he hath been hitherto deſcribing, or the People Confederate with them. For theſe and ſuch like opinions are oft aſcribed to the wicked in Scripture, but never, as far as I know, to any good man. And Job, though he uſed many intemperate Speeches, and though ſome ſuch Expreſſions as this were charged upon him by his Friends, as Job 22. 13. yet he utterly diſowned them. z Seeing theſe curſed and impudent Blaſphemers of God, and Enemies of all goodneſs are Crowned with ſo many Bleſſings, how is it Credible, that there is a God who ſees and Orders the Affairs of this lower World? For if God did know theſe things, certainly he neither could nor would ſuffer them to be thus managed.

12 Behold theſe are the ungodly a, who proſper in the world, they encreaſe in riches.

a This is their Condition and Carriage in it. Theſe ſeem to be the Words of the Pſalmiſt, ſumming up the Matter, and preparing his paſſage to the other part of the Pſalm.

*Job 21. 15 & 34. 9. & 35. 3. * Pſ. 26. 6. 13 * Verily I have cleanſed my heart in vain b, and waſhed my hands in innocency c.

b Hence I was ſometimes tempted, to think that Religion was a vain and unprofitable thing, at leaſt as to the Happineſs of this Life, which yet God had promiſed as a reward to Piety. True Religion is here ſtyly and fully deſcribed by its two principal parts and works, the cleanſing of the Heart from ſinful Luſts and Paſſions, and of the Hands, or outward Man from a Courſe of ſinful Actions. And although it be God's work to cleanſe the Heart, yet he ſaith; I have cleanſed it, becauſe every good Man doth Co-operate with God's Grace in cleanſing it. Compare 2 Cor. 6. 1. and 7. 1. c (i. e.) Kept my Hands (the great Inſtruments of Action, and conſequently the reſt of the Members of my Body) innocent and pure from evil Practiſes. I have waſhed my Hands, not only Ceremonially with water, wherewith Hypocrites ſatisfie themſelves, but alſo Morally, or with the Waters of God's Grace and Spirit, Innocency or Purity.

d Whilſt their ungodlineſs hath been attended with conſtant proſperity, my piety hath been exerciſed with continual Afflictions.

15 If I ſay, I will ſpeak thus e, behold, I ſhould offend againſt the generation of thy children f.

e I will give Sentence for the ungodly in this manner. f By grieving and diſcouraging and Condemning them, and by tempting them to revolt from God, and Godlineſs. But becauſe the Hebrew Verb, Bagad, in this Senſe is always, ſo far as I have obſerved, Conſtrued with the Prepoſition, Beth, which is not here; and is conſtantly put before that Prepoſition and Word which it governs, and not after, as here it is, I rather joyn with them, who render the place thus; which is more agreeable to the Words and Order of the Text, Behold the Generation of thy Children, (or, Behold theſe are the Generation of thy Children, as appears by thy fatherly Care of, and indulgence and kindneſs to them, whilſt thou doſt at preſent ſeem to treat them like Baſtards who are more truly called thy Children, dealing roughly and ſeverely with them.) I ſhall (or rather, ſhould, to wit, in ſpeaking ſo) Tranſgreſs or Prevaricate, ſpeak againſt the Truth, and againſt my own Conſcience, which aſſureth me that theſe are the haters of God, and hated and Curſed by him.

16 When I thought to know this g, † it was too painful for me h.

† Heb. it was labour in mine Eyes.

g To find out the Reaſon of this Myſterious Courſe of thy Providence. g I was gravel'd with the Difficulty.

17 Until I went into the ſanctuary of God i, then underſtood I their end k.

i Till I conſulted with the Oracle, or Word of God. He alludes to the Practiſe of thoſe times, which was, in dark and difficult Caſes to reſort to God's Sanctuary, and the Oracle in it for ſatisfaction. k There I learned that their proſperity was ſhort, and would quickly have an End, and that a moſt diſmal and terrible one; that their fair Morn would be followed with a black and dreadful Evening, and an everlaſting Night.

18 Surely * thou didſt ſet them in ſlippery places l; thou caſteſt them down into deſtruction m.

* Pſ. 36. 6.

l Their Happineſs hath no firm Foundation; it was very unſtable, like a mans ſtanding in very ſlippery ground. m The ſame hand which raiſed them, will caſt them down into the Pit of utter Deſtruction.

19 How are they brought into deſolation, as in a moment n? they are utterly conſumed with terrors o.

n Their fall is wonderful both for its ſuddenneſs, and for its ſuddenneſs. o Either, with the Horrors of their own Minds: Or rather, with God's dreadful Judgments unexpectedly ſeizing upon them.

20 * As a dream when one awaketh p, ſo, O LORD, * Job 20. 8. when thou * awakeſt q thou ſhalt deſpiſe r their * Pſ. 73. 20. image s.

p Their Happineſs is like that in a Dream, wherein a man ſeems to be highly pleaſed and Tranſported with Raviſhing Delights, but when he awakes he finds himſelf deceived and unſatisfied. q (i. e.) Stirreſt up thy ſelf to puniſh them. Or rather, when they ſhall awake, out of the pleaſant Dream of this vain ſinful Life, by Death, and the Torments following it. For this ſeems to agree beſt with the Metaphor here before mentioned. And the Hebrew words being onely theſe, in awaking, may be applied; Either to God, or to them, as the Context directs. r Not ſo much Really, for ſo God ever did deſpiſe it, in the height of all their Glory, but declaratively, things being oft ſaid to be done in Scripture when they appear, or are manifeſted; as hath been more than once noted. Thou ſhall pour Contempt upon them; make them deſpicable both to themſelves and to all others; and raiſe them to Shame, and everlaſting Contempt, as is ſaid, Dan. 12. 2. s (i. e.) All their Felicity and Glory, which as indeed it ever was, ſo now it ſhall be Evidently diſcerned to be, no Real or Subſtantial and ſolid thing, but a meer image or ſhadow, or vain ſhew, which can neither abide with them, nor yeild ſatisfaction to them. See Pſal. 39. 6. Acts 25. 23. where what is rendred, Pomp in the Greek ſignifies a meer Fancy or Imagination. 1 Cor. 7. 31.

21 Thus t my heart was grieved, and I was pricked in my reins u.

t So as I have above expreſſed; for this particle ſo taken, doth not belong to what he had now wiſely and piouſly ſaid in the next foregoing Verſes, but to what he had unadviſedly ſpoken in the former Verſes, as is Evident from the following Verſe. Or, Nevertheleſs, as this particle is oft uſed. Although I knew very well that the proſperity of ſinners would have a ſudden and Diſmal end, yet I was ſo fooliſh as to be grieved at it. u I was heartily and deeply wounded with diſquieting Thoughts, and tormenting Paſſions, Envy and Sorrow, and Anger.

22 * So fooliſh was I, and † ignorant; I was as a beaſt x † before thee y.

* Pſ. 92. 6. † Heb. I knew not. † Heb. with thee.

x Heb. Beaſts, which may ſignifie a great Beaſt; a moſt ſtupid and ſottiſh Creature, like one not onely void of Grace, but of Reaſon too: For Reaſon it ſelf, eſpecially aſſiſted by the Holy Scriptures, did ſufficiently diſcover, that all things conſidered, I had no ſufficient cauſe to Envy the proſperity of wicked Men. I minded onely preſent things, as the Brutes do, and did not conſider things to come, as reaſonable Creatures do, and ought to do. y In thy ſight or Judgments, and therefore in Truth, Rom. 2. 2. howſoever I ſeemed to my ſelf or others, to have ſome degree of Reaſon and Diſcretion.

23 Nevertheleſs z I * am continually with thee a, thou haſt holden me by my right hand b.

withſtanding all my Temptations, and my groſs folly in yeilding to them. a Either, 1. In a way of Duty; Yet I did not depart from thee, nor from thy ways, but did at laſt Conquer them, and firmly cleave unto thee by Faith. Or rather, 2. In a way of Mercy and Favour, of which he ſpeaks in the next Clauſe of this, and in the following Verſe. Although I gave thee juſt cauſe to caſt me off, yet thou didſt continue thy gracious Preſence with me, and thy Care and Kindneſs to me. And this phraſe, with thee, ſeems to have ſome Emphaſis in it, as being oppoſed to the other with thee, v. 22. I was a Beaſt with thee, ſuch was my folly and Wickedneſs: and yet, I was in Favour with thee, ſuch was thy goodneſs: and yet, I was in Favour with thee, ſuch was thy goodneſs: thou didſt pardon and Cure it. b That my Faith might not fail, and I might not be overthrown by this, or any other Temptations.

24 Thou ſhalt guide me c with thy counſel d, and || afterward receive me † to glory e.

c As thou haſt kept me hitherto in all my Tryals, ſo I am aſſured thou wilt ſtill lead me ſtill into right paths, and keep me from wandring or ſtraying from thee, or falling into Miſchief. d Partly, by thy gracious Providence, executing thy purpoſe of Mercy to me, and watching over me: Partly, by thy word which thou wilt open mine Eyes to underſtand, as Pſal. 119. 18. and principally by thy Holy Spirit, ſanctifying and directing me in the whole Courſe of my Life. e Either, 1. Advance me to honour here. Or rather, 2. Tranſlate me to everlaſting Glory in Heaven. For 1. Thus God doth for his people moſt conſtantly and certainly, whilſt all the Occurrences of the preſent Life, do happen indifferently to good and bad; which was the common Obſervation of Job, and David, and Solomon, and other Holy men of God in Scripture. 2. This is far more Conſiderable than the former, and the more Satisfactory Relief againſt the preſent proſperity of the wicked, and the Afflictions of good men. 3. This future Glory is that Myſtery which was to be learned onely in Gods Sanctuary, v. 17. 4. At the deſtruction of the wicked mentioned, v. 18, 19, 20. looks beyond this Life, ſo doth the Glory of God's people.

25 Whom have I in heaven f but thee g? and there is none upon earth that I deſire beſides thee.

f Or, in earth, as it follows. There is no other perſon nor thing in the World, from which I can ſeek or hope for Happineſs, or which I am willing to accept as my Portion. Let ſinners have an earthly proſperity, I am ſatisfied with thee, and with thy Favour. Since thou giveſt me ſupport and Conduct here, and carrieſt me ſafe from hence to eternal Glory, what do I need more? Or what can I deſire more? g Which words muſt neceſſarily be underſtood here from the next Clauſe, where they are expreſſed.

26 My fleſh and my heart faileth h, but God is the † ſtrength of my heart, and my portion for ever i.

h In my ſelf, I confeſs I am a poor weak Creature, and my Body and Tribulations as theſe, and I know I ſhall ſhortly return to the Duſt, out of which I was taken. i But though I have no ſtrength in my ſelf, I have it in God, my never-failing Refuge, to whom I will truſt whilſt I live, and who will be my Portion to Eternity.

27 For lo, they that are far from thee f ſhall periſh: thou haſt deſtroyed l all them that go a whoring from thee m.

k They that forſake thee, and thy ways, preferring the proſperity of this preſent evil World before thy Love and Favour, and Acquaintance of God, that ſay to God, depart from us, for we deſire not the Knowledge of thy ways, as they did, Job 21. 14. l Thou wilt certainly and dreadfully deſtroy them. m Thoſe who having profeſſed Subjection to thee, ſhall afterwards revolt from thee, and ſell themſelves to work Wickedneſs; which is called Whoredom in Scripture. For none are more hateful to God, than wilful and wicked Apoſtates from the Principles and Practiſe of the true Religion, which once they owned.

28 But it is good for me to draw near to God n; I have put my truſt in the LORD GOD o, that I may declare all thy works p.

n But whatſoever they do, I am abundantly ſatisfied, that it is as my Duty, ſo my Intereſt and Happineſs to cleave unto thee, by Faith and Love, and Obedience, and diligent Attendance upon all thine Ordinances. o I depend upon him alone for all my Comfort and Felicity. p From which I know I ſhall have this benefit, that I ſhall have many and great occaſions, to declare God's Acts of Mercy and Kindneſs to me.

PSAL. LXXIV.

a (i. e.) Compoſed by Aſaph; Either, 1. By that famous Aſaph, who flouriſhed in David's time, and by the Spirit of God foreſaw and foretold the things here mentioned. But the clear and exact, and particular, and moſt pathetical Deſcription of the thing here expreſſed, looks much more like a Narrative of what is paſt, than a Prophecy of what is to come; which uſually is delivered more darkly. Beſides ſuch a Prophecy of the Deſtruction of the Temple before it was built, would have been a great diſcouragement to the building of it, and would probably have been taken notice of by Solomon in his Prayer for it, when it was newly built. Or, 2. By ſome of his Poſterity, who is called by their Fathers name, Aſaph, as the Children of Iſrael are frequently called, Jacob or Iſrael, and David's Succeſſours, David; as hath been noted. Or, 3. By ſome other perſon of that name, though of another Family: who then was a man of Renown, though now his Memory be loſt. Or this may be reudred for Aſaph, (i. e.) For his Poſterity; and it might be ſaid by ſome other Holy man of God. But the former ſeems more probable. This is Evident, that this Pſalm ſpeaks of the Deſtruction of the Temple and of Jeruſalem and of God's people by the Chaldeans; though ſome think it looks further, even to the pollution of the Temple by Antiochus. Although the things ſaid to be done, v. 6, 7, 8. agree much better to the former, and were not done by Antiochus.

The Church complaineth of the deſolation, which the Enemies had made, in the Temple and Synagogue, 1———9. prayeth God to help, by his great Power, 10———17. againſt the Reproach and Blaſphemy of the Enemies, 18. He prayeth for God's beloved and covenanted Ones, 19———23.

1 O God, why haſt thou caſt us off for ever b? why doth thine anger c ſmoke againſt * the ſheep of thy paſture d.

* Pſ. 95. 7.

b So as to leave us no viſible Hopes of Reſtitution. c Or thy Noſe. A Metaphor from a man who in a great Rage ſends forth Fumes out of his Noſtrils. d Againſt thy choſen and peculiar people.

2 Remember e thy congregation f, which thou haſt purchaſed g of old h: the || rod of thine inheritance i || Or, Tribe. which thou haſt redeemed, this mount Zion k wherein thou haſt dwelt.

e Shew by thine Actions, that thou haſt not utterly forgotten and forſaken them. f Thy Church or people. g Or, Redeemed, as it follows; Or bought, as it is Deut. 32. 6. or procured, though without price, as this Word is uſed, Ruth 4. 9, 10. h When thou broughteſt them out of Egypt, and formeeſt them into a Commonwealth, and gaveſt them Laws, and didſt enter into Covenant with them at Sinai. i That people which thou haſt meaſured out, as it were by Rod, to be thy Portion or Inheritance, as they are called alſo, Deut. 32. 9. See alſo, Pſal. 16. 5, 6. Jer. 10. 16. Or, the Tribe (as this Word commonly ſignifies) of thine Inheritance, (i. e.) The Tribe of Judah, which thou haſt in a ſpecial manner choſen for thine Inheritance, and for the ſeat of the Kingdom, and for the Birth of the Meſſiah. And thus here is an Elegant Gradation from the general to particulars; Firſt, the Congregation conſiſting of all the Tribes; then the Tribe of Judah; and laſtly, Mount Zion. Nor is it ſtrange, that he mentions this Tribe particularly, becauſe the Calamity and Captivity here remembred, did principally befal this Tribe, and Benjamin, which was united with it, and ſubject to it, and the moſt that returned were of this Tribe. For the generality of the other Tribes, were long before diſperſed into other Lands, and continue in their Captivity to this day. k Which is oft put for the Temple, or the Hill of Moriah, on which it was built.

3 Lift up my feet l unto the perpetual deſolations m; even all that the enemy hath done wickedly in the ſanctuary n.

l (i. e.) Come ſpeedily for our reſcue, and do not ſit or ſtand ſtill, as hitherto thou ſeemeſt to do. m Or rather, Becauſe of (as this prefix oft ſignifies) the perpetual Deſolations. So it is a powerful Motive to God, to come to their Help, becauſe otherwiſe our Deſtruction is everlaſting and irrecoverable. n Or, againſt thy Sanctuary: Of which ſee v. 7.

4 Thine enemies roar o in the midſt of thy congregations p; they ſet up their inſigns for ſigns q.

o (i. e.) Make loud Out-cries; Either, from their Rage and Fury, againſt the Conquered and captivated Iſraelites now in their power: Or rather, in way of Triumph for their Succeſs and Victory. p In the places where thy people uſed to aſſemble together for thy Worſhip; whereby they deſigned to inſult not onely over us, but over thee alſo, as if their Gods had been too ſtrong for thee. q Or, Trophees, or Monuments of their Victories obtained over God, and over his people, as Conquerors uſed to do in like Caſes.

5 A man was famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees r.

r So the meaning is this, The Temple was ſo noble a ſtructure, that it was a great Honour to any man to be imployed in the meaneſt part of the work, though it were but in cutting down the Trees of Lebanon. And this Tranſlation may ſeem to be favoured by the oppoſition in the next Verſe; But now, &c. But others underſtand the Words thus tranſlated in another Senſe: That every one of the Enemies got Renown, accordingly as they ſhewed moſt barbarous Rage in deſtroying the thick Wood-work (which in the next Verſe is called the Carved Work) of the Temple. But this ſeems not to ſuit well with the oppoſition between this work and that of the next Verſe, which is uſhered in by, But now. The words therefore may be (and in part are by ſome) rendred thus; It is known (or manifeſt, Heb. It will be known: It will be publiſhed to all Poſterity, as matter of aſtoniſhment and admiration.) That, as one lifteth up his Axe (Heb. Axes, the plural Number for the ſingular, as it is elſewhere) upon thick Trees, to cut them down. This is the firſt part of the ſimilitude, called the Protaſis; Then follows the latter part of it, called the Apodoſis, in the next Verſe; So (Heb. And. Which is ſometimes put for a Note of ſimilitude, as in that paſſage of the Lords Prayer, Mat. 6. 10. as it is in Heaven; and oft in the Book of the Proverbs) now (For though this Pſalm was Compoſed after the thing was done, yet he ſpeaks of it, as if it were now in doing, as the manner of the ſacred Writers frequently is, that it may be more Lively repreſented to mens Minds.) They break down the Carved Works, &c. The meaning is, they neither regard the Sacredneſs of the place, nor the exquiſite Curioſity and Art of the work, but cut it down as indifferently, and raſhly, as men cut down the thick and intangled boughs of the Trees of the Foreſt.

6 But now they break down the carved work thereof at once s, with axes and hammers t.

s See the Note on the former Verſe. t It hath been ingeniouſly obſerved, that theſe two Words are not Hebrew, but Chaldee or Syriack Words, to point out the time when this was done, even when the Chaldeans brought in their Language together with their Arms among the Iſraelites.

* 2 Kings 25. 9. † Heb. they have sent thy Sanctuary into the fire. † Heb. Break.

7 * † They have cast fire into thy sanctuary; they have defiled by casting down the dwelling place of thy name to the ground u.

u First they polluted it, and then they burnt it, and broke it in pieces.

8 They said in their heart, Let † us destroy them together x; they have burnt up all the synagogues of God in the land y.

x Root and Branch, one as well as another, or all at once. So they desired, and many of them intended, although afterwards, it seems, they changed their Counsel, and carried some away Captives, and left others to manage the Land. y (i. e.) All the publick places wherein the Jews used to meet together to worship God, every Sabbath day, as is noted Acts 13. 27. and upon other occasions. That the Jews had such Synagogues, is manifest both from these and other places of Scripture; and from the testimony of the Hebrew Doctors, and other Antient and Learned Writers, who affirm it, and particularly of Jerusalem, in which they say there were above four hundred Synagogues; and from the nature and necessity of the thing: For seeing it is undeniable that they did worship God publickly, in every Sabbath, and other holy times, even then when they neither did, nor could go up to Jerusalem, both Conscience and Prudence must needs direct them to appoint convenient places for that purpose.

9 We see not our signs z; * there is no more any prophet a, neither is there among us any that knoweth how long b.

z (i. e.) Those Tokens of Gods gracious presence, which we and our Ancestors formerly used to enjoy; either, 1. Miracles wrought for us, which are called Signs, Psal. 78. 43. and 135. 9. Or, 2. The Ordinances of God, the Temple and Ark, and Sacrifices, and solemn Feasts, all which were signs between God and his people. a Either, 1. Any Teacher. We have few or no Teachers left to us. Or, 2. Any extraordinary Prophet, who can so retel things to come, as the next words explain it. For as for Ezekiel and Jeremiah, they might be dead when this Psalm was Composed; and Daniel was involved in Civil Affairs, and did not teach the people as a Prophet, and the Prophetical Spirit, which sometimes came upon him, and made those great discoveries to him, which we read in his Book, might possibly at this time suspend his influences. Besides it is not unusual in Scripture, to say that there is none of a sort of persons or things, when there is a very great scarcity of them. But others make this their great Argument, that this Psalm speaks of that Perfecution in the time of Antiochus, when indeed there was no Prophet at all. b Either, 1. How long their Captivity should continue: For though seventy years were determined, yet there might arise doubts among them, as there now are among us, whence they were to be computed, which might make their end uncertain. Or, 2. How long they should lye under reproach, as it follows v. 10. which they really did, and might foresee that they should, even after the expiration of their Captivity, Nehem. 1. 2.

10 O God, how long shall the adversary reproach c? shall the enemy blaspheme thy Name for ever?

c Understand here thy Name, which is expressed in the next Clause of the Verse, by saying that thou art either unkind to thy People, or unfaithful in thy Covenant, or unable to deliver thine out of their Miseries.

11 Why withdrawest thou thy hand, even thy right hand d? pluck it out of thy bosom e.

d Why dost thou suspend or forbear the exercise of that Power, which thou hast so oft put forth on the behalf of thy people? e In which thou now seemest to hide it, as idle persons use to do, Prov. 19. 24. and 26. 15.——Bestir thy self on the behalf of thy people.

* Ps. 44. 4. 12 For * God is my king f of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth g.

f In a singular manner: It belongs therefore to thine Office to protect and save me. g In the view of the World: So saving thy people, so eminently and gloriously, that all people round about them observed and admired it.

* Exod. 14. 21. † Heb. Break. || Or, Whales.

13 * Thou didst † divide the sea by thy strength: thou brakest the heads of the || dragons h in the waters i.

h Or, the Crocodiles. He means Pharaoh and all his mighty Men, who were like these Beasts in Srength and Cruelty. i To wit, of the Sea, where they were drowned.

14 Thou brakest the heads k of leviathan l in pieces, and gavest him to be meat to the people inhabiting the wilderness m.

k (i. e.) The Head; called Heads; partly for the greatness of this Beast, as that great Monster is called Beasts, Job 40. 20. for the same reason; and partly for the several Heads or Princes, who were and acted under his influence. l Pharaoh. m Heb. To the People, or of the desert; either 1. To the Israelites, then in the Wilderness, to whom the destruction of Pharaoh and his Host, was Meat, (i. e.) matter of great support and refreshment. Or 2. To those savage people to whom they were Meat; because they lived upon Fishes, and might eat those very Fishes which had devoured Pharaohs Host in the bottom of the Sea. Or rather, 3. To those ravenous Birds and Beasts of the Desert, which after their manner fed and feasted themselves upon the Carcasses of the Egyptians, who were cast upon the Sea-shore, Exod. 14. 30. which were properly and immediately Meat unto them. And when words can be taken properly, we ought to prefer that before the Metaphorical Sense, as is agreed by Interpreters. And this was a very suitable punishment for this proud and insolent people, that they who were so haughty, that they would not own nor submit to the Lord himself, Exod. 5. 2. should be devoured by these contemptible Creatures, which was a great reproach, 1 Sam. 17. 44, 45. and oft threatned by God as a grievous Curse, as Deut. 28. 26. Jer. 7. 33. and 16. 4. &c. Neither let any think it strange, that the Name of People is given to these Creatures, for it is given to Conies, Grashoppers, Pismires, &c. both in Scripture, as Prov. 30. 25, 26. Joel 1. 6. and in Homer, and other Antient profane Writers. Nay, here is an elegancy in the Expression; for these Creatures are significantly called the People of the Wilderness, because they are the only People that inhabited it, this being a Wilderness wherein was no Man, as is said Job 38. 26.

15 * Thou didst cleave the fountain and the flood n; * thou driedst up † mighty rivers o. * Ex. 17. 6. Numb. 20. 11.

n (i. e.) Thou didst by cleaving the Rock, make a Fountain in it, and a flood or stream to flow from it, for the refreshment of thy People in those dry Deserts. The Phrase is like that Isa. 47. 2. 41. Grind meal, (i. e.) By grinding the Corn, make Meal. o Either, Isa. 48. 21. 1. Jordan, which was then more mighty than ordinarily, as hav- * Josh. ing overflowed all his Banks, and therefore may be called Rivers, 3. 13. because it was now equivalent to two or three such Rivers; or it † Heb. Rocks. is only an Enallage of the Plural Number for the Singular, whereof two of I have given many instances formerly. Or rather, 2. Both Jordan strong. and the Red Sea; for the Sea it self; yea, a greater Sea than that, is called a River, Jonah 2. 3. for the Hebrew word is the same which is here used, though there it be rendred Floods. And the same Title is expresly given to the Sea, by Homer and other antient Writers. To these the Antient Chaldee Interpreter addeth the Rivers of Arnon and Jabbok, in or about which some extraordinary work was wrought, yea something which was like Gods work at the Red Sea, as may seem by the conjunction of these together, Numb. 21. 14.

16 The day is thine, the night also is thine p: thou hast prepared q † the light r and the sun. † Heb. a Luminary, and the lesser Light.

p It is not strange nor incredible that thou hast done these great and wonderful Works, for thou hast made the Heavenly Bodies, and the vicissitudes of day and night, depending upon them, Sun. which is a far greater work. q Or rather, Established, as this word oft signifies; not only Created, but settled in a constant and orderly course. r Either, 1. That primitive light, Gen. 1. 2. which afterwards was condensed and gathered into the Sun. Or rather, 2. The Moon, as divers, both Antient and Modern Interpreters understand it, called here the Light, to wit, the lesser Luminary or Light; wherein there is either a Synecdoche of the general for the particular, or an Ellipsis of the Adjective, both which Figures are very usual. And that the lesser Light is here meant, may seem probable, both because it is opposed to the greater Light, the Sun here following; and because this is to rule the Night, as the Sun is to rule the Day, Gen. 1. 16. and so this Clause answereth to, and explaineth the former, wherein both Day and Night are mentioned.

17 Thou hast set all the borders of the earth s: thou hast † made summer and winter. † Heb. made them.

s Thou hast fixed the bounds, both of the habitable World in general, so as the Seas, though they do encompass and assault them, yet they shall never be able to remove them, and of all the Countries and People upon Earth, whom thou hast confined to such bounds as thou seest fit. And as this Clause of the Verse sheweth Gods Power and Government over all places, so the next Clause displays his dominion over all times and seasons. And both together are fitly alledged as a motive to God, that he would at this time take care of his poor people, and restore them to their antient Land and Borders, in which he had been pleased to set them.

18 * Remember this, that the enemy hath reproached * Ver. 22. thee, O LORD t, and that the foolish people u have blasphemed thy name.

PSAL. LXXV.

To the chief musician, || Al-taschith, a Psalm or Song || of Asaph a. Or, do not destroy. Or, for a As the Author. Or, to or for Asaph; which may be put by way of opposition, to the foregoing and general Expression; to the chief Musician, which is here limited to and explained of Asaph. As Psal. 62. having said: To the chief Musician, he adds to Jedithun; and then follows the Author, David. This Psalm was either Composed by David, or by Asaph in Davids Name and Person, as it is not unusual for Poets to bring in Princes, speaking in their Poems. It seems to relate to the time when David had entred upon, but not got full possession of the Kingdom.

The Psalmist praising God for his wondrous works, promiseth to judge uprightly, 1—3. Rebuking the proud and foolish with Gods Providence. 4—8. Pulleth them down, but exalteth the righteous. 9, 10.

1 UNto thee, O God, do we b give thanks, unto thee, do we give thanks; for that thy name c is near d, thy wondrous works e declare.

b I in my own. and in my peoples name. c (i. e.) Thy self; or thy power. d Is present with us, and most ready to help us, when we cry unto thee, as this Phrase is taken, Psal. 34. 19. and 145. 18. Thou art not departed from us; thou dost not now stand afar off, as once thou didst, Psal. 10. 1. e Wrought on my behalf, and for the good of thy people.

Or, When I shall take it in times fit. 2 || When I shall receive the congregation f I will judge uprightly g.

f To wit, the whole Congregation, or Body of thy People, to wit, all the Tribes; which are now distracted and distordered by a Civil War, which is a great hinderance to the Administration of Justice. Or, when I shall receive or obtain the appointment, (i. e.) What God hath appointed and promised to me, to wit, the full and firm possession of the Kingdom: Or, the time, or place appointed by God for that work. Some make these and the following passages, the Words of God concerning his Church or People. Which seems not probable; partly because he speaks of God in the third Person, as one distinct from him that speaks these words, v. 7, 8. and partly because it is evident, that one and the same person speaks from hence to the end of the Psalm, and the ninth Verse cannot be spoken by God. g I will not use my Power tyrannically and wickedly, as Saul did, and as most other Princes do; but holily and righteously for the good of my people.

Psal. 60. 3 * The earth and all the inhabitants thereof are dis- † Heb. Lift up. solved h; I bear up the pillars of it i. Selah. Lev. 5.

h Or melted, consumed or destroyed; partly by the ill Government of Saul and Ishbosheth, and the great Officers of State and War under them; and partly by intestine Divisions and Wars. i Howsoever I am traduced by mine Enemies, as the great disturber of the Land, I must do my self this right to affirm that under God, I do support and establish it, by maintaining Religion and Justice, and by setting up good Magistrates, and encouraging good Ministers, and good Men, which are indeed the Pillars of a Nation.

4 I said k unto the fools l, Deal not foolishly m; and to the wicked, Lift not up the horn n.

k With Authority and Command; I charged them. l (i. e.) The wicked, as that is explained in the next Clause. m Desist from your impious and injurious practices, which shall not now go unpunished, as they have done. n Do not carry your selves either arrogantly boasting of your own strength, or scornfully and maliciously towards me, or others of Gods people.

5 Lift not up your horn on high o; speak not p with a stiff neck q.

o A Metaphor from untamed and stiff-necked Oxen, which will not bow their Heads to receive the yoke, but lift up their Heads and Horns to avoid it. Or, against the High, (i. e.) against God, who is mentioned under this same Title, Psal. 56. 2. though there it be rendred, most High. p To wit, against me and my Government. q With Pride and Contempt of my Person, and with Rebellion against Gods Will declared concerning my advancement, of which you are not ignorant. See 2 Sam. 3. 17, 18.

6 For promotion cometh, neither from the east, nor Heb. Desert. from the west, nor from the † south r.

r For though you envy and oppose my advancement, because I was but a poor Shepherd, and of a mean Family, yet you ought to know and consider what is notorious and visible in the World, that the Dignities and Scepters of the World are not always disposed according to humane expectations and probabilities; but by Gods Soveraign Will and Providence, as it follows. It is true, men that expect Preferment, have their Eyes fixed upon the great Persons of the World, who are thought to have the disposition of them in their Hands, and according to their several inclinations or interests; some look East-ward, others West-ward, and others South-ward, expecting assistance from some of these Quarters; but all in vain.

7 But God is the judge s; * he putteth down one, and * 1 Sam. 2. 7. setteth up another t.

s To wit, the righteous Judge, and supreme Lord and Governour of all the Kingdoms of the World, giving them to whomsoever he pleaseth. t It is he who hath rejected Saul and his Family, and put me in his stead: And who art thou that disputest with God, and resistest his declared Will?

8 For u in the hand of the LORD x there is a cup y, and the wine is red z, it is full of mixture a, and he poureth out of the same b: but the dregs thereof c all the wicked of the earth d, shall wring them out e, and drink them.

u This Verse is added; either, 1. As a Reason or Confirmation of the Assertion, v. 7. and to shew that God in removing one King to make way for another, did not proceed in a way of absolute Soveraignty, which yet he might have done, but in a way of Justice and Equity. Or, 2. As another Argument to inforce his Advice given, v. 4, 5. which he had now prest by one Argument, v. 6, 7. x God is here compared to the Master of a Feast, who then used to distribute portions of Meats or Drinks, to the several Guests as he thought fit. y A Cup in Scripture, is sometimes taken in a good sense, for Gods Blessings, as Psal. 16. 5. and 23. 5. and sometimes, and more frequently in a bad sense, for Gods Vengeance and Judgments, as Psal. 11. 6. Isa. 51. 22. Jer. 49. 12. Mat. 20. 23, &c. And so it is here understood, as the following words shew. z Such as the best Wine of Judea was, Deut. 32. 14. Prov. 23. 31. and so strong and heady, and intoxicating. Or, is Troubled; as the word more properly signifies, and is rendred by divers. Which may note its newness, when it is in fermentation, not yet cleared nor settled, and so more intoxicating. So he expresseth the power and fierceness of Gods Wrath and Judgments. a The Wine is mingled not with Water, as was usual in those hot Countries, Prov. 9. 5. but with Spices, as Cant. 8. 2. Or rather, strengthning and intoxicating Ingredients, which Drunkards used, Isa. 5. 22. b To wit, to the Children of Men; promiscuously to good and bad. Whereby he removes the scandal which his Enemies might take from those Troubles which God saw fit to inflict upon David and his followers. c The worst and most dreadful part of those Tribulations. d Or, of the Land, to wit, of Canaan, of which he spake v. 3. e Which Expression may imply either, that they shall be forced to squeeze out the worst for their own drinking; or that this dreadful draught was prepared for them, and brought upon them by their own choice and wickedness.

9 But I will declare f for ever; I will sing praises to the God of Jacob.

f To wit, this great and glorious work of God, or the Praises due unto God for it, as the next words imply.

10 * All the horns of the wicked g also will I cut * Zech. 1. off h; but the horns of the righteous shall be exalted i. 20, 21.

g Their Honour and Power, which they made an Instrument of mischief to oppress good men. A Metaphor from horned and mischievous Beasts. h When I shall be advanced to the Throne, and have Power and Authority to do what now I can only desire and pray for. i Good men shall be encouraged and promoted, and intrusted with the management of all publick Affairs, which will be a great Blessing to all my People.

PSAL. LXXVI.

To the chief musician on Neginoth, a Psalm or Song || of Asaph a. || Or, for Asaph.

a Or, for Asaph. Either it was Composed by the Prophet Asaph; or Composed by David, or some other Holy Prophet of God, and committed to Asaph, or to his Posterity; it being usual to put the Parents Name for his Children, of which I have formerly given divers Instances. The special and immediate occasion of this Psalm was unquestionably some eminent deliverance vouchsafed by God to his people of Israel, and especially to Jerusalem, which the Psalmist thought fit to celebrate: But which and when it was, is both needless to enquire, and hard to determine.

A declaration of Gods Majesty and Gracious Presence in his Church, 1—5. At his rebuke the Enemy spoils, and by his Arm the meek are saved, 6—10. An exhortation to serve him with reverence, 11, 12.

1 * IN Judah is God known b; his name is great c in * Psal. 48. 1. &c. Israel.

b Gods People do not worship an unknown God, as the Athenians did, Acts 17. 23. but one who hath made himself known, not only by his Word and Ordinances, but also by the glorious effects of his Wisdom and Power on their behalf, and against their potent and malicious Enemies. c (i. e.) Famous and renowned, and greatly to be praised and admired.

2 In Salem d also is his tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Zion e.

d In Jerusalem, which was antiently called Salem, Gen. 14. 18. Heb. 7. 1. e Largely so called, as it includes Moriah an adjoyning Hill, or another branch of the same Hill.

3 There

3 There f brake he the arrows g of the bow, the shield, and the sword h, and the battel i. Selah.

f (i. e.) In Judah; or at, or near Jerusalem. g Heb. the Sparks, the sparkling Arrows, bright and shining, swift and piercing, like sparks of Fire. h Both offensive and defensive Weapons, so as they could neither hurt Gods people, nor save themselves from ruine. i The force and fury of the Battle, and all the power of the Army, which was put in Battel-array.

k O God: To whom he directeth his Speech here, as also v. 6, 7, 8. l Either, 1. Than the greateſt Kings and Empires of the Earth, which in Prophetical Writings are oft compared to Mountains, as Pſal. 46. 2, 3. Iſa. 41. 15. Jer. 51. 25. Hab. 3. 6. And they are called Mountains of prey; becauſe then they generally were eſtabliſhed by Tyranny, and maintained by preying upon their own Subjects, or other inferiour Kingdoms. Or, 2. (Which amounts to the ſame thing) than the moſt powerful Enemies of thy People, upon whom they uſed, and now deſired and expected to prey: Such perſons being oft expreſſed by the name of Mountains, as Pſal. 144. 5. Zech. 4. 7. &c.

5 The ſtout-hearted are ſpoiled m; they have ſlept their ſleep n: and none of the men of might have found their hands o.

m Of all that Glory and Advantage which they either had already gotten, or further expected from the ſucceſs of their preſent expedition which they promiſed to themſelves. They became a prey to thoſe upon whom they hoped to prey. n Even a perpetual ſleep, as Jer. 51. 39, 57. or the ſleep of Death, Pſal. 13. 3. called death ſleep emphatically, as being peculiar to them, and ſuch like men, and not that ſleep which is common to the good and bad. Their Death he ſeems to call Sleep, becauſe they were ſlain in the Night, when they had compoſed themſelves to reſt and ſleep, and ſo paſſed inſenſibly from one ſleep to another. For it is thought by many that this Pſalm was Compoſed upon the occaſion of that prodigious ſlaughter of the Aſſyrians in Judah, 2 Kings 19. 35. o They had no more ſtrength in, or uſe of their hands, againſt the deſtroying Angel, than they who have no hands.

6 At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, both the chariot and horſe p are caſt into a dead ſleep.

p The men who rode upon, and fought from Chariots and Horſes, who fight with moſt advantage, and uſually have moſt Courage; and much more unable were their Footmen to reſiſt or avoid the ſtroke.

7 Thou, even thou art to be feared, and who may ſtand in thy ſight q when once thou art angry?

q To wit, to contend with thee. Standing is here oppoſed to flight or falling before the Enemy. See Joſh. 7. 12. Dan. 8. 4.

* Pſ. 45.6. 8 * Thou didſt cauſe judgment to be heard from heaven r; the earth feared, and was ſtill s.

r Thou didſt execute Judgment upon thine Enemies, by an Angel ſent from Heaven: which is ſaid to be heard, either becauſe that was accompanied with terrible Thunders and Earthquakes, which was not unuſual in the deſcent of an Angel, as Matth. 28. 2. and elſewhere: Or becauſe the fame of it was quickly ſpread abroad in the Land, and in the World. s The effect of this terrible Judgment, was that the reſt of the World were afraid to invade or diſturb the Land and People of Iſrael, and choſe rather to ſit ſtill in their own Territories.

9 When God aroſe to judgment t to ſave all the meek of the earth u. Selah.

t When God, who for a ſeaſon had ſat ſtill, began to beſtir and ſhew himſelf againſt his Enemies. Or, After God had riſen, &c. Or, Becauſe God did ariſe, &c. u To ſave all the godly perſons (who are oft called meek ones, as hath been noted again and again) in Iſrael, for whoſe ſakes God wrought this great Deliverance, which reached to all the people of the Land.

10 Surely the wrath of man ſhall praiſe thee x; the remainder of wrath ſhalt thou reſtrain y.

x The blaſphemous Speeches, and furious attempts of thine Enemies, ſhall ſerve thy Glory, and cauſe thy people and others to praiſe and magnifie thee for that admirable Wiſdom and Power, and Faithfulneſs, and Goodneſs, which thou ſhalt diſcover upon that occaſion. y Thou ſhalt prevent and diſappoint the ſucceeding malicious deſigns of thine Enemies, who will meditate Revenge for thoſe ſhameful and terrible overthrows. Or, the remainder of wrath, thou ſhalt gird thy ſelf with, (i. e.) Put it on as an Ornament, which the Girdle was; thou ſhalt adorn thy ſelf with it, as a Conqueror doth with the ſpoils of his Enemies.

11 Vow z, and pay a unto the LORD your God; † Heb. to the fear. Gen. 31. 42. 53. let all that be round about him b bring preſents † unto him that ought to be feared c.

z Vow a Sacrifice of Thankſgiving; either at this time, for this wonderful deliverance: Or hereafter in all your future ſtraits and troubles: Let this Experience encourage you to make ſuch Vows to God, with confidence of ſucceſs. a But when God hath accepted your Vows, and given you the deſired deliverance, forget not to pay your Vows. b Either, 1. All the Tribes of Iſrael, who have the benefit of this Mercy. Or rather, 2. All the neighbouring Nations on every ſide, to whom the fame of this mighty work of God ſhall come, I adviſe them for the future, if they love themſelves, to ceaſe from all Hoſtilities againſt God, or his People, and to ſubmit themſelves to the God of Iſrael. c Whom though they do not love, yet they ſee and feel that they have great reaſon to fear and to ſeek his favour.

12 He ſhall cut off d the ſpirit e of princes; he is terrible to the kings of the earth.

d As Men do their Grapes in time of Vintage, as the Hebrew Verb implies; to wit, ſuddenly, violently and irreſiſtibly. This is all which they ſhall get by oppoſing him; and therefore it is their Wiſdom to bring Preſents to him. e Either, 1. Their Courage. Or rather, 2. Their Breath and Life, as he did in the Aſſyrian Army.

PSAL. LXXVII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm was Compoſed upon the occaſion of ſome ſore and long Calamity of Gods People: Either the Babyloniſh Captivity or ſome other.

To the chief muſician, † to Jeduthun, a Pſalm ‖ of † Heb. upon. Pſal. 62. ‖ Or, for Asaph a.

a Either that Aſaph who lived and prophecied in Davids time; or one of his Succeſſors long after him, called, as was uſual, by his Progenitors name.

The Prophet ſheweth what great ſtriving and combate (though by Prayer and Watching) he had with diffidence, 1—9. By the conſideration of Gods wonderfull works and former Mercies, he is raiſed and ſtrengthened, 10—20.

1 I Cried unto God with my voice: even unto God with my voice, and he gave ear unto me b.

b This Verſe ſeems to contain the ſum of the whole Pſalm, conſiſting of two parts, to wit, his earneſt Cry to God in his deep diſtreſs; and Gods gracious return to his Prayers, by ſupporting him under them, and giving him aſſurance of a good iſſue out of them: of both which he ſpeaks more diſtinctly and particularly, of the firſt from v. 2. to v. 10. of the latter thence to the end.

2 In the day of my trouble I ſought the LORD; † my ſore ran c in the night d, and ceaſed not: my ſoul refuſed to be comforted e. † Heb. my hand.

c Toe hand in the Hebrew Tongue, and Scripture uſe, is oft put for a blow or ſtroke given by the hand. Heb. My hand or hands (the ſingular number being frequently put for the plural) ſtowed or poured forth, (i. e.) ſpread abroad to God in Prayer. This Phraſe he uſeth rather, than were ſtretched out, which is frequent in like Caſes, to imply that his Caſe was low and almoſt deſperate, his Spirits and Strength quite gone, ſo that he was not able to ſtretch them out, as he had done. d Which to others was a time of reſt and quietneſs, but to me of torment. e I rejected all thoſe Conſolations, which either my Friends, or my own Mind ſuggeſted to me.

3 I remembred God, and was troubled e: I complained f, and my ſpirit was overwhelmed g. Selah.

e Yea the thoughts of God, and of his infinite Power and Truth, and Goodneſs, which uſed to be very ſweet and comfortable to me, were now matter of terror and trouble, becauſe they were all ingaged againſt me, and God himſelf my only Friend, was now very angry with me, and become mine Enemy. f Unto God in Prayer. g So far was I from finding relief by my Complaints that they increaſed my Miſery.

4 Thou holdeſt mine eyes waking h: I am ſo troubled that I cannot ſpeak i.

h By thoſe ſharp and continual Griefs, and thoſe perplexing and tormenting Thoughts and Cares, which from time to time thou ſtirreſt up in me, i The greatneſs of my ſorrows ſtupifie my mind, and make me both lifeleſs and unable to ſpeak; nor can any words ſufficiently expreſs the extremity of my miſery.

5 * I have conſidered k the days of old l, † the years of ancient times. * Pſ. 143.5. † Heb. the years of Ages. Or, eternal years.

k If by that means I could get any Comfort. l (i. e.) The mighty works of God done for his people in former times. Days are put for Events done in them, as Pſal. 37. 13. and 137. 7. Obad. v. 12. Mich. 7. 4.

6 I call to remembrance my ſong in the night m: I commune with mine own heart, and my ſpirit made diligent ſearch n.

m The many and great Mercies and Favours of God vouchſafed by him to me, and to his people, which have obliged me to adore him, and ſing his Praiſes not only in the day, the time appointed for that work, but alſo by night, as oft as they come into my mind. n What ſhould be the cauſe of this ſtrange and vaſt Alteration, and how theſe ſore Calamities could come from the hand of ſo gracious and merciful a God, as ours is, and what might be expected as to their continuance or removal.

7 Will the Lord caſt off o for ever? and will he be favourable no more?

o His peculiar and choſen people? This doth not ſeem to agree either with Gods Nature, or with that everlaſting Covenant which he hath made with them.

8 Is his mercy clean gone for ever p? doth his promiſe fail † for evermore q? † Heb. to generation and generation.

p Are all the ſtores of his Mercy quite ſpent? Doth he now ceaſe to be what he hath ſtyled himſelf, The Lord gracious and merciful, long-ſuffering, and abundant in goodneſs? q Will he never more make good thoſe gracious Promiſes upon which he hath commanded us to hope?

9 Hath God forgotten to be gracious? hath he in anger ſhut up his tender mercies? Selah.

r Becauſe he hath ſo long diſuſed it. s So as they can never flow forth, no not to his own people.

10 And I ſaid t, This is my infirmity u: but I will remember * the years of the right hand of the moſt High y. * Pſ. 102. 24, 25.

t I thus anſwered theſe Objections. u Theſe ſuſpicions of Gods Faithfulneſs and Goodneſs, proceed from the weakneſs of my Faith, and from the miſtake of a diſeaſed Mind. x Which words may be underſtood out of the following Verſe, as other words frequently are in like Caſes. y The years wherein God hath done great great and glorious Works, which are oft aſcribed to Gods Right hand, as Pſal. 17. 7. and 20. 6. and 45. 4. and 118. 15. But the word rendred years doth alſo ſignifie changing, and accordingly this Verſe is by other Learned Interpreters, and may well be rendred otherwiſe without any ſuch Supplement as is in our Tranſlation, thus, And I ſaid, This is my Affliction or Grievance, (the ſum of all, and the chief cauſe of my Trouble and Anxiety is this) the change of the right hand of the moſt High, that that right hand which formerly hath done ſuch great and wonderful things for his people, is at this time not only hid in Gods Boſom, and not drawn forth for their defence, but is alſo ſtretched forth againſt them, and is the principal cauſe of all our preſent miſeries. I could bear the malice and rage of our Enemies, from whom we could not expect better things, but that our gracious and Covenanted God ſhould forſake and perſecute his own people, this is that which makes it intolerable.

11 I will remember the works of the LORD, ſurely I will remember thy wonders of old z.

z And yet upon ſecond and ſerious thoughts of what God had formerly done for his people, many times far above their expectations, I will take comfort in remembrance of them, becauſe God is ſtill the ſame that he was in Power and Goodneſs, and love to his people, and therefore will pity and help us in this preſent Calamity, as he hath oft done in others of the ſame Nature.

12 I will meditate alſo of thy work, and talk of thy doings.

Pſ. 143.5. 13 * Thy way a, O God, is in the ſanctuary b: who is ſo great a God as our God c?

a (i. e.) Thy doings, or the courſe of thy Providence, which is oft called Gods way; the various methods and cauſes of thy dealings with thy people. b Is there contained and declared. As the proſperity of wicked men, ſo alſo the grievous calamities of Gods people, are great riddles and ſtumbling blocks to the ignorant and ungodly World, but a full and ſatisfactory reſolution of them may be had from Gods Sanctuary, as is obſerved in the former caſe by this ſame Aſaph, Pſal. 73. 16, 17. and here in the latter. Or, is in Holineſs. So the Senſe is, God is holy and juſt, and true in all his Works; yea even in his Judgments upon his own people, as will evidently appear from the iſſue of them. c And although our God at preſent ſuſpends his Power, and doth not put it forth to deliver his people out of the hands of their Idolatrous Enemies, who thence take occaſion to blaſpheme his Name, and to exalt their Idol-Gods above him, yet he is ſtill infinitely Superiour in Power, both to them and to their Gods, and can, and will in his due time, reſcue his people from them.

d By the mighty effects of it here following.

Pſ. 66. 15 * Thou haſt with thine arm redeemed thy people e, the ſons of Jacob and Joſeph f. Selah.

e To wit, out of Egypt, after a long and hard Bondage. Which he here mentions to ſtrengthen his Faith in their preſent Captivity. f Whom he mentions; partly as a moſt eminent portion of the Sons of Jacob, branched forth into two numerous Tribes; partly becauſe the Sons of Joſeph were born in Egypt, which Jacobs other Sons were not; and partly, becauſe he laid the foundation of that Redemption by bringing them into Egypt, and preſerving and nouriſhing Jacob and his Sons there, as a little Child is nouriſhed, as it is expreſſed in the Hebrew Text, Gen. 47. 12. in which reſpect he was a ſecond Father to them, and they might well be called his Sons; without whoſe Care (to ſpeak humanely) there had been no ſuch Redemption, nor people to be redeemed.

Exod. 14. 21. Pſal. 114. 3. Iſa. 51. 10. &c. 16 * The waters ſaw thee g, O God, the waters ſaw thee: they were afraid h; the depths alſo were troubled.

g They felt the viſible effects of thy powerful Preſence. h And ſtood ſtill as Men, or Beaſts aſtoniſhed commonly do.

Pſal. 78. 15. Exod. 17. 6. 1 Cor. 10. 4. Neh. 9. 15. Iſa. 48. 21. Pſal. 105. 41. Iſa. 43. 20. Rev. 7. 17. 17 † The clouds poured out water i, the ſkies ſent out a ſound: thine arrows k alſo went abroad.

i When the Iſraelites paſſed over the Sea: In reſpect whereof the Iſraelites are ſaid to have been baptized in the Cloud (i. e. ſprinkled with Water, poured forth from the Clouds) and in the Sea, 1 Cor. 10. 2. k Either Hail-ſtones, or rather Lightnings or Thunderbolts, which are called Gods Arrows, Pſal. 18. 14. & 144. 6.

Heb. In the Wheel. &c. Rev. 4. 5. 18 The voice of thy thunder was † in the heaven; * the lightnings lightned the world, the earth trembled and ſhook l.

l This Tempeſt is not particularly recorded in its proper place, yet it may well be gathered from what is ſaid, Exod. 14. 24, 25 and is in effect acknowledged by Joſephus in his Hiſtory. And this is no new thing in Scripture, for ſome Circumſtances of Hiſtory omitted in the firſt and propereſt places to be ſupplied in following paſſages; whereof inſtances have been already given.

19 Thy way is m in the ſea, and thy path in the great waters, and thy footſteps are not known n.

m Or rather; was at that time: Thou didſt walk and lead thy People in untrodden paths. n Becauſe the waters ſuddenly returned and covered them.

Exod. 15. 13. 20 * Thou leddeſt thy people o like a flock p, by the hand of Moſes and Aaron.

Pſ. 78. 52. Iſa. 63. 13. o Firſt through the Sea, and afterwards through the vaſt howling Wilderneſs to Canaan. p With ſingular Care and Tenderneſs, as a Shepherd doth his Sheep. And therefore I hope thou wilt ſtill take care of thy poor diſperſed and diſtreſſed Flock, and bring them once again into their own Land.

PSAL. LXXVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THe Scope of this Pſalm is plainly expreſſed, v. 6, 7, 8. and is this, that the Iſraelites might learn to hope and truſt in God, and ſtedfaſtly to keep his Laws and Covenant. Which great Leſſon he preſenteth upon them, from the ſad effects of the contrary practices in their Fore-fathers, of which he gives a brief, yet full account in a recapitulation of the moſt remarkable paſſages in the Hiſtory of their Church and Nation.

‖ * Maſchil of Aſaph. ‖ Or, a Pſalm for Aſaph to give Inſtruction.

An Exhortation to attend to, and inſtruct others in the word and works of the Lord, 1—8. A rehearſal of Gods love and long-ſuffering to the unbelieving and obſtinate Iſraelites, 9—11. in their journey out of Egypt to the Land of Canaan, 12——46. Rejecting the reſt of the Tribes, he choſeth Zion for a place of Worſhip, and David, to the Kingdom, 67—72.

* Pſ. 49. 4. & Mat. 13. 1 GIve ear, O my people a, to my law b: incline your ears to the words of my mouth.

a If Aſaph was the Compoſer of this Pſalm, he might well call the Iſraelites his People, not only as he was their Prophet and Teacher, but alſo becauſe they were of the ſame Country and Parentage with him, upon which account this very Phraſe of my People is uſed of them, not only by Queen Eſther, Eſth. 7. 3, 4. but alſo by the Shunamitiſh Woman, 2 Kings 4. 13. b (i. e.) The Doctrine which I am about to deliver to you, concerning your Duty, and the danger of neglecting it.

* Pſ. 49. 4. & Mat. 13. 35. 2 * I will open my mouth c in a parable d: I will utter dark ſayings e of old f.

c Speak to you with all freedom and plainneſs. d Uttering diverſ grave and weighty Sentences (for ſuch are oft called Parables in Scripture) or paſſages of great moment for your inſtruction and advantage. e So he calls the following paſſages, not becauſe the Words and Sentences are in themſelves hard to be underſtood, for they are generally Hiſtorical and eaſie, but becauſe the things contained in them, concerning Gods tranſcendant Goodneſs to an unworthy People, and their unparalled ingratitude for, and abuſe of, ſuch eminent Favours; and their ſtupid ignorance and inſenſibleneſs, under ſuch excellent and conſtant teachings of Gods Word and Works, are indeed prodigious and hard to be believed. f Of things done in antient times, and in a great meaſure worn out of mens minds.

* Pſ. 44. 1. 3 * Which we have heard and known, and our fathers have told us.

4 We will not hide them from their children, ſhewing to the generation to come, the praiſes g of the LORD; and his ſtrength, and his wonderful works that he hath done.

g (i. e.) His glorious and praiſe-worthy Actions, as the following words explain it.

h This is juſtly put in the firſt place, as the chief of all the following Mercies, and the foundation both of their temporal, and of their eternal Felicity. i (i. e.) His Law, as it is called in the next Clauſe; which is very oft called a Teſtimony, becauſe it is a witneſs between God and Men, declaring both the Duties which God expects from Man, and the Promiſes and Bleſſings which Man in the performance of his Duty may expect from God. k Peculiarly; for no other Nation enjoyed this priviledge, as is more fully expreſſed, Pſal. 147. 19, 20. l Which Teſtimony or Law God revealed to them, not for their own private uſe, but for the benefit of all their Poſterity, whom their Parents were obliged to teach, Deut. 6. 7. and all their Children to hear and read, and ſtudy. By which we may ſee how contrary to the mind of God that fooliſh and wicked aſſertion is, that Ignorance is the Mother of Devotion.

6 That the generation to come might know them, even the children which ſhould be born: who ſhould ariſe and declare them to their children.

7 That they might ſet their hope in God m, and not forget the works of God, but keep his commandments.

m That by the conſideration of Gods gracious Promiſes, and wonderful Works wrought by God for his People, they might be incouraged to truſt in him.

* Ex. 32. 9. & 33. 3. & 34. 9. Deut. 9. 6. 13. 8 And might not be as their fathers, * a ſtubborn and rebellious generation; a generation † that ſet not their heart aright n, and whoſe ſpirit was not ſtedfaſt with God o.

n Who though they outwardly and ſeemingly complyed with the & 32. 27. forms of Worſhip which God had preſcribed, yet did not direct, † Heb. or prepare their Hearts, to the Obedience and Service of God. That prepared not their heart.

o Who quickly diſcovered their Hypocriſie by their apoſtacy from God, and from the Religion which they had profeſſed.

* Amos 2. 15. 9 * The children of Ephraim p being armed and † carrying bows q, turned back in the day of battel.

p This paſſage concerns; either, 1. The Tribe of Ephraim, and ſome exploit of theirs, wherein they met with this diſaſter; whether it were that mentioned 1 Chron. 7. 21. or ſome other not particularly related in any other place of Scripture. For we muſt not think that all the Actions and Events of the ſeveral Tribes are recorded in Scripture, but only ſome of the moſt memorable ones. Or, 2. The ten Tribes, who are very frequently called Ephraim, becauſe that Tribe was the chief of them, and the ſeat of the Kingdom. And ſo this is referred by ſome to the Captivity of the ten Tribes, 2 Kings 17. Although the Hiſtorical references of this † Heb. Turning forth.

Psalm, seem not to go beyond Davids time. Or rather, 3. All the Tribes and People of Israel, who are sometimes designed by the Name of Ephraim, as Jer. 31. 9, 18, 20. Zech. 10. 7. as well they might be, because of the eminency of this Tribe, out of which came Joshua their first Governour in Canaan, and in which the Ark of God continued for a long time, and whose people were both most numerous, and most valiant, and therefore they are fitly named for all, to shew that this slaughter was not made amongst them for any defect of power or courage in them, but merely from Gods just judgment upon them for their sins here following. And that Ephraim is here put for all Israel seems to be evident from the following Verses, wherein the sins, upon which this overthrow is charged, are manifestly the sins of all the children of Israel, and they who are here called Ephraim are called Jacob and Israel, v. 21. And to this passage is by divers Learned Interpreters referred unto that dreadful overthrow related 1 Sam. 4. Wherein they did not stand to fight, but turned their backs and fled, as is there expressed, which though it reached all Israel, yet Ephraim is particularly named, because as the Ark fo the Fight was in that Tribe; and therefore it may be presumed that the Ephraimites were a very considerable part of that Israelitish Army. And the Psalmist having related this amazing Providence and judgment of God upon his own People, he falls into a large Discourse of the causes of it, to wit, the great and manifold and continual sins of that and the former Generations, which having prosecuted from hence to ver. 60. he there returns to this History, and relates the sad consequences of that disaster, to wit, the Captivity of the Ark, and Gods forsaking of Shiloh and Ephraim, and removing thence to the Tribe of Judah and Mount Zion, the reason of which change of place he designed to give in the relation of this passage. q Which includes Arrows, and these being then the chiefest and most common Weapons are put for all other Arms.

10 They kept not the covenant of God, and refused to walk in his law r.

r Their disobedience was accompanied with obstinacy and contempt of Gods Laws.

11 And forgate s his works, and his wonders that he had shewed them.

s Not historically, but practically. They did not so remember them, as to love and serve, and trust that God of whose infinite power and goodness they had such ample experience. Words of knowledge, such as knowing, remembring, &c. in Scripture used frequently comprehend affection and practice, as hath been oft observed.

12 Marvellous things did he in the sight of their fathers in the land of Egypt, in the field t of Zoan u.

t (i.e.) In the territory or jurisdiction, not excluding City it self. In the like sense we read of the field of Edom, and of Moab, Gen. 32. 3. and 36. 34. Numb. 21. 20. u An ancient and eminent and the Royal City of Egypt. See Numb. 13. 22. Isa. 19. 11. and 30. 2, 3, 4.

* Exod. 14. 21. 13 * He divided the sea, and caused them to pass through, and * he made the waters to stand as an heap.

* Exod. 15. 8. 14 * In the day time also he led them with a cloud x, * Exod. 13. 21. & 14. 24. Psal. 105. 39. and all the night with a light of fire.

x Which was very comfortable both for a shadow from the scorching heat of the Climate and Season, and for a companion and director in their Journey.

* Exod. 17. 6. Numb. 20. 11. Psal. 105. 41. 15 * He clave the rocks y in the wilderness, and gave them drink as out of the great depths z.

y He useth the plural number because it was twice done, once in Rephidim, Exod. 17. 6. and again in Kadesh, Numb. 20. 1, 11. z In great abundance.

1 Cor. 10. 4. 16 He brought streams also out of the rock, and caused waters to run down like rivers a.

a Which did miraculously follow them in all their travels, even to the borders of Canaan. See Deut. 9. 21. Psal. 105. 41. 1 Cor. 10. 4.

17 And they sinned yet more against him, by provoking the most High in the wilderness b.

b Where they had such strong and singular obligations to obedience both from the great things which God had then and there done for them, and from their dependance upon Gods favour and help for their safety and subsistance. This was a great aggravation of their sin and folly.

* Exod. 16. 2. 18 And * they tempted c God in their heart, by asking meat for their lust d.

c Desired a tryal and proof of Gods power, as the next Verse plainly sheweth. See Numb. 11. 4. d Not for their necessary subsistence for which they had Manna, but out of an inordinate and luxurious appetite.

* Numb. 11. 4. † Heb. Order. 19 * Yea, they spake against God: they said, Can God † furnish a table in the wilderness?

* Exod. 17. 6. Numb. 20. 11. 20 * Behold, he smote the rock, that the waters gushed out e, and the streams overflowed; can he give bread also? can he provide flesh for his people?

e Which, all things considered, seems not so wonderful, since Fountains of Water sometimes break forth unexpectedly from or through Rocks. But it is far more difficult to give us bread and flesh, which we know not whether he can do. Or at least we have just cause to doubt of his good will to us, who hath made such a penurious provision for us, and denies us these common blessings of bread and flesh, which he gives to the worst of men.

21 Therefore the LORD heard this, and was wroth; so a fire was f kindled against Jacob, and anger also came up against Israel.

f Either properly, as it was Numb. 11. 1. or figuratively, the fire of Gods anger, as it follows.

22 Because they believed not in God, and trusted not in his salvation g.

g That he both could and would save them from the famine and destruction which they feared.

23 Though he had commanded † the clouds from above, and opened the doors of heaven h:

h Which he compares to a Granary or Store-house, whereof God keeps the Key, and either shuts or opens the doors of it, either gives or with-holds provisions, as he sees fit.

* Exod. 16. 4, 14, 15. Psal. 105. 40. 24 * And had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them of the corn of heaven i.

i Which was made in Heaven, or the Air, and sent down thence to the Earth.

Joh. 6. 31. 1 Cor. 10. 3. 25 ‖ Man did eat angels food k: he sent them meat to the full l.

k Manna, so called, either, 1. Because it was made by the Ministry of Angels. Or rather, 2. Because of its excellency, fitted Food as might best the Angels, if they could eat Food, and such as hath some resemblance with the blessed Angels in regard of its Heavenly Originals, its pure and spirituous substance, its vigour and efficacy in preserving and nourishing those who used it according to Gods appointment. Or this place may be translated as it is in the Margent, Every one did eat the bread of the mighty, (i. e.) Even the common Israelites fed upon as delicious food as the greatest Nobles and Princes used to do. l Which may belong, either, 1. To the Flesh mentioned in the following Verses which God gave them even to satiety or glutting, which he threatned to do, Numb. 11. 18, 19, 20. Or rather, 2. To the Manna of which he is here speaking, which he gave them in such plenty, that their desire of other Food could not proceed from their necessity, but merely from wantonness and lust.

* Numb. 11. 31. † Heb. Drave. 26 * He caused an East-wind † to blow in the heaven: and by his power he brought in the South-wind m.

m Either he brought in first an Eastern, and afterwards a Southern Wind; or the Wind was South-east; from which Quarter these Quails might come as well as from the West, where their more common abode is; this work being confessedly miraculous.

† Heb. Fowl of wings. 27 He rained flesh also upon them as dust, and † feathered fowls n like as the sand of the sea.

n Heb. Winged Fowl, which is noted to shew that it was a supernatural work, whereby God took away from them the use of their Wings, and made them to fall into the hands of the Israelites.

28 And he let it fall in the midst of their camp o round about their habitations.

o Heb. Of his camp; either Israels Camp, or Gods Camp; for seeing Israel was Gods people, and he dwelt among them, their Camp was his Camp.

29 So they did eat, and were well filled: for he gave them their own desire p.

p What they desired both for quality and quantity.

* Numb. 11. 33. 30 They were not estranged from their lust q: but * while their meat was yet in their mouths.

q The sense is either, 1. Whilst their greedy appetite yet continued, and was not fully satisfied, before they began to loath it, as they did afterwards, Numb. 11. 20. Or 2. Before they were deprived or destitute of their desired food, whilst they enjoyed it, and were still feeding upon it, as the next Clause explains this. Gods patience did not wait upon them till that food was spent, but fell upon them instantly.

† Heb. Made to bow. ‖ Or, young men. 31 The wrath of God came upon them, and slew the fattest of them r, and † smote down the ‖ chosen men of Israel.

r The most healthy and strong, who probably were most desirous of this food, and fed most eagerly upon it, and grew fattest by it, and least suspected their own danger.

* Nu. 14 & 16. & 17. 32 For all this * they sinned still: and believed not for his wondrous works.

33 Therefore their days did he consume in vanity s, and their years in trouble t.

s In tedious and fruitless marches hither and thither, sometimes forward, and sometimes backward, which they knew would never bring them in their own persons to their promised and much desired Land. t In manifold diseases, dangers, perplexities and horrors of their own Minds and Consciences.

34 When he slew them, then they sought him u: and they returned x and enquired early after God y.

u They prayed to him to deliver them from their deadly dangers; which even Pharaoh frequently did. x To wit, from their Idols unto the outward worship of God: or being moved with fear they ceased for the present from their grossly wicked courses, which they might easily do without a dram of true Repentance, or hearty conversion to God. y Speedily and earnestly sought to God for ease and safety and comfort, as wicked men in such cases frequently do.

* Deut. 32. 4 35 And they remembred that * God was their rock, and the high God their redeemer z.

z They considered that God and God alone had preserved them in all their former exigencies, and that he only could now help them, and not those Idols or Creatures which they had preferred before him, and therefore being driven by absolute necessity they fled to him for relief.

* Hof. 10. 36 Nevertheless, they did flatter him with their mouth, and they * lied unto him with their tongues a.

a They made glorious but false professions and protestations of their sincere resolutions of future obedience, if God would spare them.

37 For their heart was not right with him b, neither were they stedfast in his covenant c.

b All their confessions and petitions were but hypocritical and forced, and did not proceed from an upright heart truly grieved for their former offences, and firmly resolved to turn unto the Lord. c They discovered their hypocrisie by their Apostacy from God as soon as their danger was past.

d Not simply and absolutely. for so it is undeniably certain from the Holy Scriptures that God pardons none but true penitents, such as these were not, but respectively, and so far as not to destroy them at that time which he threatened, and was about to do, as the next words limit and explain it. He remitted their punishment, for iniquity is oft put for the punishment of it. Heb. He expiated their iniquity. He accepted of their attonement, or of their professed repentance so far as to compensate it with a removal of this outward and present affliction; as he did also to wicked Ahab upon his hypocritical humiliation, 1 Kings 21. 29. And this God doth for the encouragement of all true penitents, who may hence learn how much greater and better recompences they may expect and shall receive from God. e But set bounds to it, and though he chastened them, yet he would not utterly destroy them, as they deserved.

Psal. 103. 9 39 For * he remembred that they were but flesh f; a wind that passeth away and cometh not again g.

f Which here notes either 1. The corruption of their natures, which was perpetually inclining them to sin and consequently exposing them to God's wrath, which must needs have consumed them utterly and speedily, if God had let loose his anger upon them. See the same argument used to a like purpose, Gen. 8. 21. Or rather, 2. The frailty or infirmity of their natures, as the next clause interprets this; which is such, that if I should not restrain my wrath, I should quickly cut off the body of this wicked people, and their children with them, whom I have promised to carry into Canaan, Numb. 14. 31. g That are quickly cut off, and when once they are dead they never return to this life.

Or, provoked him in the wilderness, and grieved him in the desert? 40 How oft did they ‖ provoke him in the wilderness, and grieve him in the desert?

Psal. 78. 41. 41 Yea, * they turned back and tempted God, and limited the holy one of Israel h.

h They limited either 1. God's power, as above, Verse 19, 20. Or, 2. God's will, directing and prescribing to him what to do, and when, and in what manner, and murmuring at him if he did not always grant their particular and various desires.

Or, from when he delivered them ‖ from the enemy. 42 They remembred not his hand i, nor the day k i The great and glorious works of his hand on their behalf.

k Nor that remarkable and never to be forgotten day, that self same day, as it is called Exod. 12. 41. which God had fixed four hundred years before, Gen. 15. 13. in which God delivered them from their greatest enemy, the tyrant Pharaoh.

Psal. 78. 43 How he had † wrought his signs in Egypt, and his wonders in the field of Zoan.

Psal. 105. 44 * And had turned their rivers l into blood; and their floods that they could not drink.

l The several branches and streams of the river Nilus, and those many rivulets which they brought from it.

Psal. 78. 45. Psal. 105. 31. 45 * He sent divers sorts of flies among them, which devoured them m; and * frogs, which destroyed them.

m Or, destroyed them; which they might do by their cruel and numerous stings, for these flies were doubtless extraordinary in their nature and quantity, and poysonous and hurtful qualities. And the like is to be thought concerning the frogs here following, who also might destroy the people by infecting the air with their stink, and corrupting their meats and drinks.

Psal. 105. 34. 46 He gave also their increase unto the caterpillar, and their labour n * unto the locust.

n The herbs and grains which were come up by their care and diligent labour.

Psal. 105. 33. Heb. Figtrees. 47 * He † destroyed their vines with hail, and their sycamore-trees o with ‖ frost.

o Or, wild Fig-trees, which were there in great plenty. Under these and the vines all other trees are comprehended. And this hail and frost did destroy the fruits of the trees, and sometimes the trees themselves.

Heb. He shut up. Or, lightning. 48 † He gave up p also their cattel to the hail, and their flocks to ‖ hot thunder-bolts.

p Heb. He shut up as in a prison that they could not escape them.

Heb. An ill angel. 49 He cast upon them the fierceness of his anger, wrath, and indignation q and trouble, by sending † evil angels among them r.

q Other most grievous plagues which were mixed with, and were the effects of his anger and wrath; whereby their miseries were greatly aggravated and distinguished from the afflictions which God sent upon the Israelites in Egypt, which were onely fatherly chastisements and the effects of God's love and occasions of their deliverance. r Heb. the sending (or the operation or effects) of evil Angels, or of the Angels or messengers of evil things, either of the Angels whom God imployed in producing these plagues; or of Moses and Aaron: who were to the Egyptians messengers of evil, and by whom these judgments were sent to and inflicted upon them.

† Heb. He weighed a path. ‖ Or, their beasts to the Murrain, &c. 50 † He made a way s to his anger, he spared not ‖ their soul from death t but gave ‖ their life u over to the pestilence.

s Heb. He weighed a path or cause-way, (i. e.) He made a most smooth and even and exact path as if he had done it by weight and measure, that so his anger might pass swifty and freely without interruption. The phrase also seems to note the wisdom and justice of God in weighing out their plagues proportionably to their sins, and exerciing great severity towards them answerably to their great and barbarous cruelty towards his people. t (i. e.) He punisheth them with death or killing plagues, as the next words explain it. u Or their beasts. So he speaks of the murrain among their cattel. But our Translation seems better to agree with the next foregoing and following passages which plainly speak of the death of persons.

* Ex. 12. 29. 51 * And smote all the first-born in Egypt: the chief of their strength x in the tabernacles of Ham y.

x Another expression noting the first-born, who are so called, Gen. 42. 3. y Of the Egyptians, the posterity of Ham, Gen. 10. 9. which title he there gives them to intimate that they were the cursed children of a cursed parent, Ham, Gen. 9. 25. and therefore were proper objects for divine wrath and vengeance.

* Ps. 77. 20. 52 But * made his own people to go forth like sheep, and guided them in the wilderness like a flock.

* Ex. 14. 27. & 15. 10. † Heb. covered. 53 And he led them on safely, so that they feared not: z but the sea * † overwhelmed their Enemies.

z But it is said that they were sore afraid, Exod. 14. 10. Ans. 1. They were afraid at first, but after Moses had encouraged them they grew bold and secure, one evidence whereof was, that they confidently went into the middle of the Sea, and passed between the vast heaps of water which were on both sides of them. 2. The meaning may be that they had no just cause to fear: for men are oft said to do not onely what they actually do, but also what they ought to do, as Mal. 1. 6. and 2. 7. &c.

* Ex. 44. 3. 54 And he brought them to the border of his sanctuary a, even to this mountain a, * which his right hand had purchased.

a Or, of his holiness, or his holy place; (i. e.) the Land of Canaan, which is so called, Ezra 9. 8. Zach. 2. 8. &c. as being separated by God from all other Lands, for his people and service, and sanctified by his presence and dwelling in it. a Either 1. The Mountain upon which the Tabernacle of Temple stood. Or rather 2. The mountainous Country of Canaan, which is called a Land of hills and valleys, Deut. 11. 11. And the word mountain is oft used in Scripture for a mountainous Country, as Gen. 36. 8. Deut. 1. 7. Jos. 11. 21.

* Ps. 136. 21, 22. 55 He cast out the heathen also before them, and * divided them an inheritance by line, and made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tent.

56 Yet they tempted and provoked the most high God, and kept not his testimonies.

57 But turned back, and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers: they were turned aside * like a deceitful bow.

* Hos. 7. 16. b Which either breaketh when it is drawn, or shooteth awry, and frustrateth the Archers design and expectation. So when they pretended, and both God and men expected obedience and gratitude to their great benefactor, they behaved themselves undutifully and unfaithfully towards him.

* Deut. 32. 16, 21. 58 * For they provoked him to anger with their high places, and moved him to jealousie with their graven images.

59 When God heard c this, he was wroth, and greatly abhorred Israel.

c (i. e.) Perceived or understood, (as hearing is oft used, as Gen. 11. 7. and 41 15, &c. It is spoken of God after the manner of men.

* 1 Sam. 4. 11. Jer. 7. 12; 14. and 26. 6, 9. 60 * So that he forsook the tabernacle of Shiloh, d the tent which he placed among men e.

d Which then was placed in Shiloh, from whence as the Israelites fetched the Ark, so God withdrew himself. e Whereby he insinuates both God's wonderful condescension and favour to such worthless and wretched creatures, and their stupendious folly and wickedness in despising and sinning away so glorious a priviledge.

61 And delivered his strength f into captivity, and his glory g into the enemies h hand.

f To wit, the Ark, called God's strength, 1 Chron. 16. 11. and the ark of his strength, Psal. 132. 8. because it was the sign and pledge of his strength or power put forth on his peoples behalf. g So the Ark is called, as being the Monument and seat of God's glorious presence, and an instrument of his glorious works. h Namely, the Philistins: Of which see 1 Sam. 4.

62 He gave his people over also unto the sword: and was wroth with his inheritance.

* Ju. 15. 6. Dan. 11. 33 † Heb. praised. 63 * The fire consumed their young men; and their maidens were not † given to marriage i.

i Because the young men who should have married them were slain. Heb. were not praised, to wit, with Marriage-songs, which was usual at Marriage-Solemnities among the Jews, as appears from Jer. 7. 34. and 16. 9. and 25. 10.

64 Their priests k fell by the sword, and their widows made no lamentation l.

k Hophni and Phinehas and others. l No Funeral Solemnities either because they were prevented by their own death, as the wife wife of Phinehas was, or disturbed by the invasion of the enemy; or so overwhelmed with the fence of the publick calamity that the resentment of their private losses was swallowed up by it. See Job 27. 15. Ezek. 24. 23.

65 Then the LORD awaked as one out of sleep m, and like a mighty man that shouteth by reason of wine m.

m For God by giving up not onely his people but his Ark to the contempt and insolency of the Philistins might seem to be asleep and insensible of his own honour and interest, till by a sudden and unexpected blow he convinced his enemies of the contrary. m Whose spirit and courage is revived and inflamed by a liberal draught of generous wine. Which comparison is no more injurious to the Divine Majesty than that of a thief coming in the night, to which Christ's second coming is compared, 1 Thess. 5. 2.

* 1 Sa. 5. 6. & 6. 4. 66 * And he smote his enemies in the hinder parts n: he put them to a perpetual reproach o.

n With the Disease of the Emerods which was both painful and shameful. o He caused them to perpetuate their own reproach by sending back the Ark of God with their golden Emerods, the lasting monuments of their shame.

67 Moreover, p he refused the tabernacle of Joseph q: and chose not the tribe of Ephraim r:

p And as he wrote his enemies for their sins; so he punished his own people for the same cause. q Either, He rejected the Kingdom of the ten tribes, whereof Ephraim was the Head. But this Psalm reacheth not so far as the erection of that Kingdom. Or rather, 2. He would not have his Ark to abide longer in the Tabernacle of Shiloh, which was in the Tribe of Joseph or Ephraim. See 1 Sam. 4. 12. and 7. 1, 2. Jer. 7. 12, 14. and 26. 6, 9. r The same thing repeated in other words after the manner.

68 But chose the tribe of Judah s, the mount Zion which he loved.

s Either, 1. For the seat of the Kingdom. Or rather, 2. For the seat of the Ark and of God's Worship. Obj. Jerusalem was in the Tribe of Benjamin, Jos. 18. 27. Ans. 1. It was so in part, and part of it was in Judah, as appears from Jos. 15. 63. To which Tribe Zion belonged by special reason, because David the Head of that Tribe conquered and took it. 2. Benjamin after the division of the two Kingdoms was incorporated with Judah, and is oft comprehended under the name of Judah.

t The Temple of Solomon. u Magnificent and gloriously. x Not now to be removed from place to place, as the Tabernacle was, but as a fixed place for the Arks perpetual residence, unless the people by their Apostacy should cause its removal.

* 1 Sa. 16. 11. 2 Sa. 7. 8. † Heb. from after. * 2 Sa. 5. 2. 1 Chr. 11. 2. 70 * He chose David also his servant, and took him from the sheep-fold.

71 † From following the ewes great with young y, he brought him * to feed Jacob his people, and Israel his inheritance.

y By which employment he was inured to that care and diligence and self-denial which is necessary in a King or Governour; and instructed to rule his people with all gentleness and tenderness.

72 So he fed them according to the integrity of his heart; and guided them by the skilfulness of his hands z.

z He commends David for the two necessary ingredients of a good Prince. 1. Integrity, whereby he sincerely sought the good and welfare of his people, avoiding and abhorring those counsels and courses which were contrary thereunto. 2. Skilfulness; whereby he managed all the publick affairs with singular prudence; which is here ascribed to his hands, not because it was seated in them, but because it was acted and discovered by them, and appeared in all his actions or administrations.

PSAL. LXXIX.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm was doubtless composed upon the sad occasion of the destruction of Judea and Jerusalem, either by Antiochus, or rather by the Chaldeans; as may be gathered from 1 Mac. 7. 16, 17. where in the relation of the persecution of Antiochus the second and third Verses of this Psalm are cited.

‖ Or, for Asaph. A Psalm ‖ of Asaph.

The Psalmist complaining of the desolation and ruine of Jerusalem, 1——4. expostulateth with God about his long anger and jealousie, 5—7. entreateth for the forgiveness of their sins, and speedy help and mercy, 8——12. to the everlasting praise of his Name, 13.

* Ps. 74. 7. 1 O God, the heathen are come a into thine inheritance b; * thy holy temple have they defiled c; they have laid Jerusalem on heaps d.

a As Invaders and Conquerors. b Into Canaan and Judea, which thou didst chuse for thine inheritance. c By entring into it, and touching and carrying away its holy Vessels, and shedding blood in it, and burning of it. d Made of the ruines of those goodly houses which they burned, or threw down.

2 The dead bodies of thy servants e have they given to be meat unto the fowls of heaven f; the flesh of thy saints unto the beasts of the earth.

e Either, 1. Of thy faithful and holy servants, who they used as cruelly as the worst of the people. Or, 2. Of the Jews, whom, though the generality of them were very wicked, he calleth God's Servants and Saints, because they were all such by profession; and some of them were really such; and the Chaldeans did never know nor regard those that were so, but promiscuously destroyed all that came in their way. f By casting them out like dung upon the face of the earth, and not suffering any to bury them.

3 Their blood they shed like water g round about Jerusalem, * and there was none to bury them h.

g Plentifully and contemptuously, valuing it no more than common water. h Because their friends who should have done it, were either slain or fled, or were not permitted, or durst not undertake to perform that Office to them.

* Ps. 141. 7. Jer. 14. 16. & 16. 4. 4 * We are become a reproach to our neighbours; a scorn and derision to them that are round about us i.

i We who were their terrour and scourge are now neither feared nor pitied, but become the matter of their scoffs and reproaches. See Psal. 80. 6. and 137. 7. Ezek. 35. 2. 12, &c.

5 * How long, LORD, will thou be angry for ever? shall thy jealousie burn like fire?

* Ps. 89. 46.

6 * Pour out thy wrath upon the heathen k that have not known thee, and upon the kingdoms that have not called upon thy name.

* Je. 10. 25.

k Though we confess that we have deserved thy wrath, yet the Heathen, by whom thou hast scoured us, deserve it much more, as being guilty of far greater impieties than we, living in gross ignorance and contempt of God and of his worship. And therefore we pray transfer thy wrath from us to them.

7 For they have devoured Jacob l, and laid waste his dwelling place.

PSAL. LXXX.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm was Composed either 1. Upon the same occasion with the former, to wit, the destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, as most conceive. Which yet seems not probable, because here is no mention of the Temple, nor of Jerusalem, as there is in the foregoing Psalm; nor of the Tribe of Judah, which was most concerned in that desolation, but of Joseph, Vers 1. and of the Tribes of Ephraim and Manasseth, which were carried captive long before that time; nor do the expressions of this Psalm import such a desolating judgment, as those of the former do. Or, 2. Upon occasion of captivity of the ten Tribes, as some others think. But why then is Benjamin named, which is none of that number, nor went into captivity with them, but was joyned with Judah? Or, 3. Upon occasion of some other calamity, or calamities which befel the Tribes of Israel after their division into two Kingdoms, and before the captivity and destruction of either of them. In which time all the evils mentioned in this Psalm did befal fal them, sometimes in one Tribe or part, and sometimes in another, as is manifest from their History.

To the chief musician upon Shoshannim Eduth a, a Psalm ‖ of Asaph.

a It seems to be the name of a Musical Instrument: though many separate the latter part of the word from the former, and expound Eduth, a testimony, or witness between God and his people, of his relation to them, and of their dependence upon him.

The Psalmist bemoaneth the miseries and sad Condition of the Church, 1——7. That God's past manifold Mercies are changed into deplorable Judgments, 8——13. He prayeth for deliverance out of them; with a promise of Thankfulness, 14——19.

1 GIve ear, O shepherd of Israel b, thou that leadest c Joseph d like a flock; thou that dwellest between the cherubims e, shine forth f.

b Thou who hast undertaken to feed and govern thy people of Israel, as a shepherd doth his flock, now perform thine office, and rescue thy flock from those grievous Wolves which devour and destroy them. c Or, didst lead formerly, though now thou hast forsaken them. d (i. e.) The Children of Joseph, or of Israel, as he now said, this Clause being but a repetition of the former in other words. Compare Psal. 77. 15. And the name of Joseph, the most eminent of the Patriarchs both for his dignity and piety and the right of primogeniture transferred upon him from Reuben, 1 Chron. 5. 1. is elsewhere put for all the ten Tribes, as Ezek. 37. 16, 19. Amos 5. 6, 15. and 6. 6. Zech. 10. 6. And for all the Tribes, as Psal. 81. 5. Obad. v. 18. e Which were the Mercy-seat above the Ark. By which title he prudently and piously minds the ten Tribes of their revolt from God, and of the vanity of their superstitious Addresses to their Calves at Dan and Bethel, and of the necessity of their returning to the true worship of God before the Ark at Jerusalem, if they desired or expected any relief from him. And by this title it seems more than probable that this Psalm was not made upon occasion of the Babylonish Captivity, in and after which time there was no Ark not Cherubims, nor do I remember that Daniel or any Prophets did then apply themselves to God by that Title. See Dan. 9. f Out of the clouds wherein thou seemest to hide thy self. Shew forth thy power and goodness to and for thy poor oppressed people in the face of thine and their Enemies.

2 Before Ephraim, and Benjamin, and Manasseth, stir up thy strength g, and † come and save us.

g (i. e.) Before all the Tribes of Israel; for whom he mentions onely these three Tribes, either 1. Because of their special relation to Joseph here named, Verse 1. Ephraim and Manasseth being his Sons, and Benjamin his Brother, both by his Father and Mother: Or 2. Because these were eminent Tribes, Ephraim the Head of the Kingdom of the ten Tribes; Manasseth was planted and powerful on both sides of Jordan; and Benjamin, because the greatest part of Jerusalem and the Temple was in its lot. Or 3. With respect and allusion to the ancient scituation of the Tabernacle in the wilderness, where these Tribes were placed on the West-side of the Tabernacle, Numb. 2. 18, &c. in which the Ark was, which consequently was before them. So the sence is, O thou who didst of old go forth before these Tribes, &c. do so again at this time. Or, 4. Because these Tribes had a greater share of the Calamities here designed than others; which might be very true, though it be not expressed in the sacred History, in which we have only the substance of things, and such circumstances are commonly omitted. r Which seems now to be asleep, or idle and useless.

* Num. 6. 25. 3 Turn us again, f O God, and * cause thy face to shine, and we shall be saved.

f Either, 1. To our former quiet and flourishing estate: Or, 2. To thy self; from whom Ephraim and Manasseh with the rest of the ten tribes have apostatized. See the like prayer of Elijah for them, 1 Kings 18. 37.

† Heb. with us. * Ps. 35. 23. Heb. be awake for my judgment. 4 O LORD God of hosts, how long † wilt thou * be angry ‖ against the prayer of thy people? t.

t Thou art so far from answering our prayers whereby we seek to appease thee, that by thy continuance and increase of our miseries thou seemest to be the more incensed against us by them.

* Ps. 102. 9. 5 Thou feedest them with the bread of tears, u and giveth them * tears to drink in great measure.

u Either with tears instead of bread, which they either want, or cannot eat because their grief hath taken away their appetites: or with tears as frequent and constant as their eating it. See the like Phrase, Psal. 42. 3.

* Ps. 44. 14. 6 * Thou makest us a strife x unto our neighbours y, and our enemies laugh among themselves z.

x (i. e.) The object or matter of their strife or contention: either 1. They strive one with another who shall do us most mischief, or take our spoils to themselves. Or, 2. They are perpetually quarrelling with us, and seeking occasions against us. y Who used and ought to live peaceably and kindly with us. z Insult over us, and take pleasure in our miseries.

7 Turn us again, O God of hosts, and cause thy face to shine, and we shall be saved.

* Ps. 44. 2. 8 Thou hast brought a vine a out of Egypt b: * thou hast cast out the heathen, c and planted it.

a To which the Israel or Church of God is oft compared; as Isa. 5. 2. Jer. 2. 21. Ezek. 17. 6. Mat. 21. 33. b He alludes to the custom of transplanting trees for their more advantageous growth. c The Nations of Canaan.

9 Thou preparedest room d before it, and didst cause it to take deep root e, and it filled the land.

d Or, didst purge or cleanse the Soil, taking out stones or sticks, or other roots or plants which might hinder its growth or fruitfulness. Thou didst root out these idolatrous and wicked Nations which might either corrupt or destroy them. e Thou gavest them a firm settlement in that Land.

10 The hills were covered with the shadow of it f; and the boughs thereof were like † the goodly cedars g.

f They grew so numerous, that they filled not onely the fruitful Valleys, but even the barren mountains. g Far differing from ordinary Vines whose Boughs are weak and small, and creep upon the walls or ground. Pf. 104. 16.

11 She sent out her boughs unto the sea, and her branches unto the river h.

h They possessed or subdued the whole Land from the Mid-land Sea to the River Euphrates; which were the bounds alloted to them by God, Gen. 15. 18.

* Ps. 89. 40. Isa. 5. 5. 12 Why hast thou then * broken down her hedges i, so that all they which pass by the way do pluck her? k i Taken away thy protection, which was to them for walls and bulwarks. k Pluck up her grapes and boughs, and strike at her very root.

13 The boar out of the wood l doth waste it, and the wild beast of the field doth devour it.

l Where Boars use to lodge, as it is noted by many Authours. By which he understands their fierce and furious enemies.

14 Return, we beseech thee, O God of hosts: look down from heaven, and behold and visit this vine;

15 And the vineyard m which thy right hand hath planted n, and the † branch o that thou madest strong p † Heb. son. for thy self q.

m Or, the root, or stock or plant, as others render it. n Which thou hast planted or fixed with thy might and power; whereof the right hand is both a sign or symbol and an instrument. o Heb. the son (i. e.) either 1. The son of man, as it is more fully expressed, Vers. 17. Or rather, 2. The branch; for as yet he continues the metaphor; which is called the son, to wit, of the root or stock mentioned in the former clause, as the Branches are called Daughters in the Hebrew Text, Gen. 49. 22. p Either, 1. By supporting it with stakes or walls upon which the vine groweth up: Or rather, 2. By causing it to grow in bulk and thickness, and consequently in strength. q For thy own especial delight and service and honour.

16 It is burnt with fire, it is cut down: they r perish at the rebuke of thy countenance s.

o To wit, thy vineyard or branch. r Thy people of Israel signified by the vine. So now he passeth from the Metaphor to the thing designed by it. s Through the effects of thine anger, without which their enemies could do them no hurt.

* Ps. 89. 21. 17 * Let thy hand be upon t the man of thy right hand u; upon the son of man x whom thou madest strong for thy self.

t To protect and strengthen him. u Whom thy right hand planted, Vers. 15. whom thou hast loved and respected even as thy right hand, which is very dear to us, Mat. 5. 30. and 18. 8. Compare Zech. 13. 7. thy Benjamin whom he mentioned, Verse 2. to whose name he seems to allude, which signifies the son of the right hand (i. e.) a dearly beloved son, as Benjamin was to Jacob. x By man or son of man he understands either 1. The Messias, oft called in Scripture the son of man; let him come, and let his Kingdom be established, and so thine Israel shall be saved and delivered out of all its troubles. Or, 2. The Royal Family, the House of David, in whose safety and welfare the happiness of the whole nation was wrapt up. Or rather, 3. The people of Israel who are oft spoken of as one person, as God's son and first-born, Exod. 4. 22. and here as one vine. And seeing all the foregoing complaints have been concerning the calamities of the people of Israel, it most reasonable to understand this prayer to be made for them; the rather because the following clause here applyed to the man and son of man, whom thou madest strong for thy self, is used of the root or branch of the vine, Vers. 15.

y This glorious favour of thine shall oblige us to love and serve thee, and trust in thee so long as we have a being, and no more to revolt from thee to Idolatry or wickedness, as we have too oft done. z Revive and restore us to our former tranquility and happiness.

19 Turn us again, O LORD God of hosts, cause thy face to shine, and we shall be saved.

PSAL. LXXXI.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm seems to have been made for the use of the Church in solemn Feasts; particularly either upon every first day of the Month, or upon the first day of the seventh month which was celebrated with a more solemn blast of Trumpets, Levit. 23. 24. Numb. 29. 1. Because that Month was more sacred than others by reason of the concurrence of divers Religious Solemnities in it.

To the chief musician upon Gittith a, a Psalm ‖ of Asaph.

a Of which Title see the Note on Psal. 8. 1.

An Exhortation to a solemn praising of God, 1—3. which he requireth for his manifold Mercies, and deliverances, 4——7. and exporting to Obedience, and the worshipping of him the true God, 8—10. complaineth of their disobedience, which tendeth to their own hurt and affliction, 11——16.

1 SIng aloud unto God our strength b: make a joyful noise unto the God of Jacob.

b Who is all our refuge and safeguard against all our Enemies.

2 Take a psalm, and bring hither the timbrel, the pleasant harp with the psaltery c.

c All which Instruments were then prescribed and used in their solemn meetings.

3 Blow up the trumpet in the new moon d, in the time appointed, on our solemn feast-day e.

d Which was a sacred and festival time, as appears from Numb. 10. 10. and 28. 11, 14. 2 Kings 4. 23. Isa. 66. 23. But this may be understood either 1. Generally of every New Moon. Or rather, 2. Specially of that New Moon, as the word may be rendred, which begun the seventh month; as may be gathered both from the following words, and by comparing this place with Levit. 23. 24. and Numb. 29. 1. Where this very day is called a day of blowing of Trumpets. e Or, for the day, or time of our solemn festivity; whereby may be understood either 1. the day of the New Moon, on which the Trumpets were blown for the celebration of that solemn time. Or, 2. The seventh Month, which that New Moon did introduce or begin, and in which, besides other Solemnities, they kept the Feast of Tabernacles, which the Hebrew Doctors call the Feast by way of eminency, and Josephus affirms to have been the most sacred and the chief of all the Jewish Feasts.

*Le. 23. 24. Nu. 10. 10. 4 For * this was a statute for Israel, and a law of the God of Jacob f.

g To wit, the blowing of Trumpets. h Among the posterity of Joseph, to wit, the people of Israel, as is evident both from the foregoing Verse where they are called Israel, and from the following words in this Verse, where they are described by their coming out of Egypt, which was common to all the Tribes of Israel, who are sometimes called by the name of Joseph; of which see on Psal. 80. 1. i Either, 1. For a Law, which is oft called a testimony. Or rather, 2. For a witness and memorial of that glorious deliverance mentioned in the following words. For, 1. That this was a statute and law he had expressed, Vers. 4. which it is not likely that he would here repeat, especially in a more dark and doubtful phrase. 2. He seems to declare the end of that Law, which was to be a testimony. k To wit, God, he who ordained, as was now said. l As a Captain in the head, or on the behalf of his people. m To execute his judgments upon that Land or People. Or, against, &c. to destroy it. Or, out of it, as both antient and other Interpreters render this Particle al, which is elsewhere put for meal, and meal is put for min, from or out of, as is manifest by comparing 2 Kings 21. 8. with 2 Chron. 33. 8. So this Text notes the time when this and the other Feasts were instituted; which was at, or presently after their coming out of Egypt, even at Sinai. n (i. e.) My progenitors, for all the successive Generations of Israel make one body, and are sometimes spoken of as one person. o Either, 1. The Egyptian Language, which at first was very ungrateful and unknown to the Israelites, Gen. 42. 23. and probably continued so for some considerable time, because they were much separated both in place and conversation from the Egyptians through Joseph's pious and prudent design. This Exposition is confirmed from Psal. 114. 1. where this very thing is mentioned as an aggravation of their misery; and from other places of Scripture where this is spoken of as a curse and plague to be with a people of strange Language, as Deut. 28. 49. Jer. 5. 15.

*Ps. 50. 7. 8 * Hear, O my people, and I will testifie unto thee t: O Israel, if thou wilt hearken unto me;

9 There shall no strange God be in thee: neither shalt thou worship any strange God u.

u Thou shalt renounce all false Gods and worships, and worship me onely.

10 I am the LORD thy God which brought thee out of the land of Egypt: open thy mouth wide x, and I will fill it y.

x Either, 1. To pray for mercies. Ask freely and abundantly and boldly (as this Phrase oft signifies) whatsoever you need, or in reason can desire. Or, 2. To receive the mercies which I am ready to give you. y I will give or grant them all, upon condition of your obedience.

11 But my people would not hearken to my voice; and Israel would none of me z.

z Or, did not assent to me, or acquiesce in me, or obey me, or my commands.

a Upon their obstinate and oft-repeated Rebellions and Rejections of my Grace and Mercy offered to them I withdrew all the restraints of my providence and my Holy Spirit and Grace from them, and wholly left them to follow their own vain and foolish imaginations and wicked lusts. b They practised those things both in common conversation and in religious Worship which were most agreeable not to my commands or counsels, but to their own fancies and inclinations, as appeared in the Golden Calf and many other things.

13 * O that my people had hearkened unto me, and Israel had walked in my ways!

d All the haters and enemies of God's people, as the neighbouring Nations were; whom he calls haters of God, partly because they hated the Israelites for God's sake, and for the singularity of their Religious Worship, as the Heathen oft declared: and partly to shew the strict League and Union which was betwixt God and them, by vertue whereof God had declared all their Friends and Enemies to be his own, which was a great aggravation of their wickedness. e Should have professed and owned their subjection to them. For the Verb and transient action, but their constant course. o Either, 1. In ignorance: Or, 2. In their sinful and unrighteous courses, as darkness is taken Eph. 4. 17, 18. and 5. 8. 1 John 1. 6. Being blinded by their corrupt affections and interests, Exod. 23. 8. p This corruption of the supreme Rulers doth flow from them to their inferior Officers and Members, and manifestly tends to the dissolution of all Civil Societies, partly by subverting that order and honesty by which they are supported; and partly by provoking God the Governour of the World to destroy them for their wickedness.

16 * I have said, Ye are gods q, and all of you r are children of the most High s.

q I have given you my Name and Power to rule your People in my stead. r Not only the Rulers of Israel, but of all other Nations; for all powers are ordained by God, Rom. 13. 1. s Representing my Person, and bearing both my Name and lively Characters of my Majesty and Authority, as Children bear the Name and Image of their Parents.

17 But ye shall die t like men u, and fall like one of the princes x.

t But let not this make you insolent and secure; for though you are gods by Name and Office, yet still you are mortal men, you must die and give up your account to me your superiour Lord and Governour; and you shall die and fall by the hands of my Justice, if you persist in your unjust and ungodly courses. u Or, like ordinary men, as the Hebrew word, Adam, sometimes signifies; as it doth Psal. 49. 2. If it be objected, that there Adam is opposed to Ish, which notes persons of an higher rank; in like manner it is here opposed to the same sort of men, who are here called gods. x So the sense is, You (who are esteemed by your selves and others, gods upon earth) shall fall (or die, as he said in the former branch: falling being oft put for dying, with this addition that it notes not an ordinary, but a violent and judicial death, as Exod. 19. 21. Jer. 39. 18. Hosea 5. 5.) like one (or like other, or others, as this very word is rendred, Judg. 16. 7, 11. which also is expounded there, Ver. 17. like every or any) of the princes (i. e.) as other unrighteous or tyrannical Rulers have done in all foregoing Ages, and still do, your eyes seeing it; even in like manner shall you, to whom now I speak, fall and perish, if you do not learn by their Examples. But these words are by some late Learned Interpreters translated otherwise, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew words and accents, And you, O ye princes (or you that are princes, before called gods) shall fall like one or like every or any of them, (i. e.) of the ordinary men last mentioned. So there is only an Ellipsis of the Pronoun, which is frequent in the Hebrew Language. Or, shall fall together, as this word is translated, Ezra 2. 64. and 3. 9. or alike, as it is rendred Eccles. 11. 6. in like manner, to wit, as ordinary men do. Your god-head shall be taken away from you, and your death shall shew you to be but mortal men as others are.

y Seeing the state of the World is so universally corrupt and desperate, and thy Vicegerents betray their trust, and oppress and ruine the Nations of the Earth, whom they were appointed to preserve, do thou therefore, O God, take the sword of Justice into thine own hand, and maintain the cause and rights of the oppressed against their potent Oppressors, and let Truth and Justice be established in all the parts of the Earth. z For as thou wast the Creator, so thou still art the supreme and unquestionable Lord and Possessor and Ruler of all Nations, and therefore do thou protect and refuse them from all those who invade thine and their rights. And although at present thou seemest in some sort to confine thy care to Israel, and to neglect other Nations, yet there is a time coming when thou wilt bring all Nations to the knowledge of thy self, and the obedience of thy Laws, and govern them by thy Son and Spirit which thou wilt send into the World for that purpose. Do thou therefore preserve them in the mean time till that blessed day cometh, and hasten the coming of it.

PSAL. LXXXII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm contains an Admonition either 1. To the chief Rulers of Israel, whether Judges or Kings, or their great Council called the Sanhedrim. Or rather, 2. To all the Rulers of the several Nations of the World, to whom this word might come; as may be gathered partly from the expressions here used, which are general and not peculiar to the Governours of Israel, and therefore not rashly and unnecessarily to be restrained; and partly from the last Verse, where he mentions the whole earth and all nations, as concerned in the Contents of this Psalm.

A Psalm || of Asaph.

|| Or, for Asaph.

The Psalmist exhorting and expostulating with the Judges, 1——4, reproveth their want of Judgment and Negligence, 5——7. and prayeth the Lord to judge, 8.

1 GOd standeth a in the congregation of † the mighty b: he judgeth c among the gods d.

† Heb. God. Ps. 89. 7. & 95. 3.

a As a Judge diligently to observe all that is said or done there; and to give sentence accordingly. The Judge sits when he heareth Causes, but standeth up when he giveth sentence. Or standing doth not note the posture; but onely the being or presence of a person, as Isa. 11. 10. Dan. 11. 20. John 3. 29. Whence this Hebrew Word is by some learned Interpreters rendred, is present, and by others, presideth, as this word is used, 1 Sam. 19. 20. and 22. 9. b Or, of the gods, as it is explained and expressed in the next Clause; the singular number being here, as it is frequently elsewhere, put for the plural. By Gods, or the mighty, he understands Kings, or other chief Rulers, who are so called because they have their power and commission from God, and act as his Deputies in his name and stead, and must give an account to him of all their Actions. And by their congregation he understands not a convention or assembly of such persons which seldom meet together, but either 1. All Congregations or Assemblies of People in which Magistrates sit to execute Justice. Or, 2. All persons whatsoever of this high and sacred Order or Number: for the Hebrew Word here rendred congregation, doth not always signifie an Assembly of persons met together in one place, but sometimes notes all the particular persons of or belonging to such a sort and body of men, though dispersed in divers places, as Psal. 26. 5. I have hated the congregation of evil doers, (i. e.) all evil doers. Prov. 21. 16. he shall remain in the congregation of the dead, (i. e.) shall be one of that number and state. See also Jos. 22. 20. Psal. 74. 19. Some render it as it is in the Hebrew, in the congregation of God, in his own Congregation, the Noun being put for the Pronoun, as is usual in the Hebrew Text, (i. e.) in the Conventions or Tribunals of Princes or Rulers, which he rightly calls his, because their authority is wholly derived from him. But the former Exposition seems more agreeable both to the following words, and to the scope and whole Body of the Psalm. c Accurately observeth all their carriages, and passeth sentence upon them accordingly. d (i. e.) Judges and Magistrates, who are called gods below, Verse 6. and Exod. 12. 12. and 22. 28. compared with Acts 23. 5. Psal. 138. 1. and of whom this is expounded, John 10. 34, 35.

Deut. 1. 17. Chron. 19. 6, 7.

2 How long will ye judge unjustly e, and * accept the persons f of the wicked! Selah.

e The Psalmist speaketh to them in Gods Name, and reproves them for their continued and resolved unrighteousness in their publick administrations. f By over-looking the merits of the cause, and giving sentence according to your respect or affection to the person.

Heb. lift. Pr. 24. 11

3 † Defend the poor and fatherless g: do justice to h the afflicted and needy.

g So far as justly you may; as this Clause must be limited by comparing this with Lev. 19. 15. h Heb. Justifie, to wit, when his cause is just, and he is oppressed by a potent Adversary.

4 * Deliver the poor and needy i: rid them out of the hand of the wicked.

i These he recommends to the special care and protection of Magistrates, because such are commonly neglected and crushed by men in higher place and power, and they are unable to right themselves.

Heb. words.

5 They k know not l, neither will they understand m; they walk on n in darkness o: all the foundations of the earth are † out of course p.

k The Magistrates of whom this Psalm treats. l To wit, the truth and right of the cause, nor the duty of their place. Men are oft said in Scripture not to know what they do not love and practice. m This their ignorance is wilful and affected: they will not search out the truth, and they shut their eyes lest they should see what they would not. n They persist and proceed: it is not one rash and transient action, but their constant course. o Either, 1. In ignorance: Or, 2. In their sinful and unrighteous courses, as darkness is taken Eph. 4. 17, 18. and 5. 8. 1 John 1. 6. Your god-head shall be taken away from you, and your death shall shew you to be but mortal men as others are.

y Seeing the state of the World is so universally corrupt and desperate, and thy Vicegerents betray their trust, and oppress and ruine the Nations of the Earth, whom they were appointed to preserve, do thou therefore, O God, take the sword of Justice into thine own hand, and maintain the cause and rights of the oppressed against their potent Oppressors, and let Truth and Justice be established in all the parts of the Earth. z For as thou wast the Creator, so thou still art the supreme and unquestionable Lord and Possessor and Ruler of all Nations, and therefore do thou protect and refuse them from all those who invade thine and their rights. And although at present thou seemest in some sort to confine thy care to Israel, and to neglect other Nations, yet there is a time coming when thou wilt bring all Nations to the knowledge of thy self, and the obedience of thy Laws, and govern them by thy Son and Spirit which thou wilt send into the World for that purpose. Do thou therefore preserve them in the mean time till that blessed day cometh, and hasten the coming of it.

PSAL. LXXXIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THe occasion of the Psalm is manifest from the body of it; and it seems to have been a dangerous attempt and conspiracy of divers Neighbouring Nations against Israel or Judah. Probably it was that which is mentioned 2 Chron. 20. wherein all the people here mentioned might be engaged, though all of them be not there expressed; this being usual in the sacred Historians for the latter to record some passages which the former omitted. Or it may belong to some other History. Or it may have a more general respect unto the several Enterprizes and Combinations of all these people against them, some at one time, and some at another.

PSAL. LXXXIV.

The ARGUMENT.

THE Author of this Pſalm seems to have been David, partly because it is ascribed to no other, and partly because it is most agreeable to his Style and Condition, and the occasion of it, his banishment or absence from the place of Gods Worship: Either, 1. In Sauls time, which suits not with ver. 7. for then the Tabernacle was not in Zion. Or rather, 2. During Abſaloms Rebellion.

1 HOw amiable are thy tabernacles a, O LORD of hoſts.

a Thy Tabernacle, called Tabernacles; either 1. Because it consisted of several parts: Or 2. To note its excellency; as Behemoth or Beaſts is put for one eminent Beaſt, Job 40. 15. and Wiſdome for excellent Wisdom, Prov. 1. 20.

* Pſal. 42. 1, 2. & 63. 1. 2 * My ſoul longeth, yea, even fainteth b for the courts c of the LORD: my heart and my fleſh crieth out d for the living God.

b Or, is conſumed, with grief for want of them, and with vehement desire to enjoy them, and with the deferring and disappointment of his hopes. See Prov. 13. 12. c To enter into the outward Court with the People, and to see what is done by the Priests in the inner Court, and to joyn with them in their Religious Exercises. d With a doleful cry, of which this word is used also, Lam. 2. 19. which elsewhere and commonly signifies a joyful shout. The sense is, my Soul and Body are pained; or the passion of my Heart maketh my Tongue cry out.

3 Yea, the ſparrow hath found an houſe e, and the ſwallow a neſt for her ſelf, where ſhe may lay her young, even thine altar f, O LORD of hoſts, my king, and my God.

c (i. e.) An habitation, to wit, a nest, as it here followeth. f Or nigh (as this Hebrew Particle eth is elsewhere used, and as it is rendred by the Septuagint and the Chaldee, Judg. 4. 11.) thine Altar, Heb. Altars, that of Burnt-Offerings, and the other of Incense. At, or near which these Birds might well and truly be said to have their Nests, because they were either in some part of the Tabernacle or Temple in which the Altars were; or in some buildings belonging, or near at least to it.

4 Bleſſed are they that dwell in thy houſe g: they will be ſtill praiſing thee h. Selah.

g That constantly or frequently resort to and abide in thy house; either the Priests and Levites, who kept continual watch there; or other devout Jews who were there perpetually, as Anna, Luke 2. 37. h For they are continually employed in that blessed and glorious work of praising and serving thee in the place which thou hast appointed for that end.

5 Bleſſed is the man whoſe ſtrength is in thee i: in whoſe heart are the ways of them k, i Who trusteth in thee as his only strength and refuge and portion. Or, who hath ſtrength in (or rather for, as the Hebrew prefix Beth is frequently used, as hath been noted again and again) thee (i. e) who hath (or who useth: for having is sometimes put for using; of which see Mat. 13. 12. 1 Cor. 7. 2.) ability of Body and Mind for thee, and for thy service; or for that Journey which here he seems to insinuate, and in the following Words and Verses he particularly describes. For it must be considered that all the Males of Israel were obliged to come to the Tabernacle or Temple thrice in a year, Exod. 34. 23, 24. and that some of them lived at a great distance, and consequently were to take a long and troublesome Journey, which also might at some times and places be accompanied with hazards and other inconveniences; and therefore such as wanted either courage or bodily strength might be discouraged or hindred from undertaking it, and from the enjoyment of God in his solemn and publick Worship. Which though in some cases it might not be their sin, yet surely it was a great affliction and infelicity; and consequently it was a blessed thing to be freed from those impediments, as the Psalmist here observes. k (i. e.) Of those men; for though man be the singular number, it is understood collectively of all that sort or company of men. But these words of them, are not in the Hebrew, and as some Learned Men have observed, seem to disturb or darken the sense. Others therefore seem to render the words better and more agreeably to the Hebrew Text, in whoſe heart are thy (which Pronoun is oft understood) ways, to wit, those ways which lead to thy house; or, the ways, so called emphatically, or by way of eminency, the ways of (or, to) Zion, as they are called Lam. 1. 4.) as is evident from the seventh Verse of this Psalm. So the meaning is, Blessed are they whose thoughts and affections are much and strongly fixed upon the high ways, and their journeys to Zion, who have both strength of Body, as is said in their former branch, and readiness of Heart, as is here added, to go to Zion; which are the two qualifications requisite for that journey. Blessed are they whose Hearts are set upon Zion and their journeys thither; that are continually, or from time to time stirring up, and bespeaking themselves and others as they did, Jer. 31. 6. Ariſe ye, let us go up to Zion unto the Lord our God. As when a Mans Heart is knit in true friendship to one that lives at some distance from him, he is oft thinking with great desire and delight of the place where he dwelleth, and of the way leading to it.

6 Who paſſing l through the valley || of Baca m, make it a well n: the rain alſo † filleth the pools o.

l Or, being used to paſs; for he seems not to speak of one particular act, but of a common course or custom. m A place so called, which some Jewish and other Writers affirm to have been a very dry place, and therefore incommodious for Travellers in those hot Countries, and in hot Seasons. Which place may be here mentioned not exclusively to other ways and passages, for this high way being but one, and on one side of Jeruſalem, could not be a general way for all the Israelites thither, but Synecdochically for all places of like nature, which made their journey to Jeruſalem unpleasant or inconvenient. But their zeal for Gods service did easily overcome this and other difficulties. Or, the valley of tears, as this valley might be called for the trouble or vexation which Travellers found there by reason of drought, or otherwise. n Or, wells, (i. e.) they dig divers little pits or wells in it for their relief. This trouble they willingly undertook rather than to neglect the opportunity of going up to Jeruſalem at their solemn times. And possibly they did this, not only for themselves, but for the benefit of other Travellers who came after them; whereby they shewed both their Piety and Charity. o God recompenseth their diligence in making pits, or little pools, or cisterns, with his Blessing, sending Rain wherewith they may be filled, and the thirsty Travellers refreshed. Possibly the words may be thus rendred, which is more agreeable to the order of the Hebrew Text, yea, or alſo (and so the Hebrew Particle Gam, hath that emphasis, which, as some Learned Interpreters observe, is not given to it in other Translations. They do not only make little pits or wells, as it was now said, but alſo) pools or cisterns (for this Hebrew word is by the Learned readred both ways) which, so the Relative Particle is to be understood, as it is very frequently in many Texts of Scripture) the rain filleth, or may fill, (i. e.) which may receive and keep the Rain which God sendeth for the refreshment of these Travellers, whose great numbers made the provision of water more necessary. But it is not necessary to understand this and the foregoing Clause of what these Passengers did for their own use, as they travelled through this or such like places, but it may be meant of what pious persons did before that time, who, having their Hearts set upon Gods House, and the pathways leading to it, as was said ver. 5. and being desirous to advance the Worship of God, and to encourage the people to come to Jeruſalem, endeavoured to make those ways (some parts whereof were very incommodious) easie and convenient; and particularly, because those Eastern Countries were hot and dry, and springs of water were scarce there; as we may learn from Gen. 26. 15. and Judg. 1. 15. and many other passages of Sacred Scripture and other Authors, which was a great annoyance to Travellers, they made these pits and pools or cisterns in such places where they were most necessary, and through which great numbers of people passed in their journey to the House of God.

7 They go || from ſtrength to ſtrength p; † every one of them in Zion appeareth before God q.

|| Or, from company to company. † Heb. the God of gods ſhall be in Zion. So Gr.

p The further they travel onward in that way, instead of being faint and weary as Travellers in such cases use to be, they grow stronger and stronger, being greatly refreshed with the comfortable end of their journey expressed in the following words. Or, they go from company to company. For they used to travel in Troops or Companies for many reasons, and some Companies were before others, accordingly as they were nearer to the place of Worship, or more diligent or expeditious in their travel. And such as were most zealous would use their utmost endeavours to out-strip others, and to overtake one company of Travellers after another, that so they might come with the first unto God in Zion. q This is here added as the blessed design and fruit of their long and tedious Journey, as that which put Life into them, and made them bear all inconveniences with great chearfulness, they are all graciously admitted into the presence of God in Zion. But the words are and may be otherwise rendred, until every one of them appear before the God of gods in Zion. Or, The God of gods ſhall be ſeen (or uſeth to appear, or manifeſt himſelf: for the Future Tense oft notes the continuance of the action) in Zion. Which is mentioned in the close as the reason of that affection and industry, which is described in the foregoing passages.

8 O LORD God of hoſts r hear my prayer s: give ear, O God of Jacob. Selah.

r Who canst easily remove and subdue those enemies of mine who banish and keep me from the place of thy Worship. s In restoring me to thy House and Service; which is my chief desire, ver. 2, 3.

9 Behold, O God our ſhield, and look upon the face t of thine anointed u.

t Do not turn away thine eyes from him as men do from those whom they hate or despise, but cast a favourable eye towards him. By face he means either his person, the word face being oft redundant, as it is Gen. 43. 3. or his state and condition. u Either, 1. Of Christ, whose proper name is the Meſſiah, or the anointed. So the meaning may be, Lord, I deserve not one good look from thee, because by my great wickedness I have procured thy just displeasure, and this banishment; but look upon thy Christ, whose coming and meritorious passion, though future to us, is present to thee, and for his sake look upon me. Or, 2. Of me who, though a vile Sinner, am thine anointed King, 2 Sam. 12. 7. and 23. 1.

Heb. I ſaid in my haſte. Or, in my fear. † Or, I chuſe rather to ſit at the threſhold.

x Understand elsewhere; which is necessary to compleat the sense: Or, in the tents of wickedneſs; which may be supplied out of the next Clause. Such Ellipses are usual in Scripture, as Pſal. 91. 7. at thy ſide, (i. e.) left side, Prov. 19. 1, &c. y Which was generally held a mean and contemptible Office, and belonged to the common Levites, 1 Chron. 9. 19. and 26. 1. and therefore might seem very dishonourable for David. z Than to live in the greatest glory and plenty and pleasure; which is ordinarily the lot of wicked men, as David observed before, Pſal. 17. 14. and 73. 6, 7. and elsewhere.

Which Clause David seems, to me, to add designedly to prevent or remove an Objection against what he had now said, which might be taken from his own case, whereby it appeared that God was no such sun or shield to him, but exposed him to great and fore calamities. Which being certain and evident, David here assigns the true reason of it, which was not from any defect in Gods goodness and sufficiency, but only from his own gross miscarriages whereby he had clouded this sun, and cast away this shield, and forfeited these priviledges by departing from his integrity.

PSAL. LXXXV.

The ARGUMENT.

THIS Pſalm is thought to have been made after the Peoples return from the Babylonish Captivity; wherein he partly gives God thanks for that glorious deliverance; and partly implores Gods Mercy in compleating that work, and rescuing his People from the relicks of their Bondage, and from the vexation which they had by their Neighbours after they were returned to Canaan.

Heb. 12. 1. 2 * Thou haſt forgiven the iniquity of thy people; thou haſt covered all their ſin c. Selah.

c So as not to impute it to them, or to continue the punishment which thou didst inflict upon them for it.

Or, thou haſt turned away thy fierce anger from the wrath of thy anger.

3 Thou haſt taken away all thy wrath d: || thou haſt turned thy ſelf from the fierceneſs of thine anger.

d Those Calamities which were the effects of thy just wrath conceived against us.

4 Turn us e, O God of our ſalvation, and cauſe thine anger towards us to ceaſe f.

e Either, 1. Convert us. As thou hast brought back our Bodies to thy Land, so bring back our Hearts to thy self, from whom many of them to this day are alienated. Or rather, 2. Restore us to our former tranquillity, and free us from the troubles which we yet groan under from our malicious Neighbours and Enemies. For this best suits with the following Clause of the Verse, which commonly explains the former. f He prudently indeavours to take away the root and cause of their continued miseries, to wit, Gods anger procured by their sins.

5 Wilt thou be angry with us for ever? wilt thou draw out thine anger to all generations?

6 Wilt thou not revive us again g, that thy people may rejoyce in thee?

g Thou hast once revived us in bringing us out of Captivity, give us a second reviving in bringing home the rest of our Brethren, and in rebuking and restraining the remainder of our Enemies wrath.

7 Shew us h thy mercy, O LORD, and grant us thy ſalvation.

h (i. e.) Grant it to us, as the next words explain it, and as ſhewing signifies, Pſal. 4. 6. so also Pſal. 60. 3. and 71. 20. Or, manifest thy secret purpose of mercy to us by thy Providential Dispensations.

8 I will hear i what God the LORD will ſpeak k: for * he will ſpeak peace l unto his people, and to his * Zech. 9. 10. ſaints m: but let them not turn again to folly n.

i (i. e.) Diligently observe: And the Psalmist by declaring what he would do, teacheth all the Israelites what they ought to do. Or he speaks in the name of all the People of God. k Either by his Prophets or Messengers; or by the works of his Providence; for that also hath a voice. What answer God will give to these my Prayers. l For I am assured from Gods gracious nature and declared will and promise, that he will give an answer of peace. m Which Clause seems to be added by way of explication and restriction, to shew that this glorious priviledge did not belong to all that were called Gods people, but only to those that were truly and really such, even to his ſaints or holy ones. n (i. e.) To sin, which in Scripture is commonly called folly. This is added as a necessary caution: but when God shall speak peace to his people, let them not grow wanton and secure, nor return to their former wicked courses; which if they do, they will provoke God to repent of his kindness to them, and to inflict further and forer Judgments upon them. Others render the place, And they will not, or that they may not return to folly. But the Particle al being prohibitive, our Translation seems to be better.

9 Surely his ſalvation o is nigh them that fear him p: that * glory may dwell in our land q. * Zec. 2. 8.

o That compleat salvation and deliverance for which all the Israel of God do pray and wait; even the Redemption of Israel by the Meſſiah; of which not only Christian, but even Jewish Writers understand this place; and to which the following passages do most properly and perfectly belong. And the Psalmist might well say of this Salvation that it was nigh, because the seventy weeks determined by Daniel for this work, chap. 9. 24. were now begun, this Psalm being written after Daniels time. p The true Israel of God, even all those that love and fear him. By which words he both excludes all hypocritical Israelites from this Salvation, and tacitly assigns it to all that fear God, whether Jews or Gentiles. q And when that Salvation shall come we shall be freed from all that scorn and contempt under which we now groan, and shall recover our ancient Glory; and the glorious presence of God, the most eminent tokens whereof we have now utterly lost; and the God of Glory himself, even Christ, who is called the brightneſs of his Fathers glory, Heb. 1. 3. compare John 1. 14. and the glory of Israel, Luke 2. 32. shall come and visibly dwell in this now despised Land.

r This is to be understood, either, 1. Of these Graces or Vertues in Men. So the sense is, when that blessed time shall come, those Vertues which now seem to be banished from Humane Societies, shall be restored, and there shall be an happy conjunction of mercy or benignity; truth or veracity; righteouſneſs or faithfulness; and peace or peaceablenes and concord. Or rather, 2. Of the Blessings of God, of which the whole Context speaks. And the sense is, That great Work of Redemption by Christ shall clearly manifest and demonstrate Gods mercy in redeeming his People of Israel, and in the calling and conversion of the Gentiles; his truth in fulfilling that great promise of the sending of his Son, which is the foundation of all the rest; his righteouſneſs in punishing sin, or unrighteousness in his Son, and in conferring righteousness upon guilty and lost creatures; and his peace or reconciliation to sinners, and that peace of Conscience which attends upon it. s As Friends use to do when they meet. See Exod. 4. 27. and 18. 7. So this is another expression of the same thing.

11 Truth ſhall ſpring out of the earth t: and righteouſneſs ſhall look down from heaven u.

t Either, 1. Truth among men, which shall be so common amongst all men, as if it grew out of the earth. Or rather, 2. The truth or faithfulness of God; which is most truly and fitly said to ſpring out of the earth, partly because it had long been hid and buried like a root in a dry ground, without any hopes of a reviving; from whence yet God made it to grow, as is noted, Iſa. 53. 2. and partly because Christ, who is the truth, John 14. 6. and a miniſter of the circumciſion, (i. e. of the Circumcised, or of the Jews) for the truth of God to confirm the promiſes made unto the Fathers, was born upon the earth of a Virgins Womb. u Even Gods Justice, which was offended with Men, shall then be satisfied, and shall through Christ look down upon sinful men with a reconciled and smiling Countenance.

12 Yea, the LORD ſhall give that which is good x; and * our land ſhall yield her increaſe. * Pſ. 67. 6.

x (i. e.) All that is good in it self and for us, all Spiritual and Temporal Blessings.

*Ps.89.14. † Heb. her steps in the way, or his steps in the way. So Gr.

13 * Righteousness shall go before him y, and shall † set us in the way of his steps z.

y As his Harbenger or Attendant. He shall work and fulfil all Righteousness, he shall glorifie and satisfie the Righteousness of God, and shall advance the practice of Righteousness and Holiness among Men. z (i. e.) Shall cause us to walk in those righteous ways wherein he walketh, and which he hath prescribed to us. But this w is not in the Hebrew, and may seem too liberal a supplement. And the words may be, and are by almost all other Interpreters rendred otherwise, He (i. e. God) shall set (which may note his stability and constancy in so doing) it (to wit, righteousness last mentioned) in the way of his steps, (i. e.) in the way wherein he walketh. So the sense of this last Clause is the same for substance with the former, as is very usual in this Book; Righteousness in that Clause goes before him, and in this it goes along with him.

PSAL. LXXXVI.

‖ A Prayer of David a.

‖ Or, a prayer, being a Psalm of David.

a When he was in some deep distress, either from Saul, or by Absalom, or upon some other occasion.

David strengthened himself in Prayer by the Truth of his Religion, 1—4. And by Gods goodness and his readiness to hear, 5—10. Desireth the continuance of his Grace, 11—13. Complaining of his proud Enemies, he entreateth for some token of his Love, to their shame and confusion, 14—17.

1 BOw down thine ear, O LORD; hear me, for I am poor and needy b.

b Forsaken and persecuted by men, and utterly unable to save my self, and therefore a very proper object for thy power and goodness to work upon.

2 Preserve my soul, for I am ‖ holy c: O thou my God d, save thy servant that trusteth in thee e.

c Sanctified in some measure by thy Grace, and sincerely devoted to thy service. This David speaks, not in a way of vain ostentation, but partly as a powerful argument to move God to hear his Prayers, because he was one of that sort of men to whom God had engaged himself by his Promise and Covenant; and partly by way of just and necessary vindication of himself from the censures of his Enemies who represented him to the World, as a grosse dissembler, and secretly a very wicked man; concerning which he here makes a solemn appeal to God, desiring audience and help from God, upon no other terms, than upon this supposition, that he was an holy man. Which, by the way, favoureth of no more arrogancy than when he elsewhere professeth his great love to and longing after God, his sincere Obedience to all Gods Commands, and his hatred of every false way, and the like. d By thy Covenant, and my own choice. e Whereby thou hast obliged in honour, and by promise to help me.

3 Be merciful unto me, O LORD: for I cry unto ‖ thee ‖ daily.

‖ Or, all the day.

4 Rejoyce the soul of thy servant: for unto thee, O LORD, do I lift up my soul f.

f The expression notes fervent desire joyned with hope or expectation, as appears by comparing Deut. 24. 15. Jer. 22. 27.

* Ver. 15. Joel 2. 13.

5 * For thou, LORD, art good and ready to forgive g, and plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee h.

g Herewith he relieveth himself under the sense of his guilt, whereby he had brought his present calamities upon himself. h To wit, in truth, as it is explained Psal. 145. 18. or with an upright heart: for if a man regard iniquity in his heart, God will not hear him, Psal. 66. 18.

6 Give ear, O LORD, unto my prayer, and attend to the voice of my supplications i.

i He repeats and multiplies his requests both to ease his own troubled mind, and to prevail with God, who is well pleased with his Peoples importunity in Prayer. See Luke 18. 1, &c.

*Ps.50.15.

7 * In the day of my trouble I will call upon thee: for thou wilt answer me k.

k Whereof I have assurance both from the benignity of thy Nature, and from the truth and certainty of thy Promises, and from my own and others experiences in former times.

8 Among the gods there is none like unto thee l, O LORD; * neither are there any works like unto thy works.

* Exod. 15. 11. Deut. 3. 24 Psal. 89. 6.

l Either for power or readiness to hear and answer Prayers. I am not now calling upon a deaf and impotent Idol, for then I might cry my heart out, and all in vain, as they did, 1 Kings 18. 26, &c. but upon the Almighty and most gracious God.

9 All nations whom thou hast made, shall come and worship before thee, O LORD: and shall glorifie thy name m.

m So true is that which I have now said of thee, ver. 8. that the time is coming when all the Nations of the Earth shall acknowledge it, and, forsaking their impotent Idols, shall worship thee alone. Which being a work of thy Power and Grace clearly proves that no God is like to thee, and no works like thine. And those words, whom thou hast made, are added to prevent or remove Objections concerning the insuperable difficulty and incredibility of this work. The God, saith he, that made them can easily convince and convert them to himself.

*Ps.72.18. & 77. 14. *Deut.6.4 & 32. 39. Isa. 37.16. & 44. 6. Mar.12.29

10 For thou art great, and * dost wondrous things n: * thou art God alone o.

1 Cor.8.4. Eph. 4. 6.

n This is added as a reason either why the Nations should own the true God, because they should see his wonderful Works; or why that great work, ver. 9. was not incredible, but should certainly be accomplished. o And all the Idols of the Heathen are no gods, but vanities; as the Gentiles themselves shall see and acknowledge.

11 * Teach me thy way p, O LORD, I will walk in thy truth q: unite my heart r to fear thy name.

* Ps. 25.4. & 119.33. & 143. 8.

p Wherein thou wouldst have me to walk. As thou hast taught me by thy Word, so also by thy Spirit enlighten my mind that I may clearly discern thy Will and my Duty in all Conditions and Circumstances. q In the way of thy Precepts which are true and right in all things, as he saith Psal. 119. 128. and the only true Rule of thy Worship. and the only true way to Mans Happiness. r Ingage and knit my whole heart to thy self and service, and deliver me from inconstancy and wavering, that I may not at any time, nor in the least degree be withdrawn from thee either to any corrupt Worship, or to the love and pursuit of the lusts or vanities of this present evil World.

12 I will praise thee, O LORD my God, with all my heart: and I will glorifie thy name for evermore s.

s Either, 1. If thou grantest my request, ver. 11. Or, 2. Because thou hast done what is expressed ver. 13.

13 For great is thy mercy toward me, and thou hast delivered my soul t from † the lowest hell u.

† Heb. Hell beneath. Pr. 16. 10.

t My person or life, as in the next Verse. u Either, 1. From Hell properly so called. Or rather, 2. From extreme and desperate dangers and miseries; by comparing this with Deut. 32. 22. and with Psal. 88. 6. Thou hast laid me in the lowest (the same word in the Hebrew which is here) pit. Where by the pit he means, as is evident and confessed, the grave, which is commonly called Sheol, the word here used.

14 O God, * the proud are risen against me, and the assemblies of † violent men have sought after my soul, and have not set thee before them x.

* Ps. 54.3. † Heb. terrible.

x They have no reverence nor regard for thee, neither for thy Word which hath conferred the Kingdom upon me; nor for thine all-seeing Eye which beholds all their wicked devices and practices against me; nor for thy Justice which will undoubtedly bring their mischief upon their own heads.

15 * But thou, O LORD, art a God full of compassion, and gracious: long-suffering and plenteous in mercy y and truth.

* Exod. 34. 6. Nu. 14. 18. Neh. 9. 17. Ps. 103. 8. & 145. 8. Joel 2. 13. Ver. 5.

y To wit, to thy People, and to me in particular; and therefore thou wilt set forget and forgive my manifold sins for which thou mightest justly reject me, and make me to know thy breach of Promise; and therefore thou wilt save me from my cruel Enemies.

16 O turn unto me, and have mercy upon me: give thy strength z unto thy servant, and save * the son of thine handmaid ‖.

* Ps. 116. 16.

z To assist, support and save me. ‖ Me, who by thy gracious Providence was born not of Heathen, but of Israelitish Parents, and therefore was in Covenant with thee from my Birth, and whose Mother was thy faithful Servant, and did intirely devote me to thy Service.

17 Shew me a token for good, † that they which hate me may see it, and be ashamed; because thou, LORD, hast holpen me, and comforted me.

† Vouchsafe unto me some evident and eminent token of thy good will to me, for the conviction of mine Enemies, and mine own comfort.

PSAL. LXXXVII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm was doubtless Compos'd after the Building of the Temple; and as Learned Men think, and it seems probable, when the People were newly returned out of Babylon, and laboured under many Discouragements about the return of most of their Brethren, and the Difficulties which they met with in the rebuilding of their Temple and City.

A Psalm or Song ‖ for the sons of Korah.

‖ Or, of.

The Prophet speaketh of the Nature and Glory of the Church, and Gods love to it, 1—3. Of the Increase, Honour and Comfort of the Members thereof, 4—7.

* Ps. 48. 1.

1 HIS foundation a is * in the holy mountains b.

a Whose Foundation? Either, 1. The foundation, (i. e.) the argument or matter of this Psalm or Song. So these words are thought to be a part of the Title, the words lying thus in the Hebrew Text, For the Sons of Korah a Psalm or Song whose foundation is in the holy mountains. But 1. The Hebrew word rendred foundation is no where used in that sense. 2. There is no example of any such like Title in the Book of the Psalms. Or rather, 2. Of the City or Temple of God, of which he speaks in the following Verses. And whereas the beginning is somewhat abrupt, which seems to be the only ground of the foregoing Exposition, that is no unusual thing in Scripture, and the Pronoun Relative, such as this is, is to be fetched out of the following Words or Verses: As Numb. 24. 17. I shall see him, or it, to wit, the Star, which follows afterward; Psal. 105. 19. his word, (i. e.) the Lords, Prov. 7. 8. to her house, (i. e.) the Harlots, mentioned ver. 10. And especially Cant. 1. 2. Let him kiss, to wit, my beloved, who is there understood, but not expressed, till ver. 14. And the ground of that abrupt and imperfect speech there seems to be the same with this here: for as the Church was there in deep meditation, and a great passion about her beloved, which caused that abruptnes of speech, which is usual in such cases, so the Psalmists thoughts were strongly fixed upon the Temple and City of God; and therefore this Relative tive his had a certain Antecedent in his thoughts, though not in his words. The word foundations may possibly be emphatical, because this Psalm might probably be compos'd when the foundations of the second Temple were newly laid, and the old men who had seen the glory of the former House were dejected at the sight of this, of which see Ezra 3. 12, 12. And so the meaning of this passage may be this, Be not discouraged, oh ye Jews, that your Temple is not yet erected and built, but onely the foundations of it laid, and those too are mean and obscure in comparison of the Magnificence of your former Temple, but take comfort in this, that your Temple hath its foundations laid, and those sure and firm, sure in themselves, because they are not laid in the sand, nor in boggy or fenny grounds, but in the mountains; and sure by divine establishment, because those mountains are holy, consecrated to God, and therefore maintained and established by him. Or, he may use this word foundations in opposition to the Tabernacle, which was moveable, and without foundations, to note the stability and perpetuity of this Building. b Or, Among, or within the holy mountains, to wit, in Jerusalem, which was encompassed with mountains, Psal. 125. 2. and in which were two famous mountains, to wit, Zion and Moriah. Or the plural Number is here put for the singular, whereof we have seen examples formerly, and mountains are put for the mountain; either for Mount Moriah, upon which the Temple stood: or for Mount Zion, which is mentioned in the next Verse; which is often taken in a large and comprehensive sence, so as to include Moriah; in which sence the Temple is said to be in Zion. Psal. 74. 2. and 76. 2. Isa. 8. 18.

c (i. e.) The City gates being oft put for cities, as Deut. 15. 7. and 16. 5. Psal. 9. 14. d Largely so called, as was now said, to wit, of Jerusalem, which was built upon and near Mount Zion. He saith Zion rather than Jerusalem, to intimate that he loved Jerusalem for Zions sake, or for the Temple which is oft said to be in Zion; which place he loved and chose for his peculiar dwelling place. e More than all other places of the Land of Canaan in which the Israelites dwelt. For although the Tabernacle was for a season in some other parts of the Land, yet the Temple, the place of God's fixed residence. was no where but in this City.

3 Glorious things are spoken of thee, O city of God f Selah.

f O Jerusalem, though thou and thy Temple are yet in some sort in your ruines, and desolate and contemptible not onely to thine enemies, but also in the eyes of thine own People; yet comfort thy self with these great and glorious things foretold concerning thee in the Holy Prophets, as Isa. 62. 1, 7. and 65. 18, &c. and 66. 10, &c. Zech. 1. 14, &c. and 2. 4, 12. and 8. 3, &c. and 12. 2, &c. Among other things, it was foretold that the glory of the latter house should be greater than of the former, Hagg. 2. 9. All which Prophecies are to be understood, as this place also is of a Spiritual and Evangelical Glory accruing to Jerusalem; as by the birth and presence of Christ in it, so also by the accession of all People and Nations to it, of which he speaks in the next Verse.

Isa. 19. 20. & 56. 6.

4 I will make mention g of * Rahab h, and Babylon, to them k that know me l: behold m, Philistia, and Tyre, with Ethiopia n: this man was born there o.

g (i. e.) I will reckon or account them in the number of my Children and Subjects. h (i. e.) Egypt, so called Psal. 89. 10. Isa. 51. 9. but whether from its pride or natural strength, or figure or shape, is not material. i Under these two and Philistia, the old and constant enemies of Israel, he seems to understand all the keenest enemies of the Israel or Church of God, who shall now be not onely reconciled but united to them; which also was foretold under the similitude of the wolfs dwelling with the lamb, &c. Isa. 11. 6. k Or with or among them, as the prefix Lamed is frequently used. l To wit, truly, clearly, affectionately and practically, so as to love, serve and obey me, as this Phrase is very frequently used in Scripture. And upon this account, not onely Heathens, but wicked Israelites are said not to know God, as 1 Sam. 2. 12. and oft elsewhere. m Take notice of it as a thing new and strange and comfortable. n The Nations on every side of them, for Tyrus was on the North, Ethiopia or Arabia (for that seems rather to be meant by Cush, as hath been before observed) on the South, those nearest to them, and those more remote from them, that lived in the uttermost parts of the Earth, as this very Land is called, Mat. 12. 42. o Or, saying this man, &c. for this coheres with the first words thus, I Will make mention of Rahab, &c. saying, this man (i. e. these Men or People now mentioned, the singular number put collectively for the plural; and the Scripture oft speaks of a Nation as of one man, as Psal. 25. 22. and 130. 8.) was born there, or, in her, as it is expressed, Verse 5. to wit, in Zion; born by Adoption and Regeneration. See John 1. 12. and 3. 3, 7. Gal. 3. 26. and 4. 26. 1 Pet. 1. 23. The Gentiles shall be ingrafted into the Jewish Church, and into all their Privileges.

* Ps. 48. 8.

5 And of Zion p it shall be said q, This and that man r was born in her: and the Highest himself shall establish her s.

p (i. e.) Of Jerusalem, or the Church of God. b It shall be mentioned by God, as was said, Verse 4. and it shall be observed and acknowledged by men as a great and wonderful work of God. q (i. e.) Men of this and that Nation, (i. e.) of every Nation, indifferently, Jews or Gentiles, according to that prediction that Egypt and Assyria and Israel should be all joyned together, and blessed and owned by God for his People, Isa. 19. 24, 25. Heb. Man and man, (i. e.) every man or all sorts of men without difference of Nations; as this very Phrase man and man, Lev. 17. 10, 13. is rendred every, or whatsoever man; and as by day and day is meant every day, or from day to day, Est. 3. 4. Psal. 61. 8. r And this shall not be a sudden and transient, but a lasting work; him shall continue in its strength and fertility because the Almighty God is her Founder and Protector, and will finish the work which he hath begun.

6 The LORD shall count when he writeth up the people t, that this man was born there. Selah.

t Or, his people. So it is onely a defect of the Pronoun his, which is very frequent and easily understood out of the foregoing word, the Land. The sence is, when God, the Maker and Governour of this City shall take a survey of all his Citizens and Subjects. It is an allusion to Princes or Governours of Cities that use to write and keep a Register of all their people. Hence holy Men and true Israelites are said to be written among the living in Jerusalem, Isa. 4. 3. Or, in the writing of the house of Israel, Ezek. 13. 9.

7 As well the singers as the players on instruments u shall be there: all my Springs are in thee x.

u There shall be great rejoycing and praising God both with vocal and instrumental musick for this glorious and stupendious work of the Conversion of the Gentiles. He describes Evangelical Worship by Legal Phrases and Customs, as the Prophets frequently do. x (i. e.) in Zion or the Church. These words may be here added as the burden or matter of the Song; which these singers are supposed to have sung, and that either 1. In their own names, and in the name of all the Levites or people of God. So the sence is, all our desires and delights are in thee, all the springs of Mercy, Grace and Glory flow to us onely in and thorow thee: for springs or fountains are oft put for all precious or desirable things, as Psal. 36. 9. Isa. 12. 3. Hos. 13. 15. Or, 2. In God's name, whose words were frequently sung by the singers in the Old Testament. And so the sence is, all the Springs or Fountains of good things, or of my Blessings are in Zion, or in the Church, out of which no true Blessings are to be expected or found. And this seem to be to suit with the Phrase, my Springs; partly, because it seems more proper to call them God's Springs, who is the author and giver of them, than mens Springs who are onely the receivers of them; and partly, because this is more agreeable to the Phrase and Usage of Scripture which every where ascribes and appropriates them to God.

PSAL. LXXXVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm was compos'd upon a particular Occasion, to wit; Heman's deep distress and dejection of mind almost to despair. But though this was the occasion of it, it is of more general use for the instruction and consolation of all good men when they come into such Despondencies, and therefore was by the direction of God's Spirit made publick, and committed to the Sons of Korah.

‖ Or, of. ‖ Or, A Psalm of * Heman c the Ezrahite.

A Song or Psalm ‖ for the sons of Korah, to the chief musician upon Mahalath a, Leannoth b, ‖ Maschil of a Which seems to be the name of the tune or instrument, as Psal. 53. b This may be either the latter part of the proper name of the tune or instrument: or an appellative name, and so divers take it and render it, to sing, or to be sung to wit alternately or by turns. c Probably the same person who was famous in David's time both for his skill in Musick, and for general wisdom: of whom see 1 Kings 4. 31. 1 Chron. 6. 33. d As Ethan also is called 1 Kings 4. 31.

The Psalmist declares his former practice of prayer to God, 1. beggeth present audience, 2. acquainteth the Lord with his misery and frailty, 3, 4. which he suffereth by God's wrath, and his Friends forsaking him, 5——8. his Mourning and Expostulation, 9——18.

1 O LORD God of my salvation e, I have cried day and night before thee.

e Who hast so often saved me from former distresses, and, I hope, wilt yet do so at this time.

2 Let my prayer come before thee; incline thine ear unto my cry.

3 For my soul f is † full of troubles, and my life draweth nigh unto the grave.

f Properly so called; for that he was under great troubles of mind from a sence of God's wrath and departure from him is evident from Verse 14, 15, 16.

4 I am counted with them that go down into the pit g: I am as a man that hath no strength.

g I am given up by my Friends and Acquaintance for a lost man.

5 Free among the dead h, like the slain that lie in the grave, whom thou remembrest no more i; and they are cut off ‖ from thy hand k.

h Well-nigh discharged from the warfare of the present life, and entred as a member into the society of the dead; as Israelitish servants when they were made free were thereby made Denizons of the Commonwealth of Israel. I expect no other freedom from my miseries but that which death gives, as Job 3. 17, 18. i Whom thou seemest wholly to neglect and to bury in oblivion: for he speaks of these matters not as they are in truth, for he knew very well that forgetfulness was not incident to God, and that God did remember all the dead, and would call them to an account, but only as to sence and appearance and the opinion of the World, and the state and things of this life. k From the care and conduct of thy providence, Which is to be understood as the former clause. Or by thy hand. But our translation seems better to agree both with the foregoing branch which it explains and improves, and with the sence of the words; for it seems improper after he had represented the persons as dead, and in their graves, to add that they are put off, to wit, by death.

l Either first in the grave; the same thing being expressed in divers words; or secondly, in hopeless and remediless calamities.

* Ps. 42.7. 7 They wrath m lieth hard upon me, and * thou hast afflicted me with all thy waves n. Selah.

m Either first the sence of thy wrath; or rather secondly the effects of it; as the next clause explains this. n With thy judgments, breaking in furiously upon me like the waves of the Sea.

* Job 19. 13. *Ps.142.4. 8 * Thou hast put away mine acquaintance far from me; thou hast made me an abomination unto them o: I am shut up p, and I cannot come forth.

o I am so laid a spectacle of thy vengeance that my friends avoid and detest me, lest by conversing with me they should either be filled with terrors, which men naturally abhor; or be made partakers of my guilt or plagues. p Either in the pit or deep mentioned, v. 6. or in my own House or Chamber, being afraid or ashamed to go abroad.

9 Mine eye mourneth by reason of affliction; LORD, I have called daily upon thee, I have stretched out my hands unto thee q.

q Understand, without effect: for thou dost not hear nor answer me.

* Ps. 6. 5. 10 * Wilt thou shew wonders to the dead r? shall the dead arise and praise thee s! Selah.

r To wit, in raising them to live again in this World, as it is in the next clause. I know that thou wilt not. And therefore now hear and help me, or it will be too late. s To wit, amongst mortal men in this World.

11 Shall thy loving kindness be declared in the grave? or thy faithfulness in destruction t.

t I am not without hopes that thou hast a true kindness for me, and wilt faithfully perform thy gracious promises made to me and to all that love thee and call upon thee in truth. But then this must be done speedily, or I shall be utterly uncapable of such a mercy.

12 Shall thy wonders be known in the dark u? and thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness x?

u In the grave, which is called the land of darkness, Job. 10. 21, 22. x In the grave so called, either first actively because there men forget and neglect all the concerns of this life, being indeed but dead carkasses without any sence or remembrance. Or rather secondly passively; because there men are forgotten, not only by men, as is noted, Job 24. 20. Psal. 31. 12. but by God himself, as he complained, v. 5.

*Ps.88.14. Heb. & Ps. 95.2. 13 But unto thee have I cryed, O LORD, and in the morning shall my prayer prevent * thee y.

y (i.e.) Early come to thee before the ordinary time of Morning Prayer, or before the dawning of the Day, or the rising of the Sun. The sence is, Though I have hitherto got no answer to my Prayers, yet I will not give over praying nor hoping for an answer.

14 LORD, why castest thou off my Soul? why hidest thou thy face from me z!

z This proceeding seems not to agree with the benignity of thy nature, nor with the manner of thy dealing with thy people.

* Job 6.4. 15 I am afflicted and ready to die, from my youth up a: while * I suffer thy terrors b, I am distracted.

a My whole life hath been filled with a succession of deadly calamities. O Lord, take some pity upon me, and let me have a little breathing space before I die. b Upon my mind and conscience, which do accompany and aggravate my outward miseries.

16 Thy fierce wrath goeth over me, thy terrors have cut me off.

‖ Or, all the day. 17 They came round about me ‖ daily like water c, they compassed me about together.

c As the Waters of the Sea encompass him which is in the midst and bottom of it.

18 Lover and friend hast thou put far from me d, and mine acquaintance into darkness.

d Of which see the note on v 8.

PSAL. LXXXIX.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm manifestly treats of the declining and calamitous time and state of the House and Kingdom of David, either first in Rehoboam's Reign, as a late judicious Interpreter conceives. To which those expressions v. 40, 41, 42. do not agree; or rather secondly, in or about the time of the Babylonish Captivity.

‖ Or, a psalm for Ethan the Ezrahite to give instruction. ‖ Maschil of * Ethan the Ezrahite a.

a Either first, He who is mentioned 1 Kings 4. 31. And then the Psalm is prophetical of things to come; which yet, after the manner of the Prophets, he represents as present. And this Prophetical Psalm might be left upon record as a cordial for David's Family in their future distresses which Ethan by the spirit of Prophecy foresaw. Or secondly, some other person of the same name, and inspired by the same spirit, who had lived in the times of which the Psalmist here speaketh.

The Psalmist praiseth God for making and keeping Covenant with David and his Seed, 1——4. for his great power and care over his Church, 5——18. for his favours to the Kingdom of David, 19——22. The destruction of his enemies, 23. the faithfulness of God to them in covenant with him, 24——37. Complaining of contrary Events, 38——45. he expostulateth with, prayeth unto, and blesseth the Lord, 46——52.

I Will sing of the mercies of the LORD for ever b: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness c, † to all generations.

b Intending to discourse of the doleful estate of David's Family and of the Kingdom, he prefaceth this, partly lest the following complaints of present miseries should argue ingratitude for former mercies: and partly to move God to pity from the remembrance of his former mercies. c Whatsoever hath befallen or shall befal David's House, or any other, it proceeded not from thy unfaithfulness but from some other causes.

2 For I have said d, Mercy shall be built up for ever e: * thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the very heavens f.

* Ps. 119. 89.

d Within my self. I have been assured in my own mind. e As thou hast laid a sure foundation of mercy to David's Family by that everlasting Covenant which thou hast made and established with it; so I concluded, That thou wouldst carry on the same project of mercy towards it; that thou wouldst build it up and not destroy it. f So the sence may be this, Thou sittest in the Heavens, and there thou didst make this everlasting and unchangeable Decree and Covenant concerning David and his House, and from thence thou beholdest and ordereſt all the affairs of this lower World, and therefore, I doubt not, thou wilt so order these matters as to accomplish thine own counsel and word. But the Hebrew words are by some others, and may very well be translated thus, with (as the Hebrew prefix Beth is oft rendred) the very heavens, (i.e.) as firmly and durably as the Heavens themselves, as with the sun in the Hebrew Text, Psal. 72. 5. is by most Interpreters rendred, as long as the sun endureth, as our translation hath it. And so this phrase in this last branch of this Verse answers to for ever in the former; as it it is also in the foregoing Verse, and so in v. 4. in both which Verses for ever in the first clause is explained thus in the latter, to all generations.

3 I have made a covenant with my chosen g; I have * sworn unto David my servant.

* 2 Sam. 7. 11, &c.

g With David; whom I have chosen to the Kingdom.

4 Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne † to all generations h. Selah.

† Heb. to generation and generation.

h I will perpetuate the Kingdom to thy Posterity; which was promised upon condition, and was literally and fully accomplished in Christ who was of the seed of David.

5 And * the heavens i shall praise thy wonders, O LORD: thy faithfulness also k, in the congregation of the saints l.

* Ps. 19.1.

i (i.e.) The Inhabitants of Heaven, the Holy Angels, as Job 15. 15. who clearly discern and constantly adore thy mercy and faithfulness; when men upon earth are filled with doubts and perplexities about it. k Understand, shall be praised, out of the foregoing clause; which supplements are most usual in Scripture, as hath been already shewed by divers instances. l Either first of thy Saints upon Earth in their publick Assemblies; who always acknowledge and celebrate thy truth, although they cannot always discern the footsteps of it. Or rather secondly, of the Angels of Heaven, of whom he speaks in the foregoing clause; who are oft called Saints or holy ones, as Deut. 33. 2. Job 15. 15. Dan. 4. 13, 17. and 8. 13.

6 For * who in the heaven can be compared unto the LORD? who among the sons † of the mighty m, can be likened unto the LORD?

* Ps. 86.8. † Heb. of God. So Gr. Psa. 29.1.

m Either first among the Potentates of the Earth: or rather secondly among the highest Angels; who well may and needs must admire and adore thee because thou art incomparably and infinitely more excellent than they.

7 God is greatly to be feared n in the assembly of the saints o; and ‖ to be had in reverence of all them that are about him p.

‖ Or, terrible above all that are about him. So Gr.

n With a fear of reverence: for dread and terrour have no place in those blessed Mansions and holy Spirits. o To the whole Society of Angels, called Saints, as v. 5. p The Angels which are always in his presence and encompass his Throne.

8 O LORD God of hosts, † who is a strong LORD like unto thee q? or to thy faithfulness round about thee r?

† Heb. who is strong unto thee O LORD, Ps. 130. 5. Ezr. 9.6.

q Who is equal to thee in Power, or, as it follows in faithfulness. r Heb. and thy faithfulness is round about thee, like a girdle adorning and encompassing thee. It appeareth in all thy paths and actions, in thy words and works.

9 * Thou rulest the raging of the sea s: when the waves thereof arise, thou stillest them.

* Ps. 65.7.

s Giving commands and setting bounds to its waves when they are most impetuous and unruly.

10 * Thou hast broken ‖ Rahab t in pieces, as one that is slain u; thou hast scattered thine enemies † with thy strong arm.

* Ex. 14.28. ‖ Or, Egypt. † Heb. with the arm of thy strength.

t Egypt, as Psal. 87. 4. u Thou didst wound them not slightly but unto death. See Exod. 14. 15.

11 * The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine; as for the world, and the fulness thereof x, thou hast founded them y.

* Gen. 1.1. Ps. 24.1. & 50. 12.

x All the Creatures wherewith it is replenished, as Psal. 24. 1. and 50. 12. y They are all thy Creatures, and therefore wholly subject to thy power and pleasure: and therefore all the Monarchs and Kingdoms of the Earth cannot hinder thee from making good thy Promise to the House and Kingdom of David.

z The northern and southern parts of the World, yea even the remotest ends thereof, though not yet known to us, were made and are ruled by thee. Or possibly he may understand the northern and southern Empires and people of the World, who have from time to time annoyed and disturbed the Kingdom of David and of Israel, of which this Psalm principally treats, such as Syria, Chaldea, and Assyria; which in Scripture phrase are called the north, in reference to that Kingdom; and Egypt, and Ethiopia and Arabia, which are southward from it. These, saith he, are all thy Creatures, and none of them can withstand thee, if thou wilt undertake to deliver thy people. But this I onely propose with submission. a Two eminent Mountains in the land of Canaan, Tabor in the West and within Jordan, Hermon on the East and without Jordan. By which he may understand either first the Western and Eastern parts of the World: and so all the four parts of the World are contained in this Verse. But this may seem an uncouth and incongruous description of the East and West, partly because the North and the South here mentioned are not those parts of the land of Canaan but of the World with respect to it; and therefore the East and West should in reason have been so too; and partly because these places were not so situated in Canaan, for Tabor was not in the West part of Canaan, but rather in the middle space between the Sea and Jordan; and Hermon was not so much on the East as on the North, being indeed the northern border of the land without Jordan. Or secondly the several parts of the land of Canaan, both within Jordan, where Mount Tabor is; and without it, where Hermon lyes. And the Mountains may be named rather than the Valleys, because when their fertility is expressed, the fertility of the Valleys is more strongly supposed. b (i.e.) Shall be fruitful and prosperous, and so give their Inhabitants cause to rejoice. Joy and singing are oft ascribed to Mountains and Fields, &c. in a Poetical strain. c In or by thy favour and the Fruits thereof.

† Heb. an arm with strength. 13 Thou hast † a mighty arm: strong is thy hand d, and high is e thy right hand.

d Either thy left hand, because thy right hand seems to be opposed to it, or thy right hand, as it is limited and explained in the next clause. e Or, is or shall be exalted, or lifted up. That strength of thy hand hath been, or shall be, put forth for thy people as occasion requireth.

Or, establishment, v. Psa. 89.14. 14 Justice and judgment f are ‖ the habitation g of thy throne: * mercy and truth shall go before thy face h.

f (i.e.) Just judgment or justice in judging, as Jer. 9. 24. and 22. 3. A common figure called Hendiadys. g Or, the basis or foundation, as this word is used. Ezra 2. 68. and 3. 3. Psal. 97. 2. and 104. 5. the ground-work of all his proceedings and the stability of his Throne and Government. For God could not be the Judge and Ruler of the World if he did not right, Gen. 18. 25. Compare Prov. 16. 12. The sence and scope of this Verse may be this, Though thy present dispensations in breaking thy Covenant with David, and in suffering his Posterity and thine own people to be devoured by such as are much more wicked than they, be a great deep and secret, yet I rest satisfied that they are just. In like manner the Prophet fortifies himself under the like thoughts, Jer. 12. 1. h As thy Harbengers and Companions wherefocver thou goest. Thou art neither unmerciful nor unfaithful in any of thy dealings.

* Ps. 10.6. & 49. 13. & 17. 6. 15 Blessed is th: people i that know the * joyful sound k: they shall walk, O LORD, in the light of thy countenance l.

i The Psalmist intending to describe the doleful estate of the Royal Family and Kingdom of Israel, aggravates it by the consideration of their former felicity. k (i. e.) Who enjoy the presence of God and his Ordinances, and the tokens of his grace and mercy to them, to which they were called and invited by the sound of Trumpets, which upon that onely reason was very pleasant and grateful to the Israelites. See Numb. 10. 9, 10. So the sign is put for the thing signified, as is manifest both from the following clause of the Verse, and because otherwise the hearing of the outward sound of Trumpets could never make them blessed. l They live under the comfortable influences of thy grace and favour; whereof at present we are bereaved.

16 In thy name m shall they rejoyce all the day: and ‖ in thy righteousness n shall they be exalted.

m In the knowledge and remembrance of thy name, (i. e.) of thy infinite power and goodness, revealed and imparted to them. n Whereby thou art both inclined and in some sort engaged to hear the Prayers of thy people, and to save them from all their Enemies.

17 For thou art the glory of their strength o: and in thy favour our horn shall be exalted p.

o All that strength in which they do or may glory is not their own, but is a meer vouchsafement of thy grace, and to thee alone belongs the glory of all their valiant atchievements. p (i. e.) Our power and honour, which now lies in the dust, shall be raised and recovered.

Or, Our shield is of the LORD, and our King is of the holy one of Israel. 18 For q ‖ the LORD is our defence: and the holy one of Israel is our king r.

q This Verse gives a reason of the Psalmists confidence that their horn would be exalted. r Having therefore so potent a friend, we have no reason to despair of our restitution to our former felicity. Or, as the words may well be, and are by divers, rendred, Of or From the Lord is or was our shield, (to wit, our King, as it is explained in the next branch of the Verse, compared with Psal. 47. 10) and of or from the holy one of Israel, (i. e. the Lord, who is oft so called) is or was our King. He gave us our King and Royal Family at first, and therefore he can easily restore it when he sees it fit.

19 Then s thou spakest in vision † to thy holy one u, and saidst, I have laid help x upon one that is mighty y; I have exalted one chosen out of the people z.

s (i.e.) Of old: for this Particle is sometimes put indefinitely. Or, Then when thou didst set David in the Throne. t Which then was the usual way by which God spake to the Prophets, Numb. 12. 6. u To thy holy Prophets; the singular number being put for the plural; especially to Samuel and Nathan; for part of the following message was delivered to the former, and part to the latter. x I have provided help and relief for my people which I have put into safe hands. y Upon a person of singular courage and wisdom and every way fit for so great a charge. z One whom I have picked and chosen out of all the people, as the fittest for the Kingly Office, one enriched with eminent gifts and graces, &c.

* 1 Sam. 16. 12. 20 * I have found a David my servant: with my oyl b have I anointed him.

a This is spoken of God figuratively after the manner of men, to imply the great scarcity of such persons, and the difficulty of finding them out. b Both with material oyl, 1 Sam. 16. 13. 2 Sam. 5. 3. and with the gifts and graces of my holy Spirit, which are oft signified by oyl or unction, as Psal. 45. 8. compared with Heb. 1. 9. Isa. 61. 3, 1 John 2. 20, 27

* Psa. 80.17. 21 * With whom my hand shall be established c: mine arm also shall strengthen him.

c (i. e.) Constantly abide to protect and assist him.

* 2 Sa. 7. 10. 22 * The enemy shall not exact upon him d: nor the son of wickedness afflict him e.

d Not conquer him or make him tributary. Or, shall not deceive or circumvent him, as this word is used Gen. 3. 13. 2 Kings 18. 29. e To wit, so as to overthrow or destroy him.

23 And I will beat down his foes before his face, and plague them that hate him.

24 But my * faithfulness and my mercy shall be with him f: and in my name g shall his horn be exalted.

* Ps. 61. 7.

f Faithfulness in making good all my promises to him; and mercy either in doing more for him than I have promised, or in pardoning his sins, for which I might justly make him to know my breach of promise. g By my favour and help.

25 I will set his hand h also in the sea i, and his right hand in the rivers k.

h (i.e.) Establish his power and dominion. i The midland Sea. k To wit, Euphrates, called Rivers in the Plural Number, as Nilus also is, Isa. 18. 1. Ezek. 29. 3, 4. in regard of divers branches of it and rivers which flow into it. So here is a description of the uttermost bounds of the promised land, Exod. 23. 31. Numb. 34. 3. to which the Israelitish power was extended by David and Solomon.

26 He shall cry unto me, Thou art my father l, my God, and the rock of my salvation.

l He shall find me to be a true and a kind father to him, and shall familiarly and confidently make his addresses to me as such, for all necessary supplies and assistances, which Parents willingly afford to their children, as need requires.

27 Also I will make him my first-born m, higher than the kings of the earth n.

m As he calls me father, v. 26. so I will make him my son; yea my first-born; who had divers priviledges above other sons. This and the following passage in some fort agree to David, who may well be called Gods first-born, as all the people of Israel are, Exod. 4. 22. and so is Ephraim, Jer. 31. 9. Nor can I see fit wholly to exclude David here, of whom all the foregoing and following Verses may, and some of them must be, understood. But this is more fully and properly accomplished in Christ, and seems to be ascribed to David here as a type of Christ, and that our minds might be led through David to him whom David represented, even to the Messias, to whom alone this doth strictly and literally belong. n This also was in some fort accomplished in David, partly because he had a greater power and dominion than any of the Neighbouring Kings, yea than any other Kings of his age and in those parts of the world, except the Assyrian Monarch; nor is the expression here universal, but indefinite, and if it had been said, higher than all the Kings, yet even such universal expressions admit of some limitation or exception, as is manifest and confessed: and partly because David had many priviledges wherein he did excel all other Kings of the Earth of his Age without exception; which probably he did in the honour and renown which he got by his military atchievements; and by that wisdom and justice wherewith he managed all his Dominions; but certainly he did in this, that he was a King chosen and advanced by the immediate order and appointment of God himself; that he was set over Gods own peculiar and beloved people; that he was intrusted with the care and Patronage of the true Religion and the worship of God in the World; and especially that he was not onely an eminent type, but also the Progenitor, of the Messias, who is King of kings and Lord of lords, and God blessed for ever.

* Isa. 55.3. 28 * My mercy o will I keep with him for evermore, and my covenant p shall stand fast with him.

o Declared and promised to him and his Seed, as it here follows. p Of which see 2 Sam. 7. 12, 13, &c.

29 His seed also will I make to endure for ever q, and his throne as the days of heaven r.

q (i. e.) To sit upon the Throne for ever, as the next words explain it. This was accomplished onely in Christ, the eternal King of the Church, and of the World, who was of David's Seed, according to the flesh. r (i. e.) For ever; as he now said; for as long as the World shall have a being. It shall be as unchangeable and durable as the Heavens themselves, which are of an incorruptible nature. See the like expression, Deut. 11. 21. Jer. 31. 35, 36.

*Heb. I will not make void from him. 33 Nevertheleſs my loving kindneſs u * will I not utterly take from him, nor ſuffer my faithfulneſs † to fail.

u My mercy promiſed to David.

†Heb. to lie 34 My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips.

* Heb. If I lie. 35 Once have I ſworn by my holineſs x, * that I will not lye unto David.

x Here he gives ſome reaſons why he would not break his Covenant with David, though he ſhould have juſt cauſe to do ſo, and though he had upon ſuch juſt cauſe broke his Covenant made with others; firſt becauſe this Covenant was confirmed by his Oath, which adds not onely more ſolemnity, but more ſtability and certainty to it, as is evident from Heb. 6. 17. wherein he ſheweth that God addeth an Oath to his Promiſe or Covenant to make and prove it to be immutable; and from Heb. 7. 20, &c. where he proveth the Prieſthood of Melchiſedech to be unchangeable, becauſe it was confirmed by an Oath. And though judgments ſimply threatned have not always been executed, but ſometimes were prevented, yet thoſe comminations which were confirmed by Oath were thereby rendred and declared to be irrevocable, as we ſee Numb. 14. 28, 29, 30. Jer. 44. 26. Secondly, becauſe this is ſaid to be ſworn once, which word and phraſe ſometimes implies the compleatneſs, certainty and irrevocableneſs of the thing ſaid or done, as Prov. 28. 18. ſhall fall at once. Thus Chriſt is ſaid to have died or ſuffered once, Rom. 6. 10. Heb. 9. 26, 28. Thirdly, becauſe God ſware by his holineſs; in or by which God is but ſeldom read to ſpeak or ſwear, and when he is, it conſtantly adds more weight and confirmation to the ſpeech, as Pſal. 60. 6. and 108. 7. Amos 4. 2.

*2Sa.7.16. 36 * His ſeed ſhall endure for ever, and his throne * Luke 1.33. as the ſun y before me.

Joh.12.34. * Pſ. 72.5. 17. y In reſpect of perpetual duration, as appears both from the foregoing words, and from the following Verſe.

37 It ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witneſs in heaven z. Selah.

z Whereby he underſtands, either, firſt the moon laſt mentioned, to which this clauſe may be added rather than to the Sun, to imply that as the Moon, though ſubject to Eclipſes and frequent and manifold changes, yet doth conſtantly and perpetually remain in Heaven; as a witneſs of my covenant of the night, as it is called Jer. 33. 20. ſo ſhall the Houſe and Kingdom of David continue for ever notwithſtanding all the Changes and Calamities which it may undergo. Or ſecondly the Rainbow, which though in it ſelf it be unſtable and tranſient, and doth but ſeldom appear, which learned men object againſt this opinion, yet in Scripture is mentioned as Gods faithful and perpetual witneſs, being called a token of Gods everlaſting covenant between God and every living creature for perpetual generations, Gen. 9. 12, 15. And although it do not always appear to us, neither do the Sun or Moon do ſo, yet its appearances are doubtleſs very frequent in one or other part of the World, and will be repeated from time to time to the end of the World. Add to this that the word here rendred Heaven, may as well be rendred the Cloud or Clouds, as it is uſed Deut. 33. 26. Job 35. 5. and 36. 28. Pſal. 18. 12. and 77. 17. and 78. 23. Prov. 3. 20. Iſa. 45. 8. And ſo the place being thus tranſlated, and as the faithful witneſs in the Cloud or Clouds, doth plainly point us to the Rainbow.

38 But a thou haſt caſt off and abhorred, thou haſt been wroth with thine anointed b.

46 * How long, LORD, wilt thou hide thy ſelf, for * Pſ. 79.5. ever? ſhall thy wrath burn like fire? Job 23.8, Cant. 3.1, 2. and 5. 6. Iſa. 45.15.

47 Remember how ſhort my time m is: wherefore haſt thou made all men in vain n!

m (i. e.) Our time, the time of our king and kingdom, in whoſe name the Pſalmiſt puts up this petition, and about whom he was much more ſolicitous than about himſelf, as is evident both from the following verſes and from the whole body of the Pſalm. The ſence ſeems to be this, Our king and all his people, and I among the reſt, are ſhort-lived and periſhing creatures, that of themſelves and according to the courſe of nature muſt ſhortly die. And therefore there is no need that thou ſhouldeſt add further afflictions to ſweep them away before their time. n Wherefore haſt thou made us and our king (and conſequently all other men whoſe condition is in nothing better than ours, and in reſpect of thy grace and mercy is much worſe than ours) in vain or to ſo little purpoſe? Didſt thou raiſe us and him, eſtabliſh us for thy people, ſettle the crown upon David and his ſeed for ever by a ſolemn and unchangeable Covenant, erect a magnificent and glorious Temple, and vouchſafe ſo many and great promiſes and priviledges, and all this but for a few years, that our Crown and glory ſhould be taken from us within a little time after it was put upon our heads; that our Kingdom ſhould be broken almoſt as ſoon as it was firmly eſtabliſhed; that thy worſhip ſhould be ſo ſoon corrupted, and thy Temple quickly robbed, and not long after frequently abuſed, and polluted and waſted, and now at laſt utterly demoliſhed? It is not ſtrange that ſuch conſiderations as theſe did fill the Pſalmiſts mind with amuſement and ſad and perplexing thoughts. Nor doth the Pſalmiſt accuſe or upbraid God herewith, but onely uſeth it as an argument to move God to repair and reſtore their decayed ſtate, that they might live to praiſe and ſerve and glorify him, and not be ſuch uſeleſs and inſignificant Creatures as now they were in this forlorn eſtate of things, and as they ſhould be if they ſhould go into the place and ſtate of the dead before the reſtitution of their broken State and Kingdom.

48 * What man is he that liveth, and ſhall not ſee * Pſ. 49.9. death? ſhall he deliver his ſoul from the hand of † the † Heb. hel. grave! Selah.

o All men at their beſt eſtate are mortal and miſerable, Kings and People muſt unavoidably die by the condition of their natures; and therefore, Lord, do not increaſe our affliction which of it ſelf is more than enough; neither proceed in theſe violent courſes upon us who, without ſuch ſeverity, muſt periſh of and from our ſelves.

49 Lord, where are thy former loving kindneſſes, which thou * ſwareſt unto David in thy truth p? *2Sa.7.15.

p Haſt thou forgotten or repented of all that mercy and kindneſs which thou haſt promiſed and ſworn, and ſometimes performed unto David and his Family and Kingdom?

50 Remember, Lord, the reproach of thy ſervants; how I q * do bear in my boſom r the reproach of all the * Num.11. mighty people s. 12.

q (i. e.) We thy ſervants, as he now ſaid; our King and his people; of whom he ſpeaks as of one perſon, as is very uſual in holy Scripture. Or, the Pſalmiſt ſheweth how particularly and paſſionately he reſented thoſe reproaches which were caſt upon their King and Kingdom, as if they were caſt upon himſelf. r This phraſe may denote either firſt the multitude of theſe reproaches, things being ſaid to be given or received into a mans boſom, which are given or received in great plenty, as Iſa. 65. 6. Luke 6. 38. Or ſecondly their grievouſneſs, that they pierced him to the very heart, which is ſometimes called the boſom, as Eccl. 7. 9. s Of the great Potentates and Princes of the World who now reproached the Houſe of David with their vain and confident boaſting of the everlaſtingneſs of their Kingdom, which was now in a deſperate and loſt condition. Or, all the reproaches of many people.

51 Wherewith thine enemies have reproached, O LORD, wherewith they have reproached the footſteps of thine anointed t.

t Or, of thy Meſſiah. By whom he ſeems to underſtand either firſt the Kings of Judah, the ſingular number being put for the plural; and by their footſteps may be meant either their ways or actions, and the ſad conſequences thereof; or the traces or memorials of their antient ſplendor and dominion, wherewith they now upbraid them; Or rather ſecondly the Meſſiah moſt properly and eminently ſo called; of whom not onely many Chriſtians, but the Chaldee Paraphraſt and the Hebrew Doctors, underſtand this place. And this ſuits very well both with the ſingular number here uſed which points at one particular and eminent perſon anointed by God to be the King of his People, and with the matter and occaſion of this Pſalm. For it was univerſally believed by the Jews, that the Meſſiah ſhould come of the Seed of David, and that by him the antient glory and power of David's Houſe ſhould be revived and vaſtly increaſed. And this coming of the Meſſiah the Jews did continually expect for a long time together before he did come, and ſupported themſelves therewith under all their Calamities. All which being well known to many of the Heathens, they reproached the Jews with the vanity of this belief and expectation. And by the footſteps of the Meſſiah he may underſtand his coming, as by the feet or footſteps of Miniſters, Iſa. 52. 7. their coming and bringing the Goſpel with them is underſtood.

52 Bleſſed be the LORD u for evermore. Amen and Amen.

u Let thine Enemies reproach thee and thy promiſes concerning the ſending of the Meſſiah, and the deliverance of thy people by his hand, I do and will heartily bleſs and praiſe thee for them, and encourage my ſelf with them, not doubting but thou wilt conſider and take away all our reproaches, and in thine own due time (which is the beſt) ſend him who is the conſolation and expectation of Iſrael, and the deſire of all Nations.

PSAL. XC.

Or, A Prayer of Moſes the man of God, &c. ‖ A Prayer of Moſes the man of God a.

a Who conſidering that terrible but righteous ſentence of God concerning the cutting off all that ſinful Generation in the Wilderneſs, of which ſee Numb. 14. takes that occaſion to publiſh theſe Meditations concerning Mans Mortality and Miſery in this Life, which might be uſeful both to that and to all ſucceeding Generations.

Moſes ſetting forth the Eternity and Providence of God, 1, 2. deſcribeth the miſery and ſhortneſs of Mans Life, 3—11. Prayeth for Wiſdom to number his days, 12. And for the knowledge and ſenſible Experience of Gods good Providence, 13—17.

1 LORD, thou haſt been our dwelling-place † in all generations b.

b Although we and our Fathers, for ſome Generations, have had no certain and fixed Habitation, but have been ſtrangers in a land that was not ours, and afflicted for four hundred years, according to thy prediction, Gen. 15. 13. And although we now are, and have been for ſome time, and ſtill are like to continue in a vaſt howling Wilderneſs, having no Houſes, but dwelling in Tents, and wandring from place to place, we know not whither; yet thou, O Lord, haſt fully ſupplyed this want, and haſt been in ſtead of, and better than, a dwelling place to us, by thy watchful and gracious Providence over us in all places and exigences. And this is a very proper Preface to this Pſalm, to intimate that all the following miſeries were not to be imputed to God but unto themſelves who by their own ſins had brought theſe miſchiefs upon themſelves.

2 Before the mountains c were brought forth, or ever thou haſt formed the earth, and the world d, even from everlaſting to everlaſting, thou art God e.

c Which he mentions as the moſt fixed and ſtable part of the Earth. d (i. e.) From Eternity; which is frequently deſcribed in this manner, as Prov. 8. 25, 26. Job. 17. 24. Eph. 1. 4. becauſe there was nothing before the Creation of the World but Eternity. And thus the words here following do explain it. And this Eternity of God is here mentioned, partly that Men by the contemplation thereof might be wrought to a deeper ſenſe of their own frailty and nothingneſs, which is the foundation of humility and of all true piety; and to a greater reverence and admiration of the Divine Majeſty; and partly for the comfort of Gods people, who notwithſtanding all their preſent miſeries have a ſure and everlaſting refuge and portion. e Or, thou art the ſtrong God. Thou haſt thy power and all thy perfections, not by degrees, as men have theirs, but from all Eternity. Or, thou art or waſt, O God.

3 Thou turneſt man to deſtruction f, and ſayeſt g, Return ye children of men.

f But as for man, his caſe is far otherwiſe, his time is ſhort, and though he was made by thee an happy Creature, and ſhould have been immortal, yet upon and for his ſin thou didſt make him mortal and miſerable. g Or, didſt ſay, (i. e.) pronounce that ſad ſentence here following, Return, O men, to the duſt out of which you were taken, Gen. 2. 19. Pſal. 146. 4. Eccleſ. 12. 7.

4 * For a thouſand years h in thy ſight i are but as yeſterday ‖ when it is paſt k, and as a watch l in the night m.

* Heb. as. ‖ Or, when.

h If we ſhould now live ſo long as ſome of our Progenitors welnigh did. As he compared Mans duration with Gods in reſpect of its beginning, v. 2. ſo here he compareth them in reſpect of the end, or continuance. i In thy account, and therefore in truth; which is oppoſed to the partial and falſe judgment of men, who think time long becauſe they do not underſtand Eternity: Or in compariſon of thy endleſs duration. k Which is emphatically added; becauſe time ſeems long when it is to come, but when it is paſt, and men look backward upon it, it ſeems very ſhort and contemptible, and men value one hour to come more than a thouſand years which are paſt. l Which laſted but for three or four hours; for the night was antiently divided into three or four Watches. See Judg. 7. 19. Mark 6. 48. and 13. 35. Luke 12. 38. m Which alſo hath its weight; for the ſilence and ſlumbers of the night makes time ſeem ſhorter than it doth in the day.

5 Thou carrieſt them n away as with a floud o; * they are as a ſleep p: in the morning * they are like graſs which ‖ groweth up q.

n (i. e.) Mankind, of whom he ſpake, v. 3. o Unexpectedly, violently and irreſiſtibly, univerſally, without exception or diſtinction. p Short and vain, as ſleep is, and not minded till it be paſt. Or like a Dream, when a Man ſleepeth, wherein there may be ſome real pleaſure, but never any ſatisfaction, or ſome real trouble, but very inconſiderable, and ſeldom or never pernicious. Even ſuch an idle and inſignificant thing is humane life conſidered in it ſelf without reſpect to a future ſtate, in which there is but a meer ſhadow or dream of felicity, only the calamities attending upon it are more real and weighty. q Heb. which is changed, either firſt for the worſe, which paſſeth away, as ſome render the word. Which having generally affirmed here, he may ſeem more particularly to explain in the next Verſe. Or rather ſecondly for the better, as this word is ſometimes uſed; as Job 14. 7. Iſa. 40. 31. which ſprouteth out of the Earth, and groweth more apparent and green and flouriſhing. And this interpretation is confirmed from the next Verſe, where this ſame word is uſed in this ſenſe; where alſo the morning is again mentioned, and that as the time not of its decay, but of its flouriſhing.

6 In the morning it flouriſheth, and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down and withereth r.

r The whole ſpace of Mans Life is compared to one day, and his proſperity is confined to a part of that day, and ended in the cloſe of it.

7 For we s are conſumed t by thine anger u, and by thy wrath are we troubled.

s Either, 1. We Men: Or rather, 2. We Iſraelites in this Wilderneſs. t Either naturally by the frame of our bodies, or violently by extraordinary judgments. Thou doſt not ſuffer us to live ſo long as we might by the courſe of Nature. u Caſt upon us for ſinful ſtate and lives.

8 Thou haſt ſet our iniquities before thee x; our ſecret ſins y † in the light of thy countenance.

x Thou doſt not now cover or blot out or paſs by our ſins, as thou haſt uſually done to thy people; but thou doſt diligently ſearch them out, and accurately obſerve them, as a ſevere, but righteous Judge, and art now calling us to an account for them. y Thou doſt not only puniſh us for our notorious and ſcandalous ſins, which thine honour may ſeem to oblige thee to do, but even for our ſecret Luſts, the murmuring, and unbelief, and apoſtaſie, and idolatry of our hearts; which though hid from the eyes of men, thou haſt ſet before thine eyes, and brought them to light by thy Judgments.

9 For all our days are † paſſed away z in thy wrath: we ſpend our years ‖ as a tale that is told a.

z Or, turn away themſelves or their face from us. They do not continue with us, but quickly turn their backs upon us, and leave us. a Which may a little affect us for the preſent, but is quickly ended and gone out of mind. Or, as a word, as Job 37. 2. which in an inſtant is gone, and that irrevocably. Or, as a thought, or a ſigh, or a breath. All which come to one ſenſe.

10 † The days of our years b are threeſcore years and ten c; and if by reaſon of ſtrength d they be four-ſcore years, yet is their ſtrength e labour and ſorrow f: for it g is ſoon cut off h, and we flee away i.

b Either, 1. Of the Iſraelites in the Deſart, who being twenty years old, and ſome thirty, ſome forty, ſome fifty years old when they came out of Egypt, and dying in the Wilderneſs, as all of that age did, Numb. 14. 29. a great number of them doubtleſs dyed in their ſeventieth or eightieth year, as is here implyed. Or rather, 2. Of the generality of mankind, and the Iſraelites no leſs than others, in that and all following Ages, ſome few perſons excepted, amongſt whom were Moſes, and Caleb, and Joſhua, who lived an hundred and twenty years; which is therefore noted of them as a thing ſingular and extraordinary. This ſenſe ſuits beſt with the following words, and with the ſcope of Moſes; which was to repreſent the vain and tranſitory condition of men in this life, and how much mankind was now ſunk below their Anceſtors, who commonly lived many hundreds of years, and that the Iſraelites, though Gods peculiar people, and endowed with many priviledges, yet in this were no better than other men. All which may be conſidered, either as an argument to move God to pity and ſpare them, or as a motive to awaken and quicken the Iſraelites to ſerious preparations for death, by comparing this with v. 12. c Which time the antient Heathen Writers alſo fixed as the uſual ſpace of mens lives. d (i. e.) By the ſtrength of their Natural Conſtitution i which is the true and common cauſe of longer life. e Their ſtrongeſt and moſt vigorous old Age. Or, their excellency, or pride; that old age which is their glory, and in which men do commonly glory. f Filled with troubles and griefs from the infirmities of Age, the approach of Death, and the contingencies of Humane Life. g Either our Age, or our Strength. h It doth not now decline by many degrees and ſlow ſteps, as it doth in our young and flouriſhing age, but decayeth apace, and ſuddenly fleeth away. i We do not now go to Death, as we do from our very Birth, nor run, but flee ſwiftly away like a Bird, as this word ſignifies.

11 Who knoweth k the power of thine anger l? even according to thy fear m, ſo is thy wrath n.

k Few or none ſufficiently apprehend it, or ſtedfaſtly believe it, or duly conſider it, or are rightly affected with it. For all theſe things are comprehended under this word knoweth. l The greatneſs and force and dreadful effects of thine anger conceived againſt the ſons of men, and in particular againſt thine own people for their miſcarriages. m (i. e.) According to the fear of thee; as my fear is put for the fear of me, Mal. 1. 6. and his knowledge for the knowledge of him, Iſa. 53. 11. According to that fear or dread which ſinful men have of a juſt and holy God. Theſe fears of the Deity are not vain Bugbears, and the effects of ignorance and folly or ſuperſtition, as Heathens and Atheiſts have ſometimes ſaid, but are juſt and built upon ſolid grounds, and juſtified by the terrible effects of thy Wrath upon Mankind. n It bears full proportion to it, nay indeed doth far exceed it. It cannot be ſaid of Gods Wrath, which is ſaid of Death, that the fear of it is worſe than the thing it ſelf. But this Verſe is by many both antient and later Interpreters rendred otherwiſe, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew Text, Who knoweth the power of thine anger, and thy wrath according to thy fear? (i. e.) Either, 1. According to the fear of thee; or ſo as thou art to be feared, or anſwerably to thy terrible diſpleaſure againſt ſin and ſinners. Or, 2. So as to fear and dread thee in ſuch manner and meaſure as ſinful Creatures ought to fear the infinite and offended Majeſty of God their Creator and Judge, and Soveraign, and thereby to be moved to humble himſelf before thee, and fervently to ſeek thy face and favour; which is the only true wiſdom, for which he prayeth in the next Verſe:

* Pl. 39.4. †Heb. cause to come.

12 * So teach us o to number our days p, that we † apply our hearts unto wisdom q.

o By thy Spirit and Grace, as thou hast already taught us by thy Word. Or, Teach us rightly (as this word is used Numb. 27. 7. and 2 Kings 7. 9.) to number, &c. as it follows. p To consider the shortness and miseries of this Life, and the certainty and speedines of Death, and the causes and consequences thereof. q That we may heartily devote our selves to the study and practice of true wisdom, which is nothing else but piety, or the fear of God. And why so? Not that the Israelites might thereby procure a revocation of that peremptory sentence of Death passed upon all that Generation; nor that other men might hereby prevent their Death, both which he very well knew to be impossible, but that men might arm and prepare themselves for Death, and for their great account after Death, and might make sure of the happiness of the future Life. Of which this Text is a plain and pregnant proof.

r To us in Mercy; for thou seemest to have forsaken us and cast us off. s Understand, wilt thou be angry; or, will it be ere thou return to us. t (i. e.) Of thy severe proceedings against us, and change thy course and carriage to us.

14 O satisfie us early u with thy mercy, that we may rejoyce, and be glad all our days.

u Speedily or seasonably, before we be utterly consumed.

15 Make us glad according to the days wherein thou hast afflicted us, and the years wherein we have seen evil x.

x Our Afflictions have been sharp and long, let not our Prosperity be small and short.

16 Let thy work appear unto thy servants, and thy glory unto their children y.

y Let that great and glorious work of giving thy people a compleat deliverance, which thou hast long since designed and promised, be at last accomplished and manifested unto us, and in the sight of the World.

17 And let the beauty of the LORD z our God be upon us, and establish thou the work of our hands upon us a; yea the work of our hands establish thou it.

z (i. e.) His favourable countenance, and gracious influence, and glorious presence. a Or, in us. Do not only work for us, but in us. And because the glorious work of thy hands is hindered by the evil works of our hands, be thou pleased by thy Holy Spirit to direct or establish (for this Hebrew word signifies both) the works of our hands, that we may cease to do evil and learn to do well, and turn and constantly cleave unto thee, and not revolt and draw back from thee, as we have frequently done to our own undoing.

PSAL. XCI.

The ARGUMENT.

THe Penman of this Psalm is uncertain. The occasion of it seems to have been that great Pestilence recorded, 2 Sam. 24.

The Psalmist representeth the State of the Godly, 1, 2. Their safety, and place of habitation, 3—10. Comfortable promises of Gods preserving them, 11. Of his support and salvation, 12—16.

* Psal. 27. 1 4. 5. & 31. 20. † Heb. lodge.

1 HE that * dwelleth in the secret place a of the most High shall † abide under the shadow of the Almighty b.

a Or, hiding place. He that makes God his habitation and refuge, as he is called below, v. 9. reforting to him, and relying upon him in his dangers and difficulties. b He shall not be disappointed of his hope, but shall find a quiet and safe repose under the Divine Protection. A shadow in Scripture phrase commonly signifies protection. See Gen. 19. 8. Judg. 9. 15. Psal. 17. 8. &c.

2 I will say of the LORD, He is my refuge c, and my fortress: my God, in him will I trust.

c Upon that ground I will confidently commit my self and all my affairs to God.

* Pl. 124. 7. 3 Surely * he shall deliver thee d from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisom pestilence e.

d O thou believing pious Soul, who after my example shalt make God thy refuge, thou shalt partake of the same priviledge which I enjoy. e From the Pestilence, which like a Fowlers snare taketh men suddenly and unexpectedly, and holdeth them fast, and commonly delivers them up to Death.

* Pl. 57. 1. 4 * He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: his truth f shall be thy shield and buckler.

f Whereby he is obliged to fulfil all his gracious promises, and amongst the rest, that of protection in dangers.

* Job 5. 19, &c. Pro. 3. 23. Isa. 43. 2.

5 * Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night g; nor for the arrow h that fleeth by day i:

g When evil accidents are most terrible and least avoidable. h The Pestilence, or any such common and destructive Calamity; for such are frequently called Gods arrows, as Deut. 32. 23, 42. Lam. 3. 12, 13, &c. i Which is the time for shooting of Arrows. The sense of the Verse is, He shall be kept from secret and open mischiefs at all times.

6 Nor for the pestilence k that walketh l in darkness m: nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday n.

k This Verse explains the former, and sheweth what that terror and arrow signifies. l That spreadeth or maketh progress. m Either invisibly, so as we can neither foresee nor prevent it. Or rather, by night; as v. 5. n That like a bold Enemy assaults us openly, and though discovered cannot be resisted.

7 A thousand shall fall at thy side o, and ten thousand at thy right hand: but it shall not come nigh thee p.

o At thy left side, because this is opposed to the right side here following. See the like Ellipsis, Numb. 5. 16. Psal. 84. 11. p This and such like promises are not to be understood absolutely and universally, as if no truly good man could be cut off by the Plague or other common Calamities, which is confuted both by other plain Texts of Scripture, and by unquestionable experience, but with due limitations and conditions, either on mans part, as if there be a defect in his Faith or Obedience; or on Gods part, when God sees that Death is more for his good than Life, as it apparently is when righteous men are taken away from the evil to come, as is said Isa. 57. 1. In which case though God doth not give the thing promised, yet he giveth a far greater Mercy instead of it, and so fulfils his promise in the best sense, and with most advantage. As if one man should solemnly promise to another to give him his daily food every day, he not only might but ought, notwithstanding this promise, to deny and withdraw this Food, when his Body is so distempered, that in the Judgment of the wisest Physicians the taking of his Food would evidently endanger his Life.

8 Only * with thine eyes shalt thou behold q, and see the reward of the wicked r. * Pl. 37. 34.

q Without any terrour or danger to thy self, and with a delightful and thankful reflection upon Gods goodness to thee. r The just recompence of their sins, or the vengeance of God upon them.

9 Because thou hast made the LORD which is my refuge, even the most High thy habitation s, s Or, as the words lye in the Hebrew, and others render them, Because thou, O Lord, art my refuge, thou O my Soul (which is easily understood out of the foregoing words, and to which David oft suddenly turneth his speech) hast made the most High thine habitation. Which is the only ground and reason of that safety last mentioned. As for the variation of persons, that he sometimes speaketh to and of others, and sometimes to and of himself, nothing is more frequent in this Book; nor doth it make any alteration in the sense.

10 There shall no evil befal thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling t.

t To wit, so as to destroy thee, as the next Verse limits and expounds it. For surely this promise is not made to all that dwell nigh to his Children and Servants, who may possibly be wicked men, and so strangers from Gods Covenant and Promises. How far this secures his own person, see on v. 7.

11 * For he shall give his angels u charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways x. * Pl. 34. 7. Mat. 4. 6

u Those blessed and powerful and watchful spirits, whom God hath appointed to mind the affairs of this lower World, and to take care of the Heirs of Salvation, Heb. 1. 14. x In the whole course of thy life, and in all thy lawful undertakings. Luk. 4. 10.

12 They shall bear thee up ‖ in their hands y, lest ‖ Or, with thou dash thy foot against a stone z.

y Sustain or uphold thee in thy goings, as we do a Child or a weakly Man, especially in uneven or dangerous paths. Or shall carry thee aloft as upon Eagles Wings, when it shall be needful for thee. z So as to hurt thy foot, or to cause thee to fall.

13 Thou shalt tread upon the lion a, and ‖ adder: the young lion and the dragon b shalt thou trample under feet. ‖ Or, asp.

a The Lyon shall lie prostrate at thy feet, and thou shalt securely put thy Feet upon his Neck, as the Israelites did upon the Necks of the Canaanitish Kings, Jos. 10. 24. b By which he syneedochically understands all pernicious Creatures, though never so strong and fierce and subtil, and all sorts of Enemies.

14 Because he hath set his love upon me c, therefore will I deliver him d: I will set him on high e, because he hath known my name f.

c This and the two following Verses are the words of God, whom the Psalmist here, as oft elsewhere, introduceth as giving an account of the reasons of Gods singular care of all believing or pious persons. d I will abundantly recompence his love with my favour and blessing. e In an high and safe place, where no evil can reach him. f With a true and saving knowledge, so as to love me and put his trust in me. Gods name is here put for God himself, as it is also Deut. 28. 58. Psal. 20. 2. and 115. 1.

15 * He shall call upon me g, and I will answer him: I will be with him in trouble h; I will deliver him, and honour him. * Pl. 50. 15.

g To wit, in trouble, which is expressed in the following clause. As he knoweth and loveth me, so he will offer up sincere and fervent Prayers to me upon all occasions. h To keep him from sinking under his burden.

16 With † long life i will I satisfie him, and shew him my salvation k. † Heb. length of days.

i Either in this World, when it is expedient for my service and for his benefit; or, at least, in the next World, where he shall live to Eternity in the blissful sight and enjoyment of God in glory. k Either here or hereafter.

PSAL. XCII.

A psalm or song for the sabbath-day a.

a To be sung upon the Weekly Sabbath. To which the matter of this Psalm very well agrees. For it celebrates the works of God, both that first and great work of Creation, and that succeeding and no less wonderful work of his Providence, by which he upholds holds and governs all his Creatures, and especially that by which he ruleth all sorts of men, both good and bad, and that by which he preserveth and manageth his Church and People.

The Prophet exhorteth to praise God, 1—3. for his great works, 4, 5. His Judgments on the wicked, 6—9. Gracious Promises to the righteous, 10—12. They shall be fruitful, 13—15.

Ps. 147. 1. 1 IT is a * good thing b to give thanks unto the LORD, and to sing praises unto thy name, O most High.

b It is a good work and a just debt to God.

2 To shew forth thy loving kindness in the morning, and thy faithfulness † every night c. † Heb. in the nights.

c To adore and celebrate thy goodness and truth continually, and especially at those two solemn times of Morning and Evening, which on every day, and especially upon the Sabbath-day, were devoted to the worship and service of God.

3 Upon an instrument of ten strings, and upon the psaltery; ‖ upon the harp † with a solemn sound. Or, upon a solemn viol with a cry. † Heb. with joyful sound.

4 For thou, LORD, hast made me glad through thy work: I will triumph in the works of thy hands d. Ps. 42. 5. Ps. 43. 4.

d Which thou didst create by thine Almighty Power, and dost still govern with Infinite Wisdom; one instance whereof we have in the following Verses.

5 * O LORD, how great are thy works! and * thy thoughts e are very deep. Ps. 33. 11.

e Thy Counsels and Methods in the Government of the World and of thy Church.

Ps. 73. 6 * A brutish man f knoweth not: neither doth a fool understand this g.

f Who cannot or doth not seriously consider things, whose mind is corrupted by his sensual and brutish appetites; who is led by Sense, and not by Reason and Faith. g The depth of Gods Counsels and Works mentioned, v. 5. or that particular work of God described, v. 7.

Ps. 12. 6. Pro. 12. 11. Ps. 73. 7 * When the wicked spring as † the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish, it is that they shall be destroyed for ever h. Ps. 37. 35.

h Their present worldly prosperity is a presage and occasion of their utter and eternal ruine.

Ps. 34. 8 But thou, LORD, art most High for evermore i.

i So this Verse is added by way of opposition to the former, They shall perish, but thou shalt endure, as is said in a like comparison Psal. 102. 25. they flourish for a season, but thou rulest for ever to judge and punish them. Or, for (as this Hebrew Particle is not seldom used, whereof instances have been formerly given) thou, Lord, art, &c. So this Verse gives a reason of the former, as well as the first branch of it, why God suffers the wicked to flourish so long, because he is not like Man, of short and uncertain continuance here, to whom a little time is long and tedious, who therefore impatiently expects the time of vengeance, and fears lest the offender should escape it; whereas God is unchangeable and everlasting, and therefore long-suffering without any inconvenience, and the longest time of the prosperity of the wicked is but short and inconsiderable in his Eyes, a thousand years being in his sight but as yesterday, when it is past, Psal. 90. 4. and they can never escape out of his hands: as also of the latter branch of the Verse, why the wicked shall be destroyed for ever, because God lives and reigns for ever to execute that just sentence of everlasting punishment which he hath pronounced against them.

9 For lo k, thine enemies, O LORD, for lo, thine enemies shall perish: all the workers of iniquity shall be scattered.

k He represents their destruction as present, and as certain which the repetition of the words implies.

10 But my horn shalt thou exalt l like the horn of an unicorn m: I shall be anointed n with fresh oil o.

l But as for me, and other righteous persons (of whom he saith the same thing, v. 12.) we shall be advanced to the height of honour, and true and lasting felicity. m Of which see on Deut. 33. 17. n I shall have great cause of rejoycing and testifying my joy by anointing my self, as the manner was in Feasts and all joyful Solemnities. o Sweet and uncorrupted.

11 Mine eye also shall see my desire p on mine enemies; and mine ears shall hear q my desire of the wicked that rise up against me.

p To wit, in the ruine of thine and mine incorrigible Enemies. q What I do not see my self, I shall understand by the certain reports of others.

Psal. 92. 12 * The righteous shall flourish like the palm-tree r: he shall grow like a cedar s in Lebanon. 4, 5.

r Which is constantly green and flourishing, and fruitful, Cant. 7. 8. and growing even when it is pressed down; and so is a fit emblem of a just mans person and condition. See Revel. 7. 9. s Which spreads it self wide, and grows very high and strong, and is very durable, and in some fort incorruptible.

13 Those that be planted t in the house of the LORD u, shall flourish in the courts x of our God.

t Whom God by his Gracious Providence and Holy Spirit hath planted or fixed there. u (i. e.) In its Courts, which are a part of the House, and oft come under that name in Scripture. And by this House he means the Church of God, whereof all just persons are real and living members. x Which he mentions rather than the House, because he speaks not here of the Priests, but of all just men, who were permitted to come no further than into the Courts.

14 They shall still bring forth fruit in old age y: they shall be fat, and † flourishing: † Heb. green.

y When their natural strength decayeth, it shall be renewed; their last days shall be their best days, wherein as they shall grow in grace, so they shall increase in comfort and blessedness.

15 To shew that the LORD is upright z: he is my rock, and there is no unrighteousness in him.

z This glorious work of God in compensating the short prosperity of the wicked with everlasting punishments, and of exchanging the momentany Afflictions of the Just with Eternal Glory and Happiness, doth clearly demonstrate that God is just and blameless in all the dispensations of his Providence in the World.

PSAL. XCIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm contains an assertion or declaration of Gods sovereign and universal dominion in and over the whole World. Which is here set forth, partly for the comfort of Gods Church and People against all the assaults of their numerous and potent Adversaries; and partly to give an intimation and assurance of the accomplishment of that great Promise of the Kingdom of the Messias, which was not to be confined to the Israelites, but to be extended to all the Nations of the Earth; which, though wonderful in our Eyes, the Supream and Almighty Ruler of the World could easily effect. This and the six following Psalms, according to the opinion of the Hebrew Doctors, belong to the times of the Messias.

A description of the Majesty, 1. and Power of God, 2—4. The certainty of Gods Word, and necessity of Holiness in Gods House, 5.

1 * THe LORD reigneth a, * he is clothed with majesty; the LORD is clothed with strength b wherewith he hath girded himself: the world also is established, that it cannot be moved c. * Pl. 96. 10. & 97. 1. & 99. 1. * Pl. 104. 1.

a He is the King and Governour, not only of Israel, but of the whole World, as the last clause of the Verse expounds it: and accordingly he will in his due time set up his Empire over all Nations, in the hands of his Son the Messias. b That Majesty and Strength which he always had in himself, he now hath and will shortly much more shew it forth in the Eyes of all people. c The effect of Gods Government of the World shall be this, that he will order and over-rule all the Confusions, and Divisions, and Hostilities in the World, so as they shall end in an orderly, peaceable and happy settlement, and in the erection of that Kingdom of the Messias, which can never be moved.

d And this Kingdom of thine is no new or up-start Kingdom, as it may seem to the ignorant World, but the most antient of all Kingdoms, being from Everlasting to Everlasting, although it was not always equally manifested in the World.

3 The floods e have lifted up, O LORD, the floods have lifted up their voice: the floods lift up their waves f.

e The Enemies of thy Kingdom, who are oft compared to floods for their numbers, force, rage, &c. See Isa. 8. 7, 8. and 17. 12, 13. Jer. 46. 7, 8. f Have both by their words and actions made opposition against it.

4 The LORD on high is mightier than the noise of many waters; yea, than the mighty waves of the sea g.

g The King of Heaven is too strong for all Earthly Potentates, and will subdue them under his feet.

5 Thy testimonies h are very sure: holiness becometh thine house i, O LORD, † for ever. † Heb. to length of days.

h (i. e.) Thy words; either, 1. Thy Precepts, which are commonly called Gods testimonies. And so having spoken of Gods days. Kingdom, he now sheweth that the Laws of that Kingdom are just, and true, and holy; which is a singular commendation of it. Or, 2. Thy Promises, as may be gathered from the following words, are sure, or true, or faithful; which Attribute properly belongs, and every where in Scripture is ascribed to Promises rather than to Precepts. And the Promises no less than the Precepts are Gods Testimonies, or the witnesses or declarations of his Mind and Will to Mankind. And he seems here to speak of those great and precious promises concerning the erection and establishment of his Kingdom in the World by the Messias. Which, saith he, are infallibly true, and shall certainly be accomplished in thy time. i This is to be understood, either, 1. Of Gods Church or People, who are sometimes called Gods House, and whose business and delight is in Gods House and Service there performed. So the sense is, It becometh thy people to be holy in all their approaches to thee, and worshippings of thee. Or rather, 2. Of God himself, who dwelt in his House, from whence he gave forth his Oracles, and where all his testimonies were kept upon record. This seems better to suit with the Context, the business of this Psalm being rather to describe the dominion of God than the Duty of his People. And so the sense seems to be this, Holiness is the constant Ornament and Glory of thy House. Or it becometh thee who dwellest in thy House to be holy in all thy words and actions; and therefore thy testimonies are very sure, and thou wilt undoubtedly fulfil all thy Promises. For holiness seems to be here taken for Gods faithfulness, as it is Psal. 60. 6. and 89. 35. or which comes to the same thing, for his Justice or Righteousness, whereby he is obliged to make good all his promises, as that word is very commonly used.

PSAL. XCIV.

The ARGUMENT.

THE matter of this Psalm plainly declares the occasion of it to be the oppressions and persecutions of Gods people by wicked and cruel Tyrants and Enemies, against whom he prays for the divine aid.

The Psalmist calling to God for Justice, 1—4. complaineth of Tyranny and Impiety, 5—7. Teacheth Fools Gods Providence, 8—11. Sheweth the blessed effects of Affliction, 12, 13. and a promise of his presence with the afflicted, 14, 15. He is their support, 16—23.

1 O LORD † God to whom vengeance belongeth a: O God, to whom vengeance belongeth, † shew thy self.

a As thou art the supreme Judge of the World, the Patron and protector of the Righteous, and the declared Enemy of all wickedness and wicked men.

* Pf. 7. 6. * Gen. 18. 25.

2 * Lift up thy self b, thou * judge of the earth: render a reward to the proud.

b Either, 1. Ascend thy Tribunal to pronounce the Sentence. Or 2. Arise from thy seat, and bestir thy self to punish thy proud Enemies, as it here follows.

3 LORD, how long shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph!

4 How long shall they utter c, and speak hard things d! and all the workers of iniquity boast themselves e.

c Or pour forth freely, constantly, abundantly, as a Fountain doth waters, as this Hebrew word signifies. d Grievous, and insolent, and intolerable words against thee and thy people; blasphemous, malicious, contemptuous and minatory words. e Boast of their invincible power, and prosperous success in their wicked designs.

5 They break in pieces thy people, O LORD, and afflict thine heritage f.

f Those righteous persons whom thou hast chosen for thy portion or inheritance.

6 They slay the widow and the stranger, and murder the fatherless g.

g Whom common humanity obliged them to spare, and pity and relieve.

* Pfal. 10. 11, 12. & 59. 7.

7 * Yet they say, The LORD shall not see h: neither shall the God of Jacob i regard it.

h Their impunity and prosperity in their impious and barbarous practices makes them ready to doubt of, or to deny the Providence of God in the government of his Church and of the World. i So they call him farcastically, He who taketh that name to himself, but hath no regard to his people, but gives up his Jacob to the spoil, and to the rage of their Enemies.

* Pf. 92. 5.

8 * Understand, ye brutish among the people k: and ye fools, when will ye be wise!

k You who though you think your selves the wisest of men, yet in truth are the most brutish of all people; for the Hebrews oft express their superlatives in this manner, as Prov. 30. 30. Cant. 1. 8. &c. You that have only the shape, but not the understanding, of a man in you.

* Exod. 4. 11. Prov. 20. 12.

9 * He that planted l the ear, shall he not hear m! he that formed n the eye shall he not see!

l The word is very emphatical, signifying the excellent structure of the Ear, or the several Organs or Instruments belonging to the sense of Hearing, and the exact position and firm settlement of all those parts in their proper places; which is justly admired by all that understand it. m He must necessarily hear. The truth of the inference depends upon that evident and undeniable principle in reason, that nothing can give to another that which it hath not either formally or more eminently in it self, and that no effect can exceed the vertue of its cause. n By which word he seems to intimate the accurate and most curious workmanship of the Eye which is observed by all that write upon that subject.

10 He that chastiseth the heathen, shall not he correct m! he that teacheth man knowledge n, shall not he know o!

m He who, when he pleaseth, can and doth punish the Gentiles or Nations of the World, is he not able to punish you for your wicked speeches and actions? Or, He that instructeth, or teacheth (as this word signifies, Prov. 9. 7. Isa. 8. 11. &c.) the nations (not only the Jews, but all other people, all mankind, as this clause is explained by the next, he that teacheth man knowledge) shall not he correct or reprove? and therefore must not he discern and know all your hard speeches and wicked actions? Thus the consequent seems to be put for the antecedent, as is frequent in Scripture, and that not without emphasis, to imply that God does not know their sins with a simple or speculative knowledge, but so as to proceed upon that knowledge to judge and punish them. n By giving him understanding, and the knowledge of many excellent things by the Light of Nature. o To wit, mens thoughts, of which see v. 11. and their words and actions, of which he spoke, v. 6, 7. These words are not in the Hebrew Text, but are easily understood out of the foregoing clause. And the like defects we find elsewhere, as 2 Sam. 5. 8. comp. with 1 Chron. 11. 6. especially in vehement commotions of the mind, when a mans passion stops his speech, as it is here, and Psal. 6. 3. and in other Authors.

* 1 Cor. 3. 20.

11 * The LORD knoweth the thoughts of man p, that they are vanity.

p This is an Answer to the foregoing Question, shall not he know? Yes, he knoweth all things, yea even the most secret things, as the thoughts of men; and in particular your atheistical thoughts, and much more doth he know your wicked practices, which you fain he did not see, v. 6, 7. And he knows that they are generally vain and foolish, and that whilst you mock God and applaud your selves in such thoughts, you do not relieve, but only delude your selves with them.

Heb. 12. 11.

12 * Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O LORD, and teacheft him out of thy law q.

q And whereas these ungodly persons esteem themselves the only happy men, and conclude thy people to be of all men the most miserable, because of the manifold persecutions and afflictions which they commonly suffer, and upon this account dispute against thy Providence, so far is their opinion from the truth, that the contrary is most certain, that as their prosperity is a real mischief to them, so those afflictions of good men which are accompanied with divine instructions are great and true Blessings to them, themselves being judges.

13 That thou may'ft give him rest from the days of adversity, until the pit be digged for the wicked r.

r For their present and short troubles prepare them for, and lead them to true rest and blessedness, whilst the seeming felicities of the wicked make way for those tremendous Judgments which God hath prepared for them.

* 1 Sam. 12. 22. Rom. 11. 1, 2.

14 * For the LORD will not cast off his people s, neither will he forsake his inheritance.

s Though God may for a time correct his people, yet he will not utterly destroy them, as he will their Enemies, but will in his time put an end to all their Calamities.

t But although the World is now full of unrighteous Judgments, and even God himself seems not to judge and administer things justly, because he suffers his people to be oppressed, and the wicked to triumph over them, yet the state of things shall be otherwise ordered, God will declare himself to be a righteous Judge, and will advance and establish Justice in the Earth, and especially among his People. u To wit, just Judgment restored; they will all approve of it, and imitate this Justice of God in all their actions, whereas the wicked will still do wickedly, as is said Dan. 12. 10. and in a Land and state of uprightness will deal unjustly, and will not behold the majesty of the Lord, as it is Isa. 26. 10. Oth. shall follow him, to wit, the Lord, expressed v. 14. whose act it is to bring Judgment to Justice. Whilst the wicked forsake God, these will cleave to him, as being confident that, howsoever he may suffer them to be oppressed for a season, yet he will in due time plead their cause, and bring forth their Righteousness.

16 Who will rise up for me x against the evil doers? or who will stand up for me against the workers of iniquity?

x To defend and help me. I looked hither and thither, and called to my Friends for their help, saying, who will, &c. But none of them appeared, but God alone helped me, as he saith in the next Verse.

17 Unless the LORD had been my help, my soul had ‖ almost dwelt * in silence y.

‖ Or, quickly. * Pf. 115. 17.

y In the place of silence, to wit, the Grave. Compare Job 3. 17, 18. Psal. 88. 13. and 115. 17.

18 When I said, My foot slippeth z, thy mercy, O LORD, held me up.

z I am now upon the point of falling into mischief and utter destruction.

19 In the multitude of my thoughts a within me, thy comforts b delight my soul.

a Whilst my Heart was filled with various and perplexing thoughts, as this Hebrew word signifies, and tormented with cares and fears about my future state. b Thy promises contained in thy word, and set home by thy Spirit upon my Soul, and the remembrance of my former experiences of thy care and kindness to me. Comp. Psal. 119. 50, 76.

20 Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee c, which * frameth mischief d by a law e!

c Wilt thou take part with the unrighteous powers of the World who oppress thy people? It is true they partake of thy Name, being called gods, Psal. 82. 1. but, I know, thou wilt not afford them thy Protection and Patronage, but wilt manifest thy justice and displeasure against them. This seems to have been one of those comfortable thoughts wherewith the Psalmist delighted his Soul, as he now said. d Who devise wicked devices, and lay heavy burdens upon men that are more righteous than themselves. e Either by vertue of those unrighteous decrees which they have made in form of Laws: Or by false pretences of law. Or, against law, against all right and the laws both of God and Men.

21 They gather themselves together against the soul f of the righteous, and condemn the innocent blood g.

f Against the Life, as the Soul commonly signifies, and as the next clause explains it. They are not satisfied with the spoil of their Estates, but do also thirst after their Lives. g They shed the blood of those innocent persons whom they have wickedly condemned. Innocent blood is here put for the Blood or Life of an innocent person, as it is also 1 Sam. 19. 5. Mat. 27. 4.

* Pf. 7. 15.

22 But the LORD is my defence: and my God is the rock of my refuge.

23 And * he shall bring upon them their own iniquity h, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness i: yea, the LORD our God k shall cut them off.

h (i.e.) The fruit and punishment of their Sins. i Either in the midst of their Sins: Or, by their own wicked Devices, the mischief whereof he will cause to fall upon their own Heads. k The God of Jacob, of whom they said that he did not see nor now regard them, but now they find the contrary proved to their cost.

PSAL. XCV.

The ARGUMENT.

THE Author of Psalm was David, as is affirmed Heb. 4. 7. and although this Psalm be delivered in general terms as an invitation to mankind to yield unto the true God that praise, and worship, and obedience, which he requireth and deserveth, yet it hath a special reference to the dayes of the Messiah; of which Christians have no great reason to doubt, seeing it is so understood by the Hebrew Doctors themselves; as also by the Apostle, Heb. 3. 7, &c. and especially Heb. 4. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. where he not onely expounds it of those times, but proves that it cannot be meant of the former times and state of the Church.

An Exhortation to praise God, 1, 2. for his great power, goodness, and tenderness to his people, 3——7. A caution against hardness of heart, 8. it grieves the Lord, 9, 10. God's threatning against it confirmed with an Oath, 11.

1 O Come, let us a sing unto the LORD; let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation.

a He speaks to the Israelites, whose backwardness to this work in the times of the Gospel was foreseen by the spirit of God which dictated this Psalm.

Heb. prevent his face.

2 Let us † come before his presence b with thankfulness, and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms.

b Which he will then afford us in a singular manner in his Son the Messiah, in and by whom he will be visibly present with the Sons of men.

Pf. 96. 4. & 135. 5. & 86. 8. & 97. 9.

3 For * the LORD is a great God, and a great King above * all gods c.

c Above all that are accounted and called Gods, Angels, and Earthly Potentates, and especially the false gods of the Heathens, which upon Christs coming into the World were struck dumb, and could no more deliver their Oracles, as Plutarch and other Heathens observed with admiration, nor deceive the World, but were forced to give place to the true God, and to the knowledge and worship of him alone, which was propagated among all Nations by the Gospel.

Heb. in his hand. Isa. 40. 12. the depths of the earth are his.

4 † In his hand d are the deep places e of the earth: ‖ the strength of the hills f is his also.

d Under his Government. e Those parts which are far out of mens sight and reach, and much more those that are at mens disposal. f The strongest or highest Mountains are under his feet and at his disposal. The sence of the Verse is, All the parts of the Earth, whether high or low, are subject to his power and providence, and therefore it is not strange if all the Nations of the Earth be brought to the acknowledgment of him, and if the Gentiles receive his Gospel.

Heb. his the sea.

5 † The sea is his, and he made it: and his hands formed the dry lands.

6 O come, let us worship, and bow down: let us kneel g before the LORD our maker.

g By which expressions he teacheth that even in Gospel-times God is to be glorified and worshipped as well with the members of our bodies as with the faculties of our Souls.

Pf. 95. 13. Isa. 11. 1. Jer. 23. 3. Ezek. 34. 23. Joh. 10. 16.

7 For he is our God h, and * we are the people of his pasture i, and the sheep of his hand k: * to day l if ye will hear his voice m.

h In a peculiar manner; and therefore it will be most unreasonable and inexcusable for us to forsake him when the Gentiles submit to his law. i Whom he feedeth and keepeth in his own proper Pasture, or in the Land which he hath appropriated to himself. k Which are under his special care and conduct or government, which is oft expressed by the hand, as Numb. 4. 28. and 31. 49. Judg. 6. 29. l (i. e.) Forthwith or presently, as this word is used Deut. 4. 4, 8. and 27. 9. Jos. 22. 16, 18, &c. Or this day,

There are the manifestations of Gods power and grace, or goodnes, and all his perfections.

7 Give unto the LORD, O ye kindreds of the people i, give unto the LORD k glory and strength.

i Or, O ye families of the people of the World. And the word families may be understood either 1. strictly and properly; and so it may be intimated that this great blessing of salvation by Christ should not be imparted to whole Nations, but onely to some persons taken out of every people and nation, as it is expressed, Revel. 5. 9. or 2. more largely for nations, as it is taken Gen. 12. 3. Jer. 25. 9. Zech. 14. 18. and so it may be implied that not onely some few of the Heathen people should be brought to the acknowledgment and worship of the true God, as was usual in the times of the Old Testament, but that whole Nations should come in to the Church of God together. k Ascribe to him or acknowledge to be in him.

He will certainly and abundantly fulfil all Gods promises made to his people.

PSAL. XCVII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm seems to have both the same Author and the same scope with the former. And although the Psalmist might take occasion to pen it from those signal manifestations of God's power and righteousness on his behalf, and against his enemies, yet he had a further aim in it, even at the coming of the Messias, which he here describes. And whereas there are two comings of Christ plainly distinguished in the New Testament, these are but confusedly mentioned in the Old Testament: and the Prophets sometimes speak of his first coming in words and phrases which seem more properly to agree to the second, as Mal. 3. 1, 2. and 4. 1, 2. But whatsoever the Psalmist designed or understood, this is certain, that the Holy Ghost meant the last clause of v. 7. of Christ, as is affirmed Heb. 1. 6. and therefore it is more than probable that all the rest of the Psalm is to be understood of him and of his coming and kingdom.

A description of the Majesty of Gods Kingdom, 1——6. The Church reioyceth at his Justice and Judgment upon Idolaters, 7—9. with an Exhortation to godliness and spiritual reioycing, 10—12.

1 THE LORD reigneth a, let the earth rejoyce: let the † multitude of Isles b be glad a See on Psal. 96. 10. b The Gentile Nations, as this word being used Isa. 42. 4. is expounded Mat. 12. 21. even those which are most remote from Judæa, (then the onely seat of Gods people and worship) from which they were divided by the Sea, or to which they usually went by Sea: such places being commonly called Isles in Scripture, as Gen. 10. 5. Isa. 11. 11. and 66. 19. Which being mentioned, because there might be some doubt about them, it is sufficiently implied that those Countries which were nearer to them should unquestionably partake of the same priviledge.

2 Clouds and darkness are round about him c: * righteousness and judgment d are the ‖ habitation e of his throne.

c A dark Cloud doth encompass him. Wherein he seems to allude to that dark Cloud in which God did antiently so often manifest his presence for the comfort of his Saints, and for the terror and punishment of evil-doers. The design of these words is to describe either 1. the depth and unsearchableness of Gods judgments. Or 2. the obscurity of Christs coming, that the Divine Majesty did vail himself with flesh and came not with that outward splendour which the Jews expected. Or rather 3. the terror of his presence and coming to his Enemies, of which he manifestly speaks in the following Verses; and of which the Prophets frequently speak when they make mention of his coming, as Joel 2. 31, 32. Mal. 4. 1. d (i. e.) Righteous judgment or righteousness in judgment. e Or, the foundation or establishment; for the throne is established (and the Hebrew Verb there is the same from whence this word here comes) by righteousness, Prov. 16. 12. All his Decrees and Administrations are grounded upon and managed with righteousness.

f This fire, and lightning and Earthquake, and the said effects of them mentioned here, and v. 4, 5. signifie those dreadful judgments of God which should be inflicted upon the Jews and others for their refusal and contempt of the Messias; which was foretold in the Old Testament, and accomplished in the New Testament.

4 * His lightnings enlightened the world g: the earth *Pf. 77. 18. saw and trembled.

g This phrase signifies not so much illumination as terrour and judgments, as appears both from the following words, and from the constant use of the phrase in that sence, as Psal. 18. 14. and 144. 6. &c.

5 * The hills h melted like wax at the presence of the * Mic. 1. 4. LORD: at the presence of the LORD of the whole Nah. 1. 5. earth i.

Or, They shall be confounded: for this may be a prediction and not an imprecation. n All you whom the Gentiles have made the objects of their worship, and who are capable of giving him worship; which two qualifications agree principally, if not solely, to the Angels of God, whom the Heathens manifestly worshipped in their images as an inferiour sort of gods, of whom therefore this Text is expounded, Heb. 1. 6.

PSAL. XCVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THe matter and scope of this Psalm is the same with the former, and is an evident prediction of the coming of the Messias, and of the blessed effects thereof.

A Psalm.

To Prophet exhorteth Jews, Gentiles, and all the Creatures, to praise God for his Truth and Salvation, 1——9.

*Isa. 42. 10. & 44. 23. & 49. 13. & 52. 9. & 55. 12. * O Sing unto the LORD a new song, for he hath done marvellous things: his right hand and a God by his own onely power hath overcome all difficulties and Enemies, and hath in spight of all set Christ upon his Throne and propagated his Kingdom in the World.

*Isa. 40. 5. & 52. 10. & 56. 1. & 62. 2. & Luke 2. 30. & 3. 6. & Acts 28. 28. 2 * The LORD hath made known his salvation b: his righteousness c hath he ‖ openly shewed in the sight of the heathen.

b The redemption or salvation of the World by the Messias: which was hitherto referred as a secret among the Jews, yea was not thoroughly known and believed by the most of the Jews themselves. c Either his faithfulness in accomplishing this great promise of sending the Messias: or his goodness and mercy oft called by this Hebrew word: or the righteousness of God or of Christ revealed in the Gospel.

3 He hath remembred his mercy and his truth c toward the house of Israel: all the ends of the earth d have seen e the salvation of our God.

c He hath now actually given that mercy which he had promised to the Israelites. d All the Inhabitants of the Earth from one end to another. e (i. e.) Enjoyed it, as this word is oft used, as hath been proved again and again.

4 Make a joyful noise unto the LORD all the earth f: make a loud noise, and rejoice, and sing praise.

f Because you all do now partake of the same priviledges with the Jews, join with them in worshipping and praising of God.

5 Sing unto the LORD with the harp; with the harp, and the voice of a psalm g.

g The worship of the New Testament is here described in phrases taken from the rites of the old, as Psal. 92. 3. and oft elsewhere.

6 With trumpets, and sound of cornet: make a joyful noise before the LORD, the king.

7 Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof h: the world, and they that dwell therein.

h All those Creatures wherewith it is replenished, which by a poetical strain are invited to praise God. See of this and the next Verses the notes on Psal. 96. 11, 12, 12.

8 Let the floods clap their hands: let the hills be joyful together,

*Pf. 96. 13. 9 Before the LORD; *for he cometh to judge the earth: with righteousness shall he judge the world, and the people with equity.

PSAL. XCIX.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm is supposed to be David's, and the matter of it seems to suit to his time and the state of affairs which then was: although as David was a type of Christ, so this Psalm may look beyond David unto the Messias. But it doth not speak so fully nor clearly of the Messias as the foregoing Psalms do.

The Psalmist setteth forth the weighty power of God in Zion, 1, 2. Gods Holiness a reason for our praising him, 3. Equity and Righteousness executed in Jacob, 4. The Church exhorted by the Example of their Forefathers, 5——8. to praise and magnifie him in his holy hill, 9.

*Pf. 93. 1. & Pf. 97. 1. * THe LORD reigneth, let the people a tremble: * he sitteth between the cherubims b, let a To wit, such as are enemies to God and to his people. b Upon the Ark. See 1 Sam. 4. 4. He is present with his people to protect them and to punish their Enemies. c The people of the Earth, by comparing this clause with the former. d To wit, with fear and trembling, as in the former clause.

2 The LORD is great in Zion e, and he is high above all people f.

e In the Hebrew Text the words lie in this order, The Lord in Zion (i. e. which dwelleth in Zion, as is said Psal. 9. 11. Isa. 8. 18. Joel 3. 21.) is great. f Above all the people of the Earth, and of whom he spake ver. 1. who shall exalt themselves against him.

3 Let them g praise thy great and terrible name: for it is holy h.

g To wit, all people last mentioned. h For it is not onely great but holy, and therefore most praise-worthy.

*Ps. 98. 6. 4 * The kings strength also loveth judgment i: thou dost establish equity k; thou executest judgment and righteousness in Jacob l.

i Though his Dominion be absolute and uncontroulable and his power irresistable, yet he doth not abuse it to tyranny and oppression, as the Princes of the World commonly do, but tempers and manageth it with righteousness, and not onely doth judge justly, but, which is more, loves to do so. The Kings strength is by a known Hebraism put for the strong, or powerful King. k To wit, in all thy proceedings. Equity is thy constant and stable course. l Amongst thine own people; whom, when they do amiss, he punisheth no less than other people, as he notes below v. 8. where. by he sheweth that he is no respecter of persons, but a righteous and impartial Judge to all sorts of men.

5 Exalt ye the LORD our God, and worship at his foot-stool q: for ‖ he is holy r. ‖ Or, it is holy.

q Before the Ark, which is so called 1 Chron. 28. 2. Psal. 132. 7. r Or rather, for it (to wit, the Ark) is holy: it is consecrated to be a pledge of Gods presence and the onely place of Gods publick worship.

6 Moses and Aaron among his priests, and Samuel s among them that call upon his name t: they called upon the LORD, and he answered them u.

s He presseth them to perform the duty of praising and worshipping God by the examples of three eminent persons who practised this duty, and that with happy success. He reckoneth Moses among the Priests not without cause, partly because before the institution of the Priesthood he executed that office, Exod. 24. 6. Numb. 7. and partly because he oft interceded to God for the people; which was a very considerable part of the Priests work. See Numb. 6. 23, &c. Joel 2. 17. t Who used frequently and solemnly to intercede with God on the behalf of the people. So the general expression is here used synecdochically for this particular kind of prayer: such Synecdoche's being very frequent in Scripture. u Moses, Exod. 32. and elsewhere; Aaron, Numb. 16. Samuel, 1 Sam. 7. 9. and 12. 19. Compare Jer. 15. 1.

7 He spake unto them x in the cloudy pillar: they kept his testimonies, and the ordinance that he gave them y.

x (i. e.) To some of them; for the expression is only indefinite and therefore doth not necessarily reach to all of them: to Moses frequently; to Aaron, Exod. 19. 24. and 33. 9, 10, 11. Numb. 12. 5. And for Samuel, he answered him if not by words yet really and by his actions, thundering against the Philistins, 1 Sam. 7. 9, &c. which supposeth a Cloud, if not a Cloudy Pillar. y This is added, not onely for their commendation but for the instruction of the Israelites, to teach them that God will not hear the Prayers of them who do not keep his Commandments.

z The intercessours before mentioned. a Either 1. Moses and Aaron, who did sin, and whose sins God did pardon, yet so that he did punish them with exclusion from the Land of Canaan; of which see Numb. 20. 12. Deut. 32. 50, 51. Or rather, 2. the people for whom they prayed; which though not expressed may be easily understood from the following words and from the Histories to which these words relate. For this forgiving was evidently the effect of Gods answering the Prayers of the persons above mentioned. And therefore as their Prayers recorded in Scripture were not for the pardon of their own sins, but for the pardon of the peoples sins, so this forgiveness granted was for the sins of the people. And whereas the people are not here mentioned; it must be remembred that in Scripture the relative is frequently put without the antecedent, as it is Numb. 7. 89. and 114. 2. Prov. 14. 26. b This clause limits and explains the former. Thou didst forgive the sins of the people not absolutely and universally, for thou didst punish them severely, but so far as not to inflict that total and final destruction upon them which they deserved, and thou hadst threatned. See Exod. 32. 10, 14, 34.

9 Exalt the LORD our God, and worship at his holy hill c: for the LORD our God is holy.

c Either in Zion: or in his Church typified by it, and oft called Zion.

PSAL. C.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm seems to have been composed for the use of the Israelites in their thank-offerings, or upon other solemn occations of praising God, as the title speaks; but withal it hath a further prospect even to the days of the Messiah, as some of the Hebrew Doctors acknowledge, and to the calling of the Gentiles whom he invites to join with them in the praises of God their Lord and Maker.

A Psalm of ‖ praise. ‖ Or, thanksgiving.

An Exhortation to praise God joyfully, 1, 2. for his greatness, power, 3. 4. goodness, and faithfulness to his Church, 5.

1 MAke a joyful noise a unto the LORD † all ye † Heb. all the earth. lands b.

a Partly with Voices and Songs of rejoicing and thanksgiving; and partly with musical infruments as the manner then was. b All the inhabitants of the Earth. Or, all the land, (i. e.) all the people of Israel dwelling in this Land. Although his invitation seems to be more general, extending also to the Gentiles, of whom many even in those days joined themselves to the Church of God.

2 Serve the LORD with gladness: come before his presence with singing.

3 Know ye that the LORD he is God; it is he that hath made us c, ‖ and not we our selves d; * we are his ‖ Or, and his we are. people, and the sheep of his pasture. * Pf. 95. 7. Ezek. 34. 30, 31.

c Both by Creation, and by adoption and Regeneration, whereby he made us his people, which also is called a creation or making, as Deut. 32. 6. Isa. 29. 23. and 43. 7. Eph. 2. 10. d Therefore we owe him homage and service, and him onely and not other gods who made us not.

4 Enter into his gates d with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name.

d The gates of his Courts; for the people might enter no further, and the Courts had Walls and Gates as well as the House.

5 For the LORD is good: his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth † to all generations.

† Heb. to generation and generation.

PSAL. CI.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm was compoſed by David between times of God's promiſing the Kingdom to him and his actual and plenary poſſeſſion of it, as appears both from v. 2. and from the contexture of the Pſalm, wherein he ſpeaks not of his preſent practice, but of his purpoſe for the future, and ſolemnly declares his reſolution, and obligeth himſelf to theſe things when he ſhall be in a capacity to put them in Execution.

A Pſalm of David.

David maketh a vow to praiſe the Lord, 1. to walk perfectly for an Example, 2. to deſtroy all the wicked, 3—5. and to delight in the faithful of the Land, 6—8.

1 I Will ſing of mercy and judgment a: unto thee, O LORD, will I ſing.

a Either 1. of God towards me; of Gods mercy towards me, and of his juſt judgments upon mine Enemies. Or 2. of mine towards my people, I will in my Song declare my obligation and full purpoſe to execute mercy and judgment in my Dominion; which are the two Pillars of Government: of which he ſpeaks in the following Verſes. Interpreters are much divided which to chuſe. Poſſibly both may be joyned together, and the ſence may be this; I will praiſe thee, O Lord, as for all thy other excellencies, ſo particularly for thoſe two Royal perfections of mercy and juſtice or judgment, which thou haſt ſo eminently diſcovered in the Government of the World, and of thy people Iſrael; and I will make it my care and buſineſs to imitate and follow thee as in other things ſo eſpecially in thoſe vertues which are ſo neceſſary for the diſcharge of my truſt and the good government of thy and my people.

2 I will behave my ſelf wiſely in a perfect way b; O when wilt thou come unto me c! I will walk within my houſe d with a perfect heart e.

b I will manage all my affairs with wiſdom and integrity; which are the two chief qualifications requiſite for all men, Mat. 10. 16. and moſt neceſſary in Princes. c O when wilt thou give me the Kingdom which thou haſt promiſed me, that ſo I may be capable of executing theſe good purpoſes both for my own comfort and for the benefit of thy people? Or, without an interrogation, as this Particle is uſed, Exod. 20. 24. when thou ſhalt come to me, to wit, in the performance of that promiſe to me. He ſpeaks not excluſively, as if he would not walk wiſely and righteouſly in the mean time, but emphatically, that he would continue to do ſo when he was advanced to the Kingdom, and that he would not ſuffer himſelf to be corrupted by his Royal Power and Dignity, as the Princes of the World commonly were. Withal he may intimate, that now he could not do as he deſired, and that by the neceſſity of his affairs he was forced to make uſe of ſuch men as he did not like, and to wink at thoſe miſcarriages, which it was not now in his power to reform. God is oft ſaid in Scripture to come to men when he fulfils a promiſe to them, or confers a favour or bleſſing upon them, as Gen. 18. 10. Exod. 20. 24. Pſal. 80. 2. Iſa. 35. 4. &c. d In my own Court and Family, as well as in my publick adminiſtrations; knowing how great an influence the example of my private converſation will have upon my people either to reform or corrupt them. e This Clauſe adds weight to the former, I will not onely walk in a perfect or right way (which a man may do for politick reaſons or with evil deſign, but I will do ſo) with an upright and honeſt heart, which is moſt acceptable to God.

f To wit, to look upon it with deliberation and deſign, or with deſire and delight, as this phraſe here and elſewhere implies. If any ungodly or unjuſt thing ſhall be ſuggeſted to me, whatſoever ſpecious pretences it may be covered with, as reaſon of ſtate or worldly advantage, I will caſt it out of my mind and thoughts with abhorrency, ſo far will I be from putting it in Execution. g From God and from his Laws. h To wit, ſuch work: Or, the Contagion of ſuch Examples. I will neither imitate nor indure ſuch works, nor ſuch workers.

4 A froward heart i ſhall depart from me k: I will not know l a wicked perſon.

i A man of a corrupt mind and wicked life, ſuch as other Princes chuſe and prefer as being ſuitable to themſelves, and to their wicked deſigns. k Shall be turned out of my Court, leſt they ſhould tempt me or infect the reſt of my Family, or be injurious or ſcandalous to my people. l (i. e.) Not own nor countenance.

5 Whoſo privily ſlandereth his neighbour m, him will I cut off: him that hath an high look, and a proud heart n, will not I ſuffer.

m Such as by ſecret and falſe informations and accuſations of others ſeek to gain my favour and to advance themſelves by the ruine of others; which are the common peſts of Courts and Kingdoms; n Theſe he mentions, becauſe Pride is the common Plague of Courts, and the fountain of many enormities in Courtiers; it makes them imperious and inſolent towards the poor oppreſſed Subjects that reſort to them for relief; it inclines them to thoſe counſels and courſes not which are beſt for the publick good, but which are moſt for their own honour and advantage, it makes them oppreſſive and injurious to others that they may have wherewith to ſatisfie their own luſts.

6 Mine eyes ſhall be upon o the faithful p of the land, that they may dwell with me q: he that walketh ‖ in a perfect way r, he ſhall ſerve me s.

o Either 1. to find them out. Or 2. to favour or encourage them, as this phraſe is oft uſed, as Pſal. 34. 15. Jer. 39. 12. and 40. 4. p Men of truth, juſtice and integrity, who will be faithful firſt to God and then to me and to my people. q Or, to ſit or abide or converſe with me, in mine Houſe and Counſels and publick adminiſtrations. r In the way of Gods precepts which are pure and perfect. s In domeſtick and publick employments.

7 He that worketh deceit t ſhall not dwell within my houſe: he that telleth lies u ſhall † not tarry in my ſight x.

t He who ſhall uſe any frauds, or cheats, or ſubtil artifices to abuſe or wrong any of my people. Which David's Courtiers were more likely to indeavour, becauſe he would not permit any open violence. u He that ſhall abuſe me with lyes, as Courtiers uſually do their Princes, either to defend and excuſe the guilty, or to betray the innocent. x I will certainly and immediately banish him from my preſence.

8 I will * early y deſtroy all the wicked of the land; that I may cut off all wicked doers from the city of the LORD z.

* Jer. 21. 12.

y Speedily and without delay, as ſoon as I ariſe in the Morning, or, as ſoon as I am ſeated in the Throne, that ſo I may both prevent all that miſchief which otherwiſe they might do; and hinder the infection of others by their evil example; and diſcourage and deter all my Subjects from the like practiſes. Heb. In the mornings, (i. e.) every Morning, as the ſame phraſe is uſed alſo, Job 7. 18. Pſal. 73. 14. Iſa. 33. 2. The Morning was the time allotted for the exerciſe of judgment. See Jer. 21. 12. z Either 1. from Jeruſalem, which, though now in the hands of the Jebuſites, he looks upon by an eye of faith as if he had it in poſſeſſion; which he deſigned for the chief and Royal City of his Kingdom, and for the ſeat of the Ark and worſhip of God. And therefore this place above all others was to be purged and preſerved from wickedneſs and wicked men. Or 2. from the whole Nation or Commonwealth of Iſrael: for David did intend and was obliged to reform not onely that one City, but his whole Kingdom, which alſo may come under the name of a City, as being combined and united under one Government: for which reaſon the name of City is given both to the whole Church of Chriſt, as Iſa. 26. 1. Heb. 12. 22. Revel. 20. 9. and to the great Anti-Church, the Kingdom of myſtical Babylon, Revel. 11. 8, 13. and 17. 18. &c.

PSAL. CII.

A Prayer ‖ of the afflicted when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his complaint before the LORD a.

a This Pſalm contains a form of Prayer and Expoſtulation with God compoſed for the uſe of all true Iſraelites, in the name and behalf of their Mother the Church of Iſrael. It ſeems to have been compoſed in the time of their Captivity and near the end of it, v. 13, 14. But as the literal Jeruſalem was a type of the ſpiritual or of the Church of God and of Chriſt, and the rebuilding of the former a type of the reviving and edification of the latter, ſo the Pſalmiſt looks through that mercy of the rebuilding of the City of Jeruſalem and the Temple to the further progreſs and to the end and perfection of that work, which was in the coming of the Meſſiah, by whom it was to be compleated, and by whom the Gentiles were to be brought to the knowledge and worſhip of the true God.

The Church prayeth for audience, 1, 2. and maketh a grievous complaint of her heavy afflictions, 3——11. comforteth her ſelf in the eternal Mercy of God, 12——17. which is to be recorded for future generations, 18. Deliverance from the Babylonian Captivity, and the reſtauration of Jeruſalem predicted, 19——28.

1 HEar my prayer, O LORD, and let my cry come unto thee.

2 Hide not thy face from me in the day when I am in trouble, encline thine ear unto me: in the day when I call, anſwer me ſpeedily.

3 For my days are conſumed ‖ like ſmoke b, and my bones c are burnt as an hearth d.

‖ Or, (as ſome read) into ſmoke. Pſ. 37. 20.

b Which paſſeth away in obſcurity and ſwiftly and irrecoverably. Or, into ſmoke, as Wood or any combuſtible matter put into the fire waſteth away in ſmoke and aſhes. c The moſt ſtrong and ſolid parts of my body which ſeemed faſeſt from the fire. d Either as an Hearth is heated or burnt up by the Coals which are laid upon it: or as the Hearth being ſo heated burns up that which is put upon it.

4 My heart is ſmitten, and withered like graſs e; ſo that I forget to eat my bread f.

e Which is ſmitten and withered by the heat of the Sun either whilſt it ſtands, or after it is cut down. f Becauſe my mind is wholly ſwallowed up with the contemplation of my own miſeries.

5 By reaſon of the voice of my groaning, * my bones cleave to my ‖ skin g.

* Job 19. 20. Lam. 4. 8.

g My fleſh being quite conſumed with exceſſive ſorrows.

6 * I am like a pelican h in the wilderneſs: I am like an owl of the deſert.

* Job 30. 29.

h Or, bittern, as the ſame word is tranſlated, Iſa. 34. 11. Zeph. 2. 14. It is a ſolitary and mournful Bird, as alſo the Owl here following is.

7 I watch, and am as a ſparrow i alone upon the houſe-top.

i Which hath loſt its Mate, and then is very ſad and ſolitary, as ſome report; although that be uncertain and improbable. But this Hebrew word doth not only ſignifie a Sparrow, but in general any Bird, as Levit. 14. 4. Deut. 14. 11. Dan. 4. 9, 11, 30. And ſo it may here deſign any one or more ſort of Birds, which uſed to ſit alone watching and mourning upon houſe-tops.

8 Mine enemies reproach me all the day: and they that are mad againſt me, are ſworn againſt me k.

k Or, and being mad or enraged at or againſt me they ſwear againſt me, they ſwear they will do me yet more miſchief: Or, they ſwear by me, they make uſe of my name and miſery in their forms of ſwearing and imprecation; as when they would expreſs their malicious and miſchievous intentions againſt another, they ſwear that they will uſe him or make him as miſerable as a Jew. See the like expreſſions Numb. 5. 21. Iſa. 61. 15. Jer. 29. 22.

9 For I have eaten aſhes like bread m, and * mingled my drink with weeping n.

* Pſ. 42. 3. & 80. 5.

l So this Verſe gives a reaſon either of his great ſadneſs, expreſſed v. 6, 7. or why they ſwore by him in the ſenſe laſt given. Or, Surely, as this Particle is oft uſed. Or, Therefore, becauſe of thoſe bitter reproaches laſt mentioned. m The ſenſe is, Duſt and Aſhes are as conſtant and familiar to me as the eating of my Bread; I cover my head with them; I ſit, yea lye down and roll my ſelf in them, as Mourners oft did, 2 Sam. 13. 19. Job 2. 8. 12. and 15. 15. Iſa. 47. 1. Mich. 1. 10. by which means the Aſhes might eaſily be mingled with their Meat, as Tears were with their Drink in the next Clauſe. n He alludes to the cuſtom of mingling their wine with water.

10 Becauſe of thine indignation and thy wrath o: for thou haſt lifted me up, and caſt me down p.

o Becauſe I do not only conflict with men, but with the Almighty God, and with his anger. p As a man litts up a perſon or thing as high as he can, that he may caſt it down to the ground with greater force. Or he aggravates his preſent reproach and miſery by the conſideration of that great honour and happineſs to which God had formerly advanced him, as Job did, ch. 29. and 30. and the Church, Lam. 1. 7.

Pſ. 135. 11 * My days q are like a ſhadow that declineth r: and I am * withered like graſs.

q Our hopes and comforts and happineſs; days being oft put for Iſa. 32. 12. for happy days, or an happy ſtate, as Pſal. 37. 18. Lam. 5. 21. as Pſal. 6. elſewhere they are put more generally for the events which happen Iſa. 10. in thoſe days: in both which caſes it is a Metonymy of the Adjunct.
Eccl. 12. r Or, that is extended or ſtretched out to its utmoſt length, as it is when the Sun is ſetting, when it ſpeedily and totally vaniſheth. And juſt ſo the hopes of our reſtitution, which ſometimes we have, are quick y cut off and diſappointed.

Lam. 5. 12 But * thou, O LORD, ſhalt endure for ever s, and * thy remembrance t unto all generations.

* Pſ. 135. 13.
s But this is my comfort, although we dye and our hopes vaniſh, yet our God is everlaſting and unchangeable, and therefore invincible by all his and our enemies, conſtant in his counſels and purpoſes of Mercy to his Church, ſtedfaſt and faithful in the performance of all his promiſes; and therefore he both can and will deliver his people. t Either, 1. The fame and memory of thy wonderful works. Or rather, 2. Thy name, Jehovah, mentioned in the former Clauſe, which is called by this very word, Gods remembrance or memorial, and that unto all generations, Exod. 3. 15. Thus this clauſe exactly anſwers to the former; and both of them deſcribe the Eternity of Gods exiſtence, whereby the Pſalmiſt relieves and ſupports himſelf under the conſideration of his own and his peoples frailty and vanity.

13 Thou ſhalt ariſe, and have mercy upon Zion u: for the time to favour her, yea the ſet time x is come.

u Upon Jeruſalem, or thy Church and People. x The end of thoſe ſeventy years which thou haſt fixed: of which ſee Jer. 25. 12. and 29. 10. Dan. 9. 2.

14 For thy ſervants take pleaſure in her ſtones, and favour the duſt thereof y.

y Thy people value the duſt and rubbiſh of the holy City more than all the Palaces of the Earth, and paſſionately deſire that it may be rebuilt.

15 So the heathen ſhall fear the name of the LORD: and all the kings of the earth thy glory z.

z Which was in ſome ſort fulfilled when the rebuilding of the Temple and City of God was carried on and finiſhed through ſo many and great difficulties and oppoſitions, to the admiration, envy and terrour of their Enemies, as we read Neh. 6. 16. Compare Pſal. 126. 2. but much more truly and fully in building of the Spiritual Jeruſalem by Chriſt, unto whom the Gentiles were gathered, and the Princes of the World paid their acknowledgment.

16 When the LORD ſhall build up Zion, he ſhall appear in his glory a.

a His glorious power and wiſdom and goodneſs ſhall be manifeſted to all the World.

17 He will regard the prayer of the deſtitute b, and not deſpiſe c their prayer.

b (i. e.) Of his poor forſaken deſpiſed people in Babylon. c (i. e.) Will accept and anſwer.

18 This ſhall be written d for the generation to come e: Pſ. 22. 31. and * the people which ſhall be created f ſhall praiſe the LORD.

* Pſ. 102. 18.
d This wonderful deliverance ſhall not be loſt nor forgotten, but carefully recorded by thy people. e For the inſtruction and incouragement of all ſucceeding Generations. The ſingular number put for the plural, as is ordinary. f Which may be underſtood, either, 1. Of the Jews which ſhould be reſtored, who were in a manner dead and buried in the grave, and meer dry bones, Iſa. 26. 19. Ezek. 37. and therefore their reſtauration might well be called a Creation; or as it is elſewhere, a Reſurrection. Or 2. Of the Gentiles who ſhould be converted, whoſe Converſion is frequently, and might very juſtly be called a ſecond Creation. See 43. 1, 7, 15. and 65. 18. Eph. 2. 10, 15.

19 For he hath looked down g from the height of his ſanctuary h: from heaven did the LORD behold the earth:

g To wit, upon us not like an idle ſpectator, but with an eye of pity and relief, as the next Verſe declares. h From his higher or upper Sanctuary, to wit, Heaven, as the next Clauſe explains it, which is called Gods high and holy place, Iſa. 57. 15.

20 * To hear the groaning of the priſoner; to looſe † thoſe that are appointed to death i.

* Pſ. 79. 11.

i To releaſe his poor Captives out of Babylon, and, which is more, from the Chains and Fetters of Sin and Satan, and from eternal deſtruction.

21 To declare the name of the LORD in Zion, and his praiſe in Jeruſalem k.

k That they being delivered might publiſh and celebrate the name and praiſes of God in his Church.

22 When the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms to praiſe the LORD l.

l When the Gentiles ſhall gather themſelves to the Jews, and joyn with them in the praiſe and worſhip of the true God, and of the Meſſias. This Verſe ſeems to be added to intimate, that although the Pſalmiſt in this Pſalm reſpects the deliverance of the Jews out of Babylon, yet he had a further deſign and a principal reſpect unto that greater and more general deliverance of his Church and People by the Meſſias.

23 He m † weakned my ſtrength in the way m; he † Heb. afflicted. ſhortned my days n.

m To wit, God, to whom he aſcribes theſe Calamities, v. 10. to whom therefore he addreſſeth himſelf for relief. m Either, 1. In the midſt of our expectations. Whilſt we are expecting the accompliſhment of thy promiſe, either of bringing us out of Babylon, or of ſending the Meſſias, we faint and one of us periſh after another, and our hope is like the giving up of the Ghoſt. Or rather, 2. In the midſt of the courſe of our lives. Which ſenſe is confirmed, 1. From the following clauſe. Which after the manner explains the former, he ſhortned my days; as alſo from the next Verſe where he begs relief from God againſt this miſery in theſe words, take me not away in the midſt of my days. 2. From the uſe of this word way, which is uſed for the courſe of a Mans Life, Pſal. 2. 12. and (which comes to the ſame thing) for the courſe of a journey as it is oppoſed to the end of the journey, Gen. 24. 27. Exod. 23. 20. and elſewhere; the life of man being oft compared to a journeying or travelling and death to his journeys end. And the Pſalmiſt here ſpeaks (as other ſacred Writers do elſewhere, and as all ſorts of Writers frequently do) of the whole Commonwealth: as of one man, and of its continuance as of the life of one man. And ſo this ſeems to be the matter of his complaint and humble expoſtulation with God; O Lord, thou didſt chuſe us out of all the world to be thy peculiar people, and didſt plant us in Canaan, and cauſe a glorious Temple to be built to thy Name to be the only place of thy publick and ſolemn worſhip in the World, and didſt make great and glorious promiſes, that thine eyes and heart ſhould be upon it perpetually, 1 Kings 9. 3. and that thy people ſhould be planted in thy land ſo as not to be moved any more or afflicted, as they had been in the dayes of the Judges, 2 Sam. 7. 10, 11. From whence we promiſed to our ſelves a long and ſettled proſperity. But alas, how ſoon were our hopes blaſted, not long after the beginning of our ſettlement, in Rehoboams time, and ſo ſucceſſively in the courſe of our affairs under the following Kings, till at laſt thou didſt give us up to ruine and deſolation, as at this day. And this he doth not alledge to accuſe God, or excuſe himſelf or his people, but only that he might move the Divine Majeſty to ſhew them ſome pity conſidering the ſhortneſs of their days, and his own Eternity, as he purſues the Argument in the following Verſes. n The days of my life, or of my proſperous ſtate, as above ver. 11. for adverſity is a kind of death, and is frequently ſo called.

24 I ſaid, O my God; * take me not away o in the midſt of my days p: thy years are throughout all generations q.

o Do not wholly cut off and deſtroy thy people of Iſrael. p Before they come to a full age and ſtature, and to the plenary poſſeſſion of thy promiſes, and eſpecially of that great and fundamental promiſe of the Meſſias, in and by whom alone their happineſs is to be compleated, and until whoſe coming thy Church is in ſo nonage; of which ſee Gal. 4. 1, 2, 3, 4. Poſſibly the Pſalmiſt (whom ſome learned Interpreters ſuppoſe to be Daniel) may have reſpect to that Prophecy, Dan. 9. 24, 25. which probably was publiſhed before this time; for this time was almoſt preciſely the midſt of the days between the building of the material Temple by Solomon, and the building of the Spiritual Temple or the Church by the Meſſias; there being about a thouſand years diſtance between thoſe two periods, whereof ſeventy Prophetical weeks, or four hundred and ninety years were yet to come. And ſo he prays that God would not root them out in this Babyloniſh Captivity, but would graciouſly reſtore them to their own Land, and preſerve them as a Church and Nation there until the coming of the Meſſias. q Though we ſucceſſively die and periſh, yet thou art the everlaſting and unchangeable God, and therefore art and will ever be able to deliver thy people, and faithfulin performing all thy promiſes; and therefore we beſeech thee to pity our frail and languiſhing ſtate, and give us a more ſettled and laſting felicity than yet we have enjoyed; and therefore we truſt that thy people ſhall continue and be eſtabliſhed before thee, as he ſaith v. 28. becauſe as thou art the everlaſting God, ſo thou haſt made an everlaſting Covenant with them, Pſal. 105. 10. Iſa. 55. 3. Jer. 32. 40. to be their God for ever; and therefore thou wilt not now forſake or reject us.

* Heb. 1. 10. 25 * Of old haſt thou laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the work of thy hands r.

r The Eternity of God looks both backward and forward, it is both without beginning and without end. The former is affirmed and illuſtrated v. 24, 26, 27. the latter is clearly implyed in this Verſe. Thou hadſt a being before the Creation of the VVorld, when there was nothing but Eternity, but the Earth and Heavens had a beginning given them by thy Almighty Power.

* Iſa. 15. 6. † Heb. ſtand. 26 * They ſhall periſh s, but thou ſhalt † endure: yea, all of them ſhall wax old t like a garment u; as a veſture ſhalt thou change them, and they ſhall be changed.

s Either 1. As to the ſubſtance of them, which ſhall be annihilated. Or 2. As to their preſent nature and uſe. See Iſa. 65. 17. and 66. 22. 2 Pet. 3. 7, 10, 11. The Heavens and the Earth, although they be the moſt permanent of all viſible beings, and their continuance is oft mentioned to ſignifie the ſtability and immutability of things, yet if compared with thee are as nothing, they had a beginning and ſhall have an end. t (i. e.) Decay and periſh. u Which is worn out and laid aſide, and exchanged for another. And ſo ſhall this preſent frame of Heaven and Earth be.

27 But thou art the ſame, and thy years ſhall have no end.

28 The children of thy ſervants ſhall continue x, and their ſeed ſhall be eſtabliſhed before thee y.

x Though the Heavens and the Earth periſh, and though we thy ſervants pine away in our iniquities, according to thy righteous ſentence and threatning, Lev. 26. 39. and dye in Captivity, yet by vertue of thy eternal and unchangeable Nature and Covenant, we reſt aſſured that our Children, and their Children after them, ſhall enjoy the promiſed Mercies, an happy reſtitution to, and ſettlement in their own Land, and the preſence of our and their Meſſias, whom, being not to come till after 490 years, we ſhall not live to ſee. The expreſſion here uſed is general, not without deſign, partly to ſhew that this promiſed bleſſing belongs to the Jews not upon the account of any carnal relation to Abraham, but as they are and continue to be Gods ſervants, from whom if they revolt, they loſe this and all their other priviledges; and partly to imply that it belongs to all Gods faithful Servants, and to their Children, whether they be Jews, or Gentiles, of whoſe Converſion he ſpoke v. 22. y In the place of thy gracious preſence, either here in thy Church, or hereafter in Heaven, from which we are now baniſhed. And this phraſe further intimates that their happineſs did not conſiſt in the enjoyment of the outward Bleſſings of the Land of Canaan, but in the preſence and fruition of God there, which he mentions as the top and upſhot of all his deſires and their felicities.

PSAL. CIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm contains a thankful Commemoration and Celebration of Gods Mercies to the Pſalmiſt himſelf, and to the people of Iſrael, and to all good men.

A Pſalm of David.

David ſtirreth up himſelf to bleſs God, 1, 2. who forgiveth his Sins, 3. Redeemeth and ſatisfieth his Soul, 4, 5. For other manifold Mercies to himſelf and the Church, 6—14. He conſidereth the frailty of Man, 15. and ſheweth Gods Everlaſting Mercy to his Covenanted ones, 14—19. He exhorteth all Creatures to praiſe him, 20—22.

| * Pſ. 104. 1. & 146. 1. 1 * BLeſs the LORD, O my ſoul: and all that is within me, bleſs his holy name a.

a Let all my thoughts and affections be engaged, and united and ſtirred up to the higheſt pitch in and for this work.

2 Bleſs the LORD, O my ſoul, and forget not all his benefits.

* Mat. 9. 2, 6. Mar. 2. 11. Luk. 7. 47. 3 * Who forgiveth all thine iniquities: who healeth all thy diſeaſes b.

b Either, 1. Spiritual Diſeaſes, Luſts or Corruptions which he ſubdues and purgeth out by his Grace; as this phraſe is uſed Pſal. 41. 4. Iſa. 6. 10. and 53. 5. Or 2. Corporal Diſeaſes or Miſeries, of which this word is uſed, 2 Chron. 21. 18, 19. Jer. 14. 18. and 15. 4.

4 Who redeemeth thy life from deſtruction c; who crowneth thee d with loving kindneſs and tender mercies.

c Both temporal and eternal, from deadly dangers and miſeries. d (i. e.) Encompaſſeth and adorneth thee, as a Crown doth.

5 Who ſatisfieth thy mouth with good things e, ſo that *Iſa. 40. 31 * thy youth is renewed like the eagles f.

e Who ſatisfieth all thy juſt deſires and neceſſities. f Either, 1. As the Eagle reneweth her youth by caſting all her old Feathers and getting new ones, whereby it ſeems to grow young again. But this being common to all Birds would not have been appropriated to the Eagle. Or rather, 2. Like the youth of an Eagle. As the Eagle lives long in great ſtrength and vigour, ſo that the old age of an Eagle is uſed proverbially for a lively and vigorous old age. So this is a promiſe of a long and comfortable life.

* Pſ. 146. 7. 6 The LORD * executeth righteouſneſs and judgment for all that are oppreſſed g.

g Which being a ſingular perfection, and that wherein moſt of the Princes of the World were and are defective, is juſtly celebrated in God.

7 He made known his ways h unto Moſes; his acts i unto the children of Iſrael.

h Either 1. His Laws, which are oft called Gods ways. Or 2. The manner and methods of his dealings with men, and eſpecially with his people, called in the next clauſe his acts; his merciful and gracious Nature and Providence, which is particularly called Gods way, Exod. 33. 13. compared with v. 18. 19. and with Exod. 34. 6, 7. and which is here deſcribed in the following Verſes. i His marvellous and gracious works.

8 * The LORD is merciful and gracious, ſlow to * Exod. anger k, and † plenteous in mercy. 34. 6, 7. Nu. 14. 18. Deut. 5. 10. Neh. 9. 17. Pſ. 86. 15.

k Not ſpeedily puniſhing ſinners, but patiently waiting for their Repentance.

9 * He will not always chide l; neither will he keep † Heb. his anger m for ever. great of mercy. * Iſa. 57. 16. Mic. 7. 18.

l Or, contend, by his Judgments with Sinners, but is ready to be reconciled to them, to wit, upon their true Repentance, as is manifeſt from innumerable Texts, and from the whole ſcope and deſign of Scripture. m Which word is underſtood here, as alſo Levit. 19. 18. Jer. 3. 5. Nah. 1. 2. as is evident from the thing it ſelf and from the former clauſe. The Hebrew is a conciſe Language, and there are many ſuch Ellipſes in it, as 2 Sam. 5. 6. compared with Exod. 9. 9. and 1 Chron. 18. 6. comp. with 2 Sam. 8. 6. Pſal. 3. 7. Eccleſ. 7. 15.

10 He hath not dealt with us after our ſins n; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.

n He hath puniſhed us leſs than our iniquities have deſerved, as was confeſſed Ezra 9. 13.

11 For † as the heaven is high above the earth, ſo † Heb. according to great o is his mercy toward them that fear him p. the height of the heaven.

o So much above their deſerts and expectations, and above the mercy which one man ſheweth to another. p Which clauſe he adds here, as alſo ver. 17, 18. to prevent mens miſtakes and abuſes of Gods mercy, and to daſh the vain hopes of impenitent ſinners in Gods mercy.

12 As far as the eaſt is from the weſt; ſo far hath he removed our tranſgreſſions from us q.

q The guilt of our ſins from our perſons and conſciences. The ſenſe is, He hath fully pardoned them, ſo as never to remember them more, as he promiſeth Jer. 31. 34. Heb. 10. 17.

13 Like as a father pitieth his children, ſo the LORD pitieth them that fear him.

14 For he knoweth our frame r; * he remembreth * Pſ. 78. 39. that we are duſt.

r Either, 1. The corruption of our Natures; which God is pleaſed ſometimes to make an argument to pity and ſpare men; as Gen. 8. 21. So the ſenſe is, He conſidereth that great and conſtant propenſion to evil, which is naturally in all mankind, and that therefore if he ſhould deal ſeverely with us, he ſhould immediately deſtroy us all. So this clauſe contains one motive of Gods pity, and the next another. Or rather, 2. The weakneſs and mortality of our Natures, and the frailty and miſery of our Condition, as it ſeems to be explained in the following clauſe, that we are but duſt. So the ſenſe is, He conſidereth that if he ſhould let looſe his hand upon us, and pour forth all his wrath, we ſhould be ſuddenly and irrecoverably deſtroyed, and therefore he ſpareth us.

15 As for man *, his days are as graſs: * as a flower * Pſ. 90. 5. * Job 14. of the field ſ, ſo he flouriſheth. 2. Jam. 1. 10, 11.

ſ Which is more expoſed to Winds, and other violences, than the Flowers of the Garden, which are ſecured by the art and care of the Gardiner.

16 For * the wind paſſeth over it t, and † it is gone: * Iſa. 40. 7. † Heb. is and the * place thereof ſhall know it no more u. not. * Job 7. 10.

t A blaſting or ſtormy wind bloweth upon it. u There is no more any appearance nor remembrance of it in the place where it ſtood and flouriſhed.

17 But the mercy of the LORD is from everlaſting & 20. 5. to everlaſting x upon them that fear him y: and his righteouſneſs z unto childrens children:

x But though we quickly decay and periſh, yet Gods mercy to us doth not die with us, but as it was from Eternity exerciſed in gracious purpoſes, ſo it will be continued unto eternity in that future and endleſs life. y See before on v. 11. z Either his faithfulneſs; or (that this branch may anſwer to the former) his mercy or benignity: this word being frequently uſed in both theſe ſenſes, as hath been proved before. But it is here called righteouſneſs, to intimate that Gods kindneſs to the poſterity of his people is not only an act of his goodneſs, but alſo a diſcharge of his obligation under which he put himſelf to them, as elſewhere, ſo Exod. 20. 6. to which this place ſeems to relate. Hence it is called mercy to Abraham, and truth to Jacob, Mic. 7. 20.

18 * To ſuch as keep his covenant a, and to thoſe that * Deut. 7. 9. remember his commandments to do them b.

a To them that perform the condition of Gods Covenant; that ſincerely love and obey him. Such reſtrictions are oft added, as in the general to overthrow the preſumptuous hopes of ungodly men, ſo particularly to admoniſh the Iſraelites not to reſt too much upon the priviledges of their Parents, or the Covenant made with them, nor to expect any benefit by it, but upon condition of their continuance in Gods Covenant. b That have them much in their thoughts, and practice them in the courſe of their lives.

19 The LORD hath prepared c his throne in the heavens d; and his kingdom ruleth over all e.

c Or rather, eſtabliſhed. Having celebrated Gods mercy to his people, he now praiſeth him for his excellent Majeſty and univerſal Dominion. d Which notes the eminency, glory, power, ſtability and unchangeableneſs of Gods Kingdom. e Over all Creatures both in Heaven and in Earth.

20 Bleſs the LORD ye his angels † that excel in † Heb. ſtrength g, that do his commandments h, hearkening mighty in ſtrength. unto the voice of his word i.

f Which, though glorious Creatures, are but his Miniſters and Meſſengers, as the word ſignifies. And by inviting the Angels to bleſs bleſs God, he quickens men to the ſame Duty as having more dependance upon God, and obligation to him. g Of which ſee one evidence 2 Kings 19. 35. You are freed from the impotencies and infirmities of mankind. h That live in an univerſal, conſtant and perfect obedience to all Gods Commands, which the beſt of men through the infirmity of the fleſh do frequently violate. i That diligently wait for Gods Commands or Errands, and execute them with all chearfulneſs and readineſs.

k Ye Angels; to whom he ſtill continues his addreſs, and whom he more particularly deſcribes by the name of hoſts, a title oft given to the Angels, as Gen. 32. 2. 1 Kings 22. 19. 2 Chron. 18. 18. Luke 2. 13. Revel. 19. 14. in regard of their vaſt numbers, mighty power, unanimous concurrence, and exquiſite order. In the former Verſe the expreſſion was indefinite and general, ye his Angels. here it is univerſal and yet particular, all ye his hoſts. He ſeems to apply himſelf to the ſeveral Orders of Angels, of whom ſee Eph. 3. 10. Col. 1. 16. and to each individual Angel. l This Hebrew word is commonly uſed of the higheſt and moſt honourable ſort of Servants. m Whoſe conſtant buſineſs and delight it is to execute the will and commands of God.

22 Bleſs the LORD all his works in all places of his dominion n: bleſs the LORD, O my ſoul o.

n All Creatures both in Heaven and Earth, according to your ſeveral capacities. o Which thou haſt ſpecial and abundant reaſon to do. Thus he ends the Pſalm with the ſame words wherewith he began it.

PSAL. CIV.

The ARGUMENT.

AS the next foregoing Pſalm treats of the ſpecial favours of God to his Church and People, ſo this declares and celebrates the wonderful and gracious works of God to all Mankind in the Creation of this viſible World, and in the wiſe and powerful diſpoſition of all things therein to mans uſe and comfort.

The Prophet ſtirring up himſelf to praiſe God for his Power manifeſted in the Creation, 1—6. His wonderful Wiſdom and Power in governing of all things, 7—33. Voweth perpetually to praiſe him, 34. And curſeth the unthankfulneſs of the wicked, 35.

Pſ. 33. 1. 1 BLeſs the LORD, O my ſoul: O LORD my God, thou art very great a; * thou art clothed b with honour and majeſty c.

a As in thy own nature and perfections, ſo alſo in the glory of thy works. b Surrounded and adorned. c With honourable Majeſty.

2 Who coverеſt d thy ſelf with light e, as with a garment: who ſtretcheſt out the heavens like a curtain f.

d Or adorneſt or cloatheſt. e Either, 1. With that light which no man can approach unto, as it is called 1 Tim. 6. 16. wherewith therefore he may well be ſaid to be covered or hid from the eyes of mortal men. Or rather, 2. With that firſt-created Light, Gen. 1. 3. which the Pſalmiſt fitly puts in the firſt place, as being the firſt of Gods viſible works. f The uſe whereof it hath, partly in reference to that glorious Manſion of the bleſſed God and his holy Angels, which theſe viſible Heavens (far above which it is, Eph. 4. 10.) do veil and cover; and partly in reference to the Earth which they enclaſe and protect.

Heb. 9. 3 * Who layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters g; who maketh the clouds his chariots, * who Pſ. 18. 10. walketh upon the wings of the wind h.

g In the waters above the heavens, as they are called Gen. 1. 7. Or, in the Clouds, as it is explained in the next Clauſe. In which he many times reſides and rides, and manifeſts his preſence. h Who manageth and employeth the Clouds and Winds in his ſervice.

Heb. 1. 7. 4 * Who maketh his angels ſpirits i: his miniſters a flaming fire k.

i (i. e.) Of a ſpiritual or incorporeal Nature, that they might be fitter for their employments. Or, who maketh his Angels winds, as this laſt word moſt commonly ſignifies, (i. e.) Who made them like the Winds, powerful and active and nimble in executing Gods pleaſure. Or, who uſeth and governeth thoſe glorious Creatures at his pleaſure, even as he commands the ſenſleſs Winds. k Or, like a flaming fire, the note of ſimilitude being here underſtood, as it is Gen. 49. 9. Deut. 32. 22. Pſal. 11. 1. and oft elſewhere: to which he compares the Angels for their irreſiſtible force, and great agility and fervency in the execution of Gods Commands. Or the ſenſe is, who ſometimes clotheth his Angels with ſubtil bodies of VVind or Air, or of Fire, as he ſees fit. And the Angels may not unfitly be mentioned in this place amongſt and in the cloſe of thoſe works of God which were done in the Heavens, of which he hath hitherto ſpoken, v. 2, 3. becauſe they were made at the ſame time when the Heavens were made, and for the ſame uſes and purpoſes, and becauſe they are commonly employed by God in managing the Clouds and VVinds and Meteors to accompliſh Gods deſigns by them. But this Verſe is otherwiſe rendred both by Jewiſh and ſome Chriſtian Interpreters, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew Text, He maketh the winds his angels, and the flame or flames of fire (i. e. the Lightning and Thunder, and other Fiery Meteors in the Air) his miniſters, He maketh uſe of them no leſs than of the holy Angels; and oft-times for the ſame purpoſes, and they do as certainly and readily obey all his Commands as the bleſſed Angels themſelves do. This interpretation may ſeem moſt agreeable to the ſcope of the Pſalm, and to the Context, wherein he is ſpeaking of the viſible works of God. The only difficulty is, that this ſeems to invalidate the Allegation and Argument of the Apoſtle, who expounds it of the Angels, Heb. 1. 7. But indeed it doth not: for (to ſay nothing of other ſolutions given by other men) when the Pſalmiſt ſaith that God maketh or uſeth the winds as his Angels, &c. he plainly ſignifies that the Angels are Gods Miniſters or Servants, no leſs than the winds. And that is ſufficient to juſtifie the Apoſtles Argument, and to prove the preeminency of Chriſt above the Angels; which is the Apoſtles deſign in that place.

5 † * Who laid the foundations of the earth l, that it † Heb. he hath ſhould not be removed m for ever n. founded the earth upon her baſes.

l He hath founded or eſtabliſhed the Earth upon its own baſis or foundations, (i. e.) upon it ſelf or its own weight, whereby it ſtands as faſt and unmoveable, as if it were built upon the ſtrongeſt foundations imaginable. VVhich is a ſtupendious work of divine power and wiſdom. m Out of its proper place, which is the loweſt part of the world. n As long as the world continues. † Job 26. 7. & 38. 4. Pſal. 24. 2. & 136. 6.

6 Thou coveredſt it with the deep o as with a garment: the waters ſtood above the mountains p.

o Either, 1. In the general Deluge. Or rather, 2. In the firſt Creation, as we read Gen. 1. 2, 9. of which the Pſalmiſt is here ſpeaking. p The Mountains were not made by the Deluge, as ſome have thought, who for that reaſon underſtand this Verſe of the ſaid Deluge, for it is apparent they were before it, Gen. 7. 19. and moſt probably were in the firſt Creation, becauſe this variety of Mountains and Valleys is both ornamental and uſeful to the World.

7 * At thy rebuke q they fled r: at the voice of thy * Gen. 8. 1. thunder ſ they haſted away.

q Upon thy ſevere command, Gen. 1. 9. which he calls a rebuke, to imply that there was ſomething in that ſtate of things which might ſeem to need reproof and correction, even that confuſion of Earth and Water together, which therefore God amended in his ſecond days work. r They immediately went to the place which God had allotted to them. ſ Of thy Soveraign Command, which as they could not but hear, ſo they durſt not diſobey. He aſcribes Senſe and Reaſon to inanimate Creatures by a Figure called Profopopœia.

8 ‖ They go up by the mountains; they go down by ‖ Or, the the valleys t unto the place which thou haſt founded for mountains aſcend, the them u. valleys deſcend.

t In that firſt diviſion of the Waters from the Earth, ſome part of them by Gods Command, contrary to their own Nature, went upwards, and became Springs in the Mountains, and the greateſt part went downwards to the Chanels made for them. Others, both antient and later Interpreters, read the words thus, The Mountains aſcend, the Valleys deſcend, when the Waters were ſeparated, part of the Earth went upward and made the Mountains, and part went downward and made the Valleys or low Grounds. But our Tranſlation ſeems the beſt, as being moſt agreeable to the Context, becauſe he ſpeaks of the Waters both in the foregoing and following Verſes. u Unto their proper Chanels and Receptacles which God provided for them.

9 * Thou haſt ſet a bound x, * that they may not paſs * Pſ. 33. 7. over: that they turn not again to cover the earth y. * Gen. 9.

x Even the ſand of the Sea-ſhore, as it is expreſſed Jer. 5. 22. 11, 15. which, though in it ſelf contemptible, and a very poor defence to the Earth againſt that ſwelling and raging Element, yet by Gods Almighty Power and gracious Providence is made ſufficient for that purpoſe. Which is noted as a wonderful work of God, Job 38. 8, &c. y To wit, the whole Earth, as it did in the beginning of the Creation. This was Gods appointment, and the courſe of Nature ſettled by him. But when men tranſgreſſed their bounds, all the Laws of God and Men, it is not ſtrange if the Waters alſo tranſgreſſed their bounds, and once again overwhelmed the Earth in the general Deluge.

10 † He ſendeth the ſprings z into the valleys, which † Heb. who † run among the hills a. ſendeth.

h Both for delight, and for neceſſity either as Food or Phyſick. i And this God doth, he watereth the Earth that thereby it may be prepared or diſpoſed for the production of neceſſary proviſions for Beaſts and for Men, that ſo he (to wit, God) may bring forth food out of the Earth, which without this Bleſſing of God the Earth would never yield. * Judg. 9. 13. † Heb. to make his face ſhine

15 And * wine k that maketh glad the heart of man, with oil, and † oyl to make his face to ſhine l, and bread m which or, more ſtrengtheneth mans heart n. than oil.

k He alſo bringeth out of the Earth the Vines which yield Wine. l He alludes to the cuſtom of thoſe times and places which was upon ſolemn and feſtival occaſions to anoint their Faces with Oyl. See Pſal. 23. 5. But theſe words with the former are by divers Learned Interpreters rendred otherwiſe, which ſeems more agreeable to the order and contexture of the Hebrew Text, And (he giveth) wine that maketh glad the heart of man, to make (or, that he may make, (i. e.) that thereby he may alſo make) his face to ſhine more than oyl, (i. e.) more than it ſhineth when it is anointed with Oyl: Or, as with oyl. So he ſpeaks only of the Wine which he commends from two qualities, that it makes the Heart chearful, and the Countenance pleaſant. m (i. e.) Bread Corn, by a Metonymy. n Which hath a ſingular faculty to preſerve or renew our ſtrength and vigour; whence it is called the ſtaff of life.

16 The trees of the LORD o are † full of ſap p: the cedars of Lebanon q * which he hath planted.

o (i. e.) Which the Lord hath planted, as the next Clauſe expounds this; which came up and grew, and thrive not by Mans Art and Induſtry, but meerly by the care of Gods Providence. p Heb. Are or ſhall be ſatisfied, to wit, with the Rain, of whoſe good effects he is yet ſpeaking. q Yea even the talleſt and largeſt Cedars, ſuch as theſe were, are ſupported and nouriſhed by it.

17 Where the birds make their neſts: as for the ſtork r, the fir-trees s are her houſe.

r Which make their Neſts not only in the tops of Houſes, but alſo in the Field and in high Trees, as Varro and others have noted. s Which alſo are Trees of great height and bigneſs; and which being here ſaid to afford the Storks an Houſe, are thereby ſuppoſed to be preſerved and nouriſhed by the Rain water.

18 The high hills are a refuge for wild goats, and the rocks for the conies t.

t So he paſſeth from the Rain to other works of Gods Providence, as that God hath made ſuitable and ſufficient proviſion for the ſecurity of theſe Creatures againſt their Perſecutors. Although this Verſe alſo may have a reference to the former work, and the barren and rocky Hills may be mentioned as receiving benefit by the Rain, and it may be thus rendred, And the high hills (underſtand, are ſatisfied, which is expreſſed v. 16. and may very well be carried hither) which (that Particle being frequently underſtood) are a refuge for wild goats, and the rocks (underſtand out of the former branch, according to the uſual manner, which are a refuge) for the conies; or, as others tranſlate this word, for the mountain-mice.

19 He appointeth the moon for ſeaſons u; the ſun knoweth his going down x.

u To meaſure and diſtinguiſh the times, both Months, and, amongſt many Nations, Years alſo; as alſo the Seaſons of divers Natural Events, as of the ebbing and flowing of the Waters, and of the humours in Mans Body; and other Seaſons for ſacred and civil affairs, which were commonly regulated by the Moon, not only amongſt the Jews, but among Heathens alſo. See on Gen. 1. 14. x To wit, the time and place in which he is to ſet every day of the Year, which, though varied from day to day, yet he ſo regularly and exactly obſerves, as if he had the underſtanding of a Man or Angel to guide him in obeying the Laws of his Creator. See Job 38. 12. What is here expreſſed concerning his ſetting, is neceſſarily ſuppoſed concerning his riſing alſo; but he mentions only his ſetting, as moſt agreeable to the Context, becauſe that did uſher in the riſing of the Moon, of which he now ſpake, and the entrance of the Night, of which he ſpeaks in the next words.

20 Thou makeſt darkneſs y, and it is night: wherein † all the beaſts of the foreſt do creep forth z.

y Which ſucceeds the Light by vertue of thy Decree and eſtabliſhed Order. z To look out for prey, which in the day time they dare not do for fear of men. So by this viciſſitude of day and night God hath wiſely and mercifully provided both for men, that they may follow their day-labours without danger from wild beaſts, and for the beaſts that they may procure a ſubſiſtence.

* Job 38. 39.

21 * The young lions a roar after their prey b, and ſeek their meat from God c.

a Which can no more ſubſiſt without Divine Providence than thoſe which are moſt old and decrepit. b They roar when they come within ſight and reach of their prey, as Naturaliſts obſerve; whereby this place may be reconciled with Amos 3. 4. c This is a Figurative and Poetical Expreſſion: their roaring is a kind of Natural Prayer to God for relief, as the cryes of Infants are a kind of Prayers to their Mothers for the Breaſt. And this is juſtly noted as an act of Gods ſpecial Providence, becauſe the Lions are very ravenous and need much prey, and alſo are dull in their ſcent, and ſo difficultly find it, and ſlow in their motion, and unable to reach it: and therefore God hath provided another Creature, of quicker ſenſe and motion, which is uſually confederate with them, and procures prey for them, partaking of it with or after them.

d Or rather, they retire or betake themſelves: for the Lions do not commonly go in Companies to one place, but ſeverally, each to his own Den.

23 Man goeth forth e to his work, and to his labour until the evening.

e With ſecurity and confidence, knowing the Nature and Cuſtom of wild Beaſts, that they hide themſelves by day.

24 O LORD, how manifold are thy works! in wiſdom haſt thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches f.

f Of excellent and comfortable things, which are the effects of thy bounty and power.

25 So is this great † and wide ſea, wherein are things creeping g innumerable, both ſmall and great ‖ beaſts.

g This word is common to all Creatures that move without Feet, creeping or touching with their Belly the Element in which they move, whether they creep upon the Earth or ſwim in the Sea. So Gr.

26 There go the ſhips; there is that Leviathan h, whom thou haſt † made to play therein i.

h Either the Whale, or the Crocodile. Of which ſee the notes on Job 40. and 41. i Who being of ſuch vaſt ſtrength and abſolute Dominion in the Sea, tumbles in it with great ſecurity, and ſports himſelf with other Creatures, which he taketh and devoureth at his pleaſure.

27 * Theſe all k wait upon thee l, that thou mayeſt give them their meat in due ſeaſon m.

* Pſ. 136. 25. & 145. 15, 16.

k Both Beaſts and Fiſhes. l Expect ſupplies only from thy Providence. Which is ſaid of them figuratively, and with an alluſion to the manner of tame Beaſts and Fowls which commonly look after and wait upon thoſe perſons who bring their food to them. m When it is neceſſary or convenient for them. By which expreſſion he intimates the moderation of the Beaſts in their deſires of food, and tacitly reproves the intemperance of men who feed themſelves in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon.

28 That thou giveſt them, they gather n: thou openeſt thine hand o, they are filled with good.

n Whatſoever they receive is from thy bounty and gift. o Thou provideſt plentifully for them; as this phraſe implies, Deut. 15. 1. comp. Prov. 21. 20.

29 Thou hideſt thy face p, they are troubled q; * thou takeſt away r their breath, they dye, and return to their duſt s.

* Pſ. 146. 4. Eccl. 12. 7.

p When thou withdraweſt or ſuſpendeſt the favour and care of thy Providence. q Dejected and diſtreſſed. r So this word is uſed, Hoſea 4. 3. Zeph. 1. 2. and elſewhere. s To the Earth from whence they had their firſt original.

30 Thou ſendeſt forth thy ſpirit t, they are created u: and thou reneweſt the face of the earth x.

t Either, 1. That Spirit by which they live, which is called the ſpirit of a beaſt, Eccleſ. 3. 11. which is called their breath or ſpirit (for the word is the ſame there and here) v. 29. and here may be called Gods ſpirit, becauſe it was given and preſerved by him. Or rather, 2. Thy quickning Spirit; for here ſeems to be an oppoſition between their ſpirit, v. 29. and th ſpirit here, and this latter is mentioned as the creating or productive cauſe of the former. And this may be underſtood either, 1. Of the Holy Ghoſt; to whom, no leſs than to the Father and the Son, the work of Creation is aſcribed, Job 33. 4. Pſal. 33. 6. Or rather, 2. That quickning power of God by which he produceth Life in the Creatures from time to time. For he ſpeaks not here of the firſt Creation, but of the continued and repeated production of living Creatures. u Either, 1. The ſame living Creatures which were languiſhing and dying are ſtrangely revived and reſtored; which may not unfitly be called a Creation, as that word is ſometimes uſed, becauſe it is in a manner the giving of a new life and being to a Creature. Or 2. Other living Creatures are produced or generated; the word created being taken in its largeſt ſenſe for the production of things out of indigeſted matter by ſecond Cauſes, as it is uſed, Iſa. 41. 20. and 54. 16. &c. x And thus by thy wiſe and wonderful Providence thou preſerveſt the ſucceſſion of living Creatures upon the Earth, which otherwiſe would be deſolate or without habitants.

31 The glory of the LORD † ſhall endure for ever: the LORD ſhall rejoyce in his works y.

y So the ſenſe is, Thus God doth and will advance the glory of his wiſdom and power and goodneſs in upholding and continuing the works of his hands from generation to generation, and he doth and will take pleaſure both in the preſervation and bleſſing of his works, as alſo in his reflection upon theſe works of his Providence, as he did reſt and delight himſelf in the contemplation of his works of Creation, as is noted Gen. 1. 31. and 2. 2, 3. But the words are by divers, and, as it may ſeem, more agreeably to the Hebrew Text, rendred thus, Let (for the firſt word is of the Imperative Mood) the glory of the Lord endure for ever, and let the Lord have joy (or, then ſhall the Lord rejoyce) in his works. So this is added as a convenient Doxology or Thankſgiving after the commemoration of his great and gracious works: and the ſenſe may be this, Seeing therefore God hath enriched the Earth and us with ſo many fruits of his bounty, let it be our conſtant deſire and endeavour, that God may be perpetually ſerved and glorified in and by them, and that God may be no more grieved at the remembrance of his kindneſs to us, as he was Gen. 6. 5, 6. and thereby be again provoked to deſtroy us, but may take pleaſure in beholding and cheriſhing of his own workmanſhip.

32 He looketh on the earth, and it trembleth; * he toucheth the hills, and they ſmoke z.

* Pſ. 144. 5.

z This is a further illuſtration of Gods powerful Providence over all the Creatures, and their dependance upon him: As when he affords his favour to Creatures, they live and thrive, ſo on the contrary one angry look or touch of his upon the Hills or Earth, makes them tremble and ſmoke, as once Sinai did when God appeared in it. And this conſideration he may poſſibly ſuggeſt to inforce the foregoing exhortation of glorifying God, becauſe if we do not give him the glory due to his name, he can quickly right himſelf, and deſtroy us and all his works.

33 * I will ſing unto the LORD a as long as I live; I will ſing praiſe unto my God, while I have my being.

* Pſ. 146. 2.

a But whatſoever others do, I will not fail to give God his glory and due praiſes.

34 My meditation b of him c ſhall be ſweet d: I will be glad in the LORD e.

b Or, my ſpeech or diſcourſe, my praiſing of God mentioned ver. 33. c Concerning the glory of his works. d Either, 1. To God; he will graciouſly accept it; praiſe being his moſt acceptable Sacrifice, as is affirmed Pſal. 69. 30, 31. Or rather, 2. To my ſelf, as may be gathered from the next Clauſe. He implies that he ſhall not only do this work, which a man may do unwillingly or by conſtraint, but that he will do it chearfully and with delight; which is moſt pleaſing to God. e I will rejoice in the contemplation of Gods works, and in praiſing him for them.

35 Let the ſinners be conſumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more f: bleſs thou the LORD, O my ſoul g: Praiſe ye the LORD.

f But as for thoſe ungodly Creatures who do not regard the works of the Lord, which is noted as a moſt grievous ſin, and puniſhed with a grievous impreccation, like this Pſal. 28. 4, 5. nor give him the glory due to his name, but diſhonour God and abuſe his Creatures, and thereby provoke God to deſtroy the earth, and the men and things which are upon it, it is my Prayer for thine honour and for the ſafeguard of all mankind, that thoſe Sinners who obſtinately and reſolutely continue in this practice of diſhonouring and diſobeying their Creatour may be taken out of this World, that they may no longer infect it nor procure its total deſtruction. Or it may be a prediction delivered in the form of an imprecation, as hath been noted before in like Caſes. g But thou, O my Soul, come not into this wretched ſociety, but employ thy ſelf in this great work of bleſſing and praiſing God; and it is my deſire and hope that others will follow my Example,

The ARGUMENT.

THE Penman of this Pſalm was David, as is manifeſt from 1 Chron. 16. 8, &c. It is a thankſgiving to God for his Mercies to his People of Iſrael.

An exhortation to praiſe God, and to remember his works and wonders, 1—6. The ſtory of Gods Promiſes to, and Providences over Abraham, 7—15. Joſeph, 16—22. and Jacob in Egypt, 23—25. over Moſes delivering the Iſraelites, 26—36. and over them whom he ſet in the wilderneſs, and planted in Canaan, 37—45.

O * Give thanks unto the LORD, call upon his name a; make known his deeds among his people b.

a Or, proclaim his name, (i. e.) the fame and glory of his works, as it follows. b Each of you amongſt his and your people, or even among the Heathens, as you have opportunity.

2 Sing unto him, ſing pſalms unto him: talk ye of all his wondrous works.

3 Glory ye in his holy name b: let the heart of them rejoice that ſeek the LORD c.

b Glory in the God whom you ſerve, as the only true God, and one of infinite power and goodneſs. c That ſeek his face or preſence, as it follows, his acquaintance and favour, above all the World.

4 Seek the LORD, and his ſtrength d: ſeek his face e evermore.

5 Remember his marvellous works that he hath done; his wonders and the judgments of his mouth f.

f Either, 1. The Laws delivered from his mouth. Or rather, 2. The plagues or puniſhments (as this ſame word is uſed here v. 7. and every where) which he brought upon Egypt by his meer word or command, as is oft noted in the Hiſtory of them in Exodus.

6 O ye ſeed of Abraham his ſervant, ye children of Jacob g his † choſen.

h Either, 1. The fame of his Judgments upon the Egyptians is ſpread over the face of the Earth. Or, 2. God executes his Judgments upon all Nations and People. Which may be here noted as a foil to magnifie Gods Grace to them who were the Monuments of his Mercy, when all the World beſides them fell under his juſt ſeverity.

a Heb. his ſoul came into iron. Which ſeems to be added emphatically to aggravate his impriſonment, and to ſhew how grievous it was to his very ſoul, which muſt needs ſympathize with his body, and moreover was greatly vexed to conſider both the great injury which was done to him, and yet the foul and publick ſcandal which lay upon him.

19 Until the time b that his word c came: the word of the LORD tried him d.

b Till which time, his eminent Prudence, and Innocency, and Piety gave him no relief. c Either, 1. Joſephs word, or his Prophecy concerning the chief Butler and Baker; which is ſaid to come when it was fulfilled, as that word is uſed Judg. 13. 12, 17. Ezek. 24. 24. and elſewhere. But the event confutes this; for Joſeph was not delivered at that time, but two years after it, Gen. 41. 1. Or rather, 2. The word of the Lord, as it follows; the Pronoun Relative being here put before the Subſtantive to which it belongs, as it is alſo Exod. 2. 6. Job 33. 20. Prov. 5. 22. and 14. 13. He ſeems to ſpeak of that word or revelation which came firſt to Pharaoh in a Dream, Gen. 41. 1, 2. &c. and then to Joſeph concerning the interpretation of it, v. 15, 16. For the word of the Lord is ſaid to come, not only when it comes to paſs, but alſo and moſt commonly when it is firſt revealed, as Jer. 7. 1. and 11. 1. and 18. 1. and God is ſaid to come when he doth reveal it, as Gen. 20. 3. and 31. 24. d Either, 1. Tryed his ſincerity and conſtancy. But that was not done by Gods Word, but by his Rod. Or rather, 2. Diſcovered him, to wit, unto Pharaoh and his Courtiers, how innocent, and holy, and knowing a perſon he was; or purged him from thoſe Calumnies which were caſt upon him, and ſo prepared the way for his releaſe, which here follows v. 20. This Verſe may well be rendred thus, Until the time that his word came, even the word of the Lord, which tried him; ſuch Ellipſes being moſt uſual in the Hebrew Text.

20 * The King ſent and looſed him: even the ruler of the people, and let him go free.

And the Pſalmiſt ſeems to call it by this name, to intimate that they were the people of Gods Curſe, and thereby to caution the Iſraelites againſt returning to that Land, which they were particularly forbidden to do, Deut. 17. 16.

24 And † he increaſed his people greatly: and made them ſtronger i than their enemies.

† Exod. 1. 7.

i Not really, but according to their Enemies apprehenſions and expreſſions, Exod. 1. 9. Or, more numerous, as this word is elſewhere uſed. So this latter branch anſwers to the former. And this was true; for though they were not ſimply more in number than the Egyptians, yet they multiplied much faſter.

‖Ex. 1. 8. 25 ‖ He turned their heart to hate his people k, to deal ſubtilly with his ſervants l.

k Not by putting this wicked hatred into them, which is not conſiſtent either with the holineſs of Gods nature, or with the truth of his word, and which was altogether unneceſſary, becauſe they had that and all other wickedneſs in them by nature; but partly by withdrawing the common gifts and operations of his Spirit, and all other reſtraints and hindrances to it, and wholly leaving them to their own miſtakes and paſſions, and corrupt affections, which of their own accord were ready to take that courſe; partly by ordering the affairs of his people in ſuch manner, as might give them occaſion of hatred; and partly by directing and governing that hatred, which was wholly in and from themſelves, ſo as it ſhould fall upon the Iſraelites rather than upon other people. l To deſtroy them by crafty devices: of which ſee Exod. 1. 11, &c.

*Ex.3.10. 26 * He ſent Moſes his ſervant, and Aaron whom he had choſen m m To be the companion and interpreter of Moſes in this expedition of which ſee Exod. 3. 10. and 14. 12, &c. This clauſe he adds, to ſhew that Aaron was no leſs called and choſen by God to this work than Moſes, which otherwiſe was not ſo evident from the Hiſtory: Or, this clauſe may belong to both Moſes and Aaron.

‖Ex. 7. 9. † Heb. words of his ſigns. 27 ‖ They ſhewed † his ſigns n among them, and wonders in the land of Ham.

n Heb. the words of his ſigns, an emphatical expreſſion. Firſt, they boldly declared the Word and Will of God concerning the ſeveral Plagues, and then they actually inflicted them.

*Exo. 10. 22. 28 * He ſent darkneſs, and made it dark: and they rebelled not againſt his word o.

o Either, 1. the darkneſs and other Plagues; which obeyed Gods word, and inſtantly came at Gods call. So this may be a reflection upon the Egyptians, that thoſe brutiſh or unreaſonable Creatures were more obedient to the will and command of God than they were. Thus diſeaſes are ſaid to come or go at Gods command, Mat. 8. 8. Or rather, 2. Moſes and Aaron, mentioned v. 25. and called they, v. 27. whoſe obedience in denouncing and inflicting thoſe Plagues, and eſpecially that Plague of darkneſs, is noted and commended here as an act of great faith and fortitude, becauſe they inflicted that Plague after Pharaoh had threatned them, Exod. 10. 10. as the obedience of their Parents is commended as a great act of faith, becauſe they preſerved and hid their Son contrary to the expreſs command of the King of Egypt.

‖Ex. 12. 35. 37 ‖ He brought them forth alſo with ſilver and gold: and there was not one feeble perſon u among their tribes.

PSAL. CVI.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm was unqueſtionably compoſed in the time of the Iſraelites Captivity and Diſperſion, as is manifeſt from v. 47. but whether it was that of Babylon, or ſome other of a later date, is neither caſie nor neceſſary to determine.

The Pſalmiſt exhorteth to praiſe God, 1—3. prayeth for the remiſſion of his ſin, 4, 5. The Story of the Iſraelites rebellion, and of God's Mercy, in their Journey from Egypt to Canaan rehearſed, 7—46. concluding with prayer and praiſe unto the Lord, 47, 48.

1 † PRaiſe ye the Lord; O * give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever a. † Heb. Hallelujah. * Chron.16. 34. Pſ.107.1. & 118.1. & 136.1.

a He deſerves our Praiſes, notwithſtanding all our ſufferings which are not to be imputed to him, for he is Gracious and Merciful but onely to our own Sins.

2 Who can utter the mighty acts of the Lord? who can ſhew forth all his praiſe b?

b (i. e.) His Praiſe-worthy actions, by an uſual Metonymy.

3 Bleſſed are they that keep judgment c, and he that doth righteouſneſs at all times d.

c That obſerve and practiſe what is juſt and right towards God and Men; which in the next clauſe he calls doing righteouſneſs. d In Adverſity as well as in proſperity. And this clauſe may belong either, 1. to the laſt foregoing Words, that doth righteouſneſs at all times, conſtantly and perpetually: Or rather, 2. to the firſt Words, they are bleſſed at all times, even in the Day of their calamity, which therefore ought not to hinder us from this great and juſt Duty of praiſing God. And ſo this verſe coheres with the former.

4 Remember me e, O Lord, with the favour † that thou beareſt unto thy people f: O viſit me with thy ſalvation g. † Heb. with the favour. People.

e Or, us: for he ſpeaks here in the name, and on the behalf of the whole Nation, as is evident from v. 6, 7, 47, of which he oft ſpeaks as of one Perſon. f With thoſe favours and bleſſings which thou doſt uſually and peculiarly give to thy people; ſuch as the pardon of all our ſins, by which we have procured our preſent miſeries, and a compleat deliverance, and that improved to thy preſent and glory, as well as to our own comfort, as is clearly implied v. 47. g Give me that ſalvation or deliverance which thou haſt promiſed, and which none but thou canſt give.

5 That I may ſee h the good of thy choſen i, that I may rejoice in the gladneſs of thy nation k: that I may glory l with mine inheritance m.

h (i. e.) Enjoy, as the next clauſe explains it, and as this word is frequently uſed. i Of thy choſen people; which thou uſeſt to give to thine Elect, or to ſuch as are Iſraelites indeed. k With ſuch joy as thou haſt formerly afforded unto thy beloved Nation or people. l That we may have occaſion to glory in Gods Goodneſs towards us. m Either in the Congregation of thy people: that we thy people may jointly and ſolemnly praiſe thy Name: Or, as thy people, who are commonly called Gods inheritance, in former ages have frequently done, for the particle, with, is ſometimes uſed as a Note of compariſon, as it is in the very next Verſe, and Job 9. 26. Eccleſ. 2. 16. and 7. 11.

6 * We have ſinned with our fathers n: we have committed iniquity, we have done wickedly. * Dan.9.5.

n As our Fathers did, and have not been made wiſer or better by their examples, as we ſhould have been.

7 Our fathers underſtood not o thy wonders in Egypt; they remembred not the multitude of thy mercies, † but provoked him at the ſea, even at the Red ſea p. † Ex. 14. 11, 12.

o Or, conſidered not, to wit, ſo as to be rightly affected with them, to give thee that Love, and praiſe, and Truſt, and Obedience, which they deſerved and required. p When thoſe wonders of thy power and Goodneſs in Egypt were but newly done, and freſh in memory.

8 Nevertheleſs; he ſaved them for his names-ſake q; ‖ that he might make his power to be known. ‖ Ex.9.16.

q That he might gloriſie his name, and vindicate it from the blaſphemous reproaches, which the Egyptians and others would have caſt upon it, if they had been deſtroyed. This Argument was urged by Moſes. Numb. 14. 12, &c. * Ex. 14.

9 * He rebuked the Red ſea alſo, and it was dried up: 21.

Pſ.136. ſo he led them through the † depths as through the wilderneſs r. † Heb. deeps.

Ex.14. 22. r As ſecurely as if they had walked upon the dry Land.

Pſ.78. 19. 10 And he ſaved them from the hand of him that hated them: ſ, and redeemed them from the hand of the enemy:

ſ Of Pharaoh who purſued them with cruel Rage and Hatred.

Ex.14. 28. Pſ.136.15. 11 * And the waters covered their enemies: there was not one of them left.

Pſ.78.42. 12 ‖ Then believed they his words; they ſang his praiſe.

Pſ. 78. 13 * † They ſoon t forgat his works; they waited not for his counſel u.

Num.14. 34. Pſ.78.11. t Even within three days, Exod. 15. 22, 23. u They did not wait patiently and believingly upon God for ſupplies from his hand, in ſuch manner and time as he in his own counſel had appointed and thought fit.

Num.11. 4. Pſ.78. 17. 18. 41. & 78. 56. Iſa.63.10. Heb.3.16. 14 * But † luſted exceedingly x in the wilderneſs, and tempted God in the deſart.

x To wit, for fleſh, as the next Verſe ſheweth.

Num.11. 31. 15 ‖ And he gave them their requeſt, but ſent leanneſs into their Souls y.

y Either into their perſons: Or rather, their Bodies, which are oft underſtood by this word; of which ſee the Notes upon Pſal. 16. 10. So their inordinate deſire of pleaſing and pampering their Bodies, was the occaſion of deſtroying them; whileſt God denied his Bleſſing, which alone makes food able to nouriſh us, and inflicted his curſe, which made their food as deſtructive as poyſon to them.

Num.16. 1, &c. 16 * They envied Moſes alſo in the camp, and Aaron the Saint of the Lord z.

z So called here not ſo much for his inherent Holineſs, whereof Moſes had a greater ſhare, but becauſe he was conſecrated or ſet apart by God for that ſacred office of the Prieſt-hood, in which reſpect all the Prieſts are ſaid to be holy, Levit. 21. 6, 7, 8. Hereby he intimates, that their Envy and Rebellion was not onely againſt Aaron, but againſt God himſelf.

Num.16. 32. 17 † The earth opened, and ſwallowed up Dathan a, and covered the company of Abiram.

Deut.11.6 a With his company, which is ſufficiently underſtood out of the following clauſe, and out of the Hiſtory, Numb. 16.

Num.16. 35. 18 ‖ And a fire was kindled in their company b, the flame burnt up the wicked.

b In their Aſſociates or Confederates, thoſe wicked men, as he calls them in the next clauſe, to wit, Korah and his company, who were conſumed by a Fire from the Lord, Numb. 16. 35. compared with v. 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19.

Exo.32.4. 19 * They made a calf in Horeb c, and worſhipped the molten Image.

c When they were but very lately brought out of Egypt by ſuch wonderful Power and Goodneſs of God, and had ſeen the dreadful plagues of God upon the Egyptian Idolaters, and upon their Idols too, as is noted Numb. 33. 4. and when the Law of God was but newly delivered to them in ſuch a ſolemn and tremendous manner, and the moſt high God was yet preſent, and delivering further precepts to Moſes for their benefit upon the top of that very Mount. This greatly aggravated their ſin.

Pſ.106.11. Rom.1.23. 20 Thus * they changed d their glory e into the ſimilitude of an † ox that eateth graſs g. * Jer.2.11. † Heb. ſtiy thou beareſt unto thy people.

d As far as in them lay, and in reſpect of their Worſhip. e Their God, who was indeed their glory; for they had this juſt occaſion of triumphing and glorying over all the Nations of the World; that whereas all other Nations worſhipped ſtocks and ſtones, or the heavenly Bodies, or dead Men, they only worſhipped the living true God, who was preſent and in Covenant with them, and with them only. f Into the Golden Image of an Ox or Calf. g Which is ſo far from feeding his people, as the true God did the Iſraelites, that he muſt be fed by them. And yet the Image of ſuch a creature was preferred by them, before the all-ſufficient and ever-bleſſed God, which was an evidence of their horrid contempt of God; and alſo of their prodigious folly and ſtupidity.

21 They forgat God their Saviour, which had done great things in Egypt.

22 Wondrous works in the land of Ham, and terrible things by the Red ſea.

†Ex.32. 11,12. 23 † Therefore he ſaid h that he would deſtroy them, had not Moſes his choſen ſtood before him in the breach i: to turn away his wrath, leſt he ſhould deſtroy them.

h He declared his intention in expreſs words, as Exod. 32. 10. and elſewhere. i God had made an Hedge or Wall about them; but they had made a gap or breach in it by their ſins. at which the Lord, who was now juſtly become their Enemy, might enter to deſtroy them; which he had certainly done, if Moſes by his prevailing interceſſion had not hindered him. See Deut. 9. 12. and 10. 10. It is a Metaphor from a Beſieged City, where the Enemy indeavours to make a breach in the Walls, and thereby to enter into the City; which he will do, unleſs ſome valiant Champion ſtand in the gap to oppoſe him.

† Heb. a land of deſire. 24 Yea, they deſpiſed k ‖ the pleaſant land l: they believed not his word m:

k Preferring Egypt and their former Bondage before it, Numb. 14. 3, 4. and not thinking it worthy of a little hazard and difficulty in taking the poſſeſſion of it. l Canaan, which was ſo not only in truth, Deut. 11. 11, 12. Jer. 2. 19. Ezek. 20. 6. but even by the relation of thoſe Spies, who diſcouraged them from entring into it. m (i. e.) His promiſe of giving them the land, and ſubduing all their Enemies before them; which they knew by late and manifold experience, that God was both able and willing to do.

Num.14.2. 25 * But murmured in their tents, and hearkned not unto the voice of the Lord n.

n To Gods command, which was, that they ſhould boldly and confidently enter into it.

† Nu. 14. 28. 26 † Therefore he lifted up his hand o againſt them, to overthrow them in the wilderneſs:

o He ſware, as this phraſe is commonly uſed, as Gen. 14. 22. Deut. 32. 40. Nehem. 9. 15. Revel. 10. 5, 6. of this dreadful and irrevocable Sentence and Oath of God, See Numb. 14.

‖ Heb. to make them fall. 27 ‖ * To overthrow their ſeed p alſo among the Nations, and to ſcatter them in the lands.

p He ſware alſo (though not at the ſame time) that he would puniſh their Sins, not only in their perſons, but alſo in their Poſterity. See Exod. 20. 5, and 32. 34. Levit. 26. 33. others refer this to the ſame Oath and Hiſtory, Numb. 14. becauſe God intended at firſt to deſtroy both Parents and Children even the whole Nation, v. 12. 15. though afterwards upon Moſes his interceſſion he limited the judgment to that Generation. But that Deſtruction threatned by the Peſtilence, v. 12. not, as here, by Captivity and Baniſhment. Beſides, God ſaid that, v. 11. but he did not ſwear it, but the Oath came afterward, v. 21. *Pſ44.11. Ezek. 20. 23.

Num.25. 2, 3. & 31. 16. Rev. 2.14. 28 * They joyned themſelves q alſo unto Baal-peor, and ate the ſacrifices of the dead r.

q To wit, in Worſhip, whereby they had an union and communion with him, as Gods people have with God in acts of his Worſhip. And this phraſe ſeems alſo to note their Carnal Copulation with the Daughters of Moab in the Temple, or to the Honour of Baal-Peor. r Which were offered to Idols, which he calls dead, in oppoſition to the true and living God, and by way of contempt, and to note the fortiſimeſs of Idolaters who worſhipped lifeleſs things, as ſtocks and ſtones or dead Men. And ſome learned men conceive that this is ſpoken with particular regard to Baal-Peor, or the Lord of Peor, a place ſo called, who had been a Perſon of great eminency in thoſe parts, and therefore was Worſhipped according to the cuſtom of the Heathens, after his Death, by Sacrifices and rеaits appointed for his Honour and Memory.

29 Thus they provoked him to anger with their inventions: and the Plague brake in upon them.

†Nu.25.7. 30 † Then ſtood up Phineas and executed judgment, and ſo the Plague was ſtayed.

31 And that was counted unto him for righteouſneſs s, unto all generations for evermore.

s And although that action of his might ſeem harſh, and raſh, and irregular, as being done by a private perſon and a Prieſt, and alſo without the Deſtinquents no ſpace for Repentance, it was accepted and rewarded by God as an Act of Juſtice and Piety agreeable to his mind, and proceeding from a ſincere zeal for Gods honour, and for the good of Gods people; and God gave him a publick teſtimony of his approbation to be recorded to all Generations, and the Prieſt hood to be continued to him and his in all ſucceeding Generations, of all which ſee Numb. 25.

* Num.20. 3,12,13. 32 * They angered him alſo at the waters of ſtrife, ſo that it went ill with Moſes for their ſakes t.

t Or, becauſe of them, upon occaſion of their unbelief and murmuring, whereby he was provoked to ſpeak unadviſedly, as it here follows.

33 Becauſe they provoked his ſpirit, ſo that he ſpake unadviſedly u with his lips.

u So this word is thought to ſignifie, Lev. 5. 4. Prov. 12. 18. Or, he ſpake, as the word commonly ſignifies. Not that it was in it ſelf a Sin to ſpeak, but becauſe he ſpake when he ſhould have been ſilent; or he ſpake to the people, when God commanded him only to ſpeak to the Rock, Numb. 20. 8, 9, 10. or, he ſpake, to wit, the provocation of his ſpirit, or ſuch words as were agreeable to it, and might be expected from it. He mentions not here what Moſes ſpake, becauſe that was fully known from the Hiſtory, and becauſe he would throw a veil over Moſes his infirmity, and rather imply than expreſs his fault.

39 Thus were they defiled with their own works, and went a whoring with their own inventions d.

d Committed spiritual Whoredom by worshipping those Idols which were but humane inventions, and that in such an unnatural and blood manner, as they had devised.

40 Therefore was the wrath of the LORD kindled against his people, insomuch that he abhorred his own inheritance.

PSAL. CVII.

The ARGUMENT.

THe most of the Psalms have a peculiar respect unto the Church or People of God, or to some eminent members thereof; but there are some few Psalms which have a more general respect to all Nations, of which number this is one. Wherein the Psalmist discourseth of the merciful Providence of God towards all mankind, and of his readiness to help them in all their distresses, some few particular instances whereof he mentioneth, and leaveth the rest to be understood, there being the same reason of all. But withal he takes notice also of Gods Judgments upon wicked persons and people, And by this representation of Gods mercies and judgments, he invites all Nations to an acknowledgment of the true God, to praise him for his favours, and to tremble at his judgments, which is their just duty and reasonable service.

An Exhortation to the redeemed to praise and celebrate the Lord, and to observe his manifold Providences, 1—3. to strangers and captives, 4——16. to sick, and sea-men, 17——32. and to all others, commending them that carefully observe this, 33, 43.

*Psal. 106. 1. & 118. 1. & 136. 1. O * Give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever a.

a This whole verse occurs also Psal. 106. 1. Only there the addresse is made to the Israelites, and here to all mankind.

2 Let the redeemed of the LORD b say so c, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy d.

b All they whom God hath redeemed, as it is expressed in the next clause, or delivered from all the following calamities. c To wit, that the Lord is good, &c. as it is v. 1. d Of such as had taken them Captives, either in Battel, or in their Travels, to which they were led by their own inclinations, or by their necessary occasions.

† Heb. from the Sea. 3 And gathered them out of the lands, from the east and from the west, from the north e, and † from the south f.

e Bringing them into their own land, out of the several quarters of the World into which they had been carried. f Heb. from the Sea. Which in Scripture commonly notes the West, because the great Mid-land Sea was on the West of Canaan; but here, as it appears from the opposition of this to the North, it notes the South, so called from the Red-sea, which was on the South. and which is sometimes called the Sea, simply and without addition, as Psal. 72. 8. and 114. 3.

4 They wandred in the wilderness g in a solitary way, they found no city to dwell in h.

g Mistaking their way, which they might easily do in the vast and sandy desarts of Arabia. h Or rather, no City, or Town inhabited, where they might refresh themselves, as Travellers used to do; for they did not go into the Wilderness to seek for a City or Habitation there, but only intended to pass through it, as appears by the context, and by the nature of the thing.

5 Hungry and thirsty, their Soul fainted in them i.

i Partly for want of necessary provisions, and partly through anguith of spirit.

6 Then they cryed unto the LORD k in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their distresses l.

k Heb. Unto Jehovah, to the true God. For the Heathens, of whom he speaks, had many of them some knowledge of the true God, and did in their manner worship him with and in their Idols; and especially in their distresses, when they discovered the impotency of their Idols, they did direct their Prayer immediately to the true God, of which there are many instances of Heathen Writers. l In answer to their prayers, which he did not, because their prayers were acceptable to him, but partly out of the benignity and compassionateness of his nature to all his creatures; partly to encourage and preserve the use of Prayer and Religion among the Gentiles, and to oblige them to a more diligent search after the knowledge of the true God, and of his Worship; and partly to give his own people assurance of his great readiness to hear and answer all those prayers, which with upright hearts they offered to him according to his word.

7 And he led them forth m by the right way, that they might go to a city of habitation n.

m Out of the Wilderness where they had lost their way, v. 4.

n See before on v. 4.

8 † Oh that men would praise o the LORD for his † Heb. to them confess to the LORD his goodness goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men p.

o Heb. Let them praise. Or, They shall praise, (i. e.) They are highly obliged to praise. p Not only to his peculiar people, but to all mankind, to whom he is very kind and bountiful. So Gr.

9 For he satisfieth the longing q soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness r.

q Either the thirsty, opposed to the hungry here following: or the hungry, as this general phrase is limited and expounded in the next clause. r With the fruits of his goodness, with good things, Psal. 103. 5. with food and gladness, Acts 14. 17. with that good which they wanted and desired.

10 Such as sit in darkness and in the shadow of death s, being bound in affliction and iron t.

s In a disconsolate and forlorn condition, in dark prisons or dungeons. t With afflicting or grievous irons. Or, in the cords of affliction, as they are called Job 36. 8. and particularly m iron fetters.

11 Because they rebelled against the words of God u, and contemned the counsel of the most High:

u Against Gods commands made known either 1. by his written Word delivered to the Jews, of which the Gentiles were not ignorant, which therefore they should have diligently enquired after and searched into, as the Queen of Sheba came from the ends of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and as divers of the Heathens travelled into very remote parts to gain a more perfect knowledge of the Arts and Sciences: which will justly be laid to their charge, and condemn them for their neglect of that Divine wisdom, which was treasured up in the holy Scriptures. Or, 2. by the Prophets, who some times were sent to the Gentiles. Or, 3. by the Law and light of Nature, and by its Interpreters, their wise and learned Philosophers, who delivered many excellent rules and precepts of piety and vertue which were sufficient, though not for their salvation without Christ, yet for the conduct of their lives in a great measure, and to leave them without excuse for their gross disobedience thereunto.

12 Therefore he brought down their heart x with labour y; they fell down, and there was none to help z.

x The pride and rebellion and obstinacy of their hearts. y Or, with trouble or troubles. z They fell into their enemies hands, and into hopeless and remediless miseries.

13 Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he saved them out of their distresses.

14 * He brought them out of darkness, and the shadow of death, and brake their bands in sunder. * Psal. 68. 6. & 146. 7.

15 Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men.

16 For he hoth broken the gates of brass, and cut the bars of iron in sunder a.

a He restored them to liberty in spight of all impediments and oppositions.

17 ‖ Fools b, † because of their transgressions c, and ‖ Psal. 38. 5. † Heb. from the way of because of their iniquities, are afflicted d.

b (i. e.) Wicked men, whom he calls fools, because of the mischiefs which through their own folly they bring upon themselves. c Heb. because of the way of their transgression, (i. e.) their custom and course of sinning, as the word, way, is used Psal. 1. 1. Prov. 2. 12. They did not fall into sin one or twice, as good men may do, but it was their usual practice, and therefore they are justly punished. d With wasting sicknesse, as appears from v. 18, 20. Compare Job. 33. 19, &c. Psal. 39. 12, &c.

18 * Their soul e abhorreth all manner of meat f, * Job 33. 20. and they draw ‖ near unto the gates of death g. ‖ Ps. 9. 13. as & 82. 3.

e Either themselves with all their soul: or their appetite, as the taken, Job 33. 20. Isa. 29. 8 f Which is an usual effect o[f] ...ness. g They are sick well-nigh unto death.

19 Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, ...veth them out of their distresses.

20 He sent his word h, and healed them, and delivered them from their destructions.

h His command, or his blessing, which came with power.

21 Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men.

22 And * let them sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiv- * Psal. 27. 6. & 54. 6. & 116. 17. ing i, and declare his works with † rejoycing.

i Either properly so called; or, praises and thanksgivings to God, which in Scripture are called Sacrifices, because they are no less acceptable to God than costly Sacrifices.

23 They that go down to the sea k in ships; that do business l in great waters:

k He saith, go down, either because the Sea or the shore of it is commonly lower than their habitations from whence they come, or than the natural or artificial banks which are raised to prevent the inundation of the waters: or because the Sea is lower than the earth, as may be gathered from the rivers which run down into it. l Whose occupation lies there, either as Merchants, or as Marriners.

24 These see the works of the LORD, and his wonders m in the deep.

m His wonderful works, either, 1. of Creation, fishes of various kinds and shapes, and fame of prodigious greatness, which are unknown to other men. Or, 2. Of Providence, in raising and laying storms, of which he speaks in the following verses.

25 For he commandeth, and † raiseth the stormy wind n which lifteth up the waves thereof.

n The winds and storms come not by chance, but by the disposition of Divine providence.

26 They mount up to the heaven, they go down again to the depths o, their soul is melted, because of trouble p.

o Towards the bottom of the Sea. p Through the perplexity of their minds, and fear of sudden and violent death.

27 They reel to and fro, and ſtagger like a drunken man q, and † are at their wits end.

q Not so much from the giddiness of their heads, which is not usual in persons accustomed to the Sea, as through the violent and various motions of the Sea and the ship.

28 Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, and he bringeth them out of their distresses.

29 He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still.

30 Then are they glad because they be quiet; so he bringeth them unto their desired haven.

31 Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men.

32 Let them exalt him also in the congregation of the people r, and praise him in the assembly of the elders s.

r Not only in their own hearts and families, but even in publick assemblies, and before all persons, as they have opportunity. s The Magistrates or Rulers; who are here opposed to the people. The sence is, let them not be ashamed nor afraid to speak of Gods wonderful works and praises before the greatest of men, as mean persons commonly are. Compare Psal. 119. 46. Or he mentions the Elders particularly, because they were most apt to neglect and forget God, and to exalt themselves above and against him; and therefore it was meet and necessary that they should be acquainted with the Almighty power and universal providence and dominion of God, that they themselves might learn subjection and reverence to God, and might promote it among their people.

33 He turneth rivers t into a wilderness u, and the water-springs into dry ground:

t Either 1. properly so called; which he can divert or dry up when he pleaseth, as sometimes he hath done. Or rather, 2. those grounds which are well watered, and therefore very fruitful, as the next verse explains this. And so the water-springs here and v. 35. and the standing water v. 35. are taken. u Into a dry ground, as it follows, which is like a parched and barren wilderness.

† Heb. fruitfulness. 34 A fruitful land into † barrenness x, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein y.

x Heb. Into saltness, who procures barrenness. See Deut. 22. 23. Judg. 9. 42. y He doth not inflict these judgments by choice or without cause, but for the punishment of sin in some, and the prevention of it in others.

* Isa. 41. 18 35 * He turneth the wilderness into a standing water z, and dry ground into water-springs.

z Into a well-watered and fruitful land.

36 And there he maketh the hungry a to dwell, that they may prepare a city for habitation;

a Poor people who could not provide for themselves, or were banished from their own land by potent oppressors, and were driven into wildernesses, like them Job 30. 3. which God in pity to them made fruitful.

37 And sow the fields, and plant vineyards, which may yield b fruits of increase c.

b Heb. and they shall make or, procure from their fields and vineyards. c Such fruits as they use to produce.

38 He blesseth them also, so that they are multiplied greatly, and suffereth not their cattel to decrease d.

d Preserves them from abortion and deadly diseases, and on the contrary causeth them to increase, as he had in the former branch, which is here repeated in other words after the same manner.

39 Again they e are minished and brought low f, through oppression, affliction and sorrow g.

e These poor men; who when they are exalted and blessed by God, kick at him, and grow insolent and secure, as the manner of men is. f Are by Gods just judgment diminished in their numbers and in their blessings. g Or, through wicked oppression (by the tyranny of others, who God sends to spoil them of their abused riches) and by other griefs or grievous calamities which God inflicts.

40 * He poureth contempt upon princes h, and * Job 12. 21, 24. causeth them to wander in the ‖ wilderness where there is ‖ Or, void place. no way i.

h Those who were honourable and adored like Gods by their people, and terrible to all their enemies, he renders them despicable to their own Subjects, and to other Nations; and this he doth suddenly, abundantly, and unavoidably, as this phrase of pouring it out upon them seems to imply. i Either, 1. he giveth them up to foolish and pernicious counsels, by which they are exposed to contempt, and brought to their wits end, not knowing what course to take. Or, 2. he banished them from their own Courts and Kingdoms, and forced them to flee into desolate wildernesses for shelter and subsistence.

41 * Yet setteth he the poor on high k ‖ from affliction, * 1 Sa. 2. 8. Ps. 113. 7, 8 and maketh him families like a flock l. ‖ Or, after.

k And whilst he bringeth down great potentates, at the same time he advanceth those who were obscure and contemptible. l Which increase very much in a little time.

42 † The righteous shall see it m, and rejoyce n, and † Job 22. 19. all * iniquity o shall stop her mouth p.

m Or rather, these things, as it is expressed in the next verse. * Job 5. 16. They shall diligently observe these wonderful works of Gods mercy and justice. n Not only in the mercies of God vouchsafed to them and to other persons in want and misery, but also in Gods judgments upon his implacable enemies, which afford matter of rejoicing to good men, as hath been once and again declared in this book, both for the honour which God hath by them, and for the sins and calamities of others, which by this means are prevented. o (i. e.) Unrighteous or ungodly men, the abstract being put for the concrete, as faithfulnesse for the faithful, Psal. 12. 1. and pride for the proud, Psal 36. 12. p Shall be put to silence. So this o the like phrase is used Judg. 18. 19. Job 5. 16. and 21. 5. and 29. 9. They who used to speak lustily and wickedly, and to set their mouth against the heavens, as they did Psal. 73. 8, 9. to reproach God and his providence as either negligent or unrighteous in the management of the world, shall now be forced to acknowledge his power and justice in those judgments which he hath brought upon them.

43 * Whoso is wise, and will observe these things q, * Hos. 14. 9. even they r shall understand the loving kindness of the LORD s.

q Or, Who (for the Hebrew particle, mi, is interrogative) is wise? for (as the conjunctive particle is frequently used) he will observe these things. All who are truly wise will consider all these events, and lay them to heart, as being very useful for their own instruction. r Or, each of them, all such wise and considering persons. s Will see and acknowledge that God is kind or good to all, and that his tender mercies are over all his works, as it is said, Psal. 145. 9. and singularly kind and gracious to all wise and godly men.

PSAL. CVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm is almost word for word taken out of two foregoing Psalms, the first five verses out of Psal. 57. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. and the rest out of Psal. 60. 5, &c. to which the Reader must resort for the explication of it. This only is observable that the Psalmist designing to take the body of this Psalm out of Psal. 60. doth industriously lay aside that mournful Preface v. 1, 2, 3, 4. and borrows one more pleasant out of Psal. 57. The reason of which change is supposed to be this, that Psal. 60. was composed in the time of his danger and distress, and the latter after his deliverance.

A Song, or Psalm of David.

David raiseth up himself to praise the Lord, 1——4. praying also for his assistance, being fully assured of it, against his Enemies, 5——13.

1 O God, my heart * is fixed, I will sing and give * Ps. 57. 7, 8, &c. praise even with my glory a.

a Either, 1. with my heart or soul, which is fixed for that work, as he said in the former branch. Or rather, 2. with my tongue, which is called a mans glory, Psal. 16. 9. compared with Acts 2. 26. So the first branch describes the fixedness of his heart, to which this adds the expression of his mouth.

2 Awake psaltery and harp: I my self will awake early.

3 I will praise thee, O LORD, among the people: and I will sing praises unto thee among the nations.

4 For thy mercy is great above the heavens: and thy truth reacheth unto the ‖ clouds. ‖ Or, skies.

5 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens : and thy glory above all the earth ;

* Pſ. 60. 5, &c. 6 * That thy beloved may be delivered : ſave with thy right hand and anſwer me.

7 God hath ſpoken in his holineſs, I will rejoyce, I will divide Shechem, and mete out the valley of Succoth.

8 Gilead is mine, Manaſſeh is mine, Ephraim alſo is the ſtrength of mine head, Judah is my law-giver.

9 Moab is my waſh-pot, over Edom will I caſt out my ſhoe : over Philiſtia will I triumph.

10 Who will bring me into the ſtrong city ? who will lead me into Edom b ?

b This he repeats in this place, either becauſe, though the enemies were defeated and ſubdued, yet there was ſome ſtrong City or Cities which were not yet taken ; or in way of thankful commemoration of Gods goodneſs in anſwering his former requeſts, as if he had ſaid, I remember this day to thy glory and my own comfort, my former ſtraits and dangers, which made me cry out, Who will bring me, &c.

11 Wilt not thou, O God, who haſt caſt us off ? and wilt not thou, O God, go forth with our hoſts ?

12 Give us help from trouble : for vain is the help of man.

13 Through God we ſhall do valiantly : for he it is that ſhall tread down our enemies.

PSAL. CIX.

The ARGUMENT.

IT is ſufficiently evident from the body of this Pſalm, that it was Compoſed by David when he was in a ſtate of perſecution either by Saul or by Abſalom ; and that amongſt and above all the reſt of his enemies he takes very particular notice of, and breaks forth into vehement expreſſions of anger againſt one particular perſon, which whether it were Doeg or Achitophel is not certain, nor at all neceſſary to know. But as David was, and very well knew himſelf to be a Type of Chriſt, and conſequently his enemies did typifie or repreſent the enemies of Chriſt, and this particular adverſary of his did repreſent ſome ſingular and eminent enemy of Chriſt, which though David might not, yet the Spirit of God which indited this Pſalm, did know to be Judas, and accordingly directed all theſe bitter invectives and imprecations againſt him, who deſerved and received far worſe puniſhments for his monſtrous wickedneſs, than all which are here mentioned. And that he was the perſon principally aimed at in this Pſalm, will ſeem very probable to him who conſiders Davids mild and merciful temper even towards his enemies, which he both profeſſed in words in this very book, as Pſal. 35. 12, 13, 14. and practiſed in deeds, as 2 Sam. 16. 10, 11. and 19. 22, 23. and withal the ſeverity of theſe imprecations, reaching not only to the perſons of his enemies, but to their children, who yet by the Law of God were not to ſuffer for their Parents ſins, Deut. 24. 16.

To the chief muſician, A Pſalm of David.

David complaining of his falſe accuſers, who requited him evil for good, devoteth them and their Children to all miſery and oblivion. 1—15. becauſe of their unmercifulneſs and cruelty, 16—20. Sheweth his great affliction, prayeth for deliverance, and promiſeth thankfulneſs. 21—31.

1 HOLD not thy peace a, O God of my praiſe b.

a Do not neglect me, but take notice of my extreme danger and miſery, and deliver me, which thou canſt do by the ſpeaking of one word. b The Author and matter of all my praiſes ; who haſt given me continual occaſion to praiſe thee, whom I have uſed to praiſe, and will praiſe whilſt I live ; do not therefore now give me occaſion to turn my praiſes into lamentations.

† Heb. mouth of deceit. †Heb. have opened themſelves. 2 For the mouth of the wicked, and the † mouth of the deceitful c † are opened d againſt me : they have ſpoken againſt me e with a lying tongue f.

c Of thoſe who add hypocriſie and perfidiouſneſs to their malice. d They ſpeak freely, boldly and publickly, without any fear or ſhame. e Or, to or with me, as this Particle commonly ſignifies. f Either, 1. With Calumnies, or falſe and malicious Reports. Or, 2. With deep diſſimulation and profeſſions of friendſhip and kindneſs.

* Pſ. 69. 4. 3 They compaſſed me about alſo with words of hatred g : and fought againſt me * without a cauſe h.

g Which though covered with ſpecious pretences, proceeded from deep malice and hatred, and were deſigned to work my deſtruction. h Without any juſt provocation given them by me.

4 For my love, they are my adverſaries i : but I give my ſelf unto prayer k.

i They requite my love and good will with enmity and miſchief, as it is explained v. 5. k Heb. but I prayer, (i. e.) I am a man of Prayer, or I betake my ſelf to Prayer. Thus I peace is put for I am for peace, as we render it Pſal. 120. 7. and thy bread for the men of thy bread, or, that eat thy bread, Obad. v. 7. The ſenſe is, whilſt they reproach and curſe me, I pray either, 1. for them, as he did Pſal. 35. 13. or, 2. for my ſelf : I did not render unto them evil for evil, but quietly committed my ſelf and my cauſe to God by Prayer, deſiring him to plead my cauſe againſt them ; and I had no other refuge.

*Pſ. 35. 12. & 38. 20. 5 And * they have rewarded me evil for good, and hatred for my love,

* Zac. 3. 1. || Or, an adverſary. 6 Set thou a wicked man l over him m, and let * || Satan ſtand at his right hand n.

l Heb. the wicked. Which may be underſtood either, 1. Of ſome wicked Tyrant, which may rule him with rigour and cruelty. Or, 2. Of Satan, who is mentioned in the next clauſe. Let him be delivered over to Satan, to be acted and ruled by him at his pleaſure. m Either, 1. All mine enemies ; for the ſingular number is ſometimes uſed in like manner. Or rather, 2. One particular enemy, who was worſe than any of the reſt, more implacable and inexcuſable, whom he thought not fit to expreſs by name, nor was it in the leaſt neceſſary to do ſo, becauſe he was ſpeaking to God, who knew his thoughts, and whom he meant. n Either, 1. To moleſt and vex him, and hinder him in all his affairs ; for the right hand is the great inſtrument of action. Or rather, 2. To accuſe him ; for this was the place and poſture of accuſers in the Jewiſh Courts. And as for his condemnation, which is the conſequence of this accuſation, that follows in the next verſe.

7 When he ſhall be judged o, let him † be condemned, † Heb. go out guilty, and * let his prayer become ſin p. or wicked. * Pro. 28. 9.

o When he ſhall be called to an account, and his cauſe examined before thy Tribunal. p (i. e.) Be turned into ſin, or be imputed to him as his ſin, or be as unavailable with God for his relief as his ſins. When he makes ſupplication to his Judge, as Job ſpeaks Job 9. 15. for pity and pardon, let him be the more provoked and enraged by it.

8 Let his days q be few, and * let another take his || office r. * Acts 1. 20. || Or, charge.

PSAL. CX.

The ARGUMENT.

THat the Pen-man of this Pſalm was not Eliezer, Abrahams ſervant, who writ it upon the occaſion of Abrahams victory over thoſe Kings, Gen. 14 (as ſome of the later Jews have deviſed out of oppoſition to Chriſtianity) nor any other perſon but David, is manifeſt from the Title of the Pſalm, which is a part of the ſacred Text. That this Pſalm belongs to the Meſſiah, is abundantly evident both from the expreſs teſtimony of the New Teſtament, Acts 2. 34. 1 Cor. 15. 25. Heb. 1. 13. and 10. 13. and from the conſent of the ancient Hebrew Doctors manifeſted implicitly in Mat. 22. 44. and expreſly from their own mouths. Of which ſee my Latin Synopſis upon this place ; and from the matter of the Pſalm, which can by no means or arts be made to agree to David, who was not Davids Lord, nor a Prieſt, much leſs a Prieſt for ever, or after the order of Melchiſedech, the Prieſthood of Aaron being in Davids time in uſe and force, and in the hands of another perſon and family. And whereas divers other Pſalms, though principally directed to, and to be underſtood of the Meſſiah, yet in ſome ſort may be underſtood concerning David alſo, or at leaſt took their riſe and occaſion from David, or from ſomething relating to him, this Pſalm is directly and immediately and ſolely to be underſtood concerning the Meſſiah ; the Spirit of God wiſely ſo ordering this matter, that it might be a moſt expreſs and convincing teſtimony againſt the unbelieving Jews concerning the true Meſſiah, and concerning the nature and quality of his Kingdom.

a Written by David, as is manifeſt both from this Title, which being given to this, as well as to many other Pſalms, whereof David is confeſſed to be the Author, either proves this to be Davids, or proves none of them to be ſo, and from Mat. 22. 43, 44. and Mark 12. 36. where alſo David is ſaid to have ſpoken this Pſalm in or by the Spirit of God, or by Divine Inſpiration.

An account of the calling the Kingdom of Chriſt, 1—3. Of his everlaſting Prieſthood, 4. Of his mighty Conqueſt over his Enemies, 5, 6. And of his Sufferings and Triumph, 7.

1 THE * LORD b ſaid c unto my LORD d, * Mat. 22. Sit thou at my right hand e, until f I make g 44. Mark 12. thine enemies h thy footſtool i. 36.

b God the Father, the firſt Perſon in the Trinity, to whom accordingly the original of all things, and eſpecially of the work of Mans Redemption by Chriſt is aſcribed. c Decreed or appointed it from Eternity, and in due time publiſhed this Decree, as is noted Pſal. 2. 7. and actually executed it ; which he did when he raiſed up Chriſt from the dead, and brought him into his heavenly manſion. d Unto his Son the Meſſias, whom David defignedly calls his Lord, to admoniſh the Jews and the whole Church, that although he was his Son according to the fleſh or his humane nature, Acts 2. 30. Rom. 1. 3. yet he had an higher Nature and Original, and was alſo his Lord, as being by Nature God bleſſed for ever, and conſequently Lord of all things, as he is called Acts 10. 36. and by Office as he was God-man, the Lord and King of the whole Church, and of all the World for the Churches ſake. And this was a neceſſary proviſion to prevent that ſcandal which the Holy Ghoſt foreſaw the Jews and others would be apt to take at the meanneſs of Chriſts appearance in the Fleſh. The Hebrew word Adon is one of Gods Titles, ſignifying his Power and Authority or Lordſhip over all things, and therefore is moſt fitly given to the Meſſias, to whom God hath delegated all his Power in the World, Mat. 28. 18. e Thou who haſt for many years been veiled with infirm and mortal fleſh, deſpiſed and rejected and trampled upon by men, and perſecuted unto the death, do thou now take to thy ſelf thy great and juſt Power ; thou haſt done thy work upon Earth, now take thy reſt and the poſſeſſion of that Soveraign Kingdom and Glory, which by right belongeth to thee ; do thou rule with me with equal Power and Majeſty, as thou art God ; and with an Authority and Honour far above all Creatures, ſuch as is next to mine, as thou art Man ; as this phraſe is expounded in other places. See Mark 16. 19. Luke 22. 69. 1 Cor. 15. 25. Heb. 1. 3, 13. and 8. 1. and 10. 12, 13. Eph. 1. 20, &c. It is a Metaphor from the cuſtom of Earthly Princes, who place thoſe perſons whom they honour moſt at their Right-hand : of which ſee 1 Kin. 2. 19. Pſal. 45. 10. Mat. 20. 21. Sitting is put for reigning, 1 Kin. 3. 6. comp. with 2 Chron. 1. 8. and withal notes the continuance of the Reign, 1 Cor. 15. 25. f Which word doth not neceſſarily note the end or expiration of his Kingdom at that time ; for in other places it notes only the continuance of things till ſuch time, without excluding the time following, as is evident from Gen. 28. 15. Pſal. 112. 8. Mat. 1. ult. So here it may ſignifie that his Kingdom ſhould continue ſo long, even in the midſt of his Enemies, and in ſpight of all their power and malice, which was the only thing which was liable to any doubt ; for that he ſhould continue to reign after the conqueſt and utter ruine of all his enemies, was out of all queſtion. And yet this is a word of limitation, in regard of the Mediatorial Kingdom of Chriſt, in reſpect of which Chriſt rules with a delegated Power, as his Fathers Vice-Roy, and with the uſe of outward means and inſtruments and ordinances, &c. for that manner of adminiſtration ſhall ceaſe ; which alſo ſeems to be intimated by this word, as it is expounded 1 Cor. 15. 25. g By my Almighty Power communicated to thee as God by eternal generation, and vouchſafed to thee as Mediator, to enable thee to the full diſcharge of thine Office. h Which alſo are the enemies of thy Church ; all perſecutors and ungodly men, who will not have Chriſt to rule over them, Luke 19. 14. Sin and Death and the Devil, 1 Cor. 15. 26. i Thy ſlaves and vaſſals to be put to the meaneſt and baſeſt ſervices, as this phraſe implies, 1 Kings 5. 3. Pſal. 18. 39. and 91. 13. being taken from the manner of Eaſtern Princes, who uſed to tread upon the Necks of their conquered Enemies, as we read Joſ. 10. 24. Judg. 1. 7. And long after thoſe times Sapores the Perſian Emperor trod upon Valerian Emperor of the Romans, and Tamerlan uſed to tread upon Bajazet the Turkiſh Emperor, whom he kept in an Iron Cage for that purpoſe.

2 The LORD ſhall ſend k the rod of thy ſtrength l out of Zion l : rule thou m in the midſt of thine enemies n.

k Or, ſend forth, into the World. l Thy ſtrong or powerful Rod, by an uſual Hebraiſm. And the Rod is put for his Scepter, or Kingly Power, as it is Iſa. 10. 24. Jer. 48. 17. Ezek. 7. 10, 11. and 19. 11, 12. But as the Kingdom of Chriſt is not Carnal or of this World, John 18. 36. but Spiritual, ſo this Rod or Scepter is nothing elſe but his Word publiſhed by himſelf, or by his Apoſtles and Miniſters, and accompanied with his Spirit, by which the Meſſias did his great exploits, and ſet up and eſtabliſhed his Kingdom, converting ſome of his Enemies, and confounding and deſtroying others of them by that ſame inſtrument, as is manifeſt by comparing Iſa. 2. 3. and 11. 4. Mich. 4. 2. 2 Cor. 10. 4. 2 Theſſ. 2. 8. Hence this word is called the word of the kingdom, Mat. 13. 19. and the power of God, Rom. 1. 16. David having ſpoken of the Messias v. 1. now turneth his speech to him. l From Jerusalem, which is frequently understood by the name of Zion, which was an eminent and venerable part of it, as Psal. 48. 13. and 87. 2. and 102. 14, 17, &c. Where the Scepter of the Messias was first to be established according to the predictions of the Prophets, Psal. 2. 6, 8. and 48. 3. Isa. 2. 3, &c. to which the event exactly answered, Luke 24. 47. Acts 1. 4. and 2. 1, 2, &c. and from whence it was to be sent forth into all the parts and kingdoms of the World, to bring in the Gentiles, which also the Prophets had foretold, as Isa. 2. 3. and in divers of the foregoing Psalms, as hath been already frequently observed and proved. m Thou shalt rule, the Imperative being here put for the Future, as it is Gen. 12. 12. Psal. 37. 27. and oft elsewhere. For this is not a command, but a prediction or a promise that he shall rule. Which he doth partly by his Grace, converting some, and so ruling their Hearts by his Word and Spirit, and subduing their Lusts in them, and their external enemies for them; and partly by his powerful providence, whereby he defends his Church and People, and subdues and punisheth all their adversaries. n Who shall see it, and do what they can to oppose thy dominion, but shall never be able to hinder it, but shall split themselves against it.

‖ Or, give free-will-offerings. * Or, more than the womb of the morning: thou shalt have, &c.

3 Thy people o ‖ shall be willing p in the day of thy power q, in the beauties of holiness r * from the womb of the morning: thou hast the dew of thy youth s.

o Thy subjects. p Heb. willingnesses, (i. e.) most willing, as such plural words are frequently used, as Psal. 5. 10. and 21. 7. Or, freewill-offerings, as the word properly signifies. Whereby he may intimate the difference between the Worship of the Old Testament and that of the New. They shall offer and present unto thee as their King and Lord, not Oxen or Sheep or Goats, as they did under the Law, but themselves, their souls and bodies, as living sacrifices, as they are called Rom. 12. 1. and as freewill-offerings, giving up themselves to the Lord, 2 Cor. 8. 5. to live to him, and to die and be offered for him. The sense is, Thou shalt have friends and subjects as well as enemies, and thy subjects shall not yield thee a forced and feigned obedience, as those who are subject to, or conquered by, Earthly Princes frequently do, of which see on Psal. 18. 44, 45. but shall most willingly and readily and chearfully obey all thy commands without any dispute or delay or reservation, and they shall not need to be pressed to thy service, but shall voluntarily list themselves, and fight under thy Banner against all thy enemies. q When thou shalt take into thy hands the rod of thy strength, as it is called v. 2. and set up thy Kingdom in the World, and put forth thy mighty Power in the preaching of thy Word, and winning Souls to thy self by it. Or, in the day of thine army, or forces, when thou shalt raise thine Army, consisting of Apostles, and other Preachers and Professors of the Gospel, and shalt send them forth to conquer the World unto thy self. r Adorned with the beautiful and glorious Robes of Righteousness and true Holiness, wherewith all new Men or true Christians are cloathed, Eph. 4. 24. compare Revel. 19. 8, 14. with various gifts and graces of Gods Spirit, which are beautiful in the eyes of God and of all good men. The last clause noted the inward disposition, the willingness, of Christs Subjects, and this notes their outward habit and deportment. Wherein there seems to be an allusion either, 1. to the beautiful and glorious garments of the Levitical Priests, all Christians being Priests unto God, Rev. 1. 6. 1 Pet. 2. 5, 9. Or, 2. to the military robes wherewith Souldiers are furnished and adorned, all Christians being Souldiers in the Christian warfare. But the words are and may well be rendred thus, in the beauties or glories of the Sanctuary, (i. e.) by an usual Hebraism, in the beautiful and glorious Sanctuary, which is called the Holy and beautiful house, Isa. 64. 11. either in the Temple at Jerusalem, which was honoured with Christs presence, whereby it excelled the glory of the first house, according to Hagg. 2. 9. in which both Christ and the Apostles preached, and by their preaching made many of these willing people: or in Jerusalem, which is oft called the Holy place or city, by the same word which is here rendred Sanctuary: or in the Church of God and of Christ, which was the Antitype of the old Sanctuary or Temple, as is evident from 1 Cor. 3. 16, 17. 2 Cor. 6. 16. Heb. 3. 6. 1 Pet. 2. 5. And this place may be mentioned as the place either where Christs people are made willing, and shew their willingness, or where Christ exerciseth and manifesteth that power last mentioned. s This place is judged the most difficult and obscure of any in this whole Book. The words are diversly rendred and understood. They are to be understood either, 1. of Christ himself, and that in respect either, 1. of his divine and eternal generation, which may be called the dew of his youth or birth, and which he may be said to have had from the womb of the morning, before the first Morning or Light was created or brought out of its Womb; that is, before the World was, which is a common description of Eternity in Scripture. Or, 2. of his Humane Nature and Birth, and so the words may be thus rendred, From the womb of the morning. (Or, as it is rendred by divers others, From the womb, from the morning (i. e. from thy very first birth) thou hast or hadst the dew of thy youth, (i. e.) those eminent Blessings and Graces wherewith thou wast enriched, e. thy youth or childhood was like the dew, precious and acceptable. Or rather, 2. of Christs subjects or people, of whom he evidently spoke in the former part of the Verse, wherewith these words are joyned. And it seems not probable, that the Psalmist after he had discoursed of Christs advancement to his Kingdom, and his administration of it, and success in it, both as to his enemies and friends, would run back to his birth, either Divine or Humane, both which were evidently and necessarily supposed in what he had already said of him. But then these words may be read either, 1. separately, as two distinct clauses, as they seem to be taken by our English Translators, and by the Colon which they placed in the middle. And so the first clause belongs to the foregoing words, as noting the time when the people should be willing, which having declared more generally in those words, in the day of thy power, he now describes more particularly and exactly, that they should be so even from the morning, or in a Poetical strain, which is very suitable to this Book, (from the womb of the morning, to wit, of that day of his power, (i. e.) from the very beginning of Christs entrance upon his Kingdom, which was after his Resurrection and Ascension into Heaven, and from the very first preaching of the Gospel after that time, when multitudes were made Christs willing people by the preaching of the Apostles, as we read Acts 2. and 3. and 4. and 5, &c. And for the second clause, it is to be understood thus, thou hast childhood, for the word jeled, from which this is derived, signifies sometimes a young man, and sometimes a child or infant. By youth or childhood he here seems to understand those young men or children which shall be born to the Messias, who are called his children, Heb. 2. 13. and his seed, Isa. 53. 10. wherein possibly there might be an allusion to this dew. Thus the abstract is here put for the concrete, which is very frequent in the Hebrew Tongue, as Circumcision and Uncircumcision are put for the Circumcised and the Uncircumcised, &c. And even in the Latin Tongue this very word youth is oft used for a young man or for a company of young men. By the dew of youth he means youth or young men like dew, the note of similitude being oft understood. And this progeny of Christ is compared to the dew, partly because of their great multitude, being like drops of dew innumerable, and covering the whole face of the earth; see 2 Sam. 17. 12. and partly because of the strange manner of their generation, which like that of the dew, is done suddenly and secretly, and not perceived till it be accomplished, and to the admiration of those that behold it; of which see Isa. 49. 21. Or, 2. joyntly, as one entire sentence, The dew of thy youth (i. e. Thy posterity, which is like the dew, as was noted and explained before) is as the dew (which may very well be understood out of the foregoing clause, as the word sect is understood in like manner, Psal. 18. 33. He maketh my feet like hinds feet) of or from the womb of the morning, it is like the morning dew, as it is called both in Scripture, as Hos. 6. 4. and in other Authors. Nor is it strange that a womb is ascribed to the morning, seeing we read of the womb of the Sea, and of the womb of ice and frost, Job 38. 8, 28, 29.

4 The LORD hath sworn t, and will not repent, * Thou art u a priest x for ever y after the order of Melchizedek z. * Heb. 5. 6. & 7. 17, 21.

t Which he did not in the Aaronical Priesthood, Heb. 7. 21. but did it here, partly because the thing was new and strange, and might seem incredible, because God had already erected another, and that an everlasting Priesthood, Numb. 25. 13. and given it to Aaron and his posterity for ever, and therefore this needed all possible assurance: and partly that this Priesthood might be established upon better promises, as is said Heb. 8. 6. and made sure and irrevocable, and such that God neither could nor would repent of it, as it follows. u To wit, by my order and constitution: thou shalt be so, and I do hereby make thee so. x As well as a King. Those Offices which were divided before between two Families, are both united and invested in thee, both being absolutely necessary for the discharge of thine Office, and for the establishment of thy Kingdom, which is of another kind than the Kingdoms of the World, spiritual and heavenly, and therefore needs such a King as is also a Minister of holy things. This word plainly discovers that this Psalm cannot be understood of David, as some of the Jews would have it, but only of the Messias. And although this word Cohen be sometimes used of a Prince or great Person in the State, as the Jews object, yet it cannot be so understood here, partly because it signifies a Priest in Gen. 14. 18. from whence this expression is borrowed; partly because that word is never used of a Soveraign Prince or King (such as the Jews confess the Messias to be) but only of inferiour Princes or Ministers of State, as Gen. 41. 45. 2 Sam. 8. ult. partly because such an inconsiderable assertion would never have been ushered in by so solemn an Oath, especially after far greater things had been said of him in the same kind, ver. 1, 2, 3. and partly because this is evident from 1 Chron. 6. 13. compare Jer. 20. 21. and 35. 15, 18. y Not to be interrupted or translated to another person, as the Priesthood of Aaron was upon the death of the Priest, but to be continued to thee for ever. z Or, after the manner, &c. so as he was a Priest and also a King, and both without any successor and without end, in the sense intended Heb. 7. 3.

a Either, 1. God the Father, whose words and oath he last mentioned, v. 4. So this is an Apostrophe of the Psalmist to Christ, Thy God and Father is at thy right hand, to wit, to defend and assist thee, as that phrase is used Psal. 16. 8. and 109. 31. and elsewhere. See the Notes on v. 1. And he, to wit, God the Father, shall strike, &c. as it follows. Although this latter clause may belong to the Messias; and as in the former he spake to him, so in this he speaketh of him; such changes of persons being very frequent in this Book. Or, 2. God the Son, or the Lord, who is at thy right hand, as was said before v. 1. shall strike, &c. So this is an Apostrophe to God the Father concerning his Son. This seems best to agree with the following verses; for it is evident that it is the same person who strikes thorow Kings, and judgeth among the heathen, and filleth, &c. And so this whole verse, and those which follow, speak of one person, which seems most probable. b Shall mortally wound and destroy all those Kings and Potentates who are obstinate enemies to him and to his Church. c In the day of battel, when he shall contend with them, and pour forth the floods of his wrath upon them.

6 He shall judge d among the heathen; he shall fill the places d with the dead bodies e: he shall wound the heads f over ‖ many countries. ‖ Or, great.

d Either, 1. conquer and govern them: or rather, 2. condemn and punish them, as it is explained in the following clauses, and as this word is used Gen. 15. 14. Rom. 2. 1, 2. 1 Pet. 4. 6. and elsewhere. d Or, the place of battel, which is necessarily supposed in the fight, and therefore may very well be understood. e Of his his enemies slain by his hand, and lying in the field in great numbers and heaps, and that unburied to their greater infamy. f Heb. the head. Which may be understood either, 1. of some one person eminent adversary of Christ and of his Kingdom, either the Devil, by comparing this with Gen. 3. 15. Heb. 2. 14. who was indeed the Head or Ruler of many Countries, and indeed of all Nations, except that of Israel: or the Roman Empire, which was the great enemy and obstructer of Christs Kingdom, and therefore was to be destroyed by him, as is declared Dan. 2. 44, 45. and 7. 7, &c. or the great Antichrist, or the Beast after which the whole World wondered, Revel. 13. 3. which Christ will destroy, as we read 2 Thess. 2. 8. and in divers places of St. Johns Revelation. Or, 2. of all those Heads or Princes which oppose him; the Singular number Head being here put collectively for Heads, as is very usual in the Hebrew Tongue and Text. And so the meaning is, that none of Christs enemies, though never so many or great, and their Empire be never so large and potent, shall be able to withstand his force, or escape out of his hand; and that he shall not only destroy the common Souldiers, but also their greatest Commanders and Princes, who in such cases do frequently make their escape. But this and the other like passages both here and in the Prophets, are not to be understood grossly and carnally, but spiritually, according to the nature of Christs Kingdom, the weapons of Christs warfare, by which he accomplished his great works, being spiritual; and therefore such must be his battels and judgments, as is evident from many other Scriptures, although these also are followed many times with temporal plagues.

7 He shall drink of the brook in the way g: therefore h shall he lift up the head i.

g This may be understood either, 1. properly, to express the fervency and diligence of the Messias in the prosecution of his business; who having routed and destroyed the main body of his enemies forces, pursues those that fled with such eagerness, that he will not lose any time in refreshing himself, as might seem necessary after such hot and hard service, but will content himself with drinking a little water out of the brook which he finds in his way, that being a little refreshed therewith, he may proceed with more vigour and efficacy in his work. And so this place alludes to the History of Gideons 300 men, who onely lapped a little of the water; of whom see Jud. 7. Or, 2. metaphorically, to express the humiliation and Passion of the Messias, and thereby to prevent a great mistake which might arise in mens minds concerning him, from the great successes and victories here ascribed to him, which might induce them to think that the Messias should be exempted from all sufferings, and be crowned with constant and perpetual Triumphs. To confute this conceit, he intimates here, that the Messias, before he should obtain that power and glory mentioned in the foregoing verses, should have a large portion of afflictions in the way to it, or whilst he was in the way or course of his life, before he came to his end or rest, and to that honour of sitting at his Fathers right hand. Waters in Scripture do very frequently signifie afflictions or sufferings, as Psal. 42. 7, &c. To drink of them signifies to feel or bear them, as Isa. 51. 17. Jer. 25. 15. and 49. 12. Mat. 20. 22. and in this case it may note Christs willing submission to them. A brook or river of water is oft used in Scripture to express a great abundance either of comforts, as Psal. 36. 8. or of tribulations, as Psal. 18. 4. and 124. 4. and therefore may be more fitly used in this place than a cup, by which the afflictions of other men are commonly expressed, to intimate that the sufferings of the Messiah were unspeakably more and heavier than the sufferings of other men, and that he should drink up not a small cup, but the whole river or Sea of his Fathers wrath due to our sins. h Which word may note either the effect or the consequent of his sufferings. i (i. e.) Shall be delivered from all his sorrows and sufferings, and exalted to great glory and joy and felicity, as this phrase usually signifies, as Psal. 3. 4. and 27. 6. Jer. 52. 31. and oft elsewhere; as on the contrary, to hang down the head is a signification of great grief and shame, as Lament. 2. 20.

PSAL. CXI.

The ARGUMENT.

THE excellency of this Psalm appears, as from other things, so from the Psalmists care to digest the several parcels of it into an exact order according to the order of the letters of the Hebrew Alphabet, that it might be better fixed in the memories of those who read it. It is a short yet full commemoration of Gods works.

The Psalmist by his own Example exhorteth all men to praise God, 1. rehearseth his glorious and wonderful works, 2—4. his keeping Covenant with them that fear him, 5——9. whose fear is the beginning of wisdom, 10.

Hallelujah. 1 * PRaise ye the LORD. I will praise the LORD with my whole heart, in the assembly of the upright a, and in the congregation.

a Of the sincere Worshippers of God, of the Israel of God, as this very word is explained, Numb. 23. 10. where they who are called Israel in one clause, are called righteous or upright in the next. And this title he gives to the Assembly or Congregation of Israelites, partly because many of them were such, and he was obliged in charity to judge all of them to be so, of whom he had no evidence to the contrary; partly because upright persons do most exercise and delight themselves in this duty of praising God; and hypocrites, though sometimes they give themselves to prayer, yet are very apt to neglect the duty of thanksgiving; partly because this duty of praise is most comely for the upright, Psal. 33. 1. and partly because Davids heart was most united to the sincere Israelites, and his desire was, as far as he could, to associate himself with such in the worship and service of God.

b Either, 1. the works of Creation: or rather, 2. the works of his Providence in the World, and especially in and for his Church and people; of which he speaks in the rest of the Psalm. c For the infinite power and wisdom and goodness manifested in them. d Highly valued and regarded, as this very word and phrase is used Deut. 11. 12. Isa. 62. 12. or frequently called to mind, and diligently meditated upon; when others either never regarded them, or instantly forget them: or, found out, as this word is taken, Isa. 65. 1. the antecedent being put for the consequent, which is frequent in Scripture, as Rom. 12. 2. where proving or trying (for so the Greek word there signifies) is put for approving, which follows after it. And, found out, (i. e.) truly and throughly understood, both as to the nature of them, and Gods counsels and ends in them; whereas the works of God are oft-times not apprehended or minded, or are mistaken and misconstrued, by ungodly men. e Of all them who take delight in observing and considering the works of God.

3 His work f is * honourable and glorious g: and his righteousness h endureth for ever i. * Heb. his now and glory.

f Either all his works, of which see the Note on v. 2. or that eminent branch of those works, his providence towards his people, as it is expressed afterwards. g Becoming the Divine Majesty, and bringing glory to him from all that observe and consider it. h His justice or faithfulness in performing his word. i Hath always been and will still be evident to his people in all generations and in all conditions, even when he afflicts them, and seems to deal most severely, and to break his promise with them.

4 He hath made his wonderful works to be remembred k: the LORD is gracious and full of compassion l.

k Either, 1. by those memorials which he hath left of them in his Word: or rather, 2. by their own wonderful nature, and the lasting effects and benefits flowing from them, which are such as cannot easily be forgotten. l Towards his people, as appears from his works and carriage towards us, in sparing and pardoning and restoring and preserving us when we have deserved to be utterly destroyed.

5 He hath given * meat m unto them that fear him n: * Heb prey. he will ever be n mindful of his covenant o.

m Which includes all necessary provisions for their being and well-being. The word signifies spoil, and so may relate to the spoil of the Egyptians, granted by God to the Israelites; but it is sometimes used for food, as Prov. 31. 15. Mal. 3. 10. n To the Israelites, the only people in the world which feared and worshipped the true God according to his will; and especially to those among the true God according to his will; and especially to those among them that truly feared God, and, for their sakes, to the body of that Nation, as well in the Wilderness, as in their following straits and miseries. n Or, he hath ever been; for both in the first branch of this verse, and in the foregoing and following verses he is speaking of the former works of God. So the Future tense is put for the past, as it is frequently, and as on the contrary the past tense is put for the Future. o Which he made with Abraham and with his seed for ever; whereby he obliged himself to be their God, and to provide all necessaries for them.

6 He hath shewed p his people the power of his works q, that he may give them the heritage of the heathen r.

p Not onely by words, but by his actions, q His mighty power in his works, and especially in that which here follows. r The land of Canaan, which had been possessed and inherited by the heathens.

7 The works of his hands s are verity and judgment t; * all his commandments u are sure x. * Pf. 19.7.

s All that he doth either on the behalf of his people, or against his or their enemies; of both which sorts of works he spoke in the foregoing verse. t Are exactly agreeable to his word or promises, and to the rules of justice. u Either, 1. his Laws given to the Israelites, especially the Moral Law comfidered with its Sanction, the promises made to the observers of it, and the threatnings denounced against transgressors. Or, 2. his works, as it is in the first clause, called his Commands, because they were done by virtues of his decree, and by his power and authority; as in like manner God is said to command those blessings which he purposeth to give, and doth effectually procure, as Deut. 28. 8. Psal. 42. 9. and 68. 28. and 133. 3. and to command those creatures which he moveth and affecth as he pleaseth; as 1 Kings 17. 4. Mat. 8. 27. x Or faithful or certain, constant and unchangeable, as his Laws are, being grounded upon the immutable rules of justice or equity; infallible and irresistible, as his counsels and ways are.

8 * They † stand fast y for ever and ever, and are done z in truth and uprightness. * Isa. 40. 8. Mat. 5. 18. † Heb. are established.

y Heb. They are established upon the sure foundations of truth and uprightness, as it follows. z Constituted or ordered.

9 He sent redemption a unto his people; he hath commanded b his covenant for ever c: holy and reverend d is his name. * Deu. 4. 6. Job 28. 28. Prov. 1. 7. & 9. 10.

a That deliverance out of Egypt, which was a type and pledge of that greater and higher redemption by Christ. b (i. e.) Appointed or established firmly by his power and authority. And so this word is oft used, as Psal. 33. 9. and 42. 8. and 105. 31, 34. See also before on v. 7. the ground of which signification may be taken from hence, that the command of a sufficient authority concerning any thing, doth commonly establish and effect it. c Through all succeffive gencrations of his people to the end of the world; for the Covenant is the same for substance in all, and differed onely in circumstances. d Terrible to his enemies, and venerable in his peoples eyes, and holy in all his dealings with all men.

wisdom f: ‖ a good understanding have all they † that do his commandments g: his praise endureth for ever.

e Piety or true Religion, which consists in the fear or worship and service of God. f Is the onely foundation of and introduction to all true wisdom. Or, is the chief part of wisdom; those things which are most excellent in their kinds being oft said to be first, to wit, in dignity, as Num. 24. 20. Deut. 18. 4, &c. and in other Authors. And the first command, Mark 12. 28. is called the greatest command, Mat. 22. 36. g Heb. that do them, to wit, Gods commands, or the things which the fear of God requireth.

PSAL. CXII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm containeth a description of a good mans gracious disposition and carriage; as also of his blessed condition even in this life as well as in the next.

The blessednes of them that fear the Lord in this Life, and in that to come, 1———7. For which the wicked envy them, and are grieved. 8. 10.

* Heb. Hal-lelujah.

* PRaise ye the LORD. Blessed is the man that feareth the LORD a, that delighteth greatly b in his commandments c.

a The fear of God, as it is mans onely wisdom, Psal. 111. 10. so it is his onely way to true happiness. b Who makes it his chief delight, care, and business to study and obey Gods commandments. c He intimates that zeal and fervency in Gods service, is essential to true piety.

2 His seed shall be mighty upon earth: the generation d of the upright shall be blessed.

d (i. e.) The posterity, as this word is oft used, as Lev. 23. 43. Numb. 9. 10. &c. called his seed in the former branch.

3 Wealth and riches shall be in his house e; and his righteousness f endureth for ever.

e Possessed by him whilst he lives, and continued in his family after his death. f (i. e.) The fruit or reward of his righteousness, which is Gods blessing upon his estate: for the work is oft put for the reward of it, as in the Hebrew, Levit. 19. 13. Job 7. 2. Psal. 109. 20. And righteousness may be here taken for his bounty or charity, as it is below v. 9. and as this Hebrew word is frequently taken.

*Pf.97.11. 4 Unto the upright their ariseth * light in the darkness g: he h is gracious, and full of compassion, and righteous.

g And although he is subject to the troubles and calamities of this life, as others are, yet God will give him support and comfort in them, and an happy issue out of them, whereas the wicked sink under their burdens, and their present miseries usher in their eternal destruction. h Either, 1. God. And so this is added as a reason why God causeth light to shine to the upright out of darkness, because the Lord is gracious, &c. Or rather, 2. the good or upright man, of whom he speaks both in the foregoing and following words. So this is either, 1. a reason why God dealeth thus with good men; it is not from a partial and fond affection to them, but because they are such persons to whom God hath ingaged himself by promise and Covenant to bless them, they are gracious, &c. Or, 2. as an effect of their affliction and deliverance out of it; thereby they learn to be more merciful and compassionate and just or bountiful to others in want and misery.

* Heb. words. † Heb. judgment.

5 A good man sheweth favour and lendeth i; he will guide his * affairs k with † discretion l.

i Giveth freely to some, and kindly lendeth to others according to the variety of their conditions. k Maintain and manage his estate or domestick affairs. l Heb. with judgment, so as is fit and meet, and as God requires, not getting his estate unjustly, nor casting it away prodigally or wickedly, nor yet withholding it uncharitably from such as need it.

6 Surely he shall not be moved for ever m: the righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance n.

m Though he may for a season be afflicted, yet he shall not be utterly and eternally destroyed, as wicked men shall. n Though whilst he lives he may be exposed to the censures and slanders and contradictions of sinners, yet after death his memory will be precious and honourable both with God and with all men, his very enemies not excepted.

7 He shall not be afraid of evil tidings o: his heart is fixed, trusting in the LORD p.

o At the report of approaching calamities and judgments of God, at which the wicked are so dismayed and affrighted. p Casting all his care upon God, and securely relying upon his providence and promise.

* Pr. 1.33. 8 His heart is established; * he shall not be afraid, until he see his desire upon his enemies q.

q And although his enemies be many and mighty and terrible, yet he shall confidently and cheerfully wait upon God, until he see their ruine and his own deliverance and safety.

*2Cor.9.9. †Pf.75.10. 9 * He hath disperſed r, he hath given to the poor; † his righteousness s endureth for ever t; † his horn shall be exalted with honour u.

r To wit, his goods, and that freely and liberally, to several persons, as occasion is offered, as this word implies. s (i. e.) His liberality, as this word is used Prov. 10. 2. and 11. 4. Dan. 4. 27. 2 Cor. 9. 9, 10, &c. or the reward of it, as before v. 3. t Either, 1. his charity is not a transient or occasional act, but his constant course, of which he is not weary, but perseveres in it to the end of his life. Or, 2. what he gives is not lost nor cast away, as covetous or ungodly men judge of alms, but indeed is the onely part of his estate, which will abide with him unto all eternity. u Though he may be reproached by ungodly men, yet his innocency shall be cleared, and his name and honour gloriously exalted.

10 The wicked shall see it, and be grieved x; he shall gnash with his teeth, and melt away; the desire y of the wicked shall perish.

x At the felicity of good men, partly from envy at the happiness of others: partly from his peculiar hatred of all godly men: and partly because it is a plain testimony of Gods justice and providence, and therefore a certain presage of his own ruine. y His desire either of the misery of good men; or of his own constant prosperity and happiness in the world.

PSAL. CXIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm is a declaration of Gods powerful and universal providence towards all men, and especially towards his afflicted people.

An Exhortation for all men to praise the Lord, for his Excellency and Greatness, 1———5. for his condescention to the poor and humble-minded, 6———9.

1 * PRaise ye the LORD. Praise, O ye servants of the LORD a: praise the Name of the LORD.

a Ye Levites, who are peculiarly devoted to this solemn work, who sometimes are called Gods servants in a special sence, and all you faithful souls.

*Dan.2.20 2 * Blessed be the Name of the LORD, from this time forth and for evermore.

*Mal.1.11. 3 * From the rising of the sun unto the going down of the same b; the LORD's Name is to be praised c.

b From one end of the world to the other; from East to West, which he mentions rather than from North to South, because those parts of the world were at this time much uninhabited and unknown. c For his glorious works of Creation and Providence, the benefit of which all Nations enjoy; and for his gracious purpose and promise of bringing in all Nations to the knowledge of his truth by the Messias.

* Pſa. 8.1. 4 The LORD is high above all nations d, and * his glory above the heavens e.

d Superiour to all Princes and bodies of people in the world. e Whereas the glory of earthly Monarchs is confined to this lower world and to small pittances of it, the glory of God doth not only fill the earth, but heaven too, where it is celebrated by thousands and myriads of blessed Angels, yea it is far higher than heaven, being infinite and incomprehensible.

* Heb. exalteth himself to dwell. 5 Who is like unto the LORD our God, who * dwelleth on high f?

f To wit, far above all heavens, as was now said, being exalted as in place, so in power and dignity, above all persons and things visible and invisible.

‖ Or, beholdeth the things below. So Gr. *Pſ.138.6. 6 ‖ * Who humbleth himself to behold the things that are in heaven, and in the earth g?

g Who is so high, that it is a wonderful vouchsafement and condescension in him to take any notice or care of his holy and heavenly host, and much more of sinful and miserable men upon earth, which yet he is pleased to do.

Iſa. 57.15. † Sa.2.8. Pf.107.41. 7 * He raiseth up the poor h out of the dust i, and † lifted the needy out of the dunghil:

* Job 36.7. 8 That he may * set him with princes k; even with the princes of his people l.

k In equal honour and power with them, as he did Joseph, David, and others. l Which in Gods account and in truth are far more honourable and happy than the Princes of Heathen and barbarous Nations, because their Subjects are more noble, and they have Gods special presence and providence among them.

* 1 Sa.2.5. † Heb. to dwell in an house. Pſa. 68. 6. 9 * He maketh the barren woman † to keep house m, and to be a joyful mother of children. Praise ye the LORD.

m Heb. to dwell in an house or family, or amongst children, to wit, coming out of her own womb, as is clearly implied by the opposition of this to her barrenness. And the word house is oft put for children, as Exod. 1. 21. Ruth 4. 11. Pſal. 115, 10, 12. And so it is explained in the next clause.

PSAL. CXIV.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm is a solemn commemoration of Israels deliverance out of Egypt; and probably it was to be sung, amongst others, at the celebration of the Passover.

The Psalmist rehearsing God's delivering the Israelites out of Egypt, exhorteth all Creatures to praise him, 1———8.

1 WHen * Israel went out of Egypt, the house of Jacob from a people of strange language a; a Which was a great aggravation of their captivity and misery. Compare Jer. 5. 15.

* Ex.13.3.

2 Judah b was his c sanctuary d, and Israel his dominion e.

b Or, Israel, as it is explained in the next clause; one Tribe being put for all; which is a common Synecdoche. Judah he mentions as the chief of all the Tribes, not onely in number and power, but also in dignity, in which the Kingdom was to be seated, Gen. 49. 10, &c. as at this time it actually was, and from which the the Messias was to spring. c (i. e.) Gods, which is easily understood from the whole context, and from the nature of the thing. d Or, holiness, the people of Gods holiness, as they are called Isa. 63. 18. or, his holy people, as Deut. 26. 29. Dan. 8. 24. sanctified or set apart from all the Nations of the World to be his peculiar people and possession. e In a peculiar manner to be governed by his laws, and honoured with his special presence and favour.

Iſa. 14. back. 3 * The sea saw it, f and fled; † Jordan is driven f To wit, this glorious work of God in bringing his people out of Egypt.

Iſa. 55. 12. 4 The mountains g skipped like rams, and the little hills like lambs.

g Horeb and Sinai, two tops of one mountain, and other neighbouring hills or mountains. Compare Exod. 19. 18. Pſal. 68. 8. Habak. 3. 6, 10.

Hab.3. 8. 5 * What ailed thee, O thou sea, that thou fleddest h? thou Jordan, that thou wast driven back?

h What was the cause of this unusual motion? Such speeches directed to senceless creatures, are very frequent both in Scripture and in other Authors, and especially in Poetical writings, such as this is.

6 Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams; and ye little hills like lambs?

7 Tremble thou earth at the presence of the LORD i; at the presence of the God of Jacob.

i But why do I ask these questions? Ye mountains did no more than what was just and fit at the approach and appearance of the great God: yea the whole earth hath reason to tremble and quake upon such occasions.

Exo.17.6. Num.20.11. 8 * Which turned the rock into a standing water, the flint into a fountain of waters.

PSAL. CXV.

The ARGUMENT.

THe occasion of this Psalm was to manifest some eminent danger or distress of the people of Israel from some Idolatrous Nations. But whether it was that mentioned 2 Chron. 20. or what other, is but matter of conjecture, and not worth our inquiry.

The Church prayeth to God to keep them for his glorious Name, 1—3. from the vanity of Idol-worship, 4———8. exhorteth to confidence in him, being assured of his blessing, 9———17. they resolve for ever to praise the Lord, 18.

1 NOt unto us, O LORD, not unto us, but unto thy Name give glory a, for thy mercy, and for thy truths sake.

a As we intreat thy favour and aid, and that thou wouldst work gloriously on our behalf to bring us out of our present straits and extremities, so we do not desire this out of a vainglorious humour, as usually men do in such cases, that we may get renown by the conquest of our proud and mighty enemies, but that thy honour may be vindicated from all their contempts and blasphemies; and if thou wilt deliver us, we will not arrogate the praise and glory of it to our own worth or valour, but onely to thy mercy and truth, as it follows.

Pſ.42.10. Iſa. 57.15. Pſ.2.17. 2 Wherefore should the heathen say b, * Where is now c their God d?

b Why dost thou suffer them, or give them any colour or occasion to say or think so, by conniving at their wickedness, and by giving thy people into their hands? c He is no where; he is lost or at a loss, either unable or unwilling or not at leisure to save them. d Who hath undertaken to be their God and Saviour, and whom they onely worship, and of whom they use to boast and insult over us and over our Gods.

Pſ.135.6. 3 * But our God e is in the heavens f; he hath done whatsoever he pleased g.

e Whom, notwithstanding your reproaches, we are not ashamed to own for our God. f Although he have no visible shape nor bodily presence with us here upon earth, as your Idols have, which is a certain proof of their basenes and weakness, yet he hath a certain and a glorious place where he resideth, even the highest heavens, where he is cloathed with infinite Power and Majesty, and from whence he beholdeth and governeth this lower world, and all that is in it. g Or, he doth, &c. By his onely will and pleasure all things were at first made, and are still disposed, and without this nothing cometh to pass. And therefore all your insolencies and injuries and successes against us do not come from an invincible power in you or in your Idols, nor from any defect of strength or goodness in our God, but onely from hence, that it pleased him for many wise and good reasons to afflict us, and to give you prosperity for a time.

*Deut. 4. 28. Pſ.135.15. Iſa. 40. 19. &c. 4 * Their idols are silver and gold h, the work of mens hands i.

h Thus glorious and powerful is our God, O ye heathens, of whom you so boldly ask, who and where he is: but as for your Gods or Idols, they have no power nor worth in them, but what is taken from their materials. i As their matter is wholly from the earth, so their form or figure they have from the art of man; and therefore they should rather, if it were possible, worship man, as their Creator and Lord than be worshipped by him.

5 They have mouths, but they speak not k; eyes have they, but they see not.

k For although the blind Heathen are by their Idolatrous Priests made to believe otherwise concerning their Idols, in regard of the Spirits which they pretend to dwell in them, yet this is the truth of the matter, and confirmed by long and constant experience, that they are but vain and senceless things, they can neither speak in answer to your prayers of inquiries, nor see what you do or what you want; nor hear your petitions; nor smell your incenses and sacrifices; nor handle or use their hands either to take any thing from you, or to give any thing to you; nor so much as mutter, or give the least signification of their apprehension of your condition and concerns.

6 They have ears, but they hear not; noses have they, but they smell not.

7 They have hands, but they handle not; feet have they, but they walk not; neither speak l they through their throat.

l Or, mutter, or make a noise, as this word signifies Isa. 13. 14. They are so far from speaking with their throat and other instruments of speech, as men do, that they cannot make such an inarticulate and senceless sound with them, as the beasts do.

8 They that make them m * are like unto them n; so is every one that trusteth in them.

* Heb. let them be like unto them. So Gr.

m Or, they that observe or worship them. For the Psalmists quarrel was not so much with those few Artists who formed the Images, as with all the adorers of them. And the word here rendred make doth sometimes signifie to worship, as some understand it, not without probability, Exod. 32. 35. because they made (i. e. worshipped) the calf which Aaron made, and as in other Languages words answering to this do signifie, as hath been oft observed by learned men; and it oft signifies to observe; as when men are said to make (as it is in the Hebrew) the Sabbath, Deut. 5. 15. and the passe, and the Passover, and the feast of weeks, as Deut. 15. 1. and 16. 1. 10. n This is a sharp reflection, either 1. upon the Idols, whose highest preferment it is to be made like unto man, a mortal, weak and miserable creature, infinitely inferior to the true God. Or, 2. to the makers or worshippers of them, who by this absurd and foolish action, shew that they are as ignorant and stupid and void of all sence and reason as their Images.

9 O Israel o, trust thou in the LORD: he is their help o and their shield.

o Do not thou follow the example of these brutish Idolaters, but serve the Lord onely. o Who trust in God, as he now required. Or, their is put for your by a change of persons, which is most frequent in Scripture, and especially in these Books.

10 O house of Aaron p, trust in the LORD: he is their help and their shield.

p You Priests and Levites proceeding from Aaron, or related to him, who have special reason and many obligations to do it, who have a more distinct knowledge of God, which is the foundation of trust, Pſal. 9. 10. and who are to be both instructers of and examples to the people in this as well as in other duties.

11 Ye that fear the LORD q, trust in the LORD: he is their help and their shield.

q All and every one of you who worship the true God, not onely Aaronites and Israelites, but even Gentile-profelytes, who are said to come to trust under the wings of the God of Israel, Ruth 2. 12. And such there were many at this time in the Church of Israel, whom therefore he fitly invites to trust God, because he is no less their, than the Israelites help and shield, as it follows.

12 The LORD hath been mindful of us r; he will bless us, he will bless the house of Israel, he will bless the house of Aaron.

r In our former straits and calamities, and therefore we trust he will still bless us, &c. as it follows. Or, is or will be mindful of us. Though he hath chastened us sore, yet he hath not yet cast us out of the care of his providence.

13 He will bless them that fear the LORD, both small ‖ and great s.

s Either in age or condition, of whatsoever quality, high and low, rich and poor; for he is no respecter of persons.

14 The LORD shall encrease you t more and more, you and your children.

t In number, notwithstanding all the attempts of your enemies to diminish and destroy you. Or, shall add to you, to wit, further and greater blessings.

15 Ye are blessed of the LORD, which made heaven and earth u.

u Who therefore can bless you indeed in spight of all your enemies curses and oppositions; and not of an impotent Idol that can do you neither good nor hurt.

16 The heaven, even the heavens are the LORD's x: but the earth hath he given to the children of men y.

x To wit, in a peculiar manner, where he dwelleth in that light and glory to which no man can approach, and whence he beholdeth and disposeth all persons and things upon earth. y For their habitation, possession and use. But these words may be and are thus rendred by others, and the earth which (which particle is very oft understood) he hath given, &c. And then as the foregoing verse declared that God was the Creator of Heaven and Earth, v. 15. so this asserts that he is also their Lord and Governor to dispose of all men and things as he pleaseth.

*Pſ.88.10, 11, 12. Iſa. 38.18. †Pſ.94.17. 17 * The dead z praise not the LORD, neither any that go down into † silence a.

z Such as we shall suddenly be, if thou dost not succour us. a Into the place of silence, the grave.

*Dan.2.20 18 * But we will bless the LORD b, from this time forth and for evermore. Praise the LORD.

b But we hope for better things, that notwithstanding our present and urgent danger, yet thou wilt deliver us, and so give us occasion to bless thy Name: whereby thou wilt have the praise and glory of our deliverance.

PSAL. CXVI.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm contains a solemn thanksgiving to God for a glorious deliverance from grievous and dangerous calamities; as also from great perplexities and terrors of mind arising from the sence of Gods displeasure.

The Psalmist professeth his love to God for his manifold mercies in delivering him out of great straits and dangers, 1——8. promising to walk holily, prayeth for his future protection, studieth and promiseth to be thankful, 9——19.

1 I Love the LORD, because he hath heard my voice, and my supplications.

2 Because he hath inclined his ear unto me, therefore will I call upon him ‖ as long as I live a.

a Heb. in my days: as long as I have a day to live, as this phrase is used 2 Kings 20. 19. Isa. 39. 8. Compare Job 27. 6.

*Ps.18.56. ‖Heb. found me.

3 * The sorrows of death b compassed me, and the pains of hell c ‖ gat hold upon me d: I found trouble and sorrow.

b Dangerous and deadly calamities, as bitter as death. Or, the cords of death. c Or, of the grave, or, of death, either killing pains, or such agonies and horrors as dying persons use to feel within themselves. d Heb. found me, (i. e.) surprized me. Having been long pursuing me, at last they overtook me and seized upon me, and I gave up my self for lost.

4 Then called I upon the Name of the LORD: O LORD, I beseech thee, deliver my soul.

5 Gracious is the LORD e, and righteous f: yea, our God is merciful.

e This he mentions either, 1. as that which he found by experience in answer to his prayers: or, 2. as the argument by which he encouraged himself to pray. f Therefore he will maintain me and my just cause against my unrighteous oppressors, and perform his promises, and save those who faithfully serve him and put their trust in him.

6 The LORD preserveth the simple g: I was brought low, and he helped me.

g Sincere and plain-hearted persons, who dare not use those frauds and crafty and wicked artifices in saving themselves or destroying their enemies, but wait upon God with honest hearts in his way and for his time of deliverance. Which was the case of David, who, though he had the prospect and the promise of the Kingdom, yet would not make haste to it by indirect courses, as by cutting off Saul, when he had great provocation and fair opportunity to do it: of which see 1 Sam. 24. and 26. Such persons he calls simple or foolish, as this word is commonly rendred, not because they are really so, but because the world esteems them so.

* Ps. 13.6. 7 Return unto thy rest h, O my soul, for * the LORD hath dealt bountifully with thee.

h Unto that tranquillity of mind and cheerful confidence in Gods promises and providence, which thou didst once enjoy.

*Ps.55.13. 8 * For thou hast delivered my soul i from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling k.

i My self. k To wit, into mischief and the pit of destruction.

9 I will walk before the LORD l in the land of the living m.

l Or, I shall walk, &c. This is either 1. the Psalmists promise to God in requital of the favour last mentioned, I will therefore please God, as this phrase is used Gen. 5. 24. compared with Heb. 11. 5. Gen. 17. 1. I will devote my self to the worship and service of God. Or, 2. his thankful acknowledgment of Gods further favour. Though I be now banished from the place of thy presence and worship, yet I assure my self that I shall be restored to it, and shall spend my days in thy house and service, which is the one thing that I desired above all other things, Psal. 27. 4. m Amongst living men of this world. See on Psal. 27. 13.

*2 Cor. 4. 13. 10 * I believed n, therefore have I spoken o: I was greatly afflicted p.

n To wit, Gods promise of deliverance and of the Kingdom made to me by Samuel, which I was confident he would perform in spight of discouragements and difficulties. o So these words are translated, as by others, so by the Apostle, 2 Cor. 4. 13. I have spoken, either, 1. what I have now said, v. 9. or 2. what I have uttered to others concerning Gods promises made to me. Which I was not ashamed nor afraid to publish when I had occasion, because I was fully perswaded that God would make them good. p Or, when I was, &c. or, although I was, &c. such particles being very frequently understood. The sence is, And this I did even in the midst of many and sore afflictions.

*Rom.3.4. 11 I said q in my haste r, * All men are liars s.

q Yet once I confess I spake very unadvisedly. r Through hastiness and precipitation of my mind, for want of due consideration, as the same phrase is used, Psal. 31. 22. Or, in my terror or amazement, when I was discomposed and distracted with the greatness of my troubles. s The sence is either, 1. All men, yea even my former friends and companions, prove deceitful and perfidious, all humane help faileth me; so that my case is desperate, if God do not help me. Or, 2. All men, Gods own Prophets not excepted, are liable to mistakes by the condition of their nature, as they are men, and therefore may easily deceive others; and this might be the case of Samuel in his promise of the Kingdom to me. Thus he questions the truth of Gods promises, yet so as he doth not strike directly at God, but onely reflects upon the instrument.

12 What shall I render unto the LORD for all his benefits towards me t?

t Yet notwithstanding all my dangers and my distrust of God too, God hath conferred so many and great blessings upon me, that I can never make sufficient returns to him for them.

13 I will take the cup of salvation u, and call upon the Name of the Lord x.

u I will offer the sacrifice of thanksgiving to God, as this phrase seems to be explained below, v. 17. where the latter clause of the verse is the same with that which here follows. The phrase is taken from the common practice of the Jews in their Thank-offerings, in which a Feast was made of the remainders of the Sacrifices, and the Offerers, together with the Priests, did eat and drink before the Lord, and amongst other Rites, the Master of the Feast took a cup of wine into his hand, and solemnly blessed God for it and for the mercy which was then acknowledged, and then gave it to all the guests, who drunk successively of it. See 1 Chron. 16. 2, 3. To which custom it is supposed that our blessed Saviour alludes in the institution of the Cup, which also is called the Cup of blessing, 1 Cor. 10. 16. which is in effect the same with the Cup of salvation. This Metaphor of a Cup is used both of afflictions, as Psal. 11. 6. and 75. 9. and of comforts, as Psal. 23. 5. Jer. 16. 8. x Or, publish or preach in or of the name of the Lord, (i. e.) his gracious nature and the great things which he hath done for me. For he speaks of praise rather than of prayer, as appears both from the former clause, and by comparing v. 17.

14 I will pay my vows y unto the LORD, now in the presence of all his people z.

y The praises and sacrifices which I vowed to God in the time of my distress. z That they who heard my vows, or understood them by the report of others, might be witnesses of my payment of them, and not be scandalized by my unfaithfulness in that matter.

15 Precious in the sight of the LORD is the death a of his saints.

a He sets an high price upon it; he will not readily grant it to those that greedily seek it; and if any son of violence procure it, he will make him pay very dearly for it; and when the Saints suffer it for Gods sake, as they frequently do, it is a most acceptable Sacrifice to God, and highly esteemed by him. Thus, the blood of Gods people is said to be precious in his sight, Psal. 72. 14. And, in the same sence, the life of a man is said to be precious in his eyes who spareth and preserved it, as 1 Sam. 15. 21. 2 Kings 1. 13. Gods people are precious in his eyes, both living and dying, for whether they live, they live unto the Lord, or whether they die, they die unto the Lord, Rom. 14. 8.

16 O LORD, truly I am thy servant b, I am thy servant, and * the son of thy handmaid c: thou hast * Ps.86.16. loosed my bonds d.

b This is either, 1. an argument used in prayer, It becometh thee to protect and save thy own servants, as every good master doth: or rather, 2. a thankful acknowledgment of his great obligations to God, whereby he was in duty bound to be the Lords faithful and perpetual servant. For this suits best with the context. c Either, 1. the son of a mother who was devoted and did devote me to thy service. Or, 2. like one born in thy house of one of thy servants, and so thine by a most strict and double obligation. d Thou hast rescued me from mine enemies, whose captive and vassal I was, and therefore hast a just right and title to me and to my service.

17 I will offer to thee * the sacrifice of thanksgiving, *Lev.7.12. and will call upon the Name of the LORD.

18 I will pay my vows unto the LORD, now in the presence of all his people e; e And as I said before, so I now repeat my promise, for the greater assurance, and to lay the stricter obligation upon my self.

19 in the courts of the LORD's house, in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem. Praise ye the LORD.

PSAL. CXVII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm contains a Prophecy of the Calling of the Gentiles, as appears both from the matter of it, and from Rom. 15. 11. where it is quoted to that purpose.

An Exhortation to all Nations to praise God for his mercy and truth's sake, 1, 2.

1 O * Praise the LORD a all ye nations: praise * Rom.15. him all ye people. 11.

a Acknowledge the true God, and serve him onely, and cast away all your Idols.

2 For his mercyful kindness is great towards us b; and the truth of the LORD endureth for ever. Praise ye the LORD.

b Either, 1. towards us Jews, to whom he hath given those peculiar priviledges which he hath denied to all other nations. But this may seem an improper argument to move the Gentiles to praise God for his mercies to others from which they were excluded. Or, 2. towards all of us, all the children of Abraham, whether carnal or spiritual, who were to be incorporated together, and made one body and one fold by and under the Messias, John 10 16. Eph. 2. 14. which mystery seems to be insinuated by this manner of expression.

PSAL. CXVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm most probably was composed by David when the Civil Wars between the Houses of Saul and David were ended, and David was newly setled in the Kingdom of all Israel, and had newly brought up the Ark of God to his Royal City. But though though this was the occasion, yet David, or at least the Spirit of God, which indited this Psalm, had a further reach and higher design in it, and especially in the latter part of it, which was to carry the Readers thoughts beyond the Type to the Antitype, the Messias and his Kingdom, who was chiefly intended in it. Which is apparent both from the testimonies produced out of it to that purpose in the New Testament, as Mat. 21. 9, 42. Mark 12. 10, 11. Acts 4. 11, &c. and from the consent of the Hebrew Doctors both ancient and modern; one evidence whereof is that in their Prayers for their Messiah, they use some part of this Psalm: and from the matter it self, as we shall see hereafter. The form of this Psalm may seem to be dramatical, and several parts of it are spoken in the name of several persons, yet so, that the distinction of the persons and their several passages is not expressed, but left to the observation of the intelligent and diligent Reader, as it is in the Book of the Song of Solomon, and in some part of Ecclesiastes; and in many profane Writers. David speaks in his own name from the beginning to v. 22. and from thence to v. 25. in the name of the people; and thence to v. 28. in the name of the Priests; and then concludes in his own name.

The Psalmist exhorteth all the Godly to praise the Lord, who had been merciful to them, 1—4. By his own Experience sheweth how good it is to trust in the Lord, who had delivered him from his Enemies, 5—18. Under the Type of the Psalmist, the coming of Christ whom the chief of the people refuse, is expressed and blessed, 19—29.

1 Chron. 16. 34. Psal. 106. 1. 107. 1. Jer. 33. 11. Psal. 136. 1. 1 O * Give thanks a unto the LORD, for he is good: because his mercy endureth for ever.

a All sorts of persons, which are particularly expressed in the three next verses, as they are mentioned in like manner and order, Psal. 115. 9, 10, 11. where see the Notes.

2 Let Israel b now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

b After the flesh, all the Tribes and people of Israel, except the Levites.

3 Let the house of Aaron c now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

c The Priests and Levites, who were greatly discouraged and oppressed in Sauls time, and shall receive great benefits by my government.

4 Let them now that fear the LORD d say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

d The Gentile-Proselytes, whereof there were in Davids time, and were likely to be, greater numbers than formerly had been.

Psal. 18. 6. & 120. 1. & 130. 1. 5 I called upon the LORD † in distress: the LORD answered me, and * set me ‖ in a large place.

e Which Verb is tacitly included in the former, and is easily understood out of Psal. 21. 8. where the full phrase is expressed, and from the following word. See the like examples in the Hebrew Text, Gen. 12. 15. Psal. 22. 21, &c.

Ps. 56. 4, 11. & 118. 6. Heb. with me. Heb. for me. 6 * The LORD is ‖ on my side, I will not fear: what can man f do unto me?

f A frail and impotent Creature in himself, and much more when he is opposed to the Almighty God.

Ps. 54. 4. & 118. 7. 7 * The LORD taketh my part with them that help me g: therefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me.

g He is one of the number of my helpers, and enables them to defend me.

Ps. 40. 4. & 118. 8. Isa. 2. 9. Jer. 17. 5, 7. 8 * It is better to trust in the LORD, than to put confidence in man h.

h As mine adversaries do in their own numbers and in their great confederates.

Ps. 146. 3. 9 * It is better to trust in the LORD, than to put confidence in princes.

10 All nations compassed me about i: but in the Name Ps. 118. of the LORD † will I destroy them. 11, 12, 18. Heb. cut them off.

i The Neighbouring and Heathen Nations, Philistins, Syrians, Ammonites, Moabites, &c. who were stirred up, partly by the overthrows which David had given some of them, partly by their jealousie at Davids growing greatness and fear for themselves, and partly by their hatred against the true Religion.

11 They compassed me about, yea, they compassed me about k: but in the Name of the LORD I will † destroy them.

Heb. cut them off. Deut. 1. 44. Psal. 83. 2. Heb. cut them off.

k The repetition implies their frequency and fervency in this action, and their confidence of success.

12 They compassed me about * like bees l; they are quenched m as the fire of thorns n: for o in the Name of the LORD I will † destroy them.

l In great numbers, and with great and potent fury, and to their own ruine, as Bees do when they fly about a Man, and leave their stings in him. m So this word is used Job 6. 17. and 18. 5, 6. and 21. 17. Or, as the LXX. and Chaldee render it, they burnt or flamed, (i. e.) raged against me like fire, as it follows. And this is supposed to be one of those Hebrew Verbs, which have not only divers, but contrary significations. n Which flameth out terribly, and makes a crackling noise, and burneth fiercely, but quickly spends it self without any considerable or lasting effect. o Or, but, as this very Particle is frequently used, and here twice in this very phrase, v. 10, 11. So as the former part of the verse notes their hostile attempt, this notes their ill success and utter ruine. Here is an inversion of words in this last clause, which is not unusual in the Hebrew Text. Although these words may be, and are by a learned man of our own, rendred as they lye in the Hebrew, I trust (which word may easily be understood out of v. 8. and 9.) in the name of the Lord, therefore (for so the Hebrew chi is oft rendred, and is so taken by the Chaldee in this place) I shall destroy them, or cut them off.

13 Thou p hast thrust sore at me that I might fall: but the LORD helped me.

p O mine enemy and the head of all mine enemies. Possibly he understandeth Saul; whom for honours sake he forbears to name: or some other chief Commanders of his Enemies. Or the singular word is here put collectively for all his enemies.

Ps. 140. 7. 14 * The LORD is my strength and song q, and is * Ex.15.2. become my salvation r. Psa. 12. 2.

q The Author of my strength, and therefore the just object of my song and praise. r (i. e.) My Saviour.

15 The voice of rejoycing and salvation s is in the tabernacles of the righteous t: the right hand of the LORD doth valiantly u.

s Of rejoycing and thanksgiving for the salvation and deliverance which God hath wrought for me. t Partly because they clearly saw Gods hand in the work, and therefore took pleasure in it: and partly because all good men suffered great inconveniences under Sauls Government, as David complains in divers of the foregoing Psalms, and expected and received singular benefits by Davids advancement both in their Civil and Religious concernments. u These are the words of that song of joy and praise now mentioned.

16 The right hand of the LORD is exalted x; the right hand of the LORD doth valiantly.

x Hath appeared evidently, and wrought powerfully and gloriously on my behalf.

17 I shall not die y, but live, and declare the works of the LORD z.

y To wit, so soon as mine enemies desire, nor by their sword, as they hope and endeavour. z One branch whereof is the total destruction of mine enemies. He implies that he did not desire life, nor should employ it, as his enemies did theirs, but for the service and glory of God.

18 The LORD hath chastened me sore a, but he hath not given me over unto death, a By the hands of mine enemies, whom God used to that very purpose for my greater good, and their own greater and surer ruine and confusion.

19 Open to me b the gates of righteousness c: I will go in to them, and I will praise the LORD.

b O ye porters, appointed by God for this work. Or it is a figurative and poetical manner of expression, whereby he speaks to the gates themselves, as if they had sense and understanding. Or by saying, open, he implies that they had been long shut against him in Sauls time. c To wit, the gates of the Lords Tabernacle; the proper and usual place for the solemn performance of the duty here following, which he calleth the gates of righteousness; partly in opposition to the gates of death, of which he speaks implicitly v. 18. and expressly, Psal. 9. 14. and 107. 18. which may be called the gates of sin or unrighteousness, because death is the wages of sin; partly because there the rule of righteousness was kept and taught, and the sacrifices of righteousness (as they are called Psal. 4. 5.) were offered, and divers other exercises of righteousness or of Gods service were performed: and partly because those gates were to be opened to all righteous persons (such as David had oft professed and proved himself to be, upon which account he claims this as his just priviledge) and only to such, for the unclean and unrighteous were to be shut and kept out by the porters, 2 Chron. 23. 19. compare Isa. 26. 2.

d These may be the words either, 1. of the Levites, the porters returning this answer to the foregoing question, This is the gate of the Lord which thou seekest, and which shall be opened to thee according to thy desire, and thy just priviledge; for thou art one of those righteous ones to whom this of right belongs: Or 2. of David himself, who stands as it were pausing and contemplating, before he makes his entrance, This, this is that holy and blessed gate, which I so long and earnestly thirsted for in my banishment, and which is now very beautiful in my sight, into which I will enter, and all other righteous persons by my example and encouragement. But as David was a Type of Christ and the Temple of Heaven, to this place hath a further prospect than David, and relates to Christs ascending into Heaven, and opening the gates of that blessed Temple both for himself and for all righteous men or believers.

22 * The stone which the builders refused e, is be- * Mat. 21. come the head stone of the corner f. 42. Mark 12. 10. Luke 20. 17. Acts 4. 11. 1 Pet. 2. 7.

e The Commonwealth of Israel and the Church of God are here and elsewhere in Scripture compared to a building, wherein as the people are the stones and the matter, so the Princes and Rulers are the builders, whose office it was to erect and support and improve the building, and to use their wisdom and power in chusing fit materials for the several parts and purposes of the building, and in the rejection of what was unprofitable and inconvenient. And these Master-builders rejected David as an obscure and treacherous and rebellious person, fit to be not only laid aside and thrown away, but also to be crushed to pieces. And so their successours rejected Christ, as an enemy to Moses, a friend to sinners, and a blasphemer against God, and therefore deserving death and damnation. f The chief stone in the whole building, by which the several parts of the building are upheld and firmly united and kept together. Thus David united all the Tribes and Families of Israel, who had been miserably distracted and divided by the Civil Wars between the Houses of Saul and David. And thus Christ united Jews and Gentiles together, as is observed, Eph. 2. 14, &c. And

although David alludeth to himself and his own condition, yet it is not to be doubted but that having the Prophetical Spirit, by which he foresaw the coming of Christ, and his ill usage from the Jews, of which he speaks very particularly Psal. 22. and elsewhere; and having his thoughts much taken up with Christ and the events of his Kingdom, of which he speaks in divers of his Psalms, he had his eye principally fixed upon him in these and the following expressions. And therefore this place is justly expounded of Christ in the New Testament, as Mark 12. 10. Acts 4. 11. Rom. 9. 32. Eph. 2. 20. 1 Pet. 4. 6. compared with Isa. 28. 16. And to him indeed the words agree much more properly and fully than to David.

† Heb. this is from the LORD. 23 † This g is the LORD's doing h; it is marvellous in our eyes.

g This strange event: the Feminine gender being put for the Neuter, as it is in other places of Scripture. h Peculiarly, an effect of his Omnipotent Wisdom; done not only without the help of man, but against all the artifices and forces of men.

24 This is the day which the LORD hath made i; we will rejoyce and be glad in it.

i Either created; or exalted and glorified, as this word is used 1 Sam. 12. 6. or sanctified by his glorious presence and work and by his appointment, as a time or season never to be forgotten, but to be observed with great thankfulness and rejoycing, as it follows.

k Or, we beseech thee: for the Hebrew words may be rendred either way. These seem to be the words of the Levites, to whom he spake v. 19. or of the people, using these joyful acclamations or prayers to God for the preservation of their King and Kingdom. This also is interpreted of and was applied to Christ, even by the Jews themselves. Mark 11. 9. John 12. 13.

* Mat. 21. c. & 23. 39. Mar. 11. 9. Luke 19. 38. See Zech. 4. 7. 26 * Blessed be he l that cometh m in the Name of the LORD n: we have blessed you out of the house of the LORD o.

l We earnestly pray that God would bless his person and government and all his enterprizes. m To wit, unto us, from whom he was long banished; or unto the Throne; or from his Father into the World: the Messias, who is known by the name of him that cometh or was to come, as Mat. 11. 3. and 21. 9. Luke 7. 20. and 13. 35. John 12. 13. and of whom this very word is used, Gen. 49. 10. Isa. 35. 4. He who is about to come, or will certainly come. n By command and commission from him, and for his service and glory. o We who are the Lords Ministers attending upon him in his house, and appointed to bless in his Name, Numb. 6. 23. Deut. 10. 8. do pray for, and in Gods Name pronounce his blessing upon thee. So these are the words of the Priests.

† Heb. The LORD is God, and hath shewed, &c. Pf. 18. 31. 27 † God is the LORD p which hath shewed us light q; bind the sacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar r.

p God hath proved himself to be the Lord Jehovah by the accomplishment of his promises. See the Notes on Exod. 6. 3. Or, as it is in the margent, the Lord or Jehovah is God, as it was said upon another solemn occasion and appearance of God, 1 Kings 18. 39. or, is the mighty God, as this Name of God signifies, and as he shewed himself to be by this his mighty and wonderful work. q Who hath caused light to shine out of darkness; who hath scattered our thick and dark clouds, and put us into a state of peace and comfort and safety and happiness; all which are frequently signified by light in the holy Scripture. Or, who hath discovered and will in due time send the Messias, who is called the light of the Gentiles, or of the world, or of men, Isa. 42. 6. John 1. 4. and 8. 12. and 12. 35, 46. and by whom he will more clearly and fully reveal his whole mind and will to us, and tell us all things, as the Jews expected, John 4. 25. who also will enlighten our dark minds by his Spirit. r These words, as well as those which go before them in this verse, and those which follow after them, v. 28. may be the words of David unto the Priests, who had now blessed him in Gods Name, v. 26. And this blessing of God which you wish me, God hath already given me; and therefore in way of gratitude I will offer Sacrifices to him, which do you, O ye Priests, according to your Office, bind to the horns of the Altar: of which see Exod. 27. 2. Which horns are supposed by divers learned men to be made for this very use, that the beasts should be bound and killed there. And this may seem probable from Exod. 29. 11, 12. and Levit. 4. 7, &c. where we read that the beasts were to be killed by the door of the Tabernacle, which was very near the Altar of Burnt-offerings, and then immediately part of their blood was to be put upon the horns of the Altar, and the rest poured out at the bottom of it. Although these words may be thus rendred, Bind and bring (one pregnant word being put for two, as above v. 5. and in many other places of Scripture) the sacrifice with cords unto the horns of the Altar, that it may be killed beside it, and its blood put upon the horns after the manner. So they may be Davids words to his servants to go and bring one of his beasts to be offered to God in his Name.

28 Thou art my God, and I will praise thee; thou art my God, and I will exalt thee.

29 O give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSAL. CXIX.

The ARGUMENT.

THe Author of this Psalm was David; which I know none that deny; and of which there is no just reason to doubt. The scope and design of it is manifest, to commend the serious and diligent study and the stedfast belief and the constant practice of Gods Word, as incomparably the best counsellor and comforter in the World, and as the only way to true blessedness. And this he confirmeth by his own example, which he proposeth to them for their imitation; and he declareth the great and frequent experience which he had of its admirable sweetness and manifold benefits in all conditions, and especially in the times of his distresses. And because it was an hard thing rightly to understand this Word in all its parts, and harder to put it in practice, he therefore intermixeth many prayers to God for his help therein, thereby directing and encouraging others to take the same course. And because this Psalm was very large, and the matter of it of greatest importance, the Psalmist thought fit to divide it into two and twenty several parts, according to the number of the Hebrew Letters, that so he might both prevent tediousness, and fix it in the memory. It is further observable, that the Word of God is here diverfly called by the names of Law, Statutes, Precepts or Commandments, Judgments, Ordinances, Righteousness, Testimonies, Ways and Word. By which variety he designed to express the nature and the great perfection and manifold parts and uses of Gods Word. Which is called his Word, as proceeding from his mouth, and revealed by him to us; his Way, as prescribed by him for us to walk in; his Law, as binding us to obedience; his Statutes, as declaring his Authority and Power of giving us Laws; his Precepts, as declaring and directing our Duty; his Ordinances, as ordained and appointed by him; his Righteousness, as exactly agreeable to Gods righteous Nature and Will; his Judgments, as proceeding from the great Judge of the World, and being his Judicial Sentence to which all men must submit; and his Testimonies, as it contains the witnesses of Gods mind and will, and of mans duty. And there are very few of these 176 verses contained in this Psalm, in which one or other of these Titles is not found.

This Psalm contains the commendation of Gods Word: Davids love to it: A Prayer for Grace to carry himself according to it: With an account of Gods Law, Institutions, Commandments, Testimonies, Precepts, Word, Promises, Ways, Judgments, Name, Righteousness, Truth, &c. With a Prayer for help and assistance.

ALEPH.

1 BLessed are the ‖ undefiled a in the way b, who walk in the law of the LORD c. ‖ Or, perfect, or sincere.

a Or, the perfect or sincere, as this word properly and most frequently signifies; such whose hearts and course of life agrees with their profession. b Either, 1. in their way or course of life, which in Scripture is oft called a mans way: Or, 2. in the way of the Lord, as it seems to be explained by the next clause. c Who order their lives according to the rule of Gods Law or Word.

2 Blessed are they that keep d his testimonies e, and that † seek him f with the whole heart g. † Heb. search him, or seek him diligently. So Gr.

d In mind and heart, that carefully and diligently observe. e His Precepts. For the reason of this and the other Titles of Gods Word, see the Argument or Preface to this Psalm. f To wit, the Lord, expressed ver. 1. that seek his presence and favour and acquaintance. g Sincerely, industriously and fervently, above all other things. This is opposed to hypocrisie and sloth and lukewarmness in Religion.

3 They also do no iniquity r; they walk s in his ways t.

r Or, are not workers of iniquity, (i. e.) do not knowingly and resolvedly and industriously and customarily continue in sinful courses. So this phrase is understood Job 31. 3. and 34. 8. Psal. 5. 5. and 6. 8. and 125. 5. Prov. 10. 29. Luke 13. 27. otherwise there is not a just man upon earth that sinneth not, Eccl. 7. 20. s This is their constant practice, and the general course of their lives, which is commonly signified by walking, as Psal. 1. 1. and every where. t In the paths which God hath prescribed to them.

4 Thou hast commanded us to keep thy precepts diligently u.

u Nor is it strange that thy people do so exactly and diligently observe and practice thy precepts, because they are commanded so to do by thee their Soveraign Lord.

5 O that x my ways were directed y to keep thy statutes!

x My desires answer thy commands. y Or, established, to wit, by thy Grace and Holy Spirit; for the direction of Gods word he had already.

6 Then shall I not be * ashamed z, when I have respect a unto all thy commandments b. * Ver. 80.

z Either of my actions; or of my profession of Religion; or of my hope and confidence in thy favour. When sinners shall be ashamed both here, Rom. 6. 21. and hereafter, Dan. 12. 2. Having the conscience of mine own integrity shall lift up my head with courage and boldness both before men, when they either accuse or persecute me; and before God in the day of judgment, as it is said 1 John 4. 17. a A due and true respect, which implies high valuation, hearty affection, diligent study, and common practice. b So as not to be partial in my obedience, not to allow my self in the practice of any known sin, or in the neglect of any known duty.

7 I will * praise thee c with uprightness of heart d, when I shall have learned † thy righteous judgments e. * Ver. 171. † Heb. judgments of thy righteousness.

c (i. e.) Worship thee, one eminent duty of Gods worship being put for all, as is frequent in Scripture. d Or, with a right mind or heart, in a right manner, so as may be acceptable to thee, and beneficial to my self. e When by thy good Spirit I shall be more fully instructed in the meaning of thy Word, which is the only rule of thy Worship; for want of a found knowledge whereof many persons run into superstitious or erroneous practices.

8 I will keep thy statutes f: O forsake me not utterly g.

f It is my full purpose to do so, whatsoever it cost me. g Not totally and finally; for then I shall fall into the fouleft sins and greateft mischief. Not that he was contented to be forsaken in the least degree, but this he more especially deprecates, as he had great reason to do.

BETH.

BETH.

9 Wherewithal shall a young man h cleanse his way i? by taking heed thereto according to thy word k.

h Or, any man. But he names the young man, because such are commonly void of wisdom and experience, heady and wilful and impatient of admonition, full of violent passions and strong lusts, and exposed to many and great temptations. i Reform his life, or purge himself from all filthiness of flesh and spirit. k By a diligent and circumspect watch over himself, and the examination and regulation of all his actions by the rules of thy Word.

10 With my whole heart have I sought thee l: O let me not wander m from thy commandments.

l Deny me not thy grace and assistance, which I have so sincerely and earnestly desired, and laboured to obtain. m Heb. do not make me to wander, to wit, by leading me into temptation, by withdrawing thy grace, which is necessary to keep me from wandring.

Psal. 37. 31. 11 * Thy word have I hid in mine heart n, that I might not sin against thee o.

n I have not contented my self with bare hearing or reading thy Word, but have received it in the love of it, have diligently pondered it, and laid it up in my mind and memory like a choice treasure, to be ready upon all occasions to counsel or comfort or quicken or caution me, as need requires. o That by a diligent and affectionate consideration of thy precepts and promises and threatnings, I might be kept from sinful courses, against which these are the best Antidote.

Ver. 26. Psal. 25. 4. & 27. 11. & 86. 11. & 119. 64, 68. & 135. 12. & 143. 8, 10. 12 Blessed are thou p, O LORD: * teach me thy statutes q.

p Thou art infinitely blessed, and most worthy of all blessing and praise, and therefore do thou bless me in teaching me, as it follows. Or, Blessed be thou. I bless and praise thee for that great blessing of thy Word, v. 11. q Both to know and to practice them better.

13 With my lips have I declared r all the judgments of thy mouth.

r If thou wilt teach me, I will teach others, as I have already done; and so thou shalt have glory, and others benefit by it.

14 I have rejoiced in the way of thy testimonies s, as much as * in all riches. Ver. 72. Psal. 62.

s In the study and practice of them.

Ver. 23. 15 I will * meditate in thy precepts t, and have respect unto u thy ways.

t I will diligently and seriously consider the nature and design and extent of thy precepts, and especially so far as they concern my own duty. u Or, look unto them, as workmen constantly and carefully look to their rule to guide themselves by it.

16 I will delight my self in thy statutes: I will not forget thy word.

GIMEL.

17 Deal bountifully y with thy servant, that I may live z, and keep thy word a.

y I plead no Merit, but only thy free Grace and rich Mercy. z Safely and comfortably, in spight of all the attempts of mine enemies to take away my life. a I do not desire Life that I may satisfie my own lusts, but that I may spend it in thy service.

Heb. uncover. Psal. 25. 18 † Open thou mine eyes b, that I may behold * wondrous things out of thy law c.

b Inlighten my mind by the light of thy Holy Spirit, and dispel all ignorance and errour. c Those great and marvellous depths of Divine Wisdom and Goodness, and those profound Mysteries of Christ and of Gods Grace to mankind, and of that future and everlasting state, which are contained in Gods Law, and which were not to be known but by divine illumination, Mat. 16. 17. 1 Cor. 2. 11, 14. 2 Cor. 3. 13. and 4. 4, 6. Eph. 1. 17. especially in the times of the Old Testament.

Gen. 47. 9. 1 Chron. 29. 15. Heb. 11. 13. 1 Pet. 2. 11. 19 * I am a stranger d in the earth, hide not thy commandments e from me.

d Or, sojourner. I am not here as in my home, but as a pilgrim travelling homeward in a strange land: which calls for thy pity and help. That Law of Nature, which thou hast planted in all mens minds, teacheth them to shew humanity to strangers, and to direct travellers. Much more may this be expected from thee. e Which are my chief support and guide in my pilgrimage.

Ver. 40. Psal. 119. 20 * My soul breaketh f for the longing that it hath unto thy judgments g at all times.

f Fainteth, as it frequently doth, when a thing vehemently desired is denied or delayed. Compare Prov. 13. 12. g To a more found knowledge and serious practice of them.

Threatned as they shall be by the Lord. 21 Thou hast rebuked h the proud i that are ‖ cursed k, which do erre l from thy commandments.

h Or, dost rebuke, (i. e.) severely punish and destroy. And therefore I justly long for thy judgments, as for the love which I have to them, so for fear of those terrible judgments which thou sendest upon the despisers of them. i Obstinate and presumptuous sinners, who sin with an high hand, and with contempt of God and of his Laws, and of his Judgment; all which is the effect of pride. k That have the Curse of God upon them, and upon all which they have or do: which is the depth of misery. l Or, wander, knowingly and wilfully and maliciously, as proud sinners use to do.

22 Remove from me reproach m and contempt, for I have kept thy testimonies n.

m Which I suffer unjustly and for thy sake; as he elsewhere complains. n And therefore I am innocent from those crimes for which they censure and reproach me. Or, and therefore thou wilt maintain mine honour and interest according to thy promise made to such as keep thy testimonies, and I beg with some confidence that thou wilt do it.

23 Princes also did sit and speak o against me: but thy servant did meditate in thy statutes p.

o Did speak against me continually (for sitting notes continuance) and when they sate upon their seats of Judicature, and when they sate together in companies, entertaining one another with Discourses. p All their Contumelies and Reproaches did not discourage nor divert me from the study, belief and practice of thy Word.

24 Thy testimonies also are my delight q, and † my counsellors r. † Heb. men of my counsel.

q My chief comfort under all their censures and persecutions. r To teach me how to carry my self under them.

DALETH.

25 My soul cleaveth unto the dust s: quicken thou * me t according to thy word u. * Ps. 71. 20.

s I am in evident danger of present death, through the rage and power of mine enemies: I am like one laid in the grave without all hopes of recovery. So this phrase is used Psal. 22. 15. t Preserve my life, or revive me and raise me out of the dust by thy Almighty power. u According to thy promise.

26 I have declared my ways x, and thou heardest me: * teach me thy statutes. * Ps. 25. 4. & 27. 11. & 86. 11.

x My sins, in way of confession; and all my cares and fears and troubles and concerns, in way of humble petition to thee, as appears from Gods answer.

27 Make me to understand y the way of thy precepts z: so shall I talk of thy wondrous works a.

y More thorowly and more practically. Either, 1. The full mind and meaning of thy Precepts, which are exceeding broad, as he saith afterwards: Or, 2. The way wherein I may walk according to thy Precepts. z How to demean my self in all the varieties of my condition, and in all my affairs and actions, so as is most agreeable to thy precepts. a Even the wonders of the Law mentioned before, v. 18.

28 My soul † melteth b for heaviness c: strengthen † Heb. droppeth; thou me d according unto thy word.

b Like wax before the fire; it hath no strength nor consistency left in it, but consumeth or pineth away. c Through grief, partly for my extream danger and misery; and principally for my sins, and thy wrath and terrors following upon them. d That so I may bear my burdens patiently and chearfully, and vanquish all my temptations.

29 Remove from me the way of lying e; and grant me thy law graciously f.

e Or, of falshood: Either, 1. The practice of lying and dissembling and chcating, which is so rife in Sauls Court, and in the Courts of most Princes; but, Lord, let it not be so in my Courts: Or rather, 2. Every false way of Doctrine or Worship; for to this way he opposeth Gods Law in the next clause. And he justly prayeth to God to keep him from Apostasie, Heresie, Idolatry and Superstition, because his own corrupt Nature of it self and without Gods Grace, was prone to these errours, and not only Heathens, but many Israelites did frequently fall into them. f Vouchsafe unto me an accurate knowledge and firm belief of thy Word, and that I may constantly attend and adhere to it, and govern my self by it in all things.

30 I have chosen the way of truth g: thy judgments have I laid before me h.

g To wit, thy Word or Law, for my portion and the rule of my worship and whole life. h Or, set before me, as the Phrase is fully expressed, Psal. 16. 8. as a delightful object; or as a mark to aim at; or as a rule to direct me.

31 I have stuck unto thy testimonies i: O LORD, put me not to shame k.

i I have resolutely persisted in the practice of thy precepts in spight of all temptations, reproaches, persecutions and discouragements, to which I was exposed in and for so doing. k Either, 1. By giving me over to Apostasie or Transgression, which will bring shame. Or rather, 2. By the disappointment of my hopes and confidence in those promises of the blessings of this life, as well as of the next, which thou hast made to the obedient, of which I have made my boast.

32 I will run the way of thy commandments l, when thou shalt enlarge my heart m.

l I will obey thy Precepts with all readiness, fervency and diligence. m Either, 1. When thou shalt bring me out of my present straits or distresses. This indeed is called enlarging, as Psal. 4. 2. and 18. 36. but never, to my remembrance, the enlarging of the heart. Or rather, 2. When thou shalt replenish my heart with more wisdom, and love to, and delight in thee and thy Law; for this enlargement of heart in Scripture is ascribed to wisdom, 1 Kin. 4. 29. and love, 2 Cor. 6. 11. and joy, Isa. 60. 5. When thou shalt knock off those fetters of remaining corruption, and give me a more noble and generous disposition towards thee, and stablish me with thy free Spirit, as it is expressed Psal. 51. 12. Thus David both owns his Duty, and asserts the absolute necessity of Gods Grace to the performance of it.

HE.

33 Teach me, O LORD, the way of thy statutes, and I shall keep it unto the end n.

n Or, that I may keep it, &c. That I may persevere; for Apostasie proceeds from the want of a good understanding.

34 Give me understanding, and I shall keep thy law; yea, I shall observe it with my whole heart.

35 Make me to go o in the path of thy commandments; for therein do I delight p.

o By directing my mind into the right way, by inclining my will, and ſtrengthening my reſolution. p Forſake not him who delighteth in thee and in thy ſervice: and as thou haſt wrought in me to will, work in me alſo to do.

*Pſ.141.4. 36 * Incline my heart unto thy teſtimonies q, and not to covetouſneſs r.

q To the love and practice of them. r Not to the inordinate love and deſire of riches. Which particular luſt he mentions, partly becauſe this luſt is moſt ſpreading and univerſal, and there is ſcarce any man who doth not deſire riches either for the love of riches, or upon pretence of neceſſity, or for the ſervice of pride or luxury, or ſome other luſt: partly becauſe this luſt is moſt oppoſite to Gods teſtimonies, and doth moſt commonly hinder men from receiving Gods Word, and from profiting by it. See Matth. 13. 22. Luke 16. 14. and partly becauſe this luſt is moſt pernicious, as being the root of all evil, 1 Tim. 6. 20. and is moſt miſchievous in Princes and Governours, ſuch as David was, and therefore in a ſpecial manner forbidden to them, Exod. 18. 21.

† Heb. make to paſs. * Ver. 27. 37 † Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity s: and quicken thou me in thy * way t.

s The vain things and luſts of this preſent evil world, ſuch as riches, honours, pleaſures: from beholding them, to wit, with admiration and inordinate affection: for ſuch a ſight of the eyes doth uſually affect the heart, and ſtir up mens luſts and paſſions. Of which ſee Numb. 15. 39. Job 31. 1. Prov. 4. 25. and 23. 5, 6. Mat. 5. 28. t As I deſire that I may be dull and dead in affections to worldly vanities; ſo, Lord, make me lively and vigorous and fervent in thy work and ſervice.

38 Stabliſh thy word u unto thy ſervant, who is devoted to thy fear.

u Confirm and perform thy promiſes as concerning the Kingdom, ſo alſo for the giving of gracious aſſiſtances, directions and comforts to thoſe that fear thee, of which number I am one.

39 Turn away my reproach x which I fear: for thy judgments are good y.

x Either, 1. for the ſhameful diſappointment of my hopes and confident boaſtings concerning the truth and certainty of thy promiſes: Or, 2. for my manifold failings, and particularly for that ſhameful matter about Uriah and Bathſheba: Or, 3. for my inſtability in or apoſtacy from thy ways; which in reſpect of mine own weakneſs and folly, I have great cauſe to fear. y This may be a reaſon either, 1. why he prayed and hoped that God would turn away reproach from him, becauſe Gods Word and Statutes were good, and therefore it was not fit for any to ſuffer reproach in and for his diligent obſervation of them: Or, 2. why he feared reproach, becauſe he had, and feared he might hereafter, tranſgreſs thoſe judgments or ſtatutes of God which were and he very well knew to be good, (i. e.) juſt and holy and excellent, and therefore it was a ſhameful thing to violate them.

40 Behold, I have longed after thy precepts z: quicken me p in thy righteouſneſs q.

z After a more ſolid knowledge and conſtant performance of thy precepts. p Do thou preſerve and maintain both my natural and ſpiritual life. q According to thy juſtice or faithfulneſs, which obligeth thee to make good thy promiſes.

V A V.

41 Let thy mercies come alſo unto me r, O LORD, * Ver. 49. even thy ſalvation according to thy * word.

r Let promiſed mercies be performed to me.

‖ Or, ſo ſhall I anſwer him that reproacheth me in a thing. 42 ‖ So ſhall I have wherewithal to anſwer him that reproacheth me s: for I truſt in thy word t.

s That chargeth me with folly for my piety and truſt in thy promiſes. t Or, becauſe I truſt, &c. This was the matter of their reproach.

43 And take not the word of truth utterly out of my mouth u; for I have hoped in thy judgments w.

t Do not deal ſo with me, that I ſhall be altogether aſhamed to mention thy word, which I have ſo often affirmed to be a word of truth and infallible certainty, of which I have often made my boaſt. u Either in thy word and promiſes, or in thy judicial adminiſtrations and government of the world, which as it is matter of terrour to the wicked, ſo it is matter of comfort and hope to me.

44 So ſhall I keep thy law continually x, for ever and ever.

x So ſhall I be obliged and encouraged to the conſtant and perpetual ſtudy and obſervation of thy Laws.

† Heb. at large. 45 And I will walk † at liberty y: for I ſeek thy precepts.

y Or, I ſhall walk at large, as it is in the margent; I ſhall be delivered from all my preſent ſtraits both of the outward and inward man, and enjoy great freedom and comfort in thy ways.

46 I will ſpeak of thy teſtimonies alſo before kings z, and will not be aſhamed.

z Who commonly entertain all godly diſcourſes with ſcorn and contempt.

47 And I will delight my ſelf in thy commandments a which I have loved.

a Whereas other Princes place their delight in the glories and vanities of this World, and the ſtudy and practice of Religion is generally irkſom and loathſom to them, thy Law ſhall be my chief delight and recreation.

* Gen. 14. 22, 23. Exod. 6.8. 48 * My hands alſo will I lift up b unto thy commandments which I have loved: and I will meditate in thy ſtatutes c.

b To lay hold upon them, to receive and embrace thy precepts and promiſes by faith and love, and chearfully and vigorouſly to put them in practice: for as the hanging down of the hands is a geſture of ſloth and liſtleſneſs, as 2 Chron. 15. 7. and elſewhere; ſo the lifting up of the hands is the poſture of a man entring upon action, as Gen. 41. 44. 2 Sam. 20. 21. c My deepeſt thoughts, as well as my hands, ſhall be exerciſed in them.

Z A I N.

49 Remember the word d unto thy ſervant, upon which thou haſt cauſed me to hope e.

d Thy promiſes. e By thy command requiring it of me, and by thy grace working it in me.

50 This f is my comfort in my affliction: for thy word hath quickened me g.

f To wit, thy word, as is evident both from the foregoing and following words. g Hath preſerved my life in manifold dangers, and hath revived and cheared my ſpirit.

51 The proud have had me greatly in deriſion h: yet have I not declined from thy law.

h For my godlineſs and truſt in thy word, as the following words imply.

52 I remembred thy judgments of old i, O LORD, and have comforted my ſelf.

i Thy former and ancient diſpenſations to the children of men in puniſhing the ungodly, and protecting and delivering thy faithful ſervants, whoſe experience is my encouragement.

53 Horrour k hath taken hold upon me, becauſe of the wicked that forſake thy law l.

k A mixed paſſion made up of indignation at their perſons as ſinful, and abhorrency of their ſins, and dread and ſorrow at the conſideration of the judgments of God coming upon them. l For the diſhonour which they bring to God, the ſcandal and miſchief to others, and their own certain ruine.

Pſ.19.10. Prov.3.14. 72 * The law of thy mouth is better unto me u, than thouſands of gold and ſilver.

z Although many things happen upon earth which ſeem contrary to thy word, and at which men take occaſion to queſtion the truth of thy word, yet in Heaven it is ſure and certainly true. In heaven, either 1. with thee in thy heavenly habitation, or in thy breaſt: as thy Nature is unchangeable, ſo thy Word is infallible. Or rather, 2. in the heavenly bodies, which are not ſubject to thoſe changes and decays which are in this lower world, but conſtantly continue the ſame in their ſubſtance and order and courſes, and this by vertue of that Word of God by which they were made and eſtabliſhed in this manner; and therefore Gods Word delivered to his people upon earth, which is of the ſame nature, muſt needs be of equal certainty and ſtability. This ſenſe beſt ſuits with the following verſes, and with other Scriptures wherein the k I have obſerved by my experience, that the greateſt and moſt perfect accompliſhments and enjoyments in this world, the greateſt glory, and riches and power and wiſdom are too narrow and ſhort-lived to make men happy. l Thy word; one part of it being Synecdochically put for the whole. m Or, large, both for extent, and for continuance: it is uſeful to all perſons in all times and conditions and for all purpoſes, to inform, direct, quicken, comfort, ſanctifie and ſave men: it is of everlaſting truth and efficacy; it will never deceive nor forſake thoſe who truſt to it, as all worldly things will,but will make men happy both here and for ever.

97 O how love I thy law n! it is my meditation all the day.

n O Lord, thou knoweſt it, and to thee I appeal herein againſt all the cenſures and calumnies of mine enemies to the contrary.

l This word ſignifies thoughts, Job 4. 13. and 20. 2. or opinion, 1 Kings 18. 21. Which being indifferent to good and evil, is here taken in an evil ſence, for vain thoughts, as we render it, or for thoughts or opinions or devices of men differing from or oppoſite to Gods Law, as may be gathered from the next clauſe, where Gods Law is oppoſed to theſe, and as ſome both Jewiſh and Chriſtian Expoſitors underſtand it. Nor is it unuſual in the Hebrew Text for one and the ſame word to be taken both in a good and an ill ſence in ſeveral places: whereof we have one inſtance in a word of the ſame ſignification with this, mezimmah, which ſignifies a thought, and is ſometimes taken in a good ſence, as Prov. 1. 4. and 3. 21. and 8. 12. and 13. 16. Jer. 51. 11. but elſewhere in a bad ſence, as Job 21. 27. Pſal. 10. 2, 4. Prov. 12. 2. and 14. 17. The like hath been obſerved concerning another Hebrew word of the ſame or near ſignification, hamah, which is taken in a good ſence, Prov. 1. 4. and 13. 16, &c. and in an ill ſence, as Exod. 21. 14. Joſh. 9. 4. Job 5. 13. And the like may be ſaid concerning this word alſo. But the ancient Interpreters underſtand this word not of things, but of perſons, and ſo it may be underſtood of men that think evil, that deviſe wicked devices, or that have falſe and evil opinions, oppoſite to Gods Law, or tending to ſeduce men from it.

Pſal.10. ver.2. 2.11. 127 * Therefore I love thy commandments e above gold, yea, above fine gold.

e Partly becauſe it is one evidence of their excellency that they are diſliked by the wiſeſt of men; partly out of a juſt indignation and oppoſition againſt my ſworn enemies; and partly becauſe the great and general Apoſtaſie of others makes this duty more neceſſary to prevent their own and other mens relapſes.

128 Therefore f I eſteem all thy precepts concerning all things to be right g; and I hate every falſe way.

f For the reaſons now mentioned. g I do not make void all thy precepts, as they did v. 126. nor yet am I partial in my approbation of them, as others are, who reiect all ſuch as are oppoſite to their luſts and intereſts; but I approve all of them without any exception, and that not onely in my judgment, but in my heart and life, as appears by that hatred of ſin which is oppoſed to it in the next clauſe.

*Ver.18. 129 Thy teſtimonies are * wonderful h: therefore doth my ſoul keep them.

h In regard of the deep and wonderful myſteries, and moſt excellent counſels and directions, far exceeding all the rules of the greateſt Philoſophers, and the exceeding great and precious promiſes of God contained in them. This is the reaſon of his high eſtimation of them expreſſed in the laſt verſe.

*Pſ.15.7. 130 The entrance of thy words i giveth light: * it giveth underſtanding unto the ſimple k.

i The very beginnings and rudiments of it; the firſt diſcoveries of thoſe ſacred Myſteries; and much more the depths of them, in which their chief excellency conſiſts. Or, as others both ancient and later Interpreters render the place, the opening of thy words, by which may be underſtood either, 1. the opening of mens minds by the Word of God; but that ſeems to be the ſame thing with giving light, which here follows: or, 2. the opening or declaration of Gods mind made in and by his Word. k To the moſt ignorant and unlearned perſons, who are but willing to learn.

131 I opened my mouth, and panted l: for I longed for thy commandments.

l I thirſt after thy precepts, and purſue them eagerly, as it were with open mouth, ready and greedy to receive them. It is a Metaphor from one that makes great haſte after another, whereby he is forced to pant and to open his mouth for air to refreſh himſelf.

132 Look thou upon me m, and be merciful unto me, † as thou uſeſt to do unto thoſe that love thy Name n. †Heb. according to the judgment towards thoſe that love.

m To wit, favourably, as the next clauſe explains it, and as this phraſe is commonly uſed: whereby alſo he implies that God at preſent did hide his face and favour from him. n As thou haſt done in all former ages. Do not deny me the common priviledge of all the faithful.

*Pſ.19.13. 133 Order my ſteps o in thy word p; and * let not any iniquity have dominion over me q.

o By thy grace direct and govern all my motions and actions. p In the way preſcribed in thy Word: Or, by thy word. Let thy Spirit accompany thy Word, and ingraft it within me, ſo that I may be guided and ruled by it. q And although I have evil inclinations and affections within me, let them not bear ſway in me, nor withdraw me from the courſe of obedience.

134 Deliver me from the oppreſſion of man r: ſo will I keep thy precepts.

r As he prayed againſt the inward impediment of his obedience, v. 133. ſo here he prayeth againſt an external impediment of it, and a common temptation to ſin.

135 Make thy face to ſhine upon thy ſervant s, and teach me thy ſtatutes.

s Look upon me with a pleaſed and favourable countenance. Compare Numb. 6. 25. Prov. 16. 15.

136 * Rivers of waters t run down mine eyes, becauſe * Ver. 53. & 158. they u keep not thy law. Jer. 9. 1. & 14. 17. See Ezek. 9. 4.

t Plentiful and perpetual tears, witneſſes of my deep ſorrow for Gods diſhonour and diſpleaſure, and for the miſeries which ſinners bring upon themſelves and others. u To wit, the wicked, as before, v. 126. who were not worthy to be mentioned: for this Pronoun is oft uſed in way of contempt, as Luke 14. 24. and 19. 27. John 7. 11. and 8. 10. Acts 15. 36.

137 Righteous art thou x, O LORD, and upright are thy judgments.

x By thine eſſence and nature, and therefore it is impoſſible that thou ſhouldeſt be unjuſt in any of thy Laws or Providences.

138 Thy teſtimonies that thou haſt commanded are † righteous, and very ‖ faithful y. †Heb. righteouſneſs. ‖ Heb. faithfulneſs.

y But this verſe is otherwiſe rendred by all the ancient Interpreters and by divers others, and that more agreeably to the order of the words in the Hebrew Text, Thou haſt commanded righteouſneſs even thy teſtimonies (or, the righteouſneſs of thy teſtimonies, or, thy righteous teſtimonies, by a common Hebraiſm, or rather, righteouſneſs in or by thy teſtimonies, nothing being more frequent than the Ellipſis of the prefix beth which ſignifies in or by:) and truth (or, and true, thy righteous and true teſtimonies: although the other ſeems to be the better tranſlation) earneſtly. So the Sence is, Thou haſt ſtrictly and ſeverely, under the higheſt obligations and penalties, commanded in thy Word that men ſhould be juſt and true in all their actions. And this agrees very well with the next foregoing verſe, wherein he affirmed that God is righteous, and doth righteous things; and then here he adds that he requires righteouſneſs and truth from all men.

139 * My zeal hath † conſumed me z, becauſe mine * Pſ. 69.9. enemies have forgotten thy words a. John 2.17. † Heb. cut me off.

PSAL. CXX.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm ſeems to have been compoſed, either, 1. by David in the time of his perſecution by Saul, when he was expoſed both to the ſwords and to the calumnies of his enemies; of which two evils he complains in this Pſalm: or, 2. by ſome other holy Prophet in a time of the Churches perſecution.

A ſong * of degrees a.

* Heb. a Or, of aſcents, as others render it, and as the word properly ſignifies. This title is given to this and to the fourteen following Pſalms; concerning the reaſon whereof there are divers conjectures, the chief of which are theſe; either, 1. becauſe of the excellent matter of them, as eminent perſons are called men of high degree, 1 Chron. 17. 17. For in them are contained, as learned men have obſerved, many doctrines or inſtructions of great uſe and importance, and thoſe delivered with extraordinary brevity and elegancy: or, 2. becauſe they were ſung upon the fifteen degrees of ſtairs of the Temple, which the Jewiſh Writers mention, or, at leaſt, upon ſome high place: or, 3. becauſe they were ſung with a very loud voice: or, 4. becauſe they were ſung by the Jews when they returned from Babylon and went up to Jeruſalem. Which ſome judge the more probable, becauſe it ſuits with the order of theſe Pſalms; whereof the firſt was to be uſed by them when they were preparing for their departure, and ſuffered delays in it from the calumnies of their enemies; the ſecond, in their journey; the third, upon their arrival at Jeruſalem; the fourth, after the building of the City and Temple, &c. And although one of theſe Pſalms is aſcribed aſcribed to David, and another to Solomon, yet they alſo, as well as the reſt, might be applied to this uſe; and ſo might this Pſalm alſo, though David firſt compoſed it upon another occaſion: or, 5. from ſomething which was peculiar in them either in the Poetry or in the manner of ſinging them. But theſe things being now loſt and unknown, not onely to Chriſtians, but even to the Jews themſelves, we muſt be contentedly ignorant of this as well as of moſt other Titles of the Pſalms; and the rather, becauſe they do not at all concern the matter, nor are they neceſſary to the underſtanding of them.

David prayeth againſt lying lips and deceitful tongues, 1——4. and complaineth that his habitation was unavoidably among wicked and unpeaceably men, 5—7.

Pſ. 22. 1

IN * my diſtreſs I cried unto the LORD, and he heard me.

2 Deliver my ſoul, O LORD, from lying lips b, and from a deceitful tongue c.

b From the unjuſt cenſures and malicious ſlanders of mine enemies, who traduce me as an egregious hypocrite, as a rebel and traitor. c Which covereth miſchievous deſigns with pretences of kindneſs.

Or, What ſhall be given unto thee? or what ſhall be done unto thee, O thou deceitful tongue? See the like phraſe, Gen. 31. 30. what ſhall I do unto thee? and what ſhall I do unto you? Judg. 9. 38.

3 ‖ What ſhall be given unto thee d? or what † be done unto thee, thou falſe tongue?

d Whoſoever thou art who art guilty of theſe practices. He applies himſelf ſeverally to the conſciences of every one of them. Or, he deſigns Doeg or ſome other perſon in Sauls Court eminent for this wickedneſs. The ſence may be this, It is true, thou doſt me ſome miſchief. But what benefit doſt thou get by it, if all thy accounts be caſt up? For although thou mayſt thereby obtain ſome favour and advantage from Saul, yet thou wilt aſſuredly bring upon thy ſelf the curſe and vengeance of God; and then thou wilt be no gainer by the bargain. And to do miſchief to another without benefit to thy ſelf, is an inhumane and diabolical wickedneſs.

Or, It is as ſharp arrows of a mighty man with coals of juniper. Pro. 26. 18.

4 ‖ Sharp arrows of the mighty, with coals of juniper e.

e So this verſe contains an anſwer to the queſtion v. 3. and declares the ſlanderers recompence: which is the wrath and vengeance of the mighty God, which in Scripture, and particularly in this Book, is oft compared to arrows, as Pſal. 7. 13, 14, &c. and here to arrows of the mighty, (i. e.) ſhot by the hands of a ſtrong man; and to coals, Pſal. 140. 10. and here to coals of juniper, which being kindled burn very fiercely and retain their heat for a long time. And the Pſalmiſt may poſſibly expreſs it in theſe words, to ſhew the ſuitableneſs of the puniſhment to the ſin; as thy tongue ſhoots arrows, for ſo calumnies are called Pſal. 57. 4. and 64. 3.) and kindles coals, ſo thou ſhalt bring Gods arrows and coals kindled by the fire of his wrath upon thy ſelf. But according to the other Tranſlation, which is in the margent, this is a further declaration of the ſin of calumny. Though, all things conſidered, it doth thee no good, yet it doth others much hurt, to whom it is like ſharp arrows, &c.

5 Wo is me, that I ſojourn in Meſech; that I dwell in the tents of Kedar f.

f Meſech and Kedar are two ſorts of people oft mentioned in Scripture, and reckoned amongſt the heathen and barbarous Nations. But their names are not here to be underſtood properly, (for we do not read that either David, or the Iſraelites in the Babyloniſh Captivity dwelt in their lands) but onely Metaphorically, as the ungodly Iſraelites are called Sodom and Gomorrah, Iſa. 1. 10. and Amorites and Hittites, Ezek. 16. 3, 45. and as in common ſpeech among us, men of an evil character are called Turks or Jews. And ſo he explains himſelf in the next verſe by this deſcription of them, him or them that hated peace, although David fought peace with them, v. 7. And ſo he ſpeaks either, 1. of the Philiſtins, among whom he ſojourned for a time. But he did not ſeek peace with them, but fought their ruine, as the event ſhewed; nor did they wage war againſt him, whilſt he lived peaceably among them. Or, rather, 2. the Courtiers and Souldiers of Saul, and the generality of the Iſraelites, who to curry favour with Saul, fought David's ruine, and that many times by treachery and pretences of friendſhip; of which he oft complains in this Book; whom as he elſewhere calls Heathen, as Pſal. 9. 5. and 59. 5. it is not ſtrange if he compares them here to the ſavage Arabians. And amongſt ſuch perſons David was oft forced to ſojourn in Saul's time; and with them he fought peace by all ways poſſible, but they hated peace, and the more he purſued peace, the more eagerly did they proſecute the war, as it here follows.

6 My ſoul hath long dwelt with him that hateth peace.

Heb. a man of peace. War.

7 I am ‖ for peace: but when I ſpeak, they are for war.

PSAL. CXXI.

The ARGUMENT.

THe matter of this Pſalm ſufficiently ſheweth, that the Pſalmiſt was conflicting with great difficulties and oppoſitions, and looking hither and thither for help, as men in ſuch caſes uſe to do, and then turning his eyes to God and his Providence, and encouraging himſelf by Gods promiſes made to his people.

A ſong of degrees.

Or, Shall I lift up mine eyes to the hills? whence ſhall my help come? Pſal. 121. 1. Pſal. 87. 1. or rather, 2. to the hills in general, whereof there were many in the land of Canaan, and upon which the forces, which he hoped would come to his aid, might be ſeen at a great diſtance. b Or, may come, Heb. will come.

The Pſalmiſt ſheweth that the great ſafety of the godly is from the Lord, 1——5. who keepeth them, in their out-goings and in-comings from all evil, 6—8.

1 ‖ I Will lift up mine eyes unto the * hills a from whence cometh b my help.

* Pſ. 87. 1. a Either to Sion and Moriah, which are called the holy mountains,

2 * My help cometh from the LORD c which made heaven and earth. * Pſ. 124. 8.

c From God alone, and therefore to him alone will I turn mine eyes.

3 He will not ſuffer thy foot d to be moved e: he that keepeth thee will not ſlumber f.

d He ſpeaketh as it were from God to himſelf, but withal to the encouragement of his followers and of all good men. e To wit, ſo as to fall into miſchief. f Will not overlook, nor neglect any thing which is neceſſary for thy preſervation.

4 Behold, he that keepeth Iſrael, ſhall neither ſlumber nor ſleep.

5 The LORD is thy keeper: the LORD is thy ſhade g upon thy right hand h.

g Both to refreſh thee and keep thee from the burning heat of the Sun, as it is expreſſed in the next verſe, and to protect thee by his power from all thine enemies; for which reaſon God is oft called a ſhadow in Scripture. h Partly to uphold thy right hand, which is the chief inſtrument of action; and partly to defend thee in that place where thine enemies oppoſe thee: of which ſee on Pſal. 109. 6. And compare Pſal. 16. 8. and 109. 31.

6 The ſun ſhall not ſmite thee i by day, nor the moon k by night.

i With exceſſive heat. k With that cold and moiſture which comes into the air by it and with it. Intemperate heats and colds are the two ſprings of many diſeaſes. He alludes both to the conditions of Souldiers or Travellers, who are expoſed to the open air by day and by night, and alſo to the cloudy Pillar which defended the Iſraelites both by day and by night. The ſence is, He ſhall protect thee from all evils both by day and night.

7 The LORD ſhall preſerve thee from all evil: he ſhall preſerve thy ſoul.

8 The LORD ſhall preſerve thy going out, and thy coming in l, from this time forth, and even for evermore.

l Shall guard and aſſiſt thee in all thy expeditions and affairs and actions either at home or abroad. So this phraſe is uſed Num. 27. 17. Deut. 28. 6.

PSAL. CXXII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm ſeems to have been written by David for the uſe of the people when they came up to Jeruſalem to the ſolemn Feaſts.

A ſong of degrees of David.

David profeſſeth his joy, when he went into the Houſe of the Lord, 1, 2. prayeth for the welfare, proſperity and peace of it, 3——9.

1 I Was glad when they ſaid unto me, Let us go a into the houſe of the LORD.

a Exhorting one another to it, as Deut. 33. 19. Or, we will go. The ſence is, It delighteth me much to hear that the people, who had ſo long lived in the neglect or contempt of Gods worſhip, were now ready and forward in it.

2 Our feet † ſhall ſtand b within thy gates, O Jeruſalem c.

† Heb. were ſtanding. So Gr.

b Thither we ſhall come, and there we ſhall make our abode during the times of ſolemn worſhip. c In that City, where the Ark is now fixed. We ſhall wander no more from place to place as the Ark was removed.

3 Jeruſalem is built as a city that is * compact together d.

* See 2 Sa. 5. 9.

d Partly in its buildings, which are not diſperſed, as they are in Villages, nor divided into two Cities, as it was before, but united and enlarged, 1 Chron. 11. 7, 8. and principally in its Government and Religion, which was diſtinct and oppoſite, before David took the Fort of Zion from the Jebuſites.

4 * Whither the tribes e go up, the tribes of the LORD e, unto the teſtimony of Iſrael f, to give thanks unto the name of the LORD g.

* Exod. 23. 17. Deut. 16. 16.

e Not ſome few pious people of each Tribe, as in Saul's time and under the Judges, but whole Tribes, nor onely one or two of the Tribes, as it was during the late Civil Wars, but all the twelve Tribes. e Whom God hath choſen to be his people, and whom he hath invited and required to reſort thither. f Unto the Ark, which is oft called the Teſtimony, as Exod. 16. 34. Levit. 16. 13. and 24. 3. Numb. 17. 4. and more fully the Ark of the Teſtimony, as Exod. 26. 33, 34. and elſewhere; becauſe of the Tables of the Covenant laid up in it, which are called Gods Teſtimony, and the Tables of the Teſtimony, as Exod. 25. 16. and 31. 18, &c. And this may well be called the Teſtimony of or to Iſrael, becauſe it was given by God to them and for their good. Or, by or according to the Teſtimony of Iſrael, (i. e.) Gods command given to Iſrael, which may be alledged here as the reaſon which moved them to this journey. g To worſhip God; this one eminent part and action thereof being put for all the reſt.

5 For h there † are ſet thrones of judgment i: the thrones of the houſe of David k.

h This is added as another reaſon inviting and obliging them to go up to Jeruſalem, and as another commendation of this City. i The ſupream Courts of Juſtice for Eccleſiaſtical, and eſpecially for Civil affairs, as the next clauſe explains it. k The Royal Throne allotted by God to David and to his poſterity for ever, and the inferiour Seats of Juſtice eſtabliſhed by and under his Authority. See 2 Chron. 19. 8, 9, 10.

6 Pray for the peace of Jerusalem l: they shall prosper m that love it.

l In whose prosperity both your Civil and your Religious Privileges are deeply concerned. m Or, let them prosper, the future being taken imperatively, as is very frequent. The Lord grant them prosperity and all happiness.

7 Peace be within thy walls n, and prosperity within thy palaces o.

n In all thy dwellings. o Especially in the Court and the dwellings of the Princes and Rulers, whose welfare is a publick blessing to all the people.

8 For my brethren and companions sakes p, I will now say, Peace be within thee.

p And this I desire not only nor chiefly for my own security, and for the glory of mine Empire, but for the sake of all my fellow-citizens, and of all the Israelites, whom, though my Subjects, I must own for my brethren and companions in the chief priviledges and blessings enjoyed at Jerusalem.

9 Because of the house of the LORD our God q, I will * seek thy good.

* Neh. 2. 10.

q Which is now fixed in this City.

PSAL. CXXIII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm contains a description of the great agony and distress of Gods people, and of their carriage under it.

A song of degrees.

The Godly profess their patient trusting and confidence in God, 1, 2. And withal earnestly pray to be delivered from the contempt of the proud. 3, 4.

*Ps.115.3. 1 Unto thee a lift I up mine eyes, O thou * that dwellest in the heavens.

a Unto thee only, because all other persons either cannot, or will not, help me.

2 Behold, as the eyes of servants look unto the hand of their masters b, and as the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her mistress: so our eyes wait upon the LORD our God, until that he have mercy upon us c.

b Either, 1. for supply of their wants, which comes from their masters hand: Or, 2. for pity, the hand being the instrument whereby Masters commonly correct their Servants, and looking to the hand may express the posture of one supplicating for Mercy: Or rather, 3. for help and defence against their oppressors. For Servants were unable to defend themselves, and were not allowed to wear defensive weapons, but expected and had protection from their Masters in case of injury. For this phrase of having ones eyes towards another both in this and other Sacred Books, constantly notes expectation and desire of help from them, as Psal. 25. 15 and 69. 4. Isa. 17. 7. Ezek. 23. 27. and oft elsewhere. And the phrase of Gods having mercy upon another, doth most commonly signifie that act or effect of his mercy in helping and delivering him. c Until he graciously help and save us.

3 Have mercy upon us, O LORD, have mercy upon us: for we are exceedingly filled with contempt d.

4 Our soul is exceedingly filled with the scorning of ‖ those that are at ease, and with the contempt of the proud e.

2 Kings 9. 28.

d With opprobrious words and injuries. e With the scornful and contemptuous carriage of thine and our enemies, who live in great ease and glory, whilst we, thy people, are overwhelmed with manifold calamities.

PSAL. CXXIV.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm was Composed by David in the name and for the use of all the Church and People of Israel, as a thanksgiving for their deliverance from some eminent danger or dangers from proud and potent enemies. Many such they had in Davids time: but which of them is here intended, is hard to determine, and not worth the inquiry.

A song of degrees of David.

The Church setteth forth Gods Mercy for a miraculous deliverance, out of the apparent danger of powerful Enemies, 1—5. and blesseth him for it, 6—8.

*Ps.129.1. 1 If it had not been the LORD who was on our side, * now may Israel say:

2 If it had not been the LORD who was on our side, when men rose up against us;

3 Then they had swallowed us up quick a, when their wrath was kindled against us.

a They had speedily and utterly destroyed us, as Korah, &c. were Numb. 16.

4 Then the waters had overwhelmed us, the stream had gone over our soul.

5 Then the proud waters b had gone over our soul.

b Our enemies compared to proud waters, for their great multitude and swelling rage and mighty force.

6 Blessed be the LORD, who hath not given us as a prey to their teeth c.

c A Metaphor from wild beasts which tear and devour their prey with their teeth.

*Prov.6.5. 7 Our soul is escaped * as a bird out of the snare of the fowlers; the snare is broken, and we are escaped.

*Ps.121.2. 8 * Our help is in the name of the LORD, who made heaven and earth.

PSAL. CXXV.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm was designed for the consolation and encouragement of Gods Church and People in all Ages, against all the plots and malice of their enemies.

A song of degrees.

The stedfastness of such as trust in God, 1—3. A Prayer for the Godly to do them good, and against the Ungodly to destroy them, 4, 5.

1 They that trust in the LORD shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed a, but abideth for ever.

a Or, overthrown by any winds or storms, partly because of its own greatness and strength; and partly because of the divine protection afforded to it.

2 As the mountains are round about Jerusalem b, so the LORD is round about his people, from henceforth even for ever.

b By which it was defended both from stormy winds and from the assaults of its enemies.

3 For the rod of † the wicked c shall not rest d upon the lot of the righteous e: lest the righteous put forth their hands unto iniquity f.

c The power and authority of cruel Tyrants. d Not continue for ever, nor too long. e Upon the habitations and persons of good men. f Left through humane frailty and the great weight or long continuance of their troubles, they should be driven to impatience, or to despair, or to use indirect and sinful courses to relieve themselves.

4 Do good, O LORD, unto those that be good g, and to them that are upright in their hearts.

g As thou hast promised to keep thy people from evil, v. 3. be pleased also to vouchsafe unto them those blessings which are good for them. Or thus, Having declared Gods tender care of his people, and his promise made to them, he now prayeth for the execution of the said promises.

5 As for such as turn aside unto their crooked ways h, the LORD shall lead them forth i with the workers of iniquity k: but * peace shall be upon Israel l.

*Ps.128.6. Gal. 6.16.

h But those hypocrites, who either through fear of the Rod mentioned v. 3. or for other considerations, shall turn aside from the ways of God which for a time they professed and seemed to own unto sinful courses, whom he opposeth to the upright, v. 4. i To wit, unto punishment, as malefactors are commonly led to the place of execution. k With the most obstinate and profligate sinners, of whose plagues they shall certainly partake as they did of their sins. l Upon the true Israel of God.

PSAL. CXXVI.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm was Composed by Ezra, or some other man of God at the return of Israel from Babylon.

A song of degrees.

The Church celebrating and praising God for her return out of the Babylonian Captivity, 1—3. Prayeth to perfect his work, and foreteleth the good success thereof, 4—6.

1 When the LORD † turned again the captivity of Zion a, we were like them that dream b.

a (i. e.) Brought the captive Israelites out of Babylon into their own land. b We were so surprised and astonished with the report of such a favour, that we could not believe our own eyes and ears, but thought it to be but a dream or delusion of our own fancies: as is usual in matters of great joy, as Gen. 45. 26. Luke 24. 11. Acts 12. 9.

2 Then * was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing: then said they among the heathen, The LORD † hath done great things for them c.

* Job 8. 21.

† Heb. hath magnified to do with them. Psal. 33. 9. & 113. 5.

c They did and well might wonder at it, that an Heathen Emperor should of his own meer motion shew so much kindness to so hateful and despicable a people as the Jews were.

3 The LORD hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad.

4 Turn again our captivity d, O LORD, as the streams of the south e.

d As thou hast brought us home, bring home also the rest of our brethren who are dispersed and yet remain captives in Babylon, or in any other parts of the world. e As thou art pleased sometimes to send floods of water into dry and barren grounds, such as the Southern parts of Canaan and the parts adjacent were, which is an act of thy great power and goodness; and no less will this reduction of thy people be, and no less shall we rejoyce in it, and bless God for it.

5 * They that sow in tears, shall reap in ‖ joy f.

* See Jer. 31. 9, &c.

f This is an Argument wherewith he presseth the foregoing prayer, v. 4. taken from the common course of Gods Providence, towards Men of all Nations, to whom he affords vicissitudes of sorrow and comfort, and particularly towards husbandmen, who though oft-times they sow their seed corn with care and fear and sorrow, yet afterwards for the most part meet with a joyful harvest. And therefore we hope thou wilt not deny this favour to thine own people. And as thou hast in some good measure granted it to us, so we pray thee grant it to our brethren, who are yet exercised with hard labours and griefs, that they and we together may at last obtain that blessed and full harvest which we still pray and hope for.

6 He

6 He that goeth forth g and weepeth h, bearing ‖ precious seed i, shall doubtless come k again with rejoycing, bringing his sheaves with him.

‖ Or, good seed.

g The Husbandman that goeth out into his Field, and walketh hither and thither to scatter his Seed, as the manner is. h For fear of the loss of his seed, and of a bad harvest. i Seed Corn when it is scarce and dear. Or, the basket of seed, as it is rendred in our Margent, as also by the Chaldee Paraphrast, and some others. k Heb. coming shall come. Which manner of expression may note either the certainty of the thing, or the frequency and customariness of it. This verse is only an amplification of the former.

PSAL. CXXVII.

A song of degrees ‖ for Solomon a.

‖ Or, of.

a Or rather, of Solomon, as this Particle is generally used in this Book. Nor is there any thing in this Psalm which gives us just ground to question whether Solomon was the Author of it or no.

No success in City or Family, without Gods Blessing and Protection, 1, 2. Good Children are his Gifts, 3, 4. Their happiness that have them, 5.

1 Except the LORD build the house b, they labour in vain † that build it c: except the LORD keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain.

b (i. e.) Assist and bless those that build the house, either an artificial house, the Temple, or the Royal Palace, or any of those numerous structures which Solomon raised; or a natural or civil House, a Family or a State or Kingdom. c They will never bring it to perfection, nor have any comfort in it.

2 It is in vain for you d to rise up early, to sit up late e, to eat the bread of sorrows f: for ‖ so g he giveth i his beloved k sleep l.

d He directs his speech to the persons forementioned, the builders, or watchmen, of both which sorts there are many that use the following course. e To use constant and unwearied diligence from the very dawning of the day unto the dark night, that so you may accomplish your designs. f To eat the bread which you get by excessive and grievous pains. g To wit, by his blessing, which, though not expressed, is sufficiently understood out of the former verse, where it is twice expressed. As therefore he saith it is in vain for them to build or watch, if God do not give his blessing and assistance, v. 1. so here he adds, that it is in vain to be diligent in their labours and callings, understand, without Gods blessing; for so, (i. e.) not singly by their industry, but by his blessing upon their labours. But the Hebrew word rendred so may be and is by others rendred when or whereas or since; by others, rightly or well, when it is convenient and needful for them; by others, as it is in our margent, certainly, the sleep which they have is undoubtedly from God's blessing, without which all possible endeavours would never procure it. h The Lord, expressed in the former and in the following verses. i To wit, freely, without that immoderate toiling and drudgery wherewith others pursue it. k His people, who though hated and maligned by men, are beloved of God, over whom his providence watcheth in a special manner. In this expression he seems to allude to the name of Jedidiah, which was given to Solomon, and signifies the beloved of the Lord, 2 Sam. 12. 25. l A quiet rest both of body and mind. Which many of those greedy worldlings cannot enjoy, as is observed Eccles. 5. 11.

3 Loe, children m are an heritage of the LORD n: and * the fruit of the womb is his reward o.

m Which he mentions here, partly because they are the chief of all those blessings; and partly because all the fore-mentioned toil and labour is in a great measure and most commonly undertaken for their sakes. n They come not from the power of Nature, and from a Mans Conversation with his Wife, or with a multitude of Wives or Concubines, which Solomon had, but only from Gods blessing, even as an inheritance is not the fruit of a Mans own labour, but the gift of his Father, or rather the gift of God, both enabling and inclining his Father to give it to him. o Not a reward of debt merited by good men, but a reward of grace, of which we read Rom. 4. 4. which God gives them graciously, as Jacob acknowledgeth of his Children, Gen. 33. 5. And although God gives Children and other outward Comforts to ungodly men in the way of common providence, yet he gives them only to his people as favours, and in the way of promise and covenant.

4 As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man p; so are children of the youth q.

p When they are shot out of a bow by a man of great strength against his enemy, which are of great use and power both to offend the enemy, and to defend himself. q Children begotten in youth, as an Husband or Wife married in their youth are called an husband or wife of youth, Prov. 5. 18. Isa. 54. 6. Joel 1. 8. and as a son begotten in old age is called a son of old age, Gen. 37. 3. And begotten in old age is called a son of old age, Gen. 37. 3. And these he prefers before other Children in this point, partly because these he prefers before other Children in this point, partly because such are commonly more strong and vigorous than others; and partly because they live longest with their parents, and to their comfort and support, whereas children born in old age seldom come to any maturity of years before their parents death.

5 Happy is the man that † hath his quiver full of them r: they shall not be ashamed s, but they ‖ shall speak with the enemies in the gate t.

r Who hath a numerous issue; which as it is a great blessing in it self, so Solomon want of it made it more valuable in his eyes. s Such Parents fear not the reproach of barrenness, which was grievous, especially among the Jews; of which see Luke 1. 25. nor any other shame from their enemies. t They shall courageously plead their cause in Courts of Judicature, which were in the gates, Deut. 21. 19. and 25. 7. not fearing to be crushed by the might of their adversaries, as weak and helpless persons frequently are.

PSAL. CXXVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm contains a description of the blessedness of good men.

A song of degrees.

The Psalmist sheweth the happy state of such as fear God; in his Labour, 1, 2. Wife and Children, 3. He shall also see the good of Jerusalem, and peace upon Israel, 4—6.

1 Blessed is every one that feareth the LORD: that walketh in his ways.

2 * For thou shalt eat the labour of thine hands a: happy shalt thou be, and it shall be well with thee b.

* Isa.3.10.

a Thy labour shall not be vain and fruitless, and the fruit of thy labours shall not be taken away from thee, and possessed by others, as God threatned to the disobedient, Deut. 28. but enjoyed by thy self with comfort and satisfaction. b Both in this World and in the World to come, as even the Chaldee Paraphrast explains these words.

3 Thy wife shall be as a fruitful vine c by the sides of thine house d: thy children like olive-plants e round about thy table f.

c Like the Vine for fruitfulness: Or, like that sort of Vines known by this name for its eminent fruitfulness, as some Trees amongst us are for the same reason called the great bearers. d Where the Vines are commonly planted for support and other advantages, Which being applied to the Wife, may signifie either, 1. the Wives duty to abide at home, Tit. 2. 5. as the Harlot is deciphered by her gadding abroad, Prov. 7. 11, 12. Or rather, 2. the legitimateness of the Children, which are begotten at home by the Husband, and not abroad by strangers. e Numerous, growing and flourishing, good both for ornament and manifold uses, as Olive trees are. f Where they shall sit at meat with thee, for thy comfort and safety.

4 Behold, that thus shall the man be blessed, that feareth the LORD.

5 The LORD shall bless thee out of Zion g: and thou shalt see the good of Jerusalem h all the dayes of thy life.

g From the Ark in Zion, and with those spiritual and everlasting Blessings which are to be had no where but in Zion, and from the God who dwelleth in Zion, and with all other mercies which thou shalt ask of God in Zion. h The prosperity of that City to which thou belongest, and which is the only seat of Gods special presence and of his Worship, whose felicity therefore is very delightful to every good man, and upon whose peace the peace and safety of every member of it depends, as every Seaman is concerned in the safety of the Ship, in which he is.

6 Yea, thou shalt see thy childrens children, and * peace upon Israel i.

*Ps.125.5.

i Not only upon Jerusalem and the parts adjacent, but upon all the Tribes and People of Israel.

PSAL. CXXIX.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm contains a joyful and thankful remembrance of the Churches former and manifold calamities from barbarous enemies, and of Gods wonderful mercy in delivering them out of their hands.

A song of degrees.

The various and manifold afflictions of the Church described, but delivered out of all, 1—4. The haters thereof cursed and devoted to judgment, 5—8.

1 ‖ Many a time have they a afflicted me from my youth b, may * Israel now say.

a Some enemies or oppressors; which is easily understood both from the nature of the thing, and from v. 3. where they are expressed under the name of plowers. b From the time that I was a people, when I was in Egypt and came out of it, which is called the time of Israels youth, Jer. 2. 2. Ezek. 23. 3.

2 Many a time have they afflicted me from my youth: yet they have not prevailed against me.

3 The plowers plowed upon my back c: they made long their furrows d.

c They have not only thrown me down and trod me under foot; but have cruelly tormented me, wounded and mangled me, and had no more pity upon me than the plowman hath upon the earth which he cuts up at his pleasure. He saith, upon my back, either because they did literally scourge the Captives upon their backs with such cords as are mentioned v. 4. although we do not read that the Israelitish Captives were thus used by any of their enemies; or by way of allusion to that usage, which made a sort of furrows in their backs upon which they used to lay on their strokes. d They oft repeated their injuries and prolonged my torments.

4 The LORD is righteous e: he hath cut asunder the * cords f of the wicked.

*Ps.140.5.

e Faithful or merciful, as that word is frequently used. f Wherewith the plow was drawn; by which means they were stopped in their course. So he persists in the same Metaphor of a plough. By these cords he understands all their plots and endeavours.

5 Let them all be confounded and turned back g that hate Zion.

g Forced to retreat with shame and disappointment.

6 Let them be as the grass upon the house-tops h, which withereth afore it groweth up i:

h Which there were flat, and therefore more capable of Grass or green Corn growing between the stones, than ours are. i Which having having no deep root, never comes to maturity. And so all their designs shall be abortive, and never come to perfection.

7 Wherewith the mower filleth not his hand; nor he that bindeth sheaves, his bosom.

8 Neither do they which go by say, The blessing of the LORD be upon you k: we bless you in the name of the LORD.

k Which was an usual salutation given by passengers to reapers, as Ruth 2. 4. So the meaning is, It never continues till the harvest comes.

PSAL. CXXX.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm was composed by the Prophet when he was conflicting with horrors of his Conscience for the guilt of his Sins, and imploring Gods Mercy and Pardon.

A song of degrees.

The Psalmist being troubled for, and acknowledging his Sins, professeth his hope in God, 1—6. and exhorteth Israel to hope also in him, 7, 8.

* Lam. 3. 55. Jon. 2. 2.

1 OUt * of the depths a have I cried unto thee, O LORD.

a Being overwhelmed with deep distresses and terrors, and ready to despair.

2 Lord, hear my voice: let thine ears be attentive to the voice of my supplications.

*Psl.143.2. 3 * If thou, LORD, shouldest mark iniquities b, O LORD, who shall stand c?

b Observe them accurately, and punish them severely, as they deserv.. c In thy presence, or at thy Tribunal. No man can acquit himself or escape the sentence of condemnation, because all men are sinners, Eccles. 7. 20. Jam. 3. 2. To stand is a judicial phrase, and notes a mans being absolved or justified upon an equal tryal, as Psal. 1. 5. Rom. 14. 4. where it is oppofed to falling.

4 But there is forgiveness with thee d, that thou mayest be feared e.

d Thou art able and ready to forgive repenting sinners. e Not with a slavish, but with a Child-like fear and reverence. This Grace and Mercy of thine is the foundation of all Religion and Worship of thee in the World, without which men would desperately proceed on in their impious courses without any thought of Repentance.

*Ps.27.14. & 40. 1. 5 I * wait for the LORD f; my soul doth wait, and in his word g do I hope.

f That he would manifest his favour to me in the pardon of my sins. g Wherein he hath declared his merciful nature, Exod. 34. 6, 7. and his gracious purpose and promises for the pardoning of sinners.

6 My soul waiteth for the LORD, more than they || Or, which watch unto the morning. that wait for the morning h: || I say, more than they that watch for the morning.

h Whether Souldiers that keep the Night-watches in an Army or City, or the Priests or Levites who did so in the Temple; who being wearied with hard service and want of convenient rest, diligently look for and fervently desire the morning when they may be discharged. Compare Psal. 119. 148.

7 Let Israel i hope in the LORD: for with the LORD there is mercy, and with him is plenteous redemption k.

i Every true Israelite by the encouragement of mine example. k Abundantly sufficient for all persons who shall accept it upon Gods terms, and for the remission of all sins: and therefore here is good ground of hope for all contrite and returning sinners.

8 And he shall redeem l Israel m from all his iniquities n.

l The Lord, either God the Father by his Son, or God the Son by his own blood. m All true Israelites, whether of the carnal or spiritual seed. n From the guilt and punishment of all their sins

PSAL. CXXXI.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm seems to have been composed by David during Sauls persecution. When he was charged with boundless ambition, and a greedy affectation of the Royal Throne, and that he sought it by wicked practices against Sauls life and dignity. And for his own just vindication he is forced to publish his own integrity, and to declare that as the right of the Kingdom was not sought or coveted by him, but freely conferred upon him by the unexpected and undefired favour of God, so that he had no thought or design to invade the Throne before his time, but was willing to stay Gods leisure for it, and in the mean time was resolved to behave himself towards Saul as because a faithful Subject, seeking nothing but to preserve his own Life from the rage of unrighteous and bloody Men.

It neither is nor hath been my course to attempt or arrogate any thing to my self above my degree and private capacity, or to affect worldly glory or domination.

2 Surely I have behaved and quieted † my self d * as a child that is weaned of his mother e; my soul is even as a weaned child. † Heb. my soul. * Matt. 18.

d When my mind was provoked to irregular practices either by my own corrupt heart, or by Sauls implacable rage and tyranny, or by the solicitation of any of my followers, as 1 Sam. 24. & 26. I restrained and subdued all such evil motions. e Either, 1. as void of all that ambition and malice wherewith I am charged as a Child newly weaned: Or rather, 2. as wholly depending upon Gods Providence for the way and time of bringing me to the Kingdom, as the poor helpless Infant, when it is deprived of its natural and accustomed food, the Mothers Milk, takes no care to provide for it self, but wholly relies upon its Mothers care and providence for its support. 1 Cor. 14.

3 Let Israel hope in the LORD f, † from hence- forth and for ever. *Heb. from now.

f Let all Israelites learn by my example to commit themselves to God in well-doing, and to fix all their hope and trust upon him alone.

PSAL. CXXXII.

The ARGUMENT.

THe Penman of this Psalm was either, 1. David, when God had graciously declared his acceptance of Davids desire to build an House for God, and his purpose of establishing the Kingdom to David and his seed for ever: Or, 2. Solomon, as may be gathered from the whole matter of the Psalm, which seems better to agree to him than to David, and particularly from v. 8, 9, 10. compared with 2 Chron. 6. 41, 42. where we have the same words with no great alteration.

A song of degrees.

David in Prayer commendeth unto God the care he had for the Ark, 1—7. With his Prayer over it, 8—10. A rehearsal of Gods Oath and Promises of the everlasting Kingdom of Christ, 11—18.

1 LORD, remember David a, and all his afflictions b.

a Either, 1. thy Covenant made with David: Or rather, 2. Davids eminent piety and zeal for thy service, amplified by the following clause. b All his sufferings for thy sake, all the solicitude of his mind, all his hard and wearisome labours for thy service and glory, and for provisions towards the building of thy Temple, and for the establishment of thy people in peace and tranquillity, that so way might be made for that great work.

2 How he sware unto the LORD, and vowed c unto the mighty God of Jacob d; c He made a solemn Vow, and confirmed it with an Oath, which he undoubtedly did, although no mention be made of it, 2 Sam. 7. Thus many historical passages which were omitted in their proper places, are afterwards recorded upon other occasions; of which examples have been formerly noted. d Of Isaac; Jacob and Israel are frequently put for their posterity, as hath been frequently observed.

3 Surely I will not come into the tabernacle of my house, nor go up to my bed e; e This and the following clauses are not to be understood strictly and properly, as if he would never come into his House or Bed till this was done, which is confuted by the history, 2 Sam. 11. 2. but figuratively, as an hyperbolical expression, such as are usual both in Scripture and in all other Authors, to signifie his passionate desire of doing this work, which was so earnest, that neither his House nor Bed nor Sleep could give him any content till this work was done, or in some forwardness.

4 I will not give sleep to mine eyes, or slumber to mine eye-lids:

5 Until I find out a place for the LORD f, † an habitation for the mighty God of Jacob. † Heb. habitations.

f Either, 1. until I can understand from God what place he hath chosen for his house to be built in. Or rather, 2. until I have fitted or raised an house in which the Ark may be put; an habitation, as this is explained both in the next clause, and in v. 7. and Acts 7. 46. For this and not the former was the matter both of Davids desire, and of Gods answer delivered by Nathan, 2 Sam. 7.

6 Loe, we have heard of it g at Ephratah h: we found it i in the fields of the wood k.

g Of the place or habitation for the Lord last mentioned. h Either, 1. in Bethlehem, which is called Ephratah, Gen. 35. 19. and 48. 7. Mich. 5. 2. So the sense is either this, We heard a rumour at Bethlehem among Davids Relations, that the Ark should be removed to a new place, and that David had pitched upon it: Or this, We heard that Bethlehem would be the place for it, because it was the City of David. Or rather, 2. in the Tribe of Ephraim, which was called also Ephratah or Ephrathah, as is manifest, because the men of Ephraim were called Ephrathites, as Judg. 12. 5. in the Hebrew Text, though in the English it be Ephraimite. So Jeroboam is called an Ephrathite, 1 Kings 11. 26. So the sense is, We heard it from our Fathers, that the ancient place of it was Shiloh, which was in the land of Ephraim. Whereby he covertly intimates that God rejected and forsook that place, and chose us the tribe of Ephraim, as it is said Psal. 78. 67. that so he might make way for Zion, which was the place chosen by God for it, as it follows here v. 13. i Afterwards we found it elsewhere. k (i. e.) In a field, or in one of the fields of the Wood; for that little spot of ground in which the Tabernacle or Temple was built, was not likely to be in several fields. Thus Jephthah was buried in the cities of Gilead, Judg. 12. 7. (i. e.) in one of them. This is meant either, 1. of the Mount Moriah, which might possibly be called the field of the wood, as being anciently a place full of wood, Gen. 22. 13. or of the threshing-floor of Araunah, of which see 2 Sam. 24. 28. which before the building of the Temple is said to have been a woody place. Or rather, 2. of Kiri.th-jearim, which signifies a city of woods, in the the field or territory whereof the Ark was seated for twenty years, as we read 1 Sam. 7. 1, 2. And from this place it was removed to Zion, 2 Sam. 6. 1, &c.

*Ps.95.7. 7 We will go l into his tabernacles m: * we will worship at his footstool n.

l Seeing the Ark is now fixed in a certain place, we will go to it more generally and constantly than formerly we did. m Into his Tabernacle or Temple, the Plural number put for the Singular, as Psal. 43. 3. and 46. 4. &c. n Either the Temple: or rather the Ark, so called 1 Chron. 28. 2. Lament. 2. 1. because God is oft said to sit between the Cherubims, which were above the Ark.

Num.10. 35. Psal. 68. 1. & 74. 22. 8 * Arise o, O LORD, into thy rest p: thou, and the ark of thy strength q.

o (i. e.) Arise and come. One word put for two, as Gen. 43. 32. (i. e. marvelled looking) one at another; and v. 34. he took messes, i. e. he took, and sent messes, as our Translation renders it. And this word is very proper in this place, because it was to be used by Gods appointment when the Ark was to be removed from one place to another, Numb. 10. 35. as now it was from the Tabernacle in Zion to the Temple in Moriah, upon which occasion this and the two following verses were used by Solomon, 2 Chron. 6. 41, 42. p Into thy resting place, the Temple so called Isa. 66. 1. where thou hast now a fixed habitation. q The seat of thy powerful and glorious presence, from whence thou dost put forth and manifest thy strength on the behalf of thy people when they desire and need it.

Psa. 15. 9 Let thy priests be cloathed with * righteousness r; and let thy saints shout for joy s.

r Not onely with those outward Sacerdotal garments of glory and beauty which thou hast appointed for them, but especially with those inward ornaments of righteousness and true holiness, that so their persons and services may be accepted by thee both for themselves and for all thy people, and they may be cloathed with salvation, as it is expressed here below v. 16. and 2 Chron. 6. 41. which is the effect or consequent of the former clothing. s Let all thy people have cause of rejoycing in the tokens of thy goodness; which they eminently had at the dedication of the Temple, as is noted 1 Kings 8. 66.

10 For thy servant Davids sake t, turn not away the face u of thine anointed x.

t In regard of thy singular kindness and promises vouchsafed to David, as this is explained in the following verses. And this verse makes it more than probable, that David was not the Penman of this Psalm, who never used to beg mercies from God for his own sake, but constantly for his names sake, and for the sake of his truth, mercy, goodness or righteousness, as will be evident to any one that reads this Book. u Cast me not out of thy presence, do not reject or deny my request, as this phrase is expounded, 1 Kings 2. 16. x Of me whom thou hast anointed to be King over thy people. He speaks of himself in the third person, as is usual.

Psa.89.3, 4, &c. Psa.132. 17. Ezek.29. 21. Dan.7. 14. Luke 1.69. 2 Sam.23. 5. Ezek. thy 29. 11 * The LORD hath sworn in truth y unto David, he will not turn from it, * Of the fruit of † thy body z will I set upon thy throne.

y Not falsly or deceitfully, as men sometimes do, but sincerely and faithfully, what he will inviolably observe and fulfil, as the next clause expounds this. z Some of thy posterity.

12 If thy children will keep my covenant and my testimonies that I shall teach them; their children also shall sit upon my throne for evermore.

13 For the LORD hath chosen Zion a: he hath desired it for his habitation.

a Not strictly, but largely taken, either for the whole mountain, whereof Zion and Moriah were two parts or tops; or for Jerusalem, which was in a great part built upon Mount Zion, whence it is oft called Zion, as hath been noted again and again. For he speaks here of that place which he chose to be his rest for ever, as it follows v. 14. which unquestionably was the Temple: whence also it appears that this Psalm was not written by David, nor before the building of the Temple.

Psa.68.16. 14 * This is my rest for ever: here will I dwell b, for I have desired it.

b I will no more wander to several places as I have done, but here I have fixed my abode.

* Ps. 147. 14. 15 * I will || abundantly bless her provision c: I will || Or, surely. satisfie her poor with bread.

Acts 2. 41. 16 I * will also cloath her priests with salvation d: and her saints shall shout aloud for joy.

c I will plentifully provide for Jerusalem and all that live in her or resort to her for Worship: nor shall they seek my face in vain. d With my saving graces and blessings, with righteousness, as thou didst desire v. 9. and moreover with that protection and benediction which by my promise belongs to righteous persons.

Ezek.29. 21. Luke 1.69. Psa.mdle. Act 1 Kin. 11.36. 17 * There e will I make the horn of David to bud f: I have ordained a || lamp g for mine anointed.

e In Jerusalem, the seat of the Kingdom, and, which is no small advantage to that family, the onely place of my presence and worship in the world. f His power and glory to flourish and increase and to be propagated to his posterity. g A successor or succession to continue for ever in his family, as this phrase is expounded 1 Kings 11. 36. and 15. 4. and particularly one eminent and glorious light, to wit, the Messias, who shall come out of his loyns, and revive and vastly enlarge his Kingdom.

18 His enemies will I cloath with shame h: but upon himself i shall his crown flourish.

h For the shameful and unexpected disappointment of all their vain hopes and wicked designs. i Upon him and his posterity, which are nothing else but a mans self multiplied.

PSAL. CXXXIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm was composed by David upon the happy occasion of the ending of the Civil War between the two Houses of Saul and David. In which having felt the fad effects of discord and division, both the King and People were more sensible of the great blessing of reconciliation and unity.

A song of degrees of David.

David extolleth the benefit and excellency of the unity and brotherly Communion of the faithful, 1—3.

† Heb. even together.

1 BEhold, how good and how pleasant it is a, for brethren b to dwell † together in unity.

a You have been haraffed by a Civil War, take notice of this blessed change with thankfulness to God for it. b For us who are brethren not onely by nature and blood, but also by combination in one and the same Commonwealth, and by the profession of the same Religion.

2 It is like the * precious ointment upon the head, * Ex. 30. that ran down upon the beard, even Aarons beard c, that went down to the || skirts d of his garment. || Or, collar.

c It is no less grateful and refreshing than that oyl which was plentifully poured forth upon Aarons head at the time of his Consecration to the Priestly office, which was exceeding pleasant, not only for the extraordinary fragrancy of it, but because by this, together with the other Rites prescribed, he was initiated into that sacred Office, which was so acceptable to God, and so comfortable and beneficial to the people, as being the happy instrument of making attonement to God for them, and of procuring and maintaining their peace with God, upon which all their happiness of this life and of the next depends. d Or, skirt, for the Hebrew word is of the Singular number. Not to the lower skirt or bottom of his Sacerdotal garment, for that the sacred Oyl was poured forth in so great plenty is not probable, nor was it necessary or convenient; but to the upper skirt of it, or the mouth of it; as this Hebrew word properly signifies; or to the collar of his upper Priestly garment, which the oyntment falling upon his beard, might easily reach.

Deut.4.48 || Or. descendeth. * Lev. 25. 21. Deut. 28.8. 3 As the dew of * Hermon e, and as the dew that || descended upon the mountains of Zion f; for g * there h the LORD commandeth blessing i, even life k for evermore.

e It is no less grateful than the dew is which falls upon that great and goodly hill of Hermon, whereby it is both refreshed and made fruitful. f And as the dew which falleth upon the mountains of Sion, (i. e.) either upon the several parts and ridges or tops of that mountain, whereof one was peculiarly called Sion, and another Moriah, or upon the mountains which are round about Jerusalem, Psal. 125. 2. which is oft called Zion, as Psal. 132. 13. And these may be oppofed to Hermon, which was remote and beyond Jordan. But peradventure (which yet I propose with all submission) this dew is not to be taken litterally, for the falling of the dew availed very little to the refreshment or improvement of the hills of Sion and Moriah, especially as now they were filled with buildings, but Allegorically, for the favour or blessing of God, which is frequently called and compared to the dew, as Prov. 19. 12. Isa. 18. 4. Hos. 14. 5. Mich. 5. 7.* And thus it may seem to be explained in the following clause: and so the fence of the place is this, It is as desirable as the natural dew which falls upon mount Hermon, nay which is more, as that blessed and heavenly dew of Gods ordinances and graces which he hath commanded to fall upon the mountains of Sion, (i. e.) either upon mount Sion, the Plural number being put for the Singular, as it is Psal. 132. 7. and oft elsewhere, as I have observed in several places; or upon the mountains of Zion and Moriah, and others which are round about Jerusalem, as was now said. And if it seem strange, that the dew should be taken litterally in the first clause, and mystically in the next, we have a like instance Mat. 8. 22. Let the dead (spiritually) bury the dead (naturally.) g He now gives the reason either why this unity is so good a thing; or why the dew descending upon Zion, to which that is compared, is so desirable. And so upon this occasion he slides into the commendation of Zions felicity, as the sacred Writers frequently do upon other like occasions. h Either, 1. where brethren live in peace and unity: or rather, 2. in Zion last mentioned. i Ordained, promised, conferred and established his blessing, to wit, all manner of blessedness for his people that sincerely worship him in that place. k To wit, an happy and pleasant life; for to live in misery is accounted and oft called death both in Scripture and in other Authors.

PSAL. CXXXIV.

The ARGUMENT.

THe form of this Psalm seems to be dramatical. In the two first verses the Psalmist speaks in the name of some eminent person, either the King or Chief Priests, exhorting and requiring all the Priests and Levites to perform the duties of their place and calling; and in the last verse in the name of the Priests and Levites returning him thanks for his good advice.

A song of degrees.

The Priest and Levites are exhorted to bless the Lord in his Sanctuary, 1—3.

1 Chr.9. 33.

1 BEhold, bless ye the LORD a all ye servants of the LORD b, * which by night c stand d in the house e of the LORD.

a Do not stand there like statues, dumb and idle, but employ your hearts and tongues in singing forth the praises of the Lord. b Peculiarly so called, Priests and Levites, who are set apart to the service of God and of the Sanctuary, as the next clause restrains this general expression. c Not onely by day, but also and especially by night, when their watch was more necessary. See Exod.

Exod. 27. 21. Levit. 8. 35. 1 Sam. 3. 3. As you watch by night when others ſleep, ſo do you utter the praiſes of God when others are ſilent. d (i. e.) Serve or miniſter, as this word is uſed Deut. 10. 8. and 18. 7. and oft elſewhere. e Which word includes both the Temple and Courts belonging to it, as hath been noted before.

2 Lift up your hands f ‖ in the ſanctuary g: and bleſs the LORD.

f Unto God in prayer and praiſes, thus expreſſing and exciting your inward devotion. g In that holy houſe of God where you ſtand, v. 1. Or, in or with boline ſs: Lift up your hands, as it is preſcribed, 1 Tim. 2. 8. Do not content your ſelves with lifting up your hands, but ſee that this be done with pure and holy hearts.

3 The LORD that made heaven and earth, bleſs thee h out of Zion i.

h Either, 1. thee whoſoever thou art who doſt faithfully perform the duty here commanded. Or, 2. thee, O King, or Prieſt, who doſt engage and encourage us in this bleſſed work. i Where God dwells, and from whence he heareth the prayers of his people, and giveth them the bleſſings which they deſire and need.

PSAL. CXXXV.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm contains an exhortation to all the Iſraelites, and eſpecially to the Prieſts and Levites, to praiſe God for his great and wonderful works; ſome particulars whereof are here recorded.

The ſervants of the Lord are exhorted to praiſe him for his Mercy to Iſrael, by his Might and Power, 1———7. for his Judgments on Egypt and other Nations, 8———14 The vanity of idols, and thoſe that truſt in them, 15———18. The Houſe of Aaron and Levi are exhorted to bleſs God, 19—21.

1 PRaiſe ye the LORD, praiſe ye the name of the LORD, praiſe him, O ye ſervants of the LORD a.

2 Ye that ſtand in the houſe of the LORD, in the courts b of the houſe of our God.

a Ye Prieſts and Levites, as Pſal. 134. 1. b Either in the Temple or the inner Court, which were appropriated to the Prieſts and Levites; or in the outward Court, which was for the people. See 2 Chron. 4. 9.

3 Praiſe ye the LORD, for the LORD is good c: ſing praiſes unto his name, for it is pleaſant d.

c Bountiful and gracious, eſpecially to you, and therefore he juſtly expects and deſerves your praiſes. d The work it ſelf of praiſes to God is pleaſant, as it is more fully expreſſed, Pſal. 147. 1.

* Ex. 19. 5. Deut. 7. 6. and Iſrael for his peculiar treaſure.

4 For * the LORD hath choſen Jacob for himſelf,

* Pſ. 95. 3.

5 For I know that * the LORD is great, and that our LORD is above all gods e.

e Above all that are called Gods, or worſhipped as Gods by the heathen people. And therefore ſeeing they commonly praiſe and extol their Idols, it becometh you not to be ſilent as to the praiſes of your God.

* Pſ. 115. 3. † Heb. depths.

6 * Whatſoever the LORD pleaſed f, that did he in heaven and in earth g, in the ſeas, and all † deep places h.

f Either in the creation or government of them. g His power and juriſdiction is univerſal, and not like that of the heathen Gods, which is confined to their ſeveral Countries. h In the viſible Seas, and in thoſe inviſible depths both of earth and of the waters which are contained in the bowels of the earth.

* Jer. 10. 13. & 51. 16. †Gr. clouds So Prov. 25. 14. * Job 38. 24, &c. Zech. 10. 1.

7 * He cauſeth the † vapours i to aſcend from the ends of the earth k; * he maketh lightnings for the rain l: he bringeth the wind out of his treaſuries m.

i Which are the matter of clouds and rain. k Either, 1. from the Sea, the common ſource of vapours, 1 Kings 18. 44. Amos 5. 8. wherewith both the earth in general, and ſeveral particular countries, are terminated or bounded: or rather, 2. from all parts of the earth from one end to another; as the borders of a land are commonly put for the whole land from one border to another, as Pſal. 105. 31, 33. and 147. 14. and oft elſewhere. For in this ſence this phraſe is generally uſed in Scripture, as Job 28. 24. and 38. 13. Pſal. 19. 4, 6. and 48. 10. and every where. l He bringeth water even out of the fire: he maketh thick clouds, which being broken, produce lightnings, and ſo are diſſolved into ſhowers of rain. So the lightnings are both a ſign and in ſome ſort the cauſe of rain. Or, he maketh lightnings with (as this Particle is uſed Gen. 46. 26. Pſal. 89. 4. and 119. 56, 98.) rain, (i. e.) he cauſeth both of them to come out of the ſame cloud. m Out of thoſe ſecret places where he reſerves them, and whence he bringeth them. as he ſees fit. Thus we read of treaſures of ſnow and hail, Job 38. 22. not that they are formally laid up in any certain places, but to ſignifie that God hath them as much at his diſpoſal, as any man hath that which he hath laid up in his ſtores.

14 For the LORD will judge his people p, and he will repent himſelf concerning his ſervants q.

The ARGUMENT.

THe matter of this Pſalm is the ſame with the former, onely it is a little more fitted to the uſe and ſervice of the Temple, by the continued repetition of that ſolemn clauſe, for thy mercy endures for ever, which was much uſed by the ſacred Singers. See 2 Chron. 7. 3. and 20. 21.

PSAL. CXXXVII.

The ARGUMENT.

THe Penman of this Pſalm is uncertain: the occaſion of it was unqueſtionably the conſideration of the Babyloniſh Captivity: and it ſeems to have been compoſed either during the time of that Captivity, or preſently after their deliverance out of it.

The ſad complaint of the Jews in captivity, 1—3. Of the ſcoffing of their enemies, yet their conſtancy to remember Jeruſalem, 4, 5. Judgments imprecated upon Edom and Babylon, 6— 9.

1 BY the rivers of Babylon a, there we ſat down b; yea, we wept when we remembred Zion c.

a Either, 1. of the City of Babylon, and then the river is Euphrates, here called rivers for its greatneſs, and by a common Enallage of the Plural for the Singular, as Tigris alſo is, Nah. 2. 6. yea and Jordan, Pſal. 74. 15. Or, 2. of the Territory of Babylon, in which there were many rivers, as Euphrates, which alſo was divided into ſeveral ſtreams or rivulets; and Tigris and others. Here they were either by the appointment of their Lords for the making or repairing of the works beſide the river: or by choice, retiring themſelves thither from the noiſe and obſervation of their enemies, as they had opportunity, that they might diſburden their oppreſſed minds before the Lord. b The uſual poſture of mourners, Ezra 9. 4, &c. Job 2. 12. Iſa. 47. 1, 5. c Either, 1. our former enjoyments in Zion, which greatly aggravated their preſent miſery, Lament. 1. 7. d Theſe are not without great probability ſuppoſed to be the words of ſome holy Levites, who had been acculſtomed to muſick, both vocal and inſtrumental, in the ſervice of the Temple. Harps are here put by a Synecdoche for all inſtruments of muſick. It is here put by a Synecdoche for all inſtruments of muſick. It is further to be obſerved, That although the harp was uſed by the Grecians in mourning, yet it was uſed by the Hebrews in rejoycing, as is manifeſt from Gen. 31. 27. 2 Chron. 20. 27, 28. Pſal. 43. 4, &c. This paſſage is to be underſtood either, 1. figuratively, ſignifying onely that they abandoned all ſigns and means of comfort: or rather, 2. properly, as the following ſongs are, which the Babylonians required them to ſing to their harps. And theſe harps they might either, 1. bring from Jeruſalem, which they might deſire to do to preſerve thoſe ſacred utenſils, and their enemies might either permit or command them to do for their own delight: or, 2. procure in Babylon, that they might ſometimes ſolace themſelves with the practice of ſome of the Temple-muſick, which they deſired and intended to do; but when they came to the tryal, they were not able to do it, and therefore laid them by. e Which commonly grow upon the banks of rivers as they did by Euphrates in ſuch plenty, that from thence it is called the brook of willows, Iſa. 15. 7.

PSAL. CXXXVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis is a Pſalm of thankſgiving to God for thoſe great deliverances which he had granted to David from Saul and other enemies. By the remembrance whereof David encourageth himſelf to truſt in God in all his future difficulties.

A Pſalm of David.

David praiſeth God for his Goodneſs and Truth ſhewed to him, and foretelleth, that the Kings of the Earth ſhall alſo praiſe him, 1———6. and profeſſeth the fruit of his truſting in God in the midſt of troubles, 7, 8.

1 I Will praiſe thee with my whole heart: * before the gods a will I ſing praiſe unto thee.

* Pſ. 119. 46.

a Either, 1. before the Angels, who were repreſented by the Cherubims upon the Ark, who are called Gods, Pſal. 8. 6. and 97. 7. Comp. with Heb. 1. 6. and 2. 7. who alſo are preſent in the congregations of Gods people, 1 Cor. 11. 10. Or rather, 2. before Kings and Princes, by comparing this with v. 4. All Kings (provoked by my example) ſhall praiſe thee; and with Pſal. 119. 46. I will ſpeak of thy teſtimonies before kings. And theſe are moſt commonly called Gods in Scripture, as Exod. 21. 6. and 22. 9, 28. comp. with Deut. 19. 17. Beſides, David mentions this as ſomething ſingular and extraordinary, and deſigned by him, whereas the doing of this before the Angels is common to all, and is unavoidably neceſſary.

2 I will worſhip towards thy holy temple b, and praiſe thy Name, for thy loving kindneſs and for thy truth: for thou haſt magnified thy word above all thy Name c.

b Where the Ark was. He ſaith towards it, becauſe he was not permitted to enter into it. c For thou haſt glorified thy word or promiſe or thy faithfulneſs in fulfilling thy promiſes unto me more than any other of thy glorious perfections by which thou art known. Not that one of Gods Attributes is really and in it ſelf more great or glorious than another, or can be made ſo, but becauſe one may be more celebrated and admired by men than another, as here Gods gracious promiſe made to David, and the wonderful accompliſhment thereof in ſpight of all thoſe difficulties which ſtood in the way, and which ſeemed to men to be inſuperable. was at this time more obſerved and admired than any other of his Attributes or actions. But here we muſt remember, that amongſt the reſt of the promiſes made to David, one was that the Meſſias ſhould come out of his loyns, and that thoſe parts of the promiſed mercies which David had actually received, were pledges to aſſure him that he ſhould receive the reſt in due time, and eſpecially that great and eminent word of promiſe concerning the Meſſias, which might well be ſaid to be magnified above all Gods name.

3 In the day when I cried, thou anſweredſt me: and ſtrengthenedſt me with ſtrength in my ſoul d.

d This laſt clauſe limits and explains the former, how God anſwered him ſo ſpeedily, not by giving him the thing which he deſired fired in that very instant, but by giving him inward support and patience to wait Gods time, and to bear all his troubles chearfully in the mean time, which was a singular mercy, and indeed greater than the actual donation of any temporal blessing.

4 All the kings of the earth e shall praise thee, O LORD, when they hear the words of thy mouth f.

e Either, 1. All neighbouring Kings: or, 2. the generality of Kings and Princes upon earth. And so this is a Prophecy of the calling of the Gentiles. Which seems to be confirmed by the next verse, which expresseth their extraordinary joy and an eminent advancement of Gods glory, which agrees much better to this great occasion, than to that of Davids exaltation to the Throne, wherein the other Kings of the earth were not much concerned. f Either, 1. thy promises declared unto them by me: or, 2. the Gospel preached among them.

5 Yea, they shall sing in the ways of the LORD g; for great is the glory of the LORD.

g Or, of, or, for or because of the ways of the Lord, (i. e.) his wonderful counsel and gracious providences towards themselves and others. h Or, great shall be. At that time the worship and glory of God shall not be confined to one small land as now it is, but shall be extended to all the parts of the world.

* Pf. 113. 6 * Though the LORD be high, yet † hath he 5, 6. Isa. 57. 15. † Heb. he seeth. * Jam. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 5. ‖ Or, and. * respect unto the lowly i; ‖ but the proud he knoweth afar off k.

i Unto such as are mean and obscure in the world; to me a poor contemptible shepherd, whom he hath preferred before great Princes, and to such as are little in their own eyes. k But as for the great men of the world, who are lifted up in pride, he looks upon them as they do upon others, with scorn and contempt, and at a great distance, as disdaining to admit them into his presence. But the words may be, and by divers Interpreters are rendred otherwise, And he who is high or the lofty one from afar (i. e. from his high and holy place, even the highest Heavens where he dwells, notwithstanding that distance) doth know them, or will owne them. So this is the repetition of the former sentence, as is very usual in this Book. And this seems best to suit as with the foregoing, so also with the following words, and thus all will be understood of one and the same sort of persons.

7 Though I walk in the midst of trouble l, thou wilt revive me m: thou shalt stretch forth thine hand n against the wrath of mine enemies o, and thy right hand shall save me.

l (i. e.) Be encompassed with dangers. m Thou wilt chear my spirit and preserve my life. n Put forth thy Almighty power. o To oppose and restrain their rage, and to save me from them, as it follows.

* Pf. 57. 2. Phil. 1. 6. ‖ Or, for me. 8 * The LORD will perfect that which ‖ concerneth me p: thy mercy, O LORD, endureth for ever q: forsake not r the works of thine own hands s.

p Will finish that great work of my deliverance and advancement, which he hath undertaken and carried on hitherto. q It is not inconstant and changeable, as mens affections are, but everlasting. And this may be either a proof of the foregoing assertion, the Lord will perfect, &c. or an argument to enforce the following petition, therefore forsake not, &c. r Or, leave not, or, do not desist from or give over. s The work of my salvation which is thus far advanced, not by any humane help, but by thine own extraordinary power, and providence, and therefore it is not for thine honour to desert it at last. This he calls works in regard of the many and various parts and actions which concurred to this work.

PSAL. CXXXIX.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm is esteemed by the Hebrews the most excellent in the whole Book. The matter of it is noble and sublime, and so is the style. The occasion of it seems to have been those heavy censures and reproaches wherewith David was loaded by his enemies, who branded him for a notorious hypocrite and impostor that pretended Religion onely for the covering and promoting his own ambitious and wicked designs against his lawful King, whose life and Crown he fought to take away. Against these he comforteth himself with the consideration of God Omnisicence, to whom he appeals as the onely proper Judge of the integrity of his heart.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

David magnifieth the All-seeing Providence of God, 1——16. His great and tender Mercies to him before he had a being in the world, 17, 18. abhorreth all converse with wicked men, 19—— 22. prayeth for, and testifieth his, Sincerity, 22, 24.

1 O LORD, thou hast searched me, and known me a.

2 Thou knowest my down-sitting, and mine uprising b; thou understandest my thought c afar off d.

a (i. e.) Knowest me exactly, as men do those things which they diligently search out. b All my postures and motions, my actions and my cessations from action. c All my secret counsels and designs. d Before they are perfectly formed in my mind. Thou knowest what my thoughts will be in such and such circumstances, long before I know it, yea from all eternity.

‖ Or, winnowest. 3 Thou ‖ compassest my path e, and my lying down f, and art acquainted with all my ways.

e Thou watchest me on every side, and therefore discernest every step which I take. It is a Metaphor either from huntsmen watching all the motions and lurking places of wild beasts, that they may catch them; or from Souldiers besieging their enemies in a City, and setting watches round about them. f Me when I lye down in my bed, where men oft contrive what they execute in the day time.

4 For there is not a word in my tongue, but lo, O LORD, thou knowest it altogether g.

g Thou knowest what I speak, and with what design and disposition of mind. Or rather, as others render it, and which is more admirable, When there is not a word, &c. Thou knowest what I intend to speak either in prayer to thee, or in conversation with men, when I have not yet uttered one word of it.

5 Thou hast beset me behind and before h, and laid thine hand upon me i.

h With thine all-seeing and all-disposing Providence. i Thou keepest me, as it were with a strong hand, in thy sight and under thy power.

6 * Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it k. * Pf. 131. 1.

k I am so far from equalling thy knowledge, that I cannot apprehend it, in what manner thou dost so perfectly know all things, even such as are most secret and have yet no being, and seem to depend upon many casualties and uncertainties.

7 * Whither shall I go from thy spirit l? or whither shall I flee from † thy presence m. * Jer. 23. 24. † Heb. thy face.

l Either, 1. from the Holy Ghost, the third Person in the Trinity: or, 2. from thee who art a Spirit, and therefore canst penetrate into the most secret parts: or, 3. from thy mind or understanding, of which he is here speaking, as this word seems to be taken, Isa. 40. 13. compared with Rom. 11. 34. for what there is called the Spirit of the Lord, is here called the mind of the Lord. And as the Spirit of God is oft used in Scripture for its gifts and graces, so the Spirit of God in this place may be put for that knowledge which is an Attribute or action of God, m A man can go to no place which is out of thy sight. So Gr.

Jer. 23. 24. 8 * If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell n, behold, thou art there. * Amos 9. 2, 3, 4. * Pf. 139. 11.

n If I should or could repose and hide my self in the grave or in the lowest parts of the earth, which are at the furthest distance from Heaven.

9 If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea o:

o If I should flee as swiftly from thy presence as the morning light doth, which in an instant scattereth it self from East to West: for the Sea being the Western border of Canaan, is oft put for the West in Scripture. And wings are Poetically ascribed to the morning or morning light here, as they are elsewhere to the Sun, as Mal. 4. 2. and to the winds, as Psal. 18. 11. and 104. 3. and to other things of eminent swiftness.

10 Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me p.

p I could neither go thither without thy conduct, nor subsist there without thy powerful support, and much less could I go out of thy sight; for a man may see many things which are out of his power.

11 If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light q about me.

q Shall be as clear and manifest to God as the light it self.

12 Yea, * the darkness † hideth not from thee; but the night shineth r as the day: † the darkness and the light are both alike to thee s. * Job 26. 6. Psal. 22. 24. † Heb. darkneth not. † Heb. both as the darkness, so is the light.

r Or, enlighteneth, as this word is used Psal. 19. 9. Prov. 29. 13, &c. discovereth me and all mine actions. s This is repeated so oft to reprove and confute the ridiculous conceits of many ungodly men, who flatter themselves with hopes of secrecy and impunity for those sins which they commit in the dark. See Isa. 29. 15.

13 For thou hast possessed t my reins u: thou hast covered me x in my mothers womb.

t Or, thou dost possess, thou dwellest in them, thou art the Owner and Governor of them, and therefore must needs know them. Or, thou hast formed, as some of the Ancients and others render it. u The most inward and hidden part of the body, supposed also to be the seat of mens lusts and passions. x Either, 1. with that covering called the after-birth, wherein the infant is wrapped and preserved in the womb by the wonderful care of Divine providence. Or, 2. with skin and flesh, as it is expressed Job. 10. 11.

14 I will praise thee, for † I am fearfully and wonderfully made y; marvellous are thy works z, and that my soul knoweth † right well a. † Heb. by dreadful things I am become wonderful. † Heb. greatly.

y Thy infinite power and wisdom manifested in the rare and curious structure of mans body, doth fill me with wonder and astonishment and with the dread of thy Majesty. z Both in the lesser world, man, and in the greater. a I am well assured both by thy word and by the contemplation and study of thy works, to which I have much addicted my self, that they are wonderful, although I do not so accurately understand all the particulars of them as I would do.

15 * My ‖ substance b was not hid from thee, when I was made in secret c; and curiously wrought d in the lowest parts of the earth e. * Job 10. 8, 10. Eccl. 11. 5. ‖ Or, strength, or body.

b Or, My bone, as the LXX and others render the word. And bone may be here taken collectively for bones, as is usual in such words, or for the whole fabrick of the bones. And the bones may be very fitly mentioned here, because they are inward and invisible, as being covered with skin and flesh and sinews. Or, the bones may be put Synecdochically for the whole body, as being the most substantial part of it, as they are Psal. 35. 10. c In the dark vault of my mothers womb. d Heb. embroidered, exquisitely composed of bones and muscles and sinews and veins and arteries and other parts, all framed with such wonderful skill, that even Heathens upon the contemplation of all the parts of mans body, and how excellently they they were framed both for beauty and use, have broken forth into pangs of admiration and adoration of the Creator of man, as Galen particularly did. e Or, as it were in the lowest parts of the earth. So there is onely an Ellipsis of the note of similitude, which is very frequent in Scripture, as hath been often said and proved. In a place as secret and remote from humane eyes, as the lowest parts of the earth are, to wit, in my mothers womb. And so what was said in the former clause is repeated in this in other words.

16 Thine eyes did see my substance yet being unperfect f, and in thy book g † all my members h were written, ‖ which in continuance were fashioned i, when as yet there was none of them k. † Heb. all them. ‖ Or, which in continuance were fashioned.

f When I was a meer Embryo, a rude and shapeless lump, when I was first conceived. g In thy counsel and providence, by which thou didst contrive and effect this great work and all the parts of it according to that model which thou hadst appointed. This is a Metaphor taken from workmen, who when they are to make some curious structure, they first draw a rude draught or delineation of it, by which they govern themselves in the building of it. h All the several parts of my substance. i Which in due time and by degrees were formed into bones, fleshy sinews, &c. Or, as it is in the margent, what days (and the days in which, they were or should be fashioned, by what steps, in what order and time each part of the body should receive its proper form. This also was written or appointed by God. k Heb. and not one of them, understand either year, as it is in our Translation; or, was lacking, to wit, in thy book. All my parts without exception were written by thee. But then these words are not to be joyned with those immediately foregoing, but with the former, and the words are to be read thus, in thy book all my members were written (which in continuance were fashioned) when as yet, &c. For. Or, what one they shall be viz. Heb. all days.

* Pf. 40. 5. 17 * How precious also are thy thoughts l unto me, O God! how great is the summe of them m!

l Toy is taken either, 1. passively, my thoughts of thee: or rather, 2. actively, thy thoughts, counsels or contrivances on my behalf, which are admirable and amiable in mine eyes. Thou didst not only form me at first, but ever since my conception and birth thy thoughts have been employed for me in preserving and providing for me and blessing of me. m Thy gracious designs and providences towards me are numberless, as it follows.

18 If I should count them, they are more in number than the sand: when I awake, I am still with thee n.

n To wit, by my thoughts and meditations. Thy wonderful counsels and works on my behalf come constantly into my mind, not only in the day time, but even in the night season, which is commonly devoted to rest and sleep, whensoever I awake either in the night or in the morning: These are my last thoughts when I lye down, and my first when I rise.

19 Surely thou wilt slay the wicked o. O God: depart from me therefore p, ye bloody men q.

o And as thou hast precious and gracious thoughts towards me and all that love and fear thee, so thou hast other kinds of thoughts and purposes towards wicked men, such as thou knowest mine enemies to be, even to destroy them utterly. p I renounce your friendship and society. I will not partake with you in your sins, lest I should also partake of your plagues. q Heb. ye men of blood, either, 1. passively, deserving death, or guilty of blood or of death, as the phrase is, Numb. 35. 27, 31. Mat. 25. 66. Or rather, 2. actively, bloody-thirsty, or shedders of blood, as this phrase is generally taken, as 2 Sam. 16. 8. Psal. 25. 9. & 55. 24. & 59. 3. Having called them wicked men in general, he now gives a particular account of their wickednesse, they were unjust and cruel towards men, and withal profane and impious towards God, as he tells us in the next verse.

20 For they † speak against thee wickedly r, and thine enemies take thy Name in vain s. † Heb. speak of thee for a wicked device, and thine enemies lift up themselves in vain.

r By profane scoffs, and a profession of denial or contempt of thine Omniscience and Providence. Or, they speak of thee in or unto wickedness, they make use of Religion to cover or further their wicked designs. But our Translation is more favoured by the Context, which speaks of Gods open and professed enemies. s Or, according to the order of the Hebrew words, and take thy Name in vain, and are thine enemies, or haters of thee, as it follows v. 20. These words, thy Name, are understood here, as also Isa. 3. 7. out of Exod. 20. 7. where they are expressed. They abuse thy blessed Name with hellish oaths and perjuries and blasphemies.

21 Do not I hate them, O LORD, that hate thee t? and am I not grieved with those that rise up against thee u?

t I appeal to thee the omnipresent and omniscient God, whether I do not perfectly hate them so far as they are enemies to God and goodness. u In open hostility and rebellion against thine Authority.

22 I hate them with perfect hatred: I count them mine enemies x.

x I am no less grieved with their enmity against thee than if they directed it against my self.

* Job 31. 4. Pf. 26. 2. 23 * Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts y.

y And whether I do not speak this from my very heart, do thou judge who art the searcher of hearts, and deal with me accordingly.

† Heb. way of pain, or, grief. * Pf. 5. 8. & 143. 10. 24 And see it there be any † wicked way in me z, and * lead me in the way everlasting a.

z Heb. Way of trouble or grief, any course of life which is grievous, either, 1. to my self, as all sin is to the sinner sooner or later: or, 2. to others; as I am accused of causing much trouble and designing mischief to the King and Kingdom. a In the right and good way, which is lasting and leads to everlasting life, whereas the way of wickedness, to which this is opposed, will perish, as is said Psal. 1. 6. and bring men into utter destruction. Or, as others render it, in the old way, which is the good way, as it is called Jer. 6. 16. in the way of righteousness and holiness, which may well be called the old way, because it was from the beginning of the world written in mans heart, whereas wickedness is of a later date. Possibly it may be rendred, in thy way (the Ellipsis of the Pronoun being very frequent, as hath been noted and proved before: or in the way, to wit, the way of God, which is oft called emphatically the way, as Psal. 25. 8. & 119. 1. Prov. 23. 19. & 29. 27. and which is sufficiently understood from its opposition to the wicked way in the former clause) for ever, or, as long as I live; as this Hebrew word Olam without any prefix to it is used, 2 Sam. 27. 12. Job 41. 4. Psal. 21. 4, & 45. 7. and elsewhere. But this with submission.

PSALM CXL.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm was composed by David upon occasion of those slanderous and reproachful speeches and treacherous dealings which David had from his enemies in Sauls time, of which we have an account in the history.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

The Psalmist prayeth for deliverance and safety from wicked men, 1—7. for judgment upon them, 8—11. and Comforteth himself with an assurance of God's righteousness, 12, 13.

1 Deliver me, O LORD, from the evil man a: preserve me from the † violent man. † Heb. man of violences.

a Either Saul or Doeg or some other malicious enemy, or rather man of violences the word man being taken collectively for men, as appears from the next verse, where he speaks of this man in the Plural number.

2 Which imagines mischiefs in their heart: continually are they gathered together for war b.

b To execute those bloody enterprises which they had devised in the first clause of this verse.

3 They have sharpned their tongues c like a serpent d; * adders poison is under their lips. * Pf. 58. 4. Rom. 3. 13.

c Their malicious hearts stirred up their tongues to utter vile slanders against me. d Either whetting their tongues as serpents are said to whet theirs when they about to bite: or rather, using words as sharp and piercing as the sting of a serpent.

4 Keep me, O LORD, from the hands of the wicked; preserve me from the violent man, who have purposed e to overthrow my goings f.

e Whose design and full resolution it is, if thou dost not prevent it. f Or, my feet or footsteps, i. e. to throw me down to the ground, to defeat all my hopes and counsels, and bring me to ruine.

5 * The proud g have hid a snare for me, and cords; they have spread a net by the way † side h: they have set grins for me. Selah. * Pf. 35. 7. & 57. 6. & 141. 9. Jer. 18. 23. † Heb. hand.

g My insolent enemies who despise me for my meanness, and exalt themselves against thee. h In which I used to walk.

6 I said unto the LORD, Thou art my God: hear the voice of my supplications, O LORD.

7 O GOD the Lord, the strength of my salvation; thou hast covered my head i in the day of battel.

i With thy powerful protection as with a helmet or shield.

8 Grant not, O LORD, the desires of the wicked; further not his wicked device k, ‖ * lest they exalt themselves. Selah. ‖ Or, let them not be exalted. * Deut. 32. 27.

k Which is to destroy me. l. Not onely against me, but against thee also, as if by their power and policy they had frustrated thy design and promise made to me.

9 As for the head m of those that compass me about, * let the mischief of their own lips cover them n. * Pf. 7. 16. & 94. 23. Prov. 12. 13. & 18. 7.

m Or, heads, the Singular number put for the Plural, as is frequent. By which he understands either, 1. their politick heads, their chiefs or ring-leaders, who were most malicious, and by whom all the rest were supported and stirred up: or, 2. their proper and natural heads, as this word is used v. 7. and this covering of their heads here is opposed to that covering of Davids head there. n Let the mischief which by their Calumnies they design against me, fall upon themselves.

10 * Let burning coals o fall upon them, let them be cast into the fire: into deep pits, that they rise not up again p. * Pf. 11. 6.

o Divine vengeance, which is compared to coals of fire, as Psal. 18. 12. and elsewhere. p Either to my danger, or their own comfort.

11 Let not † ‖ an evil speaker q be established in the earth: evil r shall hunt the violent man to overthrow him. † Heb. a man of tongue. ‖ Or, an evil speaker, a wicked man of violences in the earth: let him be hunted to his overthrow.

q Such as slander me and other innocent persons, to exasperate Princes against us. r Either the evil of punishment, or, which comes to the same thing, the evil of sin, their own wickedness, which shall recoil upon themselves.

12 I know s that the LORD will maintain the cause of the afflicted, and the right of the poor. s Both by Gods word which hath promised it, and by my own experience of it in the course of Gods providence.

13 Surely the righteous shall give thanks unto thy Name: the upright shall dwell in thy presence u. t Shall have occasion to praise thee for their deliverance. u Shall constantly enjoy thy gracious and powerful presence and assistance.

PSAL. CXLI.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm alſo muſt be referred to the time of Davids perſecution by Saul. It is an humble prayer that God would deliver him from the rage and malice of his enemies, and from thoſe ſins to which he might be inclined or provoked upon that occaſion.

A Pſalm of David.

David prayeth that he might be heard and Comforted, 1—2. that his ſervice might be ſincere, 3—6. and his Life ſafe from the ſnares of his Adverſaries, 7——10.

1 LORD, I cry unto thee, make haſte unto me, give ear unto my voice, when I cry unto thee.

† Heb. directed. 2 Let my prayer be † ſet forth before thee a as incenſe b; and the lifting up of my hands c as the evening ſacrifice d.

a Heb. Be directed to thy face. Let it not be loſt, but let it come unto thee and find audience. b Owned and accepted by thee no leſs than the incenſe, which by thy command, Exod. 30. 7, &c. is offered upon thine Altar, from which I am now baniſhed and ſo diſenabled to offer it there, and therefore I truſt thou will accept my prayer inſtead of it. c My prayer made with hands lifted up, which was the uſual geſture. See Job 11. 13. Pſal. 63. 5. & 88 10, &c. d Which was offered every evening, Exod. 29. 39, &c. Which he mentions either, 1. by way of oppoſition to the incenſe which was offered in the morning: or, 2. Synecdochically, ſo as to include the morning-ſacrifice and all the ſacrifices of the day, of which this was the cloſe; ſuch Senecdoches being moſt frequent, as hath been already obſerved: or, 3. becauſe the evening-ſacrifice was more ſolemn than the morning, and was attended with more company and more prayers, whence the ninth hour, which was the time of this ſacrifice, is called the hour of prayer, Acts 3. 1.

3 Set a watch, O LORD, before my mouth e; keep the door of my lips f.

e That I may not through mine own infirmity and the great provocations of mine enemies, break forth into any unadviſed ſpeeches, or any expreſſions of impatience or diſtruſt or envy or malice, &c. f My lips which are the door of my mouth whence words come forth.

4 Incline not g my heart h to any evil thing, to practiſe wicked works with men that work iniquity i: and let me not eat of their dainties k.

g Suffer it not to be inclined or led aſide, either by my own errours or luſts, or by the temptations of the world or of the Devil. Thus God is frequently ſaid to harden mens hearts not poſitively, for he can do no evil, nor tempt any man to it, Jam. 1. 13. but privatively, by denying ſoftning grace. h Keep me not onely from wicked ſpeeches, v. 3. but from all evil motions of my heart, which otherwiſe will draw me to many evil ſpeeches and actions. i Either, 1. to joyn with them in their ſinful courſes: or, 2. to do wickedly as they do. k Let me never enjoy or deſire worldly comforts upon ſuch terms as they do, to wit, with Gods wrath and curſe, as inſtruments of wickedneſs, and of my own eternal deſtruction. My afflictions are more deſirable than ſuch proſperity. Let none of their ſweet morſels, the pleaſures or advantages which they gain by their wickedneſs, tempt me to approve of or imitate their ways.

5 *‖ Let the righteous ſmite me l, it ſhall be a kindneſs m; and let him reprove me, it ſhall be an excellent oil n, which ſhall not break my head o: for yet my prayer alſo ſhall be in their calamities p.

* Pro. 9. 8. ‖ Or, let the righteous ſmite me kindly, and reprove me; let not their precious oil break my head, &c.

l To wit, with his tongue by reproofs as, the next clauſe explains it, which are called wounds, Prov. 27. 6. As I pray unto thee that thou wouldeſt keep me from ſinful practices, ſo I beg it of all juſt men, that if I do tranſgreſs, or if, by the arts and ſlanders of mine enemies, any of them are made to believe that I am guilty of evil deſigns againſt Saul, or of any other wickedneſs, that they would freely admoniſh and reprove me for it. And their reproofs ſhall pleaſe me better than the dainties of the wicked laſt mentioned, v. 4. m I ſhall be ſo far from being offended with it as an enmity or ill will, as they may ſuſpect, that I ſhall eſteem it an act and ſign of true friendſhip. n Or, it ſhall be as the oil of the head, as it is in the Hebrew, (i. e.) which is poured upon the head, as the manner was in great feaſts and ſolemnities. o Not hurt or diſturb it, but on the contrary, ſhall heal and greatly refreſh and delight it. Which is here underſtood by a known figure called Meioſis, whereby more is intended than is expreſſed, as Prov. 17. 21. and oft elſewhere. p Either, 1. in the calamities of thoſe righteous perſons who reproved and cenſured him. So this is an evidence of what he laſt ſaid, that he ſhould take their reproofs for a kindneſs, becauſe when they came into ſuch calamities as thoſe wherein he was involved, as all righteous men muſt expect ſufferings at one time or other, he would not inſult over them nor cenſure them, but pity them and pray for them: or, 2. in the calamities of his enemies, of which he ſpeaks in the next words. And ſo this may be added as a reaſon why he did ſo freely offer himſelf to the righteous to be reproved by them, if he or his cauſe were ſo bad as his enemies made them, becauſe he was well aſſured that he was ſincere and his cauſe good, and that God would bring him out of all his calamities, and bring his enemies into ſuch calamities, that they ſhould need and deſire his prayers, which alſo he would willingly grant to them; and then all good men would be fully ſatisfied of the juſtice of his perſon and cauſe.

6 When their judges q are overthrown r in ſtony places s, they ſhall hear my words, for they are ſweet t.

q The chief of mine enemies, their Governors Civil and Military. r Or, ſhall be overthrown, or caſt down headlong by thine exemplary vengeance. Or, as others, were left free, unhurt by me, when it was in my power to deſtroy them: of which ſee 1 Sam. 24. & 26. to which hiſtories this place is by divers learned Interpreters thought to allude. And then by their Judges he means Saul, although he thought not fit diſtinctly to mention him, but onely to intimate him in an obſcure and general way. s Heb. in the hands or by the ſides of the rock. Which may relate either, 1. to the rocky nature of thoſe places in which Saul fell into Davids hands. See 1 Sam. 24. 2. or, 2. to the ancient manner of puniſhing malefactors, which was by throwing them down from the tops of rocks: of which ſee 2 Chron. 25. 12. or, 3. to aggravate their overthrow; for falls in ſtony places are as moſt eaſie and frequent, ſo alſo moſt miſchievous. t Then they, either the Judges, who will be wiſe too late; or the people ſpared by my favour, when others were overthrown and warned by that fearful example, will hear my words, (i e.) hearken to my counſels and offers which now they deſpiſe, and then they, my words, will be ſweet and acceptable to them, which now they reject. Others thus, then they did hear my words that they were ſweet, then they acknowledged that my words and carriage towards Saul were full of meekneſs and gentleneſs, and that I was not ſo falſe and malicious, as they had repreſented me to be.

7 Our bones u are ſcattered at the graves mouth x, as when one cutteth and cleaveth wood upon the earth y.

u My bones and the bones of my friends and followers. Our ſkin and fleſh is in a manner conſumed, and there is nothing left of us but a company of dead and dry bones. Whereby he intimates that their condition was deſperate. Comp. Ezek. 37. 11. x Either, 1. literally and properly. So barbarouſly cruel were our enemies, that they not only killed us, but left our carkaſſes unburied, by which means our fleſh and ſinews, &c. were conſumed or torn in pieces by wild beaſts, and our bones diſperſed upon the face of the Earth, our common grave: or, if any of my followers were dead and buried, they pulled their bones out of the grave, and ſcattered them about: or rather, 2. Metaphorically. So the ſence is, Our caſe is almoſt as hopeleſs as of thoſe who are dead, and whoſe bones are ſcattered in ſeveral places. y As much neglected and deſpiſed by them as the chips which a Carpenter makes when he is cutting wood, which he will not ſtoop to take up. Or rather, as the LXX. and Chaldee and Syriack underſtand it, and as it is in the Hebrew, as when one (to wit, the husbandman) cutteth and cleaveth the earth or in the earth; which he teareth without any mercy.

8 But mine eyes are unto thee, O GOD the Lord: † in thee is my truſt, † leave not my ſoul deſtitute z.

† Heb. make not my ſoul bare, or, naked.

z Or, naked, as this word ſignifies Pſal. 137. 7. and as Aaron is ſaid to have made the people naked, Exod. 32. 25. (i.e.) deprived of thy favour and protection. Or, do not pour out my ſoul, to wit, unto death, as this word is uſed, Iſa. 53. 12.

2 Cor. 5. 2, 3.

9 Keep me from * the ſnare which they have laid for me, and the grins of the workers of iniquity.

* Pſ. 140. 5 & 142. 3.

10 Let the wicked fall into their own nets a, whilſt that I withal b † eſcape.

a Heb. Into his nets, either into Gods nets, the Relative being put without the Antecedent, as is uſual in ſuch caſes, where it is eaſily underſtood. Or, each into his own nets, to wit, the miſchiefs which he deſigns againſt me. b Or, together, to wit, with my followers: or, in like manner, as I have done formerly. But this word may ſeem to be more fitly joyned to the foregoing clauſe, to which it is next placed in the Hebrew, and the verſe may be and is by divers both ancient and later Tranſlators, thus rendred, Let the wicked fall. (Or, The wicked ſhall fall) into their own nets together, (altogether, or alike, one as well as another, Saul himſelf not excepted, whom though I dare not deſtroy, God will judge) whilſt that I eſcape, am preſerved from that common calamity in which mine enemies ſhall periſh. Which was verified by the event. For David was ſtrangely kept out of harms way when Saul and others of Davids enemies were cut off by the Philiſtins, 1 Sam. 31.

PSAL. CXLII.

‖ Maſchil of David; a prayer when he was in the cave a.

Or, A Pſalm of David giving inſtruction.

a Either that of Adullam, 1 Sam. 22. or that of Engedi, 1 Sam. 24. There he meditated this Pſalm, which afterwards he more accurately compoſed and committed to writing.

David, finding help no where in his ſtraits and affidlions, 1—4. crieth and comforteth himſelf in prayer to God. 11. 12.

1 I Cried unto the LORD with my voice b: with my voice unto the LORD did I make my ſupplication.

b Either, 1. with the voice of my ſoul. But ſo this addition would be ſuperfluous, and much more the repetition of it, becauſe that is neceſſarily implied in the former word, I cried, and in the following, I make my ſupplication. Or rather, 2. with my corporeal voice, which the fervor of my ſoul forced me to uſe, when I could not do it without ſome danger, the enemy being at the mouth of the cave. And ſo this addition is emphatical, and therefore is repeated. But it is probable that David ſpoke with a low voice, (as I that he might do ſo without very great danger, is manifeſt from that diſcourſe which paſſed between David and his men, even when Saul was entred into the cave, 1 Sam. 24. 4. & 5. 7.

2 I * poured out c my complaint before him: I ſhewed before him my trouble.

* Pſ. 102. tit.

c I did it fully and fervently and confidently.

3 When my my ſpirit was overwhelmed within me, * Pſ. 140. then thou kneweſt d my path e: * in the way wherein I walked f have they privily laid a ſnare for me.

d To wit, practically, ſo as to direct me to it. e What paths I ſhould chuſe whereby I might eſcape Saul, when I fled hither and thither in deſarts and mountains and woods; and which way I ſhould get out of his hands when he and all his men were at the caves caves mouth, which paſſed my skill. f Wherein I uſed to walk, or they ſuppoſed that I would walk.

Or, look on my right hand and ſeek me, but there was no man h that would know me i; refuge † failed me: ‖ no man cared for my ſoul k.

g The place where the Patron or Aſſiſtant uſed to ſtand. See Pſal. 16. 8. & 109. 31. & 121. 5. h To wit, in Sauls Court or Camp: none of my former aquaintance and friends and relations. i Own me, or ſhew any reſpect or kindneſs to me. k Or, for my life, to wit, to preſerve it; but they all conſpired to take it away; which is here implied.

5 I cried unto thee, O LORD, I ſaid, Thou art my refuge, and * my portion l in the land of the living m.

* Pſ. 16. 5. l Thou onely art both my refuge to defend me from all evil, and my portion to ſupply me with all the good which I need and deſire. 26. my portion

m Even in this life, wherein I doubt not to ſee Gods goodneſs, as he ſaid Pſal. 27. 13.

6 Attend unto my cry, for I am brought very low: deliver me from my perſecutors, for they are ſtronger than I.

7 Bring my ſoul out of priſon n, that I may praiſe thy Name: the righteous ſhall compaſs me about o: for thou ſhalt deal bountifully with me.

n Bring me safe out of this cave wherein I am impriſoned, and ſet me at perfect liberty. o Shall flock to me from all parts, partly out of curioſity to ſee ſuch a ſpectacle and miracle of Gods power and mercy; and partly to rejoyce and bleſs God with me and for me, and for all the benefits which they expect from my government.

PSAL. CXLIII.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm is much of the ſame nature with the former, and ſeems to have been compoſed much about the ſame time and upon the like occaſion. This is the laſt of thoſe which are called Penitential Pſalms, the former being Pſal. 6. & 32. & 38. & 51. & 102. & 130.

A Pſalm of David.

The Pſalmiſt prayeth that God in faithfulneſs would hear him, and not enter into Judgment with him, 1, 2. Complaineth of his perſecuting enemies, 3, 4, praying alſo for ſpeedy deliverance: Inſtructions in Gods wayes, and the deſtruction of his Enemies, 5——12.

1 HEar my prayer, O LORD, give ear to my ſupplications; in thy faithfulneſs anſwer me, and in thy righteouſneſs a.

a Whereby thou art inclined and engaged to favour righteous perſons and juſt cauſes.

Or, but. 2 ‖ And enter not into judgment with thy ſervant b: for * in thy ſight ſhall no man living be juſtified c.

* Exod. 34. 7. Pſal. 130. 3. Rom. 3. 20. Gal. 2. 16.

b But when I appeal to thy righteouſneſs, I do it onely with reſpect to mine enemies, whoſe cauſe as well as their perſons is worſe than mine, but not in reference to thee, as if I could abſolutely juſtifie my ſelf upon a ſevere tryal at the Tribunal of thy Juſtice; for if thou ſhouldeſt rigorouſly examine all the paſſages of mine heart and life, I dread the thoughts and conſequences of it. c To wit, upon terms of ſtrict juſtice, without thy indulgence and infinite mercy.

d This is not a reaſon of what he laſt ſaid, v. 2. but an argument to enforce his petition delivered v. 1. and repeated v. 7, &c. For though I am not faultleſs, if thou ſhouldeſt make an exact ſearch into me, yet mine enemies are more culpable and highly unjuſt, and therefore I hope for thy help againſt them, from thy juſtice as well as mercy. e (i. e.) My life; for nothing leſs will ſatisfie him. f He hath beaten me down to the ground where I lie ſtruggling for life. g He hath forced me to have mine abode in dark vaults and caves. h Where I am out of ſight and memory, and in as forlorn and hopeleſs a condition in the eye of man, as thoſe that have lain long rotting in the grave.

4 Therefore is my ſpirit overwhelmed within me i: my heart within me is diſolate k.

i See on Pſal. 61. 2. & 142. 3. k Deprived of all hope and comfort. Or, is aſtoniſhed.

Pſal 77. 5, 11. 5 I * remember the days of old l, I meditate on all thy works: I muſe on the works of thy hands.

l (i. e.) What thou haſt done for thy ſervants in former times, Which he mentions either, 1. as matter of terror to conſider how unlike God now was unto himſelf and to his former dealings: or, 2. as matter of ſupport from former experience, becauſe God was ſtill the ſame. Either way it drive him to his prayers, which here follow.

* Pſ. 63. 1. 6 I ſtretch forth my hands unto thee m: * my ſoul thirſteth after thee n, as a thirſty land o. Selah.

m I pray to thee fervently. See on Pſal. 141. 2. n After thy favour and help. o To wit, thirſteth for rain.

* Pſ. 28. 1. 7 Hear me ſpeedily, O LORD, my ſpirit faileth: ‖ Or, for I become &c. hide not thy face from me *, ‖ leſt I be like unto them that go down into the pit p.

p That are dead and buried, of whom there is no hope.

8 Cauſe me to hear thy loving kindneſs in the morning q, for in thee do I truſt: cauſe me to know * Pſ. 25. 1. the way wherein I ſhould walk r, for * I lift up my ſoul unto thee.

q (i. e.) Early; as this phraſe is taken, Pſal. 90. 14. and elſewhere; ſeaſonably and ſpeedily. r So as to pleaſe thee, and to ſecure my ſelf.

9 Deliver me, O LORD, from mine enemies: I † flee unto thee to hide me s.

s Without whoſe care theſe caves and rocks can give me no protection.

10 * Teach me to do thy will t, for thou art my God: * thy ſpirit is good, lead me u into the land of uprightneſs x.

* Pſal. 25. 4, 5. & 139. 24.

t To continue in faithful obedience to thee, notwithſtanding all temptations to the contrary. u Or rather, as it is exactly in the Hebrew, and as many both ancient and modern Tranſlators render it, Let thy good Spirit lead me. Leave me not to my own blind and vain mind or corrupt affections, neither give up to the evil Spirit, as thou didſt Saul, but conduct me in all my ways by thy good, (i. e.) gracious and holy Spirit. x Or, in plain or even land or ground, in a ſtraight and ſmooth path, that I may not ſtumble nor fall either into ſin or miſchief. This is oppoſed to the crooked and rugged ways in which ſinners are ſaid to walk. See Pſal. 125. 5. Prov. 2. 15. Iſa. 40. 4.

11 Quicken me, O LORD, for thy Names ſake: for thy righteouſneſs ſake bring my ſoul out of trouble.

12 And of thy mercy † cut off mine enemies, and * deſtroy all them that afflict my ſoul: for * I am thy ſervant.

* Pſal. 116. 16.

† Out of thy mercy to me, whoſe life they ſeek.

PSAL. CXLIV.

The ARGUMENT.

THe matter of this Pſalm is partly gratulatory for mercies received, and partly petitionary for further bleſſings. It ſeems to have been compoſed after Sauls death, and in the beginning of Davids reign, when he was expoſed to many perils both from his own rebellious Subjects, and from the Philiſtins and other forcign enemies, yet ſo that he had a good proſpect and aſſurance of a more compleat and eſtabliſhed felicity.

A Pſalm of David.

David bleſſing God for his mercy to him in his Wars, and Government, Confeſſeth his own, and man's nothingneſs, 1—4. prayeth that he would deliver him from his powerful Enemies, 5—8. and promiſeth to praiſe him, 5—11. The happineſs of that Kingdom, whoſe God is the Lord, 12—15.

1 BLeſſed be the LORD † my ſtrength, * which teacheth my hands † to war, and my fingers to fight a.

† Heb. my rock. * Sam. 22. 35. † Heb. to the war, &c.

a Who haſt given me that skill in military conduct, and that dexterity in the management of my weapons, which was wholly unſuitable to and much above my education and former courſe of life.

2 * ‖ My goodneſs b and my fortreſs, my high tower and my deliver, my ſhield, and he in whom I truſt: who ſubdueth my people under me c.

* 2 Sam. 22. 2, 3. 40. 48. ‖ Or, my mercy.

b Or, my mercy: or, the God of my mercy, as God is called Pſal. 59. 10, 17. the Name of God being eaſily underſtood from the foregoing verſe. Or, he who is exceeding good or merciful to me, as good as goodneſs it ſelf: the abſtract being put for the concrete, as it is frequently in ſpeeches of God, who is called Wiſdom, Truth, Goodneſs, &c. and ſometimes of men, as Pſal. 12. 2. Prov. 10. 29. where faithfulneſs and uprightneſs are put for faithful and upright men. c Who haſt diſpoſed my peoples hearts to receive and obey me as their King.

3 * LORD, what is man d, that thou takeſt knowledge of him e! or the ſon of man, that thou makeſt account of him f?

* Job 7. 17. Pſal. 8. 4. Heb. 2. 6.

d He aggravates Gods goodneſs to him expreſſed v. 2. by the conſideration of his own meanneſs. Though I am King over my people, yet alas I am but a man, a baſe, ſinful, mortal and miſerable creature, if compared with thee, leſs than nothing and vanity. e (i. e.) Haſt any care and kindneſs for him, as words of knowledge commonly imply in Scripture. f The ſame thing repeated in other words.

4 * Man is like g to vanity h: his days are as a ſhadow that paſſeth away i.

* Job 14. 2.

g In his nature and continuance in the world. h Or, to a vapor or a breath, as Iſa. 57. 13. which is gone in an inſtant. i Or, declineth, as Pſal. 102. 11. & 109. 23. that groweth leſs and leſs till it be quite out of ſight and loſt.

Pſal 77. 5, 11. 5 * Bow thy heaveus, O LORD, and come down k: * touch the mountains, and they ſhall ſmoke l.

* Pſ. 18. 9. * Pſal. 104. 32.

k To help me, before it be too late, remembring what a frail and periſhing creature I am. l Or, that they may ſmoke: or, and let them ſmoke, as Sinai did at thy glorious appearance, Exod. 19. 18. This is figurative and Poetical deſcription of Gods coming to take vengeance upon his enemies, which is continued in the next verſe.

6 * Caſt forth lightning, and ſcatter them: ſhoot out thine arrows m, and deſtroy them.

* Pſal. 18. 13, 14.

m Thy thunderbolts which oft accompany the lightnings and thunder.

7 * Send thine † hand from above, rid me, and deliver me out of great waters: from the hand of ſtrange children n.

* Pſal. 18. 16. † Heb. hands.

n Either of the Heathen nations which envy and hate me: or of the rebellious Iſraelities, who, though they profeſs themſelves to be the Lords people, yet in truth and for their carriage to me are like the barbarous Heathens.

8 Whose mouth speaketh vanity o: and their right hand p is a right hand of falſhood q.

o Either, 1. vain brags and threatnings which ſhall come to nothing: or, 2. vain and deceitful promiſes or profeſſions of friendſhip. p Here mentioned either, 1. as it is uſed in ſwearing, to note their perjury: or rather, 2. as an inſtrument of action. q Deceiving either, 1. themſelves, by being unable to do what they deſigned: or, 2. others, by not giving them that help which they promiſed to them.

* Pſal. 33. 2, 3. 9 I will * ſing a new ſong unto thee r, O God: upon a pſaltery, and an inſtrument of ten ſtrings will I ſing praiſes unto thee.

r When thou haſt granted this requeſt of mine, v. 7, 8. which I know aſſuredly thou wilt do.

‖ Or, viſitory. 10 It is he that giveth ‖ ſalvation unto kings s: who delivereth David his ſervant from the hurtful ſword.

s Who are not preſerved by their own power or prudence, but by Gods ſpecial providence, which for the publick good of the world watcheth over them.

11 Rid me, and deliver me from the hand of ſtrange children t; whoſe mouth ſpeaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falſhood.

t And upon theſe accounts grant me the mercy which I deſired before, and now again do repeat.

12 That our ſons may be as plants grown up in their youth u; that our daughters x may be as corner-ſtones † Heb. cut. † poliſhed after the ſimilitude of a palace y.

u This mercy I beg not only for my own ſake, but for the ſake of thy people, that thine and our enemies being ſubdued, and peace eſtabliſhed in the land, thy people may enjoy thoſe bleſſings which thou haſt promiſed to them; and particularly, that our ſons, which are the ſtrength and ſafety and hopes of a nation, may be like plants, flouriſhing and thriving and growing in height and ſtrength, as plants do in their youth, and they only; for when they grow old, they whither and decay. x Upon whom the hope of poſterity depends. y Strong and beautiful, and adorned with all the ornaments belonging to their ſex.

† Heb. from kind to kind. 13 That our garners may be full, affording † all manner of ſtore: that our ſheep may bring forth thouſands, and ten thouſands in our ſtreets z.

z So as they may fill our ſtreets, being brought in thither for food to the Towns and Cities. Or, in our folds or ſtables, as the Chaldee and others render it; or, as the LXX. and others, in their (or rather, in our, as it is in the Hebrew) outlets or outgoings, (i. e.) in the fields where they abide.

† Heb. able to bear burdens, or, loaden with fleſh. 14 That our oxen may be † ſtrong to labour a: that there be no breaking in b, nor going out c: that there be no complaining d in our ſtreets.

a Heb. laden, either with fleſh and fat, as many underſtand it: or, as others, with young: but then the foregoing word is not to be rendred oxen, but cows, as the ſame word and in the ſame Maſculine gender is uſed Deut. 7. 13. And ſo this agrees beſt with the former prayer for the ſheep v. 13. and he wiſheth the ſame bleſſing of fruitfulneſs both for greater and ſmaller cattel. b To wit, of enemies invading the Land, or aſſaulting our Cities, and making breaches in their walls. c To wit, of our people, either out of the Towns and Cities to fight with an invading enemy: or out of the Land into captivity. d Or, no outcry, or howling for any ſad tidings, or publick grievances or calamities.

* Pſal. 33. 12. & 65. 4. 15 * Happy is that people that is in ſuch a caſe: yea, happy is that people, whoſe God is the LORD e.

e This is a correction of the laſt ſentence. This is a very deſirable eſtate, but the true and chief happineſs of our Iſrael doth not conſiſt in theſe things, which are common to others with us, but in this peculiar priviledge that the true and bleſſed God is our God by covenant and ſpecial relation.

PSAL. CXLV.
The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm and the reſt which follow to the end are wholly laudatory, ſetting forth the praiſes of God. The excellency of this Pſalm appears not onely from the opinion of the Hebrew Writers, but alſo from the care which the Pſalmiſt took to digeſt it into ſuch accurate and alphabetical order, that it might be more eaſily fixed in the mind and memory of the reader.

Davids Pſalm of praiſe.

David Magnifieth God for his greatneſs, and terrible Acts, 1—7. for his goodneſs and everlaſting Kingdom, 8——13. for his care and providence over all, 14—16. and for his ſaving mercies to them that fear him. 17——21.

‖ Or, the king. Compare Jer. 38. 9. 1 I Will extol thee my God ‖ O King a, and I will bleſs thy Name for ever and ever.

a Or, the King, by way of eminency; the King of kings, the God by whom Kings reign, and to whom I and all other Kings owe ſubjection and obedience.

2 Every day will I bleſs thee, and I will praiſe thy Name for ever and ever.

† Heb. and of his greatneſs. there is no ſearch. * Job 5. 9. & 9. 10. 3 Great is the LORD, and greatly to be praiſed; † and * his greatneſs b is unſearchable.

b In his Being, Majeſty and Glory, and all Perfections.

4 One generation ſhall praiſe thy works to another c, and ſhall declare thy mighty acts.

c The people that live in one age ſhall relate them to their poſterity, and ſo ſucceſſively in all ages.

† Heb. things, or, words. 5 I will ſpeak of the glorious honour of thy majeſty d, and of thy wondrous † works.

d Here are divers words heaped together to intimate that no words were ſufficient to expreſs it.

6 And men ſhall ſpeak of the might of thy terrible acts: † Heb. declare its and I will † declare thy greatneſs. † Heb. pour out.

7 They ſhall ‖ abundantly utter the memory of thy great goodneſs e, and ſhall ſing of thy righteouſneſs.

e The memorials of thy kindneſs to thy people, thy never to be forgotten bleſſings.

* Exod. 34. 6, 7. Numb. 14. 18. Pſal. 86. 5. & 103. 8. Heb. great in mercy. 8 * The LORD is gracious and full of compaſſion; † ſlow to anger, and † of great mercy.

9 The LORD is good to all f, and his tender mercies are over all his works.

f Not to Iſrael onely, but to all mankind, whoſe hearts he fills with food and gladneſs, as it is ſaid Acts 14. 17. yea to all his creatures, as it is in the next clauſe, to beaſts, as well as men. See Pſal. 39. 6. and 147. 9.

10 All thy works ſhall praiſe thee g, O LORD, and thy ſaints ſhall bleſs thee.

g Objectively, they give men and Angels juſt occaſion to praiſe thee.

11 They ſhall ſpeak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power.

12 To make known to the ſons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majeſty of his kingdom.

† Heb. a kingdom of all ages. 13 Thy kingdom is † an everlaſting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations.

* Pſ. 145. 8. 14 The LORD upholdeth all h that fall, and * raiſeth up all thoſe that be bowed down.

h Either, 1. all that look up to him for help: or, 2. all that are upheld: whoſe ſupport is not from themſelves, nor from other men, but onely from Gods powerful and good providence.

‖ Or, look unto thee. 15 The eyes of all ‖ wait upon thee k, and * thou giveſt them their meat in due ſeaſon l. Pſ. 136. 25.

i Of all living creatures. k Expect and receive their ſupplies wholly from thy bounty. Expectation is here figuratively aſcribed to brute creatures, as Pſal. 104. 27. Rom. 8. 22. l When they need it.

16 Thou openeſt thine hand, and ſatisfieſt the deſire of every living thing m.

m Or, as divers render it, and which is more agreeable to the order of the words in the Hebrew Text, thou ſatisfieſt every living thing with thy favour or good-will, (i. e.) with the fruits of thy bounty: the Pronoun thy being eaſily and fitly underſtood out of the foregoing clauſe.

‖ Or, merciful, or, bountiful. 17 The LORD is righteous in all his ways, and ‖ holy n in all his works.

n Or rather merciful, as this word moſt commonly ſignifies. There is a mixture of mercy in the moſt ſevere and terrible works of God in this life, judgment without mercy being reſerved for the next life, Jam. 2. 13. Rev. 14. 10.

* Deut. 4. 7. 18 * The LORD is nigh unto all them o that call upon him in truth p.

o To anſwer their prayers for relief. p Sincerely or with an upright heart, truſting to him, and waiting upon him in his way.

19 He will fulfil the deſire q of them that fear him: he alſo will hear their cry, and will ſave them.

q So far as it is agreeable to his own will, and convenient for their good; not inordinate deſires, which God commonly denies to his people in mercy, and granteth to his enemies in anger.

20 The LORD preſerveth all them that love him: but all the wicked will he deſtroy r.

r Frequently in this world, but infallibly in the next.

21 My mouth ſhall ſpeak the praiſe of the LORD: and let all fleſh bleſs his holy Name for ever and ever.

PSAL. CXLVI.
The ARGUMENT.

THe deſign of this Pſalm is to perſwade men to truſt in God, and in him alone.

The Pſalmiſt voweth perpetual praiſes to God, 1—2. and exhorteth, that none put their truſt in man, but in God, 3—4. in regard of his power, faithfulneſs and everlaſting Government, 5——10.

† Heb. Hallelujah. 1 † PRaiſe ye the LORD. Praiſe the LORD, O my ſoul.

* Pſ. 104. 33. 2 * While I live will I praiſe the LORD: I will ſing praiſes unto my God, while I have any being.

* Pſ. 118. 8, 9. ‖ Or, ſalvation. 3 * Put not your truſt in princes, a, nor in the ſon of man, in whom there is no ‖ help b.

a In men of greateſt wealth and power, in whoſe favour men are very prone to truſt. b Who are utterly unable frequently to give you that help which they promiſe, and you expect.

* Pſ. 104. 29. Eccl. 12. 7. † Heb. ſpirit So Gr. 4 * His † breath goeth forth, he returneth c to his earth d: in that very day e his thoughts f periſh.

c In his body, Eccleſ. 12. 7. d To that earth from which all mankind, Princes not excepted, had their original. e As ſoon as ever he is dead. f All his deſigns and endeavours either for himſelf or for others.

* Gen. 1. 1. 5 Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help; whoſe hope is the LORD his God:

6 * Which made heaven and earth, the ſea, and all that therein is: which keepeth truth for ever g:

g Both becauſe he liveth for ever to fulfil his promiſes, and becauſe he is eternally and unchangeably faithful.

7 * Which

* Pſ. 103. 6. & 68. 6. 7 * Which executeth judgment for the oppreſſed, which giveth food to the hungry: * the LORD looſeth the priſoners.

* Matth. 9. 30. & 20. 34. Pſ. 146. 8. 8 * The LORD openeth the eyes of the blind h; * the LORD raiſeth them that are bowed down; the LORD loveth the righteous i.

h Either, 1. the eyes of their mind, which he enlightens and directs in doubtful and difficult cauſes: or, 2. their bodily eyes; which he did abundantly by his Son Jeſus Chriſt. i Even when he doth afflict them, which alſo he doth out of love, Heb. 12. 6.

Deut. 10. 9 * The LORD preſerveth the ſtrangers; he relieveth the fatherleſs and widow: but the way of the wicked he turneth upſide down k.

k He overthroweth their goings, as the phraſe is Pſal. 140. 4. He maketh them to loſe their way; he not onely fruſtrateth their plots and enterpriſes, but turneth them againſt themſelves. This and all the foregoing ſentences are ſo many arguments to encourage all good men to truſt in God in all their ſtraits and afflictions.

Pſ. 45. 18 & 135. 16. & 145. 13. 10 * The LORD ſhall reign for ever, even thy God, O Zion, unto all generations. Praiſe ye the LORD.

PSAL. CXLVII.
The ARGUMENT.

THis Pſalm may ſeem from v. 2. and 13. to have been compoſed by ſome holy Prophet after the return of Iſrael from the Babylonith Captivity. It containeth an ample celebration of Gods praiſes both for common mercies, and for ſpecial favours.

The Prophet exhorteth the people to praiſe God for his care over his Church, 1——14. His Wiſdom and Government over all, 15——18. And for his Salvation to the faithful, 19, 20.

Pſ. 92. 1. 1 PRaiſe ye the LORD: for it is good a to ſing praiſes unto our God; for it is pleaſant, and * praiſe is comely.

Pſ. 33. 1. a It is acceptable to God, and greatly comfortable and beneficial to our ſelves.

Deut. 30. 3. 2 The LORD doth build up Jeruſalem b: * he gathereth together the out-caſts c of Iſrael.

b It is the Lords own doing, and not mans. c Or, the baniſhed, who were carried captives out of their own land, and diſperſed in divers ſtrange countries.

† Heb. griefs. 3 He healeth the broken in heart d, and bindeth up their † wounds.

d Either with the fence of their ſins: or with their ſorrows and grievous calamities. He ſeems to ſpeak peculiarly of the captive Iſraelites now returned.

Pſ. 40. 4 * He telleth the number of the ſtars e: he calleth them all by their names f.

e Which no man can do, Gen. 22. 17. For thoſe thouſand and twenty five which Aſtronomers number, are onely ſuch as are moſt diſtinctly viſible to the eye, and moſt conſiderable for their influences. f This ſignifies, 1. that he exactly knows them as we do thoſe whom we can call by name; he is able to give diſtinct names to each of them, becauſe he accurately underſtands their ſeveral natures and operations: 2. That he hath a Soveraign power over them, as men have over their children or ſervants or ſouldiers whom they can call by name; that he appointeth and governeth all their motions and influences to the fulfilling of his own pleaſure and purpoſes.

† Heb. of his underſtanding there is no number. Pſ. 145. 9. 5 Great is our LORD, and of great power: † his underſtanding is infinite.

6 * The LORD liſteth up the meek: he caſteth the wicked down to the ground.

7 Sing unto the LORD with thankſgiving: ſing praiſes upon the harp unto our God

Pſ. 104. 13, 14 8 * Who covereth the heaven with clouds, who prepareth rain for the earth, who maketh graſs to grow upon the mountains.

* Job 38. 41. Matth. 6. 26, 27. & 12. 24. Luke 12. 24. 9 * He giveth to the beaſt his food, ‖ and to the * young ravens g which cry.

g Which he mentions partly becauſe they were moſt contemptible, eſpecially to the Jews, to whom they were unclean and forbidden for food: partly becauſe they are greedy and voracious: and partly becauſe they are not onely neglected by men, but alſo forſaken by their dams as ſoon as ever they can flie, and ſo are wholly left to the care and keeping of Divine providence.

Or, even. * Job 38. 41. Pſ. 33. 16. Iſa. 1. 7. 10 * He delighteth not in the ſtrength of the horſe: he taketh not pleaſure in the legs of a man h.

h As if he needed either the one or the other for the accompliſhment of his deſigns.

11 The LORD taketh pleaſure in them that fear him, in thoſe that hope in his mercy i.

i That believing and patiently expect and ſeek relief and happineſs from God alone, and from his meer grace and mercy, and not from any creature, nor from their own merits.

† Heb. who maketh thy borders peace. Pſ. 132. 15. † Heb. fat of wheat. Pſ. 81. 10. 12 † Praiſe the LORD, O Jeruſalem: praiſe thy God, O Zion.

13 For he hath ſtrengthened the bars of thy gates k: he hath bleſſed thy children within thee.

k Thy ſtrength conſiſts not in thy walls and gates and bars, but in his protection.

14 † He maketh peace in thy borders l, and * filleth thee with the † fineſt of the wheat.

l In all thy land, even to its utmoſt borders, which are moſt liable to the incurſion of enemies.

Iſa. 40. 7. 15 He ſendeth forth his commandment m upon earth: his word runneth very ſwiftly n.

m Which is ſufficient without any inſtruments to execute whatſoever pleaſeth him, either in works of nature or of providence. n The thing is done without delay or difficulty.

16 He giveth ſnow like wool o: he ſcattereth the hoar froſt like aſhes p.

o Not onely in colour and ſhape and ſoftneſs, but alſo in uſe, keeping the fruits of the earth warm. p In colour and ſmalneſs of parts, as alſo in its burning quality.

17 He caſteth forth his ice q like morſels: who can ſtand before his cold r?

q Either, 1. pieces of ice, which God may be ſaid to caſt forth or to caſt down, becauſe he ſendeth it, and oft-times ſuddenly: or, 2. great hail-ſtones, which are of an icy nature and ſubſtance, and which are very properly caſt forth or caſt down out of the clouds, and that like morſels or fragments, the particles being congealed in them. r The cold which he ſometimes ſends into the air is ſo ſharp, that it would be intolerable, if men did not defend themſelves from it by houſes, cloaths, fire, &c.

† Heb ſpirit Iſa. 40. 7. 18 He ſendeth forth his word, and melteth them: he cauſeth his † wind s to blow, and the waters flow t.

s The Southern or ſome other warm wind ſent with commiſſion to diſſolve the ice. t The rivers return to their courſe which before were bound up by, or turned into, ice.

† Heb. his words. 19 He ſheweth † his word u unto Jacob x; his ſtatutes and his judgments unto Iſrael.

u He fully declared his mind and will by revelation and in his word. x To the children of Jacob or Iſrael, and to them alone, as it follows.

† See Rom. 3. 1, 2. 20 * He hath not dealt ſo with any nation y: and as † for his judgments, they have not known them, Praiſe ye the LORD.

y He left all others to their own native darkneſs and blindneſs, and to thoſe dim diſcoveries of God and of themſelves which they had from the light of Nature.

PSAL. CXLVIII.
The ARGUMENT.

THe nature of this Pſalm is for ſubſtance the ſame with the former containing an invitation to all the creatures to praiſe God for his manifold bleſſings.

The Pſalmiſt exhorted all celeſtial and terreſtrial creatures, eſpecially man, to praiſe God for his Favour and Mercy to his Church, 1——14.

† Heb. Hallelujah. 1 † PRaiſe ye the LORD. Praiſe ye the LORD † from the heavens a; praiſe him in the heights b.

a All the holt of Heaven, which he particularly expreſſeth in the following verſes. b In thoſe high and heavenly places.

* Pſ. 103. 20, 21. 2 * Praiſe ye him all his Angels c: praiſe ye him all his hoſts d.

c He inviteth the Angels here, and the ſenſeleſs creatures afterward, to praiſe God, not as if the former needed, or the latter were capable of, his exhortation, but onely by a Poetical rapture, the deſign whereof is, that men by this means might be more provoked to this duty. d The Angels, called hoſts, here and 1 Kings 22. 19. for their vaſt numbers, exquiſite order, and perfect ſubjection to their General, the Lord of hoſts.

3 Praiſe ye him ſun and moon e: praiſe him all ye ſtars of light.

e You which are adored by the blind Heathens for gods, you are but his creatures, and therefore were obliged, if you were capable, to worthip and praiſe him for your glorious light and powerful influences.

Pſ. 33. 9. 4 Praiſe him ye heavens of heavens f, and ye waters that be above the heavens g.

f Ye higheſt and moſt glorious Heavens, the place of Gods Throne and glorious preſence, as this phraſe is uſed, Deut. 10. 14. 1 Kings 8. 27. Neh. 9. 6. Pſal. 115. 16. Or ye ſtarry Heavens, which alſo may well be ſo called, becauſe they are above the air, which is oft called Heaven in Scripture. g Ye clouds which are above a part of the Heavens. Of which ſee on Gen. 1. 7.

Gen. 1, 6. Pſ. 33. 9. 5 Let them praiſe the Name of the LORD: for * he commanded, and they were created h.

h They owe their being wholly to Gods good will.

* Pſ. 89. 37. & 119. 90. 6 * He hath alſo eſtabliſhed them for ever and ever i: he hath made a decree k which ſhall not paſs l.

i Either abſolutely as to the ſubſtance of them, or at leaſt to the end of the world. He hath made them conſtant and incorruptible, not changeable and periſhing, as the things of the lower world are. k Either concerning their ſeveral courſes and influences: or rather for their continuance for ever; which beſt agrees with the foregoing and following words. l Which decree ſhall never be made void.

7 Praiſe the LORD from the earth, ye dragons m and all deeps.

m Either, 1. dragons and ſerpents, which abide in the deep caverns and holes of the earth; or, 2. whales or other Sea-monſters, which dwell in the depths of the Sea, which are oft called by this name, as Job 7. 12. Ezek. 29. 3. and elſewhere, as the word here rendred deeps is moſt commonly uſed concerning the Sea.

8 Fire n and hail, ſnow and vapor o; ſtormy wind fulfilling his word p.

n Lightnings and other fire-works of the air. o Or, fumes, hot exhalations, as the word properly ſignifies, as cold exhalations are comprehended comprehended under the title of snow. And both of them arising from the earth, are here fitly mentioned as belonging to it. p Executing his commands either for the comfort and refreshment, or for the punishment, of the inhabitants of the earth.

9 Mountains and all hills, fruitful trees and all cedars q.

q Admirable for you height and strength and use, though not for your fruit.

†Heb. birds of wing. 10 Beasts and all cattel, creeping things, and † flying fowl.

11 Kings of the earth r, and all people: princes, and all judges of the earth.

r Who, though you are called gods, and adored like Gods by your Subjects, yet are but men, and the creatures and Subjects of this Soveraign Lord, to whom you owe both your being, and all your power and dignity.

12 Both young men and maidens, old men and children.

13 Let them praise the Name of the LORD: for * Ps. 8. 1. Isa. 12. 4. * his Name alone is † excellent; his glory is above the earth and heaven s.

* Heb. exalted. s Not so much in place as in excellency, above all the glories which are in earth and in Heaven.

14 He also exalteth the horn of his people t, the praise u of all his saints, even of the children of Israel, a people near unto him x. Praise ye the LORD.

t To wit, above the horns of all the people in the world, in respect of their spiritual and eternal priviledges, as it here follows. The horn in Scripture doth commonly note strength, victory, glory and felicity, as Deut. 33. 17. and every where. u Either, 1. He is the praise, as God is called Deut. 10. 21. to wit, the God of their praise, as 109. 1. the chiefest object and matter of it: or, 2. which is the praise. Which work of God in exalting their horn is their glory, and maketh them praise-worthy, or obligeth and provoketh them in a singular manner to perform this great duty of praising God, which is so generally neglected by others. x By special relation and friendship and covenant, and by familiar intercourses, God manifesting his face and favour to them, and they frequently and solemnly approaching into his presence, and worshipp ng him at his foot-stool.

PSAL. CXLIX.

The ARGUMENT.

THe scope and design of this Psalm is to stir up and encourage Gods people to praise him, either, 1. for their deliverance out of Babylon, and the promises which God had given them of the perfection of that work and of the enlargement of their power and dominion in the world, or rather, 2. for the establishment of the Kingdom of Israel in Davids hands, and for that safety and glory and victory over their enemies which they expected by that means. But withal, the Psalmist, or the Spirit of God which dictated this Psalm to him, had a further prospect, even to the Messiah, of whom David was a Type, and who was to succeed David in the Throne, and to bring that Kingdom to its highest perfection. And so divers of the Jewish Doctors understand this Psalm.

An Exhortation to praise God for his love to his people, 1——5. and for enabling them by his power to overcome their enemies. 6——9.

†Heb. Hal-lelujah. 1 † PRaise ye the LORD. * Sing unto the LORD a new song a: and his praise in the congrega- * Ps. 33. 3. tion of saints.

a For these new mercies conferred upon us, denied to former times.

*Ps. 100. 3. 2 Let Israel rejoyce in * him that made him b: let the children of Zion be joyful in their king c.

b That made them not onely his creatures, but, which is unspeakably greater, his people: or, that advanced and adorned them with singular priviledges, as this word is used, 1 Sam. 12. 6. and elsewhere. c David and his posterity, and especally the chief of all of them, the Messiah. Let them rejoyce and bless God that they have so potent, so wise, and so just a King.

* Ps. 81. 2. 3 * Let them praise his Name ‖ in the dance: let them ‖ Or, with the pipe. sing praises unto him with the timbrel and harp d.

d According to the usage of that time and dispensation.

4 For the LORD taketh pleasure in his people e: he will beautifie f the meek g with salvation h.

e He loveth them above all people, and rejoyceth over them to do them good. f Heb. adorn or glorifie, make them amiable and honourable in the eyes of the world, who now hate and despise them. g Or, humble, to wit, his people, as he now said, who are oft in Scripture described by that character, because all true Israelite are such, and all Israelites profess and ought to be such. Or, the afflicted, as that word is oft used in Scripture, which hath been observed before; his poor afflicted and oppressed people, to whom the following salvation is most needful and acceptable. h Both temporal, in delivering them from, and setting them above, all their enemies, and afterwards, with everlasting salvation and glory.

5 Let the saints be joyful in glory i: let them sing aloud upon their beds k.

i For the honour which God putteth upon them. k Either, 1. for their safe and sweet repose and peace, which is signified by resting in beds, Isa. 57. 2. Or, 2. by night as well as by day, even in the time devoted to rest and sleep, which they shall borrow to praise God for his eminent and extraordinary blessings, as David frequently did upon such occasions.

6 Let † the high praises of God be ‖ in their mouth l, † Heb. the exaltations and a * two-edged sword in their hand m: ‖ Heb. in their throat. * Heb. 4. 12. Rev. 1. 16.

l Heb. in their throat. Which signifies vocal praise, and that with a loud voice. m Not onely to defend themselves from their enemies, but, as it follows, to revenge themselves upon them.

7 To execute vengeance upon the heathen n, and punishments upon the people.

n For all their cruelties and injuries towards Gods people. This was literally accomplished by David upon the Philistines, Ammonites, Syrians, and other neighbouring Nations and Princes, which were bitter enemies to Gods people. And the same thing was done afterward in the Christian world, when God raised up Christian Princes, who did by the help of the Christians fighting with and under them, severely revenge the blood of the martyred Christians upon their cruel Persecutors and Tyrants in divers ages. It may also be understood of the spiritual plagues which Christ by the hand or ministry of his Apostles and Ministers did inflict upon the hearts and consciences of his incorrigible enemies, who by Gods word and ordinances were either tormented or hardned to their destruction. Yea it may have a respect unto the last day of judgment, in which the Saints shall judge the world, 1 Cor. 6. 2. which will be a most dreadful execution of this vengeance, &c.

8 To bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron o.

o Of which see the Note on the foregoing verse.

9 * To execute upon them the judgment written p: * Deut. 7. this honour have all his saints q. Praise ye the LORD. 1, 2.

p Appointed and declared in the holy Scripture, as Deut. 12. 32. and 29. 19. and 32. 41, 42, 43. and elsewhere. This is added to shew that they do not this work to satisfie their own malicious or revengeful inclinations, but in obedience to Gods command, and onely in such manner as God hath allowed in his word. q The honour of these actions belongs to all the Saints, for whose sakes God appointed this in his word, and afterwards executed it by his providence.

PSAL. CL.

The ARGUMENT.

THis Psalm agrees much with the former; and is an invitation to all men to praise God, and especially to the Levites, or those of them who were appointed to this work, as may be gathered both from the place in which they are to praise him, which is, according to our Translation, in his Sanctuary, v. 1. and from that great variety of instruments here mentioned, all which were frequently used in their Temple-service, and seldom elsewhere.

An Exhortation to praise the Holiness, Power, and Kindness of God, with all sort of musical Instruments, 1——6.

1 † PRaise ye the LORD. Praise God in his san- †Heb. Hal-lelujah. ctuary a: praise him in the firmament of his lelujah. power b.

a In his Temple, where this work was to be performed constantly and solemnly. Or, who dwelleth in his Sanctuary. So it describeth and limiteth the object of their praises. Or, for (as this particle is used in the next verse) his Sanctuary, for this great favour of placing his Sanctuary and dwelling place amongst men. b In his heavenly mansion, there let the blessed Angels praise him. Or, who dwelleth in the firmament, or spreading forth of his power, to wit, in the Heavens which were stretched out by his great power, and in which are the most glorious testimonies of his infinite power. Or, for the firmament, &c. for that glorious and astonishing piece of his workmanship.

2 * Praise him for his mighty acts: praise him accor- * Ps. 145. ding to his excellent greatnels c. 5, 6.

c As his infinite Majesty deserves to be praised.

3 Praise him with the sound of the ‖ trumpet: * praise ‖ Or, cornet. * Ps. 81. 2. him with the psaltery and harp.

4 Praise him with the timbrel and ‖ dance: praise him & 149. 3. ‖ Or, pipe. with stringed instruments and organs.

5 Praise him upon the loud cymbals: praise him upon the high sounding cymbals.

6 Let every thing that hath breath d, praise the LORD. Praise ye the LORD.

d Every living creature in heaven and in earth, Apoc. 5. 13. according to their several capacities, some objectively, others actively, as was noted before.

PROV.

PROVERBS.

THe Pen-man of this Book is expressed in the Title, Solomon, who was famous for his Proverbs, of which he spake Three Thousand, as it is recorded, 1 King. 4. 32. the most eminent and useful of them being doubtless collected in this Book. And that the greatest part of this Book was composed by Solomon doth sufficiently appear because that part of it which was collected and composed by other hands is so plainly distinguished from the foregoing part, Chap. 25. 1. The Nine first Chapters contain a Preface or Introduction to the Book, or an Exhortation to true Wisdom; and all the following Chapters contain the Precepts of Wisdom called Proverbs. Wherein we are not to expect that order and coherence which is in many other Books of Scripture.

CHAP. I.

The use of the Proverbs, 1—6. An Exhortation to fear God, and believe his Word, 7. The Glory of those Children that obey the Instruction of their Parents, 8, 9. A caution against yielding to enticing sinners, 10. The contrivance, 11, 12. Arguments and Invitation of these Sinners, 13, 14. Reasons against a complying with them, 15—19. Wisdom's call to Repentance, 20—22. Her promise, 23. Her complaints and threatnings, 24—30. The fruit of sin, 31—32. Peace to the Penitent, 33.

1 THe * proverbs a of Solomon b, the son of David, king of Israel.

a Proverbs are antient, and wise, and short Sayings in common use: whereof some are plain and easie, others are intricate and obscure. b Proceeding from Solomon, and most of them digested by him into this Book. See the Preface.

2 To know c wisdom d and instruction e, to perceive the words of understanding f.

c Written to help men to know thoroughly and practically. d Both humane Wisdom to conduct our Affairs in this Life, which divers of the following Proverbs do, and especially Divine Wisdom which Solomon chiefly designed; or to make men wise to know their duty, and to save their Souls. e The Counsels and Instructions delivered either by God, or by Men, in order to the attainment of Wisdom. f Either 1. Which are the effects of a good understanding: Or 2. Which teach a man true Understanding, whereby to discern between Truth and Error, between Good and Evil, to chuse the former, and to refuse the latter.

3 To receive the instruction g of † wisdom h, justice, and judgment, and † equity i.

g Willingly to receive the Counsels of others, which is a good step to Wisdom, and a part of it. h Such as is wise, and tends to make men wise and prudent. This is opposed to the Instruction of Fools and folly, of which Prov. 16. 22, & 19. 27. For folly or wickedness hath its School, and multitudes of Scholars, that are very apt to learn its Lessons. i Which teach men just judgment or equity, to wit, their whole Duty, both to God and to others, and to themselves. These three words seem to signifie the same thing, and are heaped together to note either the necessity of the Precept, or the exactness and diligence which is required in the practice of it.

4 To give subtilty k to the simple l, to the young † Heb. Heb. man m knowledge and ‖ discretion. Ad.

k Or rather, Prudence, as this word is used, Prov. 3. 21. & 5. 2. & 8. 5, 12. which elsewhere is taken in an evil sense for craft or subtilty. l Such as want wisdom, and are easily deceived by others, and therefore most need this blessing. m Which wants both Experience and Self-government.

5 * A wise man will hear n, and will encrease learning o; and a man of understanding shall attain unto wise counsels p.

n Is not self-conceited, as Fools are, but willing to learn from others; and therefore will attend to the following Instructions. o And therefore will gain this great benefit to grow in knowledge and wisdom. This he adds to shew that this Book is useful and necessary, not only to the simple, but also to the most wise and knowing Persons. p Not to deep speculations, but practical consideration; to the art of governing himself or others well and prudently.

6 To understand a proverb and ‖ the interpretation q; the words of the wise, and their dark sayings r.

q i. e. The Interpretation of a Proverb, by a Figure called Hendiadys, or the meaning and use of the wise sayings of God, or of men; to know this practically, and for his direction and benefit; for practice is the great design of this Book. r Such as are hard to be understood by inconsiderate and ungodly men, but to be found out by diligent, and humble enquiry.

7 * The fear of the LORD s is ‖ the beginning t of knowledge: but fools u despise wisdom and instruction x.

s Reverence and obedience to God, or his Worship and Service, as this word is commonly used. t Either the Foundation, or the Top, and Perfection, or chief Point, without which all other knowledge is vain and useless. u Wicked men, called Fools through this whole Book; such as do not fear God. x Are so far from attaining true Wisdom, that they despise it, and all the means of getting it. Which fully proves what he now said, that the Fear of the Lord is beginning of Wisdom.

8 My son y, * hear the instruction of thy father z, and forsake not the law of thy mother a.

y He speaks to his Scholars with paternal Authority and Affection to make them more attentive and obedient. Teachers among the Hebrews and others, were commonly called Fathers, and their Scholars their Sons. z It's good and wholsome Counsels, but not such as are contrary to Gods Law, Prov. 19. 27. a Those pious instructions which thy Mother instilled into thee in thy tender years. See Prov. 31. 1. 2 Tim. 1. 5. & 3. 14, 15. This he adds, because Children when grown up, are very prone to sleight their Mothers advice, because of the infirmity of their Sex, and because they have not that dependance upon, and Expectation from their Mothers which they have from their Fathers.

9 For they shall be † an ornament of grace unto thy † Heb. an adding. head, and chains about thy neck b.

b This will make thee amiable and honourable in the sight of God and of men; whereas the forsaking of those good Counsels will make thee contemptible.

10 My son, if sinners c entice thee, consent thou not.

c Eminently so called, as Gen. 13. 13. Psal. 1. 1. & 26. 9. such as fell themselves to work all manner of Wickedness; particularly Thieves, and Robbers, and Murtherers, as appears from the next verses, as also Oppressors and Cheaters, by comparing this with 10, 19.

11 If they say, Come with us d, let us lay wait for blood e; let us lurk privily f for the innocent g without cause h:

d We are numerous, and strong, and sociable. e To shed Blood. He expresseth not their words, which would rather affright than inveigle a young novice, but the true nature and consequence of the Action, and what lies at the bottom of their specious pretences. f So we shall neither be prevented before, nor discovered and punished afterward. g Harmless Travellers, who are more careless and secure, and unprovided for opposition, than such Villains as themselves. h Though they have not provoked us, nor deserved this usage from us. This Solomon adds to discover their malignity and basenes, and so deter the young Man from association with them.

12 Let us swallow them up alive as † the grave i, † Heb. hell. and whole, as those that go down into the pit k. Num. 16.

i Which speedily covers and consumes dead Bodies. See Psal. 55. 15. 33. & 124. 3. We shall do our work quickly, easily, and without fear of discovery. k Into some deep Pit, into which a Traveller falls unawares, and is utterly lost and never discovered.

13 We shall find all precious substance; we shall fill our houses with spoil l.

l As our danger is little, so our profit will be great.

14 Cast in thy lot among us m; let us all have one purse n:

m i. e. Put in thy Money into our Stock. Or rather, thou shalt cast thy lot amongst us, i. e. thou shalt have a share with us, and that equally and by lot, although thou art but a Novice and we Veterans. This agrees best with their design, which was to allure him by the promise of advantage. n Or, we will have, &c. One Purse shall receive all our profits and furnish us with all expences. So we shall live with great facility and true friendship.

15 My Son *, walk not thou in the way with them * Ch. 4. 14. o; refrain thy foot from their path p.

o Avoid their courses, and their conversation, and company. p When thou hast any thought, or inclination, or temptation to follow their counsels or examples, suppress it, and restrain thy self as it were by force and violence, as the word implies.

16 * For their feet run q to evil r, and make haste to * Isa. 59. 7. shed blood s. Rom. 3. 15.

q They make haste, as it follows without considering what they are doing. r To do evil to others as was expressed, v. 11, 12. which also will bring evil upon themselves. s To shed innocent blood: which is an inhumane and dangerous practice.

17 Surely in vain the net is spread † in the sight of † Heb. in the eyes of any bird t. every thing that t The design of these words is to set forth the folly of these men by the similitude of a Bird, which yet is very variously applied and understood by divers Interpreters. But I shall not confound the Reader with the rehearsal of them. This Clause, in vain, upon the understanding whereof the whole depends, may be understood, either, 1. in respect of the Fowler. So the sense is, The Fowler who spreads his Net in the sight of the Bird loseth his labour, because the Bird perceiving the danger, will not be tempted to come to the Bait, but flees away from it. But, or yet, these (as the first words of the next Verse may well be, and by the Chaldee Translator are rendred) are more foolish than the silly Birds, and tho they are not Ignorant of the danger and mischief which these evil courses will bring upon themselves, which I have here represented, yet they will not take warning, but madly rush upon their own ruine. Or, 2. in respect of the Bird. So the sense is, The silly Bird, although it see the spreading of the Net, yet is not at all instructed and cautioned by it, but through the greedinesse of the Bait rusheth upon it, and is taken by it. And these men are not one jot wiser, but albeit they know and find that by these practices they expose themselves to the justice of the Magistrate, and to the vengeance of God, the sad effects whereof they daily see in the destruction of their Brethren in iniquity, yet they will boldly and madly run themselves into the same miseries. Both ways the sense comes to the same.

18 And u they lay wait for their own blood x; they lurk privily for their lives.

u Or, But, or Yet, or So, for all these ways this Particle is used. Which is more fully expressed in the next Verse. x The destruction which they design to others, falls upon themselves. Their blood answers to their feet, v. 16. and belongs to the same Persons.

19 So y are the ways z of every one that is greedy of gain a: which b taketh away the lives of the owners thereof c.

y As is expressed both in the foregoing and following words. z The actions and courses, which are so in the tendency and event of them. a That seeks gain by unrighteous and wicked practices. b Either which greedinesse: or rather, which gain, by comparing the last words. c Brings sudden and violent death upon those who had made themselves Masters and Possessors of such gain.

†Heb. Wisdoms, that is, excellent Wisdom. 20 † * Wisdom crieth d without e; she uttereth her voice in the streets;

d Having expressed the counsels and invitations of folly and of wicked men, he now declareth the voice of Wisdom. By the name of Wisdom or Wisdoms he seems to understand the wisdom or counsel of God revealed to the Sons of men by his Word. Which he calls Wisdoms here, as also Prov. 9. 1. either to note the excellency of this Wisdom beyond all other, as the greatest and chief of Beasts is called Behemoth or Beasts, Job 40. 15. or because it consisteth of a multitude of wise Precepts; or because it hath been delivered to Mankind at sundry times, and in divers manners, and by many Persons, Prophets and Apostles, and especially by the Son of God, who is called the Wisdom of God, Luke 11. 49. And this wisdom is said to cry with a loud voice, to intimate both God's earnestness in inviting sinners to repentance, and their inexcusableness if they do not hear such loud cries. e Or, abroad, or in the streets or open places, as many others render it, and as it is in the next Clause. Not in corners and privily, as Seducers perswade men to error or wickedness, being afraid of the light, but openly and publickly before all the World.

* Ch. 8. 1.

21 She crieth in the chief place of concourse f, in the opening of the gates g: in the city h she uttereth her words, saying,

f Where there is probability of most success. g Where Magistrates sit in Judgment, and People are assembled. So it crieth both to the wise and to the unwise, as Paul preached, Rom. 1. 14. h Not only in the gate, but in every part of the City. Or, in the Cities, the Singular number being put for the Plural.

22 How long ye simple ones i will ye love simplicity k? and the scorners l delight in their scorning, and fools m hate knowledg?

i Ye ignorant, and easie, and credulous Persons, who are so soon cheated by the World and the Devil, and do not understand your own Interest. k Being unwilling to part with it, or to be made wiser. l That scoff at all Religion, and contemn the Word and faithful Ministers of God. m Willful and wicked fools, as Prov. 17. 10. & 26. 4.

23 Turn ye n at my reproof o: behold, I will pour out p my * spirit q unto you; I will make known my words unto you r.

* Isa. 44. 3.

n From your evil courses unto me. o Upon this admonition here given to you. p If you will do so, I will freely and abundantly impart unto you. q Either my mind, as Spirit is taken, Psal. 77. 6. Prov. 29. 11. or the gifts and graces of my Spirit, which he hath promised to such Persons, Luke 11. 13. John 4. 14. & 7. 39. r By my Spirit I will cause you truly and savingly to understand my word which is hid from others, 2 Cor. 4. 3.

* Isa. 65. 2. 66. 4. Jer. 7. 13. Ezek. 8. 18. 24 * Because I have called s, and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand t, and no man regarded u; s By my Ministers, and by my Judgments upon you or others, and by the motions of my Spirit and your own Consciences. t Offering Grace and Mercy to you, and earnestly inviting you to accept of it. Left through your deafness or distance from me you should not hear, I have beckned to you with my hand, which this Phrase signifies, Isa. 13. 2. & 65. 2. u Few or none complied with it.

* Psa. 107. 11. Luke 7. 30. 25 But ye * have set at naught x all my counsel y, and would none of my reproof:

x Or despised, or made void, resisted its power and authority. y Either, 1. my design of doing sinners good, which you have made of none effect to your selves. Or, 2. my commands and councels, which suits better with the next Clause.

26 I also z will laugh at your calamity a: I will mock when your fear b cometh;

z As you have scoffed at me and my ways. a i. e. destroy you without pity and take pleasure therein. Comp. Revel. 18. 20. b The misery which you do or should fear. The act for the object, as Isa. 8. 12. and elsewhere.

27 When your fear cometh as desolation c, and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind d; when distress and anguish cometh upon you.

c As some desolating Sword or Judgment, which quickly over-runs a whole Country. d Which instantly spreadeth it self from place to place with great and irresistible violence and doing much mischief.

* Job 27. 9. Isa. 1. 15. Jer. 11. 11. & 14. 12. Mic. 3. 4. Zech. 7. 13. 28 * Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early e, but they shall not find me f.

e Or, in the Morning, as the word properly signifies, and is here rendred by others, as soon as their calamity comes; or rather, with great diligence and fervency, as this Phrase commonly signifies. f Because they do not seek me by choice and with sincerity, but only by constraint and that they may be freed from their miseries.

29 For that they hated knowledg f, and did not chuse g the fear of LORD.

f To wit, the practical knowledge of God and of their duty to him, as it is explained in the following Clause. g Not heartily approve of it and love it, but only made some shew of it.

30. They would none of my counsel h: they despised all my reproof.

h They refused to be guided by my Counsels or Precepts.

31 Therefore shall they eat of the fruit of their own way i, and be filled with their own devices k.

i They shall receive punishments answerable to their sins. k With the fruits or effects of their wicked devices. What was sweet in their Mouths shall be bitter in their Bellies, and that destruction which they have plotted against others shall fall upon themselves.

32 For the turning away l of the simple shall slay them, and the prosperity of fools shall destroy them m.

l To wit, from God and from his counsels and reproofs; so this is opposed to hearkning unto God, v. 33. Or, as it is rendred in the Margent, and by divers others, the ease or rest, the peace or tranquility, as it seems to be explained in the next Clause. m It commonly proves the occasion of their ruine, by making them presumptuous, and secure, and worldly, and proud, and forgetful of God and of their own Eternal happiness, whereby they provoke God's Wrath, and bring upon themselves swift and certain destruction. Thus he meets with the common objection against the fear of God, taken from the present impunity and prosperity of ungodly men.

33 But whoso hearkneth unto me, shall dwell safely n, and shall be quiet from fear of evil o.

n Or, securely or confidently, resting himself upon the conscience of his own integrity, and upon the promises and favour of God. o From sinful and tormenting cares and fears. And as a wicked Man's mind is oft full of anxiety in the midst of all his outward prosperity and glory, so the mind of a good man is filled with peace and joy even when his outward man is exposed to many troubles.

CHAP. II.

Solomon exhorteth his Son to get wisdom, 1—4. Telleth him the benefit, he shall receive thereby, 5—10. And the evils which he should avoid, 11, 12. The wicked manner ways are described, 13—20. An habitation promised the righteous, 21. The end of the wicked miserable, 22.

1 MY son a, if thou wilt receive my words, and * hide my commandments with thee b; * Chap. 7. 1.

a These words are spoken by Solomon, either, 1. in the name of wisdom, as before: Or rather, 2. in his own name. b Lay them up in thy Mind and heart with care, as men do their choicest Treasures.

2 So that thou incline thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding c:

c Give thy self to the study of it with affection and diligence.

3 Yea, if thou criest d after knowledg, and † liftest up thy voice for understanding: † Heb. givest thy voice.

d To wit, unto God, the only giver of it, v. 6. Heb. If thou callest, inviteſt it to come unto thee; earnestly desirest its conduct.

4 * If thou seekest her as Silver, and searchest for her, as for hid treasures e: * Mat. 13. 44.

e With the same unwearied diligence and earnest desire and patient expectation under all delays, disappointments and difficulties, which Worldlings use in the purchase of Riches, or in digging in Mines of Silver.

5 Then shalt thou understand f the fear of the LORD g, and find the knowledge of God.

f More perfectly and profitably; for that very seeking and searching after it, v. 4. supposed some understanding. g Which is the beginning of this Wisdom, Chap. 1. 7.

6 * For the LORD † giveth h wisdom: out of his mouth i cometh knowledge and understanding. * 1 Kin. 3. 9, 12. † Heb. giveth.

h Heb. will give, hath promised to give it, to wit, to those that so seek it. Whereby he also teacheth them not to ascribe any Wisdom which they may obtain, unto their own Wit and Industry, but only unto God's favour and blessing. i From his Word, or appointment and good will; as the word of God is taken, Deut. 8. 3.

7 He layeth up sound wisdom k for the righteous: * he is a buckler to them l that walk uprightly. * Chap. 30. 5.

k Heb. Essence or substance, either, 1. solid and true felicity, opposed to the vain enjoyments of this World, which are said to have no substance or being, Prov. 23. 5. Or 2. true and substantial Wisdom, which is satisfactory and everlasting, opposed to worldly Wisdom, which is but an empty shadow of Wisdom, and perisheth with us. l To protect and save them from that mischief and ruine which shall befall all wicked men.

8 † He keepeth * the paths of judgment m, and preserveth the way of his Saints n. † Heb. keep.So * Psal. 17. 9.

m He guardeth and guideth the paths or ways, i. e. the counsels and actions of good men, as the next Clause explains this, which are called Paths of Judgment, or, righteous Paths, Judgment being here put for Righteousness, as it is in Psal. 99. 4. and oft elsewhere. And keeping of Paths may be put for keeping them in their Paths so as they shall neither swerve from them, nor stumble and fall in them. n The same thing repeated in other words.

9 Then o shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity p; yea, every good path q.

o When thou hast done thy part expressed, v. 1, 2, 3, &c. and God in answer to thy desires hath given thee Wisdom, v. 6. or when it is with thee, as it follows, v. 10. p. All the parts of thy duty to Man, as well as the fear of God, v. 5. which contains all duties to God. These three words are used here, as also Chap. 1. 3. to signifie the same thing. q The practice of all Vertues and Graces.

10 When wisdom entreth into thine heart r, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy Soul;

r When thou dost truly love it and passionately desire it, and hide its Precepts in thy Heart, according to Psal. 119. 11.

11 Discretion shall preserve thee s, understanding shall keep thee:

s From wicked courses and the mischiefs which attend upon them; as is particularly expressed in the following Verses.

12 To deliver thee from the way of the evil man t; from the man that speaketh froward things u.

t From following his counsel or example, which others for want of Wisdom commonly do. u With design to corrupt thy mind and entice thee to evil Principles or Practices.

13 Who leave the paths of uprightness x, to walk in the ways of darkness y:

x The way of God's Precepts. y i. e. Of sin, which is oft called darkness, as Rom. 13. 12, &c. Ephes. 5. 11. because it comes from darkness, ignorance and errour, and loves darkness and hates light, and leads to utter darkness.

14 Who rejoyce to do evil z, and delight in the frowardness of the wicked a.

z Seeking and embracing occasions of sin with diligence and greediness, and pleasing themselves both in the practice and remembrance of sin, whereas upright men abhor and watch against all occasions of sin beforehand, and mourn bitterly for it afterwards. a Not only in their own sins, but in the sins of other wicked men, which shews a greater malignity of mind and love to sin. See Rom. 1. 32.

15 † Whose ways are crooked b, and they froward in their paths. † Heb. whose.

b Or, Who make their ways crooked, i. e. whose course of Life swerves from the right and straight way of God's Law.

16 To deliver thee from the strange woman c; * even from the stranger which flattereth with her words d. * Chap. 5. 3. & 6. 24. & 7. 5.

c From the Adulteress or Whore; called strange, partly because such Persons were commonly Heathens, or are supposed to be such by reason of that severe Law against these practices in Israelitish women, Deut. 23. 17. or are justly reputed Heathens, as being degenerate Israelites, which are oft called Strangers, as hath been noted in the book of the Psalms: and partly because conversation with such Persons is forbidden to men, as those Israelites which were not Levites are called Strangers, Numb. 1. 51. in respect of the Holy things which they were prohibited to touch; and forbidden Fire is called strange fire, Numb. 3. 4. d Which useth all arts and ways to allure men to unchast actions: one kind being put for all the rest.

17 Which forsaketh * the guide of her youth e, and forgetteth f the covenant of her God g. * Or, good success.

e To wit, her Husband whom she took to be her guide and governour, and that in her youth; which circumstance is added to aggravate her sin and shame, because love is commonly most sincere and fervent between an Husband and Wife of youth, as they are for that reason emphatically called, Prov. 5. 18. Isa. 54. 6. Joel 1. 8. Mal. 2. 14, 15. f i. e. Violateth or breaketh, as that word is commonly used in a practical sense. g The marriage Covenant; so called partly because God is the Author and Institutor of that society and mutual Obligation: and partly because God is called to be the witness and judge of that solemn Promise and Covenant, and the avenger of the transgression of it.

18 For her house inclineth unto death h, and her paths unto the dead i.

h Conversation with her (which was most free and usual in her own House) is the ready and certain way to Death, which it brings many ways, by wasting a Mans Vital spirits and shortning his life, by exposing him to many and dangerous Diseases, which Physicians have declared and proved to be the effects of inordinate lust, as also to the fury of jealous Husbands or Friends, and sometimes to the Sword of Civil Justice, and undoubtedly, without repentance, to God's wrath and the second Death. This is here mentioned as one great priviledge and blessed fruit of Wisdom, to be delivered from this evil. i Or, as the Chaldee and some other render it, unto the Giants, to wit, those rebellious Giants, Gen. 6. 4. or, as others, unto the damned, or, unto Hell. See for this word, Job 7. 9. Psal. 88. 11. Prov. 9. 18. & 21. 16.

19 None k that go unto her l, return again m; neither take they hold of the paths of life n.

k Few or none. An hyperbolical expression used, Isa. 64. 7. l That go to her House, or that lie with her, as this Phrase is used, Gen. 16. 4. & 30. 4. Jos. 2. 3. m From her and from this wicked-ness, unto God. Adulterers and Whoremongers are very rarely brought to repentance, but are generally hardned by the power and deceitfulness of that Lust, and by God's just judgment, peculiarly inflicted upon such Persons, Heb. 13. 4. He alludes to the nature of corporal death, from which no man can without a Miracle return to this life. n Of those courses which lead to true and eternal Life.

20 That thou mayest o walk in the way of good men p, and keep the path of the righteous.

o This depends upon v. 11. and is mentioned as another happy fruit of Wisdom, the former being declared from v. 12. to this Verse. p Follow the counsels and examples of the godly. Whereby he intimates, that it is not sufficient to abstain from evil company and practices, but that we must choose the conversation of good men.

21 * For the upright shall dwell in the land q, and the perfect shall remain in it. * Psal. 37. 29.

q Shall have a peaceable and comfortable abode in the Land of Canaan, which also is a type of their everlasting felicity. See Psal. 37. 3, 9, 18, 29.

22 * But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be ‖ rooted out of it. * Job 18. 17. Psal. 104. 35. ‖ Or, plucked up.

CHAP. III.

Solomon exhorteth his Son to Obedience, 1—4. To Faith 5, 6. and trust in God, the benefits that they shall receive thereby, 7, 8. To honour God with our estates, 9. The advantage in so doing, 10. To patience under Gods Chastisements, 11. A reason for it, 12. The happiness of him, that findeth wisdom, 13. Wisdom set out with the benefits that attend her, 14—18. The effects, 19, 20. Another exhortation to perform our duty, 21—26, 27. To charitableness, 28. To avoid strife, 29, 30. Against envy, 31. The misery of the wicked and blessings of the just, 32—35.

1 MY son, forget not my law a; * but let thine heart keep my commandments b: * Deut. 8. 1. & 30. 16.

a My doctrine or counsel; or the Law of God, which might be called his Law, as the Gospel is called Paul's Gospel, 2 Tim. 2. 8. because delivered by him. b By diligent meditation and hearty affection.

2 For * length of days, and † long life, and peace shall they add to thee c. * Chap. 4. 10, 22. † Heb. years of life.

c God will add these Blessings which he hath promised to the obedient, Deut. 8. 18. & 30. 20. 1 Tim. 4. 8.

3 Let not mercy and truth d forsake thee: * bind them about thy neck e; write them upon the table of thine heart f. * Exod. 13. 9. Deut. 6. 8. Chap. 6. 21. & 7. 3.

d Either, 1 God's Mercy and Truth. So it is a promise, God's Mercy and Truth shall not forsake thee. Or rather, 2. That Mercy and Truth which is Man's duty. So it is a Precept: which seems most probable both from the form of the Hebrew Phrase, and from the following words of this Verse, which are plainly preceptive, and from the promise annex'd to the performance of this Precept in the next Verse. Mercy and Truth are frequently joyned together as they are in God, as Psal. 25. 10. & 57. 3. &c. or in men, as Prov. 16. 6. & 20. 28. Hos. 4. 1. and here. Mercy notes all that benignity, clemency, charity, and readiness to do good freely to others; Truth or Faithfulness respects all those duties which we owe to God or Man to which we have special Obligation from the Rules of Justice. e Like a Chain, wherewith Persons adorn their Necks, at it is expressed, Chap. 1. 9. which is fastned these and not easily lost. which also is continually in ones view. f Either 1. upon those Tablets which the Jews are faid to have worn upon their Breasts, which are always in sight. So he alludes to Deut. 6. 8. Or 2. in thy mind and heart, in which all God's commands are to be received and engraven, as is oft required in this Book, and every where. So the Table of the Heart seems to be oppoſed to the Tables of Stone in which God's Law was written, as it is Jer. 31. 33. 2 Cor. 3. 3.

4 So shalt thou find favour g, and ‖ good understanding h in the sight of God i and man. * Psal. 111. 10. ‖ Or, good success.

g i. e. Obtain acceptance, or be gracious and amiable to them. h Whereby to know thy duty, and to discern between good and evil. The serious practice of Religion is an excellent mean to get a solid understanding of it: as on the contrary a vitious life doth exceedingly debase and darken the mind, and keep men from the knowledge of Truth, which not only Scripture but even Heathen Philosophers have oft observed. Others render it, good success. Which seems not to suit well with the following words, i Grace or favour with God, and that understanding which is good in God's sight, i. e. truly and really; as a truly good Man is called good before God, in the Hebrew, Eccles. 7. 26.

5 Trust in the LORD k with all thine heart, and lean not unto thine own understanding l.

k Wholly and securely rely upon God's Promises and Providence for help and relief in all time affairs and dangers. l Think not to accomplish thy designs by the strength of thine own Wit without God's Blessing. Under this one kind of carnal confidence, which is most frequent and most plausible, he understands, and forbids all other confidences in bodily strength, wealth, friends, &c.

6 * In all thy ways m acknowledge him n, and he shall direct thy paths o. * 1 Chr. 28. 9.

m Designs and undertakings for the things of this Life or of the next. n Heb. know him, to wit, practically; or, own him, his Wisdom in following his counsels, his power and goodness, in expecting succeſs from him, his Soveraignty in managing all thy Affairs so as to please and glorifie him. o Assist and bless all thine endeavours, and keep thee from the paths of sin and destruction.

7 * Be not wise in thine own eyes p: fear the LORD q, and depart from evil. * Rom. 12. 16.

p Be not puffed up with vain conceit of thine own Wisdom, as if that were sufficient for the conduct of all thine affairs without direction or assistance from God, or without the Advice of others. q This he adds because the reverence and dread of the Divine Majesty will make a man, when he compareth himself with God, little and vile in his own eyes. Reverence God's Wisdom, and thou wilt despise thine own.

8 It shall be † health to thy navel r, and † marrow to thy bones. † Heb. medicine. † Heb. watering, or moistning.

r i. e. To thy Body, which is signified by the Navel, which is a noble and useful part of the Body, by which the Infant receives nourishment in the Womb, and which is the ligament or bond by which the bowels, a principal part of the Body, are united together and preserved. s Which is the nourishment and strength of the bones, and a great preserver and prolonger of life, as the decay of it is a chief cause of the weakness and dryness and decay of the Body. The sense of the Verse is, This Wisdom or fear of God is not only useful to the Salvation of the Soul, but also to the health and welfare of the Body, both as it prevents those Diseases and Distempers which are oft procured by sinful Lusts and Passions, and as it giveth us an inter-

Interest in all God's promises, and putteth us under the care of his special Providence.

*Exod.23. 19 & 34. 26. Deut. 26. 2. &c. Mal. 3.10. &c. Luk.14.13.

9 * Honour the LORD with thy substance t, and with the first-fruits u of all thine increase.

t Or, with thy Riches. Lay out thy Estate not only to please and advance thy Self or Family, but also to glorifie God; which is done by the payment of all those offerings and dues which God hath required; by giving according to thy Abilities, whatsoever is necessary for the support and advancement of God's Worship and Service in the World; by free and liberal Contributions to those whom God hath made his Deputies, and, as I may say, the Receivers of his Rents, to wit, faithful Ministers and good Christians, and all others who need and require thy help. The performance of these Duties is here called an honouring of God, partly because that word is sometimes used for giving of gifts, as 1 Tim. 5. 17. and elsewhere; and partly because it is a Testimony of our respects to God, of our obedience to him as our Soveraign Lord, and that in hard and costly Duties, of our thankfulness to him as our chief Benefactor and Donor of all that we have, and of our belief of his Promises made to the faithful practicers of this duty: which if they were believed, the most covetous Persons would be the most charitable. u Or, with the chief or best, or first, which answers to the first-fruits under the Law.

10 * So shall thy barns be filled with plenty x, and thy presses shall burst out y with new wine.

x This is not the way to diminish thy estate, as covetous and profane Persons alledge, but rather to increase it. y Shall be so filled, that they would burst out if not carefully prevented.

*Job 5.17. Psa.94.12. Heb. 12.5. Rev. 3.19.

11 * My son, despise not z the chastning of the LORD: neither be weary of his correction a.

z Either 1. by making light of it, or not being duly affected with it; and so this is one extream opposed to the other in the next clause. Or rather 2. by accounting it an unnecessary, and useless and troublesome thing, but rather esteem it as a priviledg and favour from God, and a benefit to thy self; for such Negatives do oft imply the contrary Affirmatives by a common figure called Meiosis, as Prov. 17. 21. and oft elsewhere. And this sense seems to agree better both with the following Clause, which repeats the same thing with some aggravation, after the manner; and with the reason used to enforce this and the following command, v. 12. which concerns not such as are insensible, but rather such as had too deep a sense of the evil of affliction. a Neither esteem it tedious and intolerable, but endure it with patience and chearfulness.

*Deut.8.5.

12 For whom the LORD loveth, he correcteth b, even as a Father the son, in whom he delighteth.

b Afflictions are not infelicities but benefits and comforts, because they are Testimonies of God's love, which is infinitely more desirable than any evil can be terrible. They shew God's purpose, and desire, and care to purge us from our sins, and to make us fit for his Presence and Kingdom. This and the former Verse seem to be here inserted in the midst of his commendations of Wisdom to remove an objection against the excellency and happiness of wise or pious men, taken from those many Calamities to which such Persons are frequently exposed, the reason of which Providence he here giveth.

† Heb. the man that draweth out understanding.

13 Happy is the man c that findeth d wisdom, and † the man that getteth e understanding.

c Notwithstanding all his afflictions. d Which supposeth his diligent searching for it, expressed, Chap. 2. 4. e Heb. that draweth out. Which expression implies two things, 1. that Man hath it not naturally in himself, but must have it from another, even from God and his word. 2. that men should labour for it, as those do that dig and draw forth Metals out of the Earth.

*Job 28. 15. &c. Psal.19.10. Chap.8.11 & 19.&16.18. † Heb. res uenue.

14 * For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the † gain thereof than fine gold b.

b It is more necessary and advantageous, because it is so, not only for this short life, but also to the future and everlasting life, in which Gold and Silver bear no price.

Ch. 8. 19.

15 She is more precious than rubies: and all the things thou canst desire, are not to be compared unto her c.

c For true worth and usefulness.

16 Length of days is in her right hand: and in her left hand riches and honour d.

d Wisdom is here represented as a great and generous Princess distributing gifts to her Subjects. She giveth them long life, &c. unless when she foresees that these things would prove snares and mischiefs to them, as they very frequently do to others.

17 Her ways are ways of pleasantness e, and all her paths are peace f.

e Are exceeding delightful, to wit, to those who know them and walk in them. Whose judgment is certainly to be preferred before the contrary opinion of ungodly men who are grosly ignorant of them, and professed enemies to them. f Procure a blessed tranquility in a Man's Mind and Conscience, prosperity in his undertakings, and eternal rest with God in glory.

*Chap.11. 30.

18 She is * a tree of life g to them that lay hold upon her h; and happy is every one that retaineth her i.

g She is a certain Pledge and mean of Everlasting life and happiness. He alludes to that Tree of Life, Gen. 2. 9. & 3. 22. which if eaten by Man in Paradise before his Fall, should have perpetually preserved him in life and health and vigor; and intimates, that this is the only reflorer of that life which we have lost by sin. h That eagerly pursue after her, and when they overtake her do greedily and gladly apprehend and embrace her, as the Hebrew word signifies.

*Psal.136. 5. i That holdeth her fast and is constantly resolved not to forsake her.

Ch. 8. 22, 27.

19 * The LORD by wisdom k hath founded the earth l; by understanding hath he ‖ established m the heavens.

k Either 1. by Christ, the co-essential and co-eternal Wisdom of God the Father. Or, 2. by that Divine perfection of Wisdom, which is the Fountain of that Wisdom that is in Man, which Solomon hath hitherto commended; and therefore the commendation of that Wisdom tends to the commendation of this which is a stream flowing from it. l Hath fixed it in the lowest part of the World. m Or, fitted or ordered them, framed them in that exquisite order which now they have.

20 By his knowledge the depths are broken up n, and the † clouds drop down the dew o.

n That great Abyss or Depth of Waters which was mixed with this, and contained in the bowels of the Earth did break forth into Fountains and Rivers for the use of men and beasts. Which is justly remembred here as an illustrious Effect of God's Wisdom, by which the Earth was made habitable, and the Waters serviceable. o Under which the Rain is comprehended as being of the same nature and use.

21 My son, let them p not depart from thine eyes q: keep sound wisdom and discretion.

p To wit, wisdom and discretion, of which he hath hitherto discoursed, and which are expressed in the end of this Verse, and may be referred hither by a Figure called Trajection; and the words may be put into this order, Let not sound Wisdom and Discretion depart from thine Eyes, but keep them diligently. The like Trajections are found in other Texts of Scripture. q i. e. From the Eyes of thy Mind. Constantly and seriously meditate upon them, and upon those excellent Precepts and Rules which proceed from them.

22. So shall they be * life unto thy soul r, and grace to thy neck s.

r Either 1. to thee or thy Person. They shall prolong and perpetuate thy life and make it life indeed, to wit, pleasant and happy; whereas a miserable life is reputed a kind of Death, and is often so called. Or, to thy Soul properly so called. They shall quicken and delight and save thy Soul. s Like a beautiful Chain or Ornament about thy Neck, as above v. 3. & Chap. 1. 9.

*Psal. 4. 8.

23 * Then shalt thou walk in thy way t † safely u, and thy foot shall not stumble x.

† Heb. confidently, without danger or fear; casting thy care upon God in the discharge of thy duty. x At those stumbling-blocks and temptations at which heedless Sinners commonly stumble and fall. Thou shalt thereby be kept from falling into sin, and that mischief which generally attends upon it.

*Chap. 11. 12. † Heb. securely. So ver. 29.

24 * When thou liest down, thou shalt not be afraid: yea, thou shalt lie down, and thy sleep shall be sweet y.

*Psal. 3. 5. & 4. 8.

y Free from distracting cares and terrours which oft-times haunt Sinners even in their sleep, because thy Mind shall be composed and serene through the sense of God's Favour and Providence, and the Confcience of thine own integrity.

*Psal.91.

25 * Be not afraid z of sudden fear a, neither of the desolation of the wicked b when it cometh.

z i. e. Thou shalt not be afraid. For that it is a Promise, seems most probable from the Context: only it is for greater Emphasis delivered in the form of a Precept; I allow thee and require thee not to be afraid, which is both thy duty and priviledge. a For sudden and unexpected evils are most frightful and grievous. And fear is here put for the evils feared, as Prov. 1. 26, 27. and oft elsewhere. b Either 1. actively, which they bring upon thee. Or rather 2. passively, which befals them, when the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the Inhabitants of the Earth for their Iniquity, as it is expressed, Isa. 26. 21. and thou mayest be apt to fear lest thou shouldst be involved in the common calamity; but fear not, for God will then hide thee in his Chambers, as he promised, Isa. 26. 20.

26 For the LORD shall be thy confidence c, and shall keep thy foot from being taken d.

c A sufficient and sure ground of confidence to thee. d In the snares either of sin, or of mischief.

† Heb. owners thereof.

27 With-hold not e good f from † them to whom it is due g, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it h.

e Do not deny it, but readily and chearfully impart it, which is implied in the contrary, as above, v. 11. and oft in this Book as we shall see. f Any thing which is good, either Spiritually, as counsel, comfort, reproof, &c. or civilly, the good things of the present life, as good is taken, Psal. 4. 6. called this Worlds good, 1 John 3. 17. g Heb. from the Lords or owners of it; from those who have any kind of right to it, either 1. by the Law of Justice and Equity prescribed both by the natural and written Laws of God, and by the civil Laws of men. So this place commands the payment of just debts, and the restitution of things either found or committed to our trust, or taken from others by fraud or violence. Or, 2. (which seems to be chiefly intended by comparing this with the next Verse, though the former is not to be excluded) by that great and soveraign Law of Love or Charity, which God hath written in the Hearts of men by Nature, and frequently and severely injoyned in his word, whereby every Man is obliged according to his ability and opportunity, to pity and relieve such as are in real want or misery: who in that case are here called the Owners of our goods, not in respect of men, as if men in want might seize upon the riches of others, but in respect of God who is the sovereign Lord, and only true Proprietary of all mens Estates, who giveth them when and to whom he pleaseth, and who doth not give away his right, nor make men absolute Lords of them to dispose them as they will, but only allows them the use and comfort of them upon such conditions, and with such reservations and Rent-charges, as I may call them, as he hath appointed, whereof this is one, that men should readily and freely communicate them to other men who need and require their help. And

And such actions, though they be acts of Charity and Bounty to men, yet, as to God, they are acts of Righteousness as they are called, Prov. 11. 18. 2 Cor. 9. 9. and in many other places. h Either 1. to withold it. Or, 2. to do good. And this Clause may be added, either 1. as a limitation, to intimate that God expects from men according to what they have, and not according to what they have not, as is said, 2 Cor. 8. 12. Or, 2. as an argument to perswade them to take the present season, to perform this duty when they are capable of so doing, because by the changes of this World, and the course of Divine providence they may be disenabled from the performance of this great and necessary duty, and then they will be without excuse.

28 * Say not i unto thy neigbour k, Go, and come again, and to morrow I will give l: when thou hast it by thee.

i The former Verse forbad the denial, and this forbids the delay of this duty. k Unto any Man, as the word Neighbour is commonly used in Scripture, as hath been oft proved. l To wit, what is thy due in manner before expressed, or what thou needst: for this word is generally used concerning free or charitable gifts, and not concerning due debts.

*Prov. 3. 29. m he dwelleth securely by thee n.

29 ‖ Devise not evil m against thy neighbour, seeing m Any thing injurious or hurtful. Having commanded doing of good, v. 27, 28. he here forbids doing or designing any evil. n Relying upon thine integrity: do not therefore betray thy trust, which is hateful even to Heathens.

30 Strive not o with a man without cause p, if he have done thee no harm q.

o Either by words before the Magistrate; or otherwise by thine actions. p Without just and necessary cause. q Whereby he clear himself.

*Psal. 24. & 41. 12. † Heb. familiarly. So ver. 35.

31 * Envy thou not † the oppressor r, and choose none of his ways s.

r For his impunity and success in his wicked designs, and the Wealth which he gains by his unrighteous practices. s For what men envy in others they seek to obtain for themselves.

32 For the froward t is abomination to the LORD u: * but his secret is with the righteous x.

t Or, perverse, who walketh in crooked or sinful paths as the Oppressour last mentioned; opposed to the upright Man, who is called right or straight, as Deut. 32. 4. Prov. 29. 27. u God hates him, and therefore sooner or later he must needs be extremely and eternally miserable. x They are God's Friends and Favourites, to whom he familiarly imparts, as men use to do to their Friends, his mind and counsels, or his secret favours and comforts to which other men are strangers. Compare Psal. 25. 14. Joh. 15. 15. Revel. 2. 17.

*Chap. 3. 33 * The Curse of the LORD is in the house of the wicked y: but he blesseth the habitation of the just.

y Not only upon his own Person, but also upon his Posterity and upon all his domestical concerns.

34 * Surely he scorneth z the scorners a: but he giveth grace b unto the lowly.

z He will expose them to scorn and contempt. a Proud and insolent Sinners, who make a mock at sin, Prov. 14. 9. and at God and Religion also, and despise all counsels and means of amendment. Comp. Psal. 1. 1. & Prov. 1. 22. b To wit, favour, both with himself and with men, as this Word and Phrase is used, Exod. 3. 21. & 11. 3. & 12. 36. Eccles. 9. 11. Luk. 2. 52. &c.

35 The wise shall inherit glory c; but shame † shall be the promotion of fools d.

c Shall enjoy it not only for a season, as wicked men oft-times do, but as an Inheritance constantly and to perpetuity. d Instead of that glory which they greedily seek they shall meet with nothing but ignominy. Or, as it is in the Margent, shame exalteth or lifteth up fools, i. e. it makes them manifest and notorious, as this very word is used, Prov. 14. 29. Or, as the words lie in the Hebrew Text, fools take or carry away (as this word is here rendred by divers both ancient and modern Translators, and as it is used, Levit. 6. 10, 15. and oft elsewhere) shame, to wit, as his proper Portion or Inheritance; which is here very fitly opposed to the Portion or Inheritance of the Just. And although the Verb be singular, yet it agrees well enough with the Noun plural, because this is taken distributively, such constructions being very usual in the Hebrew Text.

CHAP. IV.

Solomon sheweth the excellency of his Doctrine, 1—4. His counsel to get Wisdom, 5, 6. And Understanding, 7. The Honour which cometh thereby, 8, 9. The good effects of it, 10—12. He dehorts from the paths of the Wicked, by the evil consequences thereof, 13—19. And exhorteth to keep several precepts for the better government of himself, 20. Concerning Eyes, 21, 22. His Heart, 23. His Mouth, 24. And his feet, 25—27.

1 HEar, ye children, the instruction of a father a, and attend to know understanding.

a Of me your Teacher, who have paternal authority over you and affection to you.

2 For I give you good doctrine b; forsake ye not my Law c.

b Not vain or foolish or false or pernicious counsels, but such as are true and profitable. c God's Law or Commands delivered to you by my mouth. See on Chap. 3. 1.

*2 Sam. 12. 3. *Psa. 116. 16.

3 For I was † my fathers son d, * tender e and only beloved f in the sight of my mother, d In a special manner, his best-beloved Son and designed to be his Successor in the Throne. e Young and tender in years and capable of any impressions, and tenderly educated. f Heb. only, or the only Son: Or rather, because Bathsheba seems to have had other Sons,

*1 Chron. 5. 1. as an only Son, as dearly beloved as an only Son: in which sense this Title is given to Isaac, Gen. 22. 2, 12, 16. though he had another Son, and to others. And all these circumstances are mentioned to shew the necessity and great benefit of wholesome instruction, which his Royal Parents would not neglect, no not in his tender years, and thereby to prepare and excite them by his example to receive instruction.

*1 Chr.28. 9. *Ch. 7. 2.

4 * He taught me also, and said unto me g, Let thine heart retain my words; * keep my commandments and live h.

g The following Verses, at least as far as the Tenth Verse, are propounded as the words of David, that the Name of so great a King and Holy a Prophet might add the more Authority and Efficacy to his Counsels. h i. e. Thou shalt live. It is a promise in the form of a command, as Chap. 3. 25.

5 Get wisdom, get understanding: forget it not, neither decline from the words of my mouth i.

i From the belief and practice of my Word.

6 Forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee: love her k, and she shall keep thee.

k He intimates, that it is not enough to do what is good, which may sometimes proceed from worldly or sinful Motives, but that we must have a sincere and fervent love to it.

‖ Or, substance, Ch. 23.23.

7 Wisdom is the principal thing l; therefore get wisdom: and with all m thy ‖ getting get understanding.

l The most excellent of all possessions. m Even with the price of all, though it cost thee the loss of all which thou hast. Or, in or among all. Whilst you labour for other things, do not neglect this.

*Ch. 1. 9. ‖ Or, shall compass thee with a Crown of Glory.

8 Exalt her n, and she shall promote thee: she shall bring thee to honour o, when thou dost embrace her.

n Let her have thine highest esteem and affection. o Both with God and men: which Solomon knew by experience.

9 She shall give to thine head * an ornament of grace p: ‖ a crown of glory shall she deliver to thee.

p i. e. An acceptable or beautiful ornament, such as they used to put upon their heads.

*Psal. 91. 11, 12. Ch. 3. 23.

10 Hear, O my son, and receive my sayings: and the years of thy life shall be many.

11 I have taught thee in the way of wisdom q: I have led thee in right paths.

q Either, 1. which procureth Wisdom. Or 2. which Wisdom directeth thee to walk in.

*Ch.3.18.

12 When thou goest, thy steps shall not be straitned r, * and when thou runnest, thou shalt not stumble s.

r Thou shalt manage thine affairs with great facility and safety and success. It is a Metaphor from those who walk in a strait and uneven path, where they are apt to stumble and fall. s Not miscarry.

13 * Take fast hold of instruction, let her not go; keep her, for she is thy life t.

t The conducter, and preserver, and comfort of thy life.

*Psal.1.1. Ch. 1. 10,

14 * Enter not into the path of the wicked u, and go not x in the way of evil men.

u Avoid their courses and company. x Do not proceed further 15. If thou hast unadvisedly entred into it, do not perisht in it, but get thee speedily out of it.

15 Avoid it, pass not by it y, turn from it z, and pass away.

y Keep at a great distance from it. Compare Job 22. 23. Prov. 5. 8. z Shun all occasions of sin.

16 For they sleep not a except they have done mischief: and their sleep is taken away unless they cause some to fall b.

a They cannot compose themselves to sleep with quietness and satisfaction to their own minds. b Into their own Snares, either into sin, or into mischief.

17 For they eat the bread of wickedness c, and drink the wine of violence d.

c The sense is either, 1. Wickedness is as necessary and as pleasant to them as their Bread. Which suits well with the former Verse. Or, 2. They live wholly upon what they get by wicked courses. Which gives the reason of what he last said, why they could not sleep without prey. d i. e. Gotten by violence. See on the former Clause.

*Prov. 13. 9. & 24. 20. Job 18. 5. & 21. 17. & 38. 15. Psal. 18. 28. & 97. 11. Isa. 9. 2. & 42. 16. & 58. 8, 10. Dan. 12. 3. Matth. 13. 43. 2 Cor. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 1. 19. 2 Pet. 1. 19.

18 But the path of the just is as the shining light e, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day f.

e The common course of their lives or actions is pure and spotless, clear and certain, safe and comfortable, as light is. f Just men do daily more and more grow in knowledge, and grace, and consolation, until all be perfected and swallowed up in glory.

19 The way of the wicked is as darkness g: they know not at what they stumble h.

g Full of gross ignorance and errour, of uncertainty and confusion, of wickedness, of danger and misery: all which come under the name of darkness in Scripture use, and suit well with the context. h Heb. shall stumble. Though they are always in danger, yet they are always secure, and do not discern their danger, nor the cause, or manner, or time of their ruine, till they be surprized with it.

20 My Son, attend to my words: incline thine ear unto my sayings.

Or, Let thy ways be directed or disposed aright, as this Hebrew word signifies. Or, thy ways shall be established. So this is a promise to confirm the foregoing Precept. If thou doest ponder them, thou mayest expect God's blessing and good success in them.

* Deut. 5. 32. & 28. 14.
27 * Turn not to the right hand, nor to the left q: remove thy foot from evil.

CHAP. V.

An Exhortation to the study of Wisdom, 1, 2. To shun the company of strange Women, 3, 4, 5. The mischief of Whoredom and Riot, 14. In a married estate exhorted to Chastity in that state, and rejoyce with wife the of his youth 15—19. God's pondering our ways, an Argument to close with the Exhortation, 20, 21. The miserable end of the Wicked, 23.

1 MY son, attend unto my wisdom, and bow thine ear to my understanding.

2 That thou maist regard a discretion b, and that thy lips may keep knowledge c.

a Or, keep, i. e. hold fast, as it is in the next clause b Spiritual Wisdom for the conduct of thy Life, as this word is used, Prov. 1. 4. and elsewhere in this Book. c That by wise and pious discourses thou maist preserve and improve thy Wisdom for thine own and others good.

*Ch. 2. 16. & 6. 24. † Heb. palate.
3 * For d the lips of a strange woman drop as an hony-comb e, and her † mouth is smoother than oil.

d It concerns thee to get, and to use discretion, that thou maist be able to resist and repel those manifold Temptations to which thou art exposed. e Her words and discourses are sweet, and charming and prevalent.

4 But her end is bitter as wormwood f; sharp as a two-edged Sword.

f Her design, and the effect of that lewdnesse to which she enticeth men, is the sinners destruction.

* Chap. 7. 27.
5 * Her feet g go down to death: her steps take hold on hell.

g Her course or manner of Life.

6 Lest thou shouldst ponder the path of life h, her ways are moveable i, that thou canst not know them k.

h To prevent thy serious consideration of the way and manner of rescuing thy self from this deadly course of Life. i Various and changeable. She transforms her self into several shapes to accommodate her self to the humours of her Lovers, and hath a Thousand Arts and Deceits to ensnare them, and hold them fast. k Thou canst not discover all her subtil practices, and much less deliver thy self from them.

7 Hear me now therefore, O ye Children, and depart not from the words of my mouth.

* Chap. 7. 7, 8, &c.
8 * Remove thy way far from her, and come not nigh the door of her House l.

l Lest thine eyes affect thine Heart, and her allurements prevail over thee.

9 Lest thou give thine honour m unto others n, and thy years o unto the cruel p.

m Thy Dignity and Reputation, the strength and vigour of thy Body and Mind, which is an honour to a man, and which are commonly wasted by Adulterous practices. n Unto Whores and their Husbands and Children and Friends. o The flower of thine age, thy youthful years. p To the Harlot, who though she pretends ardent Love and kindness to thee, yet in truth is one of the most cruel Creatures in the World, wasting thy Estate and Body without the least pity, and then casting thee off with scorn and contempt, and when her Interest requires it, taking away thy very life, of which there are innumerable examples, and damning thy Soul for ever.

10 Lest strangers q be filled with † thy wealth, and thy labours r be in the house of a stranger, q Not only the strange women themselves, but Bawds, Panders, and other Adulterers, who are in league with them. r Wealth gotten by thy labours.

11 And thou mourn at the last s, when thy flesh, and thy body t are consumed u, s Bitterly bewail thy own madness and misery when it is too late. t Thy Flesh, even thy Body; the particle, and, being put expositively. u By those manifold diseases which filthy and inordinate Lusts bring upon the Body, of which Physicians give a very large and sad Catalogue, and the Bodies of many Adulterers give full proof.

12 And say, How have I hated instruction x, and my heart despised reproof y?

x Oh what a mad beast have I been to hate and sleight the fair warnings which were given me, and against mine own knowledge, to run headlong into this pit of destruction! Which are not the words of a true penitent mourning for, and turning from his sin, but only of a man who is grieved for the sad effects of his delightful Lusts, and tormented with the horrour of his own guilty Conscience. y I did with my whole Heart abhor all admonitions.

13 And have not obeyed the voice of my Teachers z, nor enclined mine ear to them that instructed me.

z Of my Parents and Friends, and Ministers, who faithfully and seasonably informed me of those mischiefs and miseries which now I feel.

14 I was almost in all evil a, in the midst of the congregation and Assembly b.

a Oh what a miserable man am I! There is scarce any misery in respect of Estate, or Body, or Soul, into which I am not already plunged. The words also are and may well be rendred thus, In a moment I am come into all evil. In how little a time, and for what short and momentany pleasures am I now come into extream and remediless misery! b I who designed and expected to enjoy my Lusts with secrecy, and impunity, am now made a publick example and shameful spectacle to all men, and that in the Congregation of Israel, where I was taught better things, and where such Actions are most infamous and hateful.

15 Drink Waters out of thine own cistern; and running waters out of thine own well c.

c This Metaphor contained here, and v. 16, 17, 18, is to be understood, either 1. of the free and lawful use of a mans estate, both for his own comfort, and for the good of others. Or rather 2. of the honest use of Matrimony, as the proper Remedy against these filthy practices. This best suits with the whole context both foregoing and following: and thus it is explained in the end of v. 18. So the sense is, Content thy self with those delights which God alloweth thee, with the sober use of the Marriage Bed. Why shouldst thou ramble hither and thither, trespassing against God and men, to steal their Waters which thou mightest freely take out of thine own Cistern or Well. The ground of the Metaphor is this, that waters were scarce and precious in those Countries, and therefore men used to make Cisterns and Wells for their own private use. And the same Metaphor of Waters, and of a Pit, or Well is applied to things of this nature elsewhere, as Prov. 23. 27. Isa. 48. 1. & 51. 1.

16 Let thy fountains d be dispersed abroad e, and rivers of Waters in the streets.

d Thy Children proceeding from thy Wife, called thy fountain, v. 18. and from thy self, as the Israelites are said to come from the Fountain of Israel, Deut. 33. 28. Psal. 68. 26. Compare Isa. 51. 1. And Fountains are here put for Rivers flowing from them, as it is explained in the next clause, and as it is Psal. 104. 10. by a Metonymy of the Cause for the Effect. And this title may be the more fitly given to Children, because as they are Rivers in respect of their Parents, so when they grow up, they also become Fountains to their Children. e They shall be multiplied, and in due time appear abroad in the World to thy Comfort and Honour, and for the good of others: whereas Whores are commonly barren, and men are ashamed to own the Children of Whoredom.

17 Let them be only thine own, and not strangers with thee f.

f Hereby thou mayest be secured, that thou dost not father and leave thine Estate to other mens Children; whereas the Parents of Harlots Children are common or uncertain.

18 Let thy fountain g be blessed h: and rejoyce with the wife i of thy youth k.

g Thy Wife, as the next clause explains it. h She shall be blessed with Children; for Barrenness was esteemed a curse and reproach, especially among the Israelites. Or rather, she shall be a Blessing and a Comfort to thee, as it follows, and not a Curse and a Snare, as an Harlot will be. i Seek not to Harlots for that delight which God alloweth thee to take with thy Wife. So here he explains the foregoing Metaphor, and applies it to his present design. k Which thou didst marry in her and thine own youthful days, with whom therefore in all reason and justice thou art still to satisfie thy self, even when she is old. Or he mentions Youth, because that is the season in which men are most prone to unclean practices, against which men are commonly fortified by the infirmities of Old Age.

19 Let her be as the loving hind l, and pleasant roe; † Heb. water thee.
let her breasts m † satisfie thee at all times n; and † be † Heb. thou always in her love.
thou ravished o always with her love.

l Or, as the beloved Hind, Heb. the Hind of Loves; as amiable and delightful as the Hinds are, either 1. to their Males, the Harts; or 2. to Princes and great men, who used to make them tame and familiar, and to take great delight in them, as hath been noted by many Writers; of which see my Latine Synopsis. m i. e. Her Loves and Embraces, expressed by lying between the Breasts, Cant. 1. 13. Compare Ezek. 23. 3. 8. 21. n At all convenient times: For that there may be excess in the use of the Marriage-Bed is manifest, not only from many Scriptures, but from the light of Nature, and the consent of wise and sober Heathens, who have laid restraints upon men in this particular. A man may be drunk with his own Wine, and intemperate with his own Wife. Or, in all ages and conditions. Do not only love her when she is young and beautiful, but also when she is old and deformed. o Love her fervently. It is an Hyperbolical Expression.

20 And why wilt thou, my son, be ravished with a strange Woman p, and embrace the bosome of a stranger?

p Why wilt thou destroy and damn thy self for those delights which thou maist enjoy without sin or danger?

*Ch. 6. 21 * For the ways of man are before the eyes of the LORD q, and he pondereth all his goings r.

q God sees all thy filthy actions, though done with all possible cunning and secrecy. r He taketh an exact account of all their doings, that he may recompence them according to the kinds, degrees, numbers, and aggravations of all their unchast actions.

22 His own iniquities * shall take the wicked himself, and he shall be holden with the cords of his † sins s.

s In vain doth he think to disentangle himself from his lusts by repenting when he grows in years, and to escape punishments; for he is in perfect bondage to his Lusts, and is neither able nor willing to set himself at Liberty, and if he do escape the rage of a jealous Husband, and the sentence of the Magistrate, yet he shall be infallibly overtaken by the righteous Judgment of God.

23 * He shall die without instruction t, and in the greatness of his folly u he shall go astray x.

t Because he neglected Instruction. Or, without Correction or Amendment. He shall die in his sins, and not repent of them, as he designed and hoped to do before his death. u Through his stupendious Folly, whereby he cheated himself with hopes of Repentance or Impunity, and exposed himself to endless torments for the momentany pleasures of sinful Lusts. x From God and from the way of Life, and from eternal Salvation.

CHAP. VI.

A Dehortation against suretyship, 1. The danger of it, 2. And the way of delivery, 3—5. Sluggards reproved by a Similitude of the Ant, 6—11. The carriage of the wicked described, 12—14. And his sudden ruine 15. Of seven things which are displeasing to God, 16—19. The benefits of keeping the Commandments, 20—24. The Mischief of Adultery, 25. It's evil consequences, 26—35.

1 MY son, if thou be * surety a for thy friend; if thou hast stricken thy hand b with a stranger c:

a To wit, rashly, without considering for whom, or how far thou dost oblige thy self, or how thou shalt discharge the Debt, if occasion require it. Otherwise suretyship in some cases may be not only lawful, but an Act of Justice, and Prudence, and Charity. See Gen. 42. 37. & 43. 8. Philem. v. 19. Or, to (as this prefix most commonly signifies) a friend. b Obliged thy self by giving thine Hand, or joining thine Hands with another mans, as the custom then was in such cases: Of which see Job 17. 3. Prov. 17. 8. and 22. 26. c With the Creditor, whom he calls a Stranger, because the Usurers in Israel, who lent Money to others for their necessary occasions, upon condition of paying use for it, were either Heathens, or were reputed as bad as Heathens, because this practice was forbidden by Gods Law, Deut. 23. 19. Or, to or for a Stranger; for here is the same prefix which is rendred for in the former clause. And so he may imply, that whether a man be surety to, or for, a friend, or to, or for, a stranger, the case and course to be used is much of the same kind.

2 Thou art snared d with the words of thy mouth; thou art taken with the words of thy mouth.

d Thy Freedom is lost, and thou art now in Bondage to another.

3 Do this now, my son, and deliver thy self, when thou art come into the hand e of thy friend f, go humble thy self g, ‖ and make sure thy friend h.

e Into the Power. f Either 1. Of the Creditor, who possibly may be also thy Friend; yet take the following course with him, and much more if he be a Stranger. Or 2. Of the Debtor, for whom, as being thy Friend, thou didst become Surety; whereby thou art not only in the Creditors Power, to exact payment, but also in the Debtors Power, by his neglect or unfaithfulness, to expose thee to the payment of the Debt. And this may seem best to agree both with v. 1. where Friend is taken in that sense, and is distinguished from the Creditor who is called a stranger, and with the words here following; for this humbling of himself was not likely to have much power with a Stranger, and a griping Usurer; but it might probably prevail with his Friend, either to take effectual care to pay the Debt, or at least to discharge him from the Obligation, or to secure him against it some other way. g Heb. Offer thy self to be trodden upon, or Throw thy self down at his feet. As thou hast made thy self his Servant, bear the fruits of thine own Folly, and humbly and earnestly implore his Patience and Clemency. h Or, and prevail with thy Friend, strive to win him by thine incessant and earnest solicitations. Or, honour or magnifie thy Friend, which is fitly and properly opposed to, and indeed is in some good measure done by the humbling a mans self before him.

4 Give not sleep to thine eyes, nor slumber to thine eye-lids h.

h To wit, until thou hast taken care for the discharge of this obligation. Be not secure, nor negligent, nor dilatory in this matter.

5 Deliver thy self as a roe from the hand of the Hunter k, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler.

k With all possible expedition, as the Roe runs swiftly away.

6 Go to the ant l, thou sluggard; consider her ways m, and be wise:

l This is another distinct precept; and it is for the most part as needless to seek, as hard to find, Coherence in the Proverbs and Counsels of this Book. m Her actions and manner of living, especially her Diligence and Providence, which are the things commended in her, v. 7, 8. of which Naturalists give many Instances, as that the Ants watch the fittest seasons for all things, that they provide most plentifully against the time of Famine, that they never hinder, but always assist one another in their work, and unite their force together to carry away such things as are too large or heavy for one of them, that they prepare fit cells or repositories for their Corn in the ground, and such as the Rain cannot easily reach; and if through excessive rain their Corn be wet, thy bring it forth to be dried, that they bite off the ends of the Grains of Corn that they may not grow, &c.

7 Which having no guide, overseer, or ruler n, n Which might direct them in, or quicken them to the work, as the Bees have their Kings, and many other Creatures have their Leaders. This heightens their commendation.

8 Provideth her meat in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest o.

9 * How long wilt thou sleep p, O sluggard? when *Ch. 24. 33. wilt thou arise out of thy sleep?

p When the Ants are watchful and labour not only in the day-time, but even by night, when the Moon shineth.

10 Yet a little sleep, a little slumber r, a little folding of the hands s to sleep.

r This he speaks in the person of the sluggard, refusing to arise, and requiring more sleep, that so he might express the disposition and common practice of such persons. s Which is the gesture of men composing themselves to sleep.

y He vents his wickedness, as by his speech, so also by his gestures, whereby he secretly signifies what he is afraid or ashamed to express openly to his complices, his intentions or desires of some evil towards another person: which having in the general declared by the motion of his Eyes or Feet, he points out the particular person by his fingers.

25 * Lust not after her beauty in thine heart x; neither let her take thee with her eye-lids y.

x Do not give way to, nor delight thy self with unchaste thoughts or affections. Compare Mat. 5. 28. y Either with her Beauty, which consists much in the Eyes; or rather with her amours and wanton glances.

*Ch 29.3. † Heb. the woman of a man, or a mans wife.

26 For * by means of a whorish woman a man is brought to a piece of bread z: and † the adultress will hunt for the precious life a.

z To extream Poverty, so as to want and be forced to beg his bread. a To take away a mans life; either by consuming his body and spirits, and so shortning his days; or more directly and strictly, when she hath any great provocation to it, or any prospect of considerable advantage by it. Or, for the precious Soul, which she corrupteth and destroyeth. But I prefer the former sense.

27 Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his cloths not be burnt b?

b The question implies a denial: he cannot escape burning. No more can he who burns in Lust avoid Destruction.

28 Can one go upon hot coals, and his feet not be burnt?

29 So he that goeth in to his neighbours wife c: ‖ Or, not be acquitted. whosoever toucheth her d, shall ‖ not be innocent e.

c That lieth with her, as the Phrase signifies, Gen. 19. 31. and 29. 21, 23, &c. d i. e. Hath carnal knowledge of her, as this word is used, Gen. 20. 6. 1 Cor. 7. 1. and in Terence, and other Writers. e Shall be punished as a Malefactor either by God or Man.

‖ Or, sight. 30 Men do not ‖ despise f a thief, if he steal to satisfie his Soul when he is hungry:

f i. e. Abhor or reproach him, but rather pity and pardon him, who is urged by meer necessity to these practices.

31 But if he be found, he shall restore seven-fold g, he shall give all the substance of his house.

g Caush. How doth this agree with Gods Law, which required only that he should restore double, or, at most, four-fold, or five-fold? Exod. 22. 1, 4. Answ. 1. The number of Seven may be here put indefinitely for many times, as it is Gen. 4. 24. Levit. 26. 28. and in many other places. 2. Some think that as Thefts were multiplied, so the punishment of it was increased in Solomon's time, or at least, that it was the Practice of some Nations to require this seven-fold restitution. 3. He speaks not of that restitution which the Law required, but of that which either the wronged Person being potent might force the Thief to make, or which the Thief would willingly give rather than be exposed to publick shame; as appears by the following Clause, wherein he adds to this seven-fold restitution all his substance, which no Law of God or Man required. See on Exod. 22. 4.

32 But whoso committeth adultery with a woman lacketh † understanding h: he that doth it, destroyeth † Heb. his own soul. his own soul i.

h Is a brutish and silly Man, who madly rusheth upon these filthy courses without any sense or consideration of the horrid shame, and certain destruction which attends upon them. i Or, life: is guilty of self-murder and of Soul-murder.

33 A wound k and dishonour shall he get, and his reproach shall not be wiped away l.

k Civil or corporal punishment from the Magistrate, or rather from the Womans Husband, as it follows. l Although it be forgiven by God, yet the reproach and scandal of it remains.

34 For jealousie is the rage of a man m; therefore he will not spare in the day of vengeance n.

m It enflames a Man with rage and fury against the Adulterer. n When he hath an opportunity to avenge himself upon the delinquent.

† Heb. he will not accept the face of any ransom. 35 † He will not regard any ransom: neither will he rest content, though thou giveſt many gifts o.

o He will accept of no other recompence for the injury beneath thy life.

CHAP. VII.

Solomon again perſwadeth to keep his Lawes, and delight in Wisdom, 1—5. A young man void of Understanding is inſnared by an Harlot, 6—9. A deſcription of an Harlot, 10, 11. From her Practice, 12, 13. Of her Subtilty, 14—20. By which ſhe gain'd compliance to her deſire, 21, 22. The danger of it, ſet forth under the ſimilitude of a Bird, 23. He craveth their attention, 24. And debarreth from uncleanneſs, 25—27.

*Chap. 2. 1. MY Son, keep my words, and * lay up my commandments with thee.

*Lev. 18 5. Chap. 4. 4. 2 * Keep my commandments, and live a: and my law as the apple of thine eye b.

a i. e. Thou ſhalt live. A promiſe in the form of a command, as Prov. 3. 25. b With all poſſible care and diligence, as men guard that part from all dangers, yea even from the leaſt more. The Eye is a moſt noble and neceſſary, and therefore highly eſteemed and beloved part of the Body, and the Apple thereof is the moſt honourable, and beautiful, and uſeful part of that part, and it is a moſt tender part, eaſily hurt or deſtroyed, and therefore needs to be diligently watched.

3 * Bind them upon thy fingers c; write them upon the table of thine heart d. *Deut. 6. 8. & 11. 18. Or, Ch.

c As a Ring which is put upon them, and is continually in a Man's Eye. Conſtantly remember them, and meditate upon them. d Fix & ſet them in thy mind and affection. See on Prov. 3. 3.

4 Say unto wiſdom, Thou art my ſiſter; and call underſtanding thy kinſwoman e:

e When other ſooliſh young men ſeek wanton Miſtreſſes, whom they frequently call Siſters or Kinſwomen, let wiſdom be thy Miſtreſs; acquaint and delight thy ſelf with her, and let her have the command of thy Heart, and the conduct of thy life.

5 * That they may keep thee from the ſtrange woman f; from the ſtranger which ‖ flattereth with her words. *Ch. 2. 16. ‖ Or, ſmoothes her words.

f This priviledge Solomon doth ſo oft inculcate, either becauſe he found in himſelf the great power and beſotting nature of luſtful inclinations; or becauſe he obſerved theſe Vices to abound more in his time, in which Peace and Proſperity made way for Luxury and Uncleanneſs.

6 For at the window of my houſe I looked through my caſement g, g This is either an hiſtorical relation, or rather a parabolical repreſentation of that which frequently happened.

7 And beheld among the ſimple ones, I diſcerned among † the youths, a young man h void of underſtanding, † Heb. Simi.

h Whoſe ſtrength and heat made him moſt ſubject to luſtful impreſſions, and who wanted judgment and experience as well as grace to keep him from ſuch courſes.

8 Paſſing through the ſtreet i near her corner k, and he went the way to her houſe l; i Idle and careleſs. k Near the corner of the Street in which her Houſe ſtood, ſuch places being moſt convenient for that wicked purpoſe, as giving opportunity either for the diſcovery of Paſſengers in ſeveral Streets, or for the eſcape of ſuch as might be in danger of being taken in her Houſe. Comp. v. 12. l Not with intention to act groſs filthineſs with her, as may be gathered from the following paſſages, but to gratifie his curioſity, and to underſtand the manner of ſuch Perſons, and to pleaſe himſelf with the ſight of her, or diſcourſe of her.

9 In the twilight † in the evening m, in the black, † Heb. the cuſtoming of the day. and dark-night n.

m When the Day labour being ended he was at leiſure for any thing; and when ſuch Strumpets uſed to walk abroad for prey. n When it begun to be black and dark.

10 And behold, there met him a woman with the attire of an harlot o, and † ſubtil p of heart. † Heb. ſecured.

o With an habit and carriage agreeable to her quality and deſign. p Or, wary or reſerved, as ſhe ſhewed in her following diſcourſe, wherein ſhe propoſeth all things which might invite him, and conceals whatſoever might diſcourage him.

11 * She is loud q and ſtubborn r, * her feet abide not in her houſe s. *Ch. 9. 13. * Tit. 2. 5.

q Or, clamorous, or full of talk, which ſerved her deſign. r Rebellious againſt God, and againſt her Husband, and incorrigible by all admonitions of Miniſters or Friends. s She minds not her buſineſs, which lies at home, but gives up her ſelf wholly to idleneſs, and pleaſure, which ſhe ſeeks abroad with other men.

12 Now is ſhe without t, now in the ſtreets u, and lieth in wait at every corner x.

t Standing or waiting without or nigh the Door of her houſe. u In places of reſort. x At the corners of the Streets, where ſhe might either conceal or diſcover her ſelf, as ſhe ſaw fit.

13 So ſhe caught him and kiſſed him, and † with an impudent face ſaid unto him, † Heb. ſtrengthned her face and ſaid.

14 † I have peace-offerings with me; this day have I payed my vows y. † Heb.

y I have paid my Peace-offerings which I had Vowed. Whereby ſhe ſignifies, either 1. that ſhe was no common Harlot, but one of good repute for Religion. Or rather 2. that ſhe had plentiful and excellent Proviſions at her Houſe for his entertainment. For the Peace offerings were to be of the beſt Fleſh, Levit. 22. 21. and a conſiderable part of theſe Offerings fell to the Offerers ſhare, wherewith they uſed to feaſt themſelves and their friends. See Levit. 3. 3, &c. and 7. 31, &c. and 19. 6, &c. and 22. 30, &c. whereas the Burnt-offerings were wholly conſumed, and the Fleſh of the Sin-offerings and Treſpaſs offerings belonged to the Prieſt. Peace Offerings ſtrings upon me.

15 Therefore came I forth to meet thee; diligently to ſeek thy face z, and I have found thee a.

z As not being able to take any pleaſure in my Feaſt without thy company. a By an happy providence of God complying with my deſires.

16 I have deckt my bed with coverings of tapeſtry, with carved works, with fine linnen of Egypt b.

b She deſigns to inflame his luſt by the mention of the Bed, and by its Ornaments and perfumes.

17 I have perfumed my bed with myrrhe, aloes, and cinnamon.

18 Come, let us take our fill of loves until the morning, let us ſolace our ſelves with loves.

19 For the good-man c is not at home; he is gone a long journey;

c Whom ſhe doth not call her Husband, leſt the mention of that name ſhould awaken his Conſcience or Diſcretion.

20 He hath taken a bag of money † with him d, and will come home at the ‖ day appointed e. † Heb. in his hand. ‖ Or, great day.

d Which is an evidence that he deſigns to go far, and to ſtay a conſiderable time. e So that we need not fear any ſurprital.

21 With much fair ſpeech f ſhe cauſed him to yield g; with the flattering of her lips ſhe forced him h.

f Which implies that her alluring words were more effectual with him than her impudent kiſſes, which poſſibly had a little alienated his mind from her. g Whereby he ſignifies that no provocation to ſin is a ſufficient excuſe for ſin. h She prevailed over him. Which argues that there was ſome reluctancy in his judgment or conſcience againſt it.

22 He goeth after her † ſtraightway i, as an oxe to the ſlaughter k, or as a fool to the correction † of the ſtocks l. † Or, to.

i Without delay and conſideration. k Either being drawn and driven to it: Or going to it ſecurely, as if it were going to a good Paſture. l Or, which is more agreeable to the order of the words in the Hebrew Text, as one in Fetters, or, bound with Fetters, to the correction of a Fool, i. e. to receive ſuch correction or puniſhment, as belongs to fools. Which may imply, either 1. that he hath no more ſenſe of the ſhame and miſchief which he is bringing upon himſelf than a Fool. Or, 2. that he can no more reſiſt the temptation, nor avoid the danger than a man faſt tied with Chains or Fetters can free himſelf, although his be a moral and voluntary and not a natural impotency.

23 Till a dart ſtrike through his liver m, as a bird haſteth to the ſnare, and knoweth not n that it is for his life.

m i. e. His vital parts, whereof the Liver is one. Till his life be loſt, as it is explained in the next Clauſe. n Which may be referred either to a fooliſh and inconſiderate young Man; or to the ſilly Bird to which he is compared, which comes to the ſame thing.

24 Hearken unto me now therefore, O ye children, and attend to the words of my mouth.

25 Let not thine heart decline to her ways o; go not aſtray in her paths.

o Either to the Paths which lead to her Houſe: or to her manner of living.

26 For ſhe hath caſt down many wounded; yea many ſtrong men p have been ſlain by her.

p Men that excel others, either 1. in bodily ſtrength, upon which they preſume, which yet is waſted, and by degrees ruined by theſe courſes. Or, 2. in wiſdom and fortitude and reſolution. Whereby he implies how much more neceſſary it is for a weak and fooliſh young Man to uſe all poſſible care and diligence to avoid this miſchief.

27 * Her houſe is the way to hell q, going down to the cambers of death. *Ch. 9. 18. Iſa. 5. 14.

q Or, to the Grave; for the word is uſed in both ſenſes; and this ſenſe ſeems better to agree both with the foregoing and following words. Although, without repentance, Hell will certainly be their portion, and their firſt death will be followed by the ſecond.

CHAP. VIII.

Wiſdom's Fame, Call, and Exhortation, 1—9. Her Excellency, Nature, and Hatred of evil, 10—13. Her Power, 14—16. and Love to the Godly, 17. Her Riches, 18, 19. Her Eternity, 20—30. An Exhortation to true Her Delights in the Children of Men, 31. An Exhortation to true Wiſdom, 32, 33. And the Bleſſedneſs of them that are truly Wiſe, 34, 35. The fruits of Sin, 36.

DOth not * wiſdom a cry? and underſtanding put forth her voice b! * Iſa. 58. 1.

a It is a great Queſtion what this Wiſdom is, of which Solomon diſcourſeth ſo largely and profoundly in this Chapter. Some underſtand it of that attribute or perfection of the Divine nature called Wiſdom, whereby God perfectly knoweth all things, and maketh known to men what he judgeth neceſſary, or expedient for them to know. Others underſtand it of the ſecond Perſon in the God-head, the Son of God, who is called the Wiſdom of God, Luk. 11. 49. And it cannot fairly be denied that ſome paſſages do beſt agree to the former, and others to the latter Opinion. Poſſibly both may be joined together, and the Chapter may be underſtood of Chriſt conſidered partly in his Perſonal capacity and partly in regard of his Office which was to impart the mind and will of God to Mankind, which he did, 1. by revealing it to, and writing it upon the mind of Man, at his firſt Creation: for it was Chriſt who then gave being, and life, and light to Mankind, as is undeniably evident from John 1. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c. 2. By publiſhing it unto the Holy Patriarchs and Prophets in the time of the Old Teſtament; for it was Chriſt who ſpake and diſcovered things to them from time to time, as is manifeſt from 1 Pet. 1. 11. & 3. 18, 19, 20. and from many other Scriptures both of the Old Teſtament, as I have formerly noted in their proper places, and in the New Teſtament, as we ſhall ſee hereafter. 3. By declaring it from his own mouth and by his Apoſtles and Miniſters under the Goſpel. b Clearly and audibly inſtructs men how to avoid thoſe fleſhly luſts? He oppoſeth the inviting words of Wiſdom to the ſeducing ſpeeches of the Harlot.

2 She ſtandeth in the top of high places c: by the way in the places of the paths d.

c Where ſhe may be beſt ſeen and heard, not in corners and in the dark, as the Harlot did. d Where many paths meet, where there is a great concourſe, and where Travellers may need direction.

3 She crieth at the gates e, at the entry of the City f, at the coming in at the doors g.

e The places of Judgment, and of the confluence of People. f To invite Paſſengers at their firſt coming, and to conduct them to her Houſe. g To wit, of her Houſe, as the Harlot ſtood at her Door to invite Lovers.

4 Unto you, ‖ O men, I call, and my voice is ‖ to the ſons of men b. ‖ Or, O great men. Pſal. 62, 9.

b To all men without exception, even to the meaneſt, who are thus called, Pſal. 49. 2. ‖ Or, to mean men.

5 O ye ſimple i, underſtand † Wiſdom; and ye fools k, be ye of an underſtanding heart. † Heb. ſubtilty.

i Who want knowledge and experience, and are eaſily deceived. k Wilful and obſtinate Sinners.

6 Hear, for I will ſpeak of † excellent things l; and the opening of my lips ſhall be right things. † Heb. princely

l Heb. of Princely things: worthy of Princes to learn and practiſe things. them. Or, ſuch as excel common things as much as Princes do ordinary Perſons.

7 For my mouth ſhall ſpeak m truth, and wickedneſs is † an abomination to my lips n. † Heb. the abomination of my lips.

m Heb. ſhall meditate, i. e. ſhall ſpeak not raſhly, and haſtily, but what I have well conſidered and digeſted. n I hate to ſpeak it; therefore you may be aſſured that I ſhall not deceive you.

8 All the words of my mouth o are in righteouſneſs; there is nothing † froward or perverſe in them p. † Heb.

o All my Precepts, Promiſes, Threatnings, &c. p Not the leaſt mixture of vanity, or error, or folly in them, as there is in the words of the wiſeſt Philoſophers, &c. wreathed.

9 They are all plain q to him that underſtandeth r, and right to them that find knowledg s.

q Evident and clear to their minds: or, right, juſt and good r Either to him who with an honeſt mind applies himſelf to the ſtudy of them in the diligent uſe of all the means appointed by God to that end: or to him whoſe mind God hath enlightned by his Spirit, though they ſeem otherwiſe to ignorant and carnal-minded men. s That are truly wiſe and diſcerning Perſons and taught of God.

10 Receive my inſtruction, and not ſilver t; and knowledg rather than choice gold.

t i. e. Rather than Silver, as ſuch negative expreſſions are underſtood, Gen. 45. 8. Exod. 16. 8. Jer. 7. 22. & 16. 14, 15. and in many other places. Though withal he ſeems to intimate the inconſiſtency of theſe two ſtudies and deſigns, and the great hinderance which the love of Riches give to the ſtudy of Wiſdom.

11 * For wiſdom is better than rubies; and all the things that may be deſired, are not to be compared to it. * Job 28. 15. Pſal. 19. 10. & 119. 127.

12 I wiſdom dwell with ‖ prudence t, and find out knowledg u of witty inventions x. Ch. 3. 14, 15. & 16. 16. ‖ Or, ſubtilty.

t I do not content my ſelf with high Speculations, but my inſeparable Companion is Prudence to govern all my own actions, and to direct the actions of others, by good counſels. This he ſaith, becauſe ſome Perſons have much wit and knowledge, and nothing of diſcretion. u i. e. I know them as clearly and certainly as if I had found them out by diligent ſearching. Or, I find out, is put for I help men to find out, as the Spirit is ſaid to intercede, Rom. 8. 26. when it helpeth us to do ſo. x Of all ingenious deſigns and contrivances for the ſervice and glory of God, and for the good of our ſelves and others. But why may it not be rendred, of wicked devices, as this very word is tranſlated, Prov. 12. 2. & 14. 17. & 24. 8. For ſurely this is one great work of Prudence to diſcover and ſo avoid all evil counſels or devices, and the effects of them. But this I propoſe with ſubmiſſion, becauſe I have not the concurrence of any Interpreter in this Expoſition.

13 The fear of the LORD y is to hate evil z; pride a and arrogancy, and the evil way b, and the froward mouth c do I hate.

y Which he had before noted to be the beginning of Wiſdom, Chap. 1. 7. z It conſiſts in a careful abſtinence from all ſin, and that not from carnal or prudential Motives, but from a true diſlike and hatred of it. a Which he mentions firſt as that which is moſt hateful to God, and moſt oppoſite to true Wiſdom and to the fear of God, which conſtantly produce humility. b All wicked Actions, eſpecially ſinful cuſtoms and courſes. c Falſe Doctrines, and bad Counſels and Deceits.

14 Counſel is mine, and ſound wiſdom d: I am underſtanding e, † I have ſtrength f. † Heb. is d All ſolid and ſubſtantial and uſeful, yea eſſential Wiſdom is natural and eſſential to me, for the word properly ſignifies eſſence. strength e By my nature and eſſence, as was now ſaid. Or, I am the Author of Underſtanding; as Job. 17. 3. This is Life Eternal i. e. this is the cauſe or means of it. f Courage and reſolution to execute all my Counſels and to conquer all difficulties.

15 * By me kings reign g, and princes decree juſtice h. *Dan. 2. 21. Rom. 13. 1.

g Either 1. They get their Kingdoms by mine appointment and providence. Or rather 2. They rule their Kingdoms wiſely, and juſtly, and happily by my counſel and aſſiſtance. For this beſt ſuits with the next Clauſe. h Their injuſtice or wickedneſs is from themſelves, but all the juſt and good things which they do, they owe to my conduct.

16 By me princes rule, and nobles, even all the judges of the earth.

17 I love them that love me i, and * thoſe that ſeek me early k ſhall find me. * Jam. 1. 5.

i I do not deſpiſe their love, though it be but a ſmall and inconſiderable thing to me, but I kindly accept it and will recompence it with my love and favour. k i. e. With ſincere affection, and great diligence, and above all other perſons or things in the world. Which he he mentions as the effect and evidence of their love: for otherwise all men pretend to love God.

*Ch. 3. 16. 18 * Riches and honour are with me: yea, durable riches and righteousness l.

l Which he mentions here, either 1. as the best and surest way to get and to keep Riches, for Estates unjustly gotten quickly vanish, as is manifest both from Scripture and from common observation. Or 2. to signifie that this Wisdom gives both Worldly, and Spiritual or Heavenly Blessings together to its followers, whereas God gives Riches alone to ungodly men, and they are to expect no other Portion.

*Ch. 3. 14. 19 * My fruit is better than gold, yea, than fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver.

‖ Or, walk. 20 I ‖ lead in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment m.

m Keeping at an equal distance from both extreams, and from the very borders of them: which is called a putting away iniquity far from us, Job 22. 23.

21 That I may cause those that love me, to inherit substance n: and I will fill their treasures.

n Substantial, and true, and satisfying happiness: which is here opposed to all worldly enjoyments, which are said not to be, Prov. 23. 5. which are but meer shadows and dreams of felicity.

22 The LORD possessed me o in the beginning p of his way q, before his works of old.

o As his Son by Eternal Generation, who was from Eternity with him, as is said, Joh. 1. 1. and in him as he also was in me, Joh. 14. 10. p Yea and before the beginning, as it is largely expressed in the following Verses. q Either 1. of his counsels or decrees. Or rather 2. of his works of Creation, as it follows.

23 I was set up r from everlasting, from the beginning s, or ever the earth t was.

r Heb. anointed, ordained or constituted to be the Person by whom the Father resolved to do all his works, first to create, and then to uphold and govern and judge, and afterwards to redeem and save the World; all which works are particularly ascribed to the Son of God, as is manifest from, Joh. 1. 1. &c. Col. 1. 16, 17. Heb. 1. 3. and many other places, as we may see hereafter in their several places. s Before which there was nothing but a vast Eternity. t Which he mentions, because this together with the Heaven, was the first of God's visible works.

24 When there were no depths u, I was brought forth x: when there were no fountains abounding with water.

u No abyss or deep Waters either mixed with the Earth, as they were at first, or separated from it. x Begotten of my Fathers Essence.

†Heb sunk. 25 Before the mountains were † settled y; before the hills, was I brought forth.

q In contemplating the wonderful Wisdom and Goodness of God in the making and ordering of all his Creatures, and of Man especially. r To uphold them by my Power and Providence, to reveal my self and my Fathers mind and will to them from Age to Age, to assume their Nature and to redeem and save them, which I would not do for the fallen Angels.

32 Now therefore s hearken unto me, O ye children: for * blessed are they that keep my ways.

*Psal. 1. s Seeing I have such a true love to you, and seeing I am so thoroughly acquainted with my Fathers mind, and so excellently qualified to 128. Luk. 11. 28. declare it to your Counseller and Ruler.

33 Hear instruction, and be wise, and refuse it not t.

t Or, do not make it void, or unprofitable to you by your own sloth or wilfulness.

34 Blessed is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates, waiting at the posts of my doors u.

u As Servants and Clients, and others wait at the doors of Princes or Persons of eminency for place, or power, or wisdom, that they may be admitted to speak or converse with them.

35 For whoso findeth me, findeth life, and shall * † obtain favour of the LORD.

*Ch. 8. 12. 36 But he that sinneth against me x, wrongeth his own soul y: all they that hate me z, love death a.

x By the neglect or contempt of, or rebellion against my commands. y Is guilty of self-murder and of Soul-murder. z i. e. Who reject and disobey my counsels and live wickedly, which in God's account is an hating of him, as is here implyed and elsewhere, as Exod. 20. 5. Deut. 7. 10. & 32. 41. a Not directly or intentionally, but by consequence, because they love those practices which they know will bring certain destruction upon them.

CHAP. IX.

Wisdom's call to her People unto blessed communion and fellowship with her self, set out under a similitude of making a Feast, 1. Her Preparation, 2. and Invitation, 3—5. She deserteth from evil company, 6. Her Councels concerning reproof and Instruction, 7—9. A description of the Fear of God, 10. with the Benefits thereof, 11, 12. The Nature of a foolish Woman, 13—15. Her Invitation, 16. and Arguments to enforce the Simple, 17. The Miserable state of them that are deceived by Her, 18.

1 WIsdom hath built her house a: she hath hewn out her seven b pillars c.

a For the reception and entertainment of her Guests, as appears from the following passages. This House is opposed to the Harlots House mentioned, Prov. 7. 8. and it is to be understood, either 1. of the heavenly House or the Palace of Glory: Or rather 2. of the Church which Christ, the Wisdom of the Father, hath erected, and established in the World, in which this following Feast is made which is called God's House, 1 Tim. 3. 15. Heb. 3. 3, 4. &c. Many Pillars; whereby is intimated both the beauty and the stability of the Church. c Prophets, and Apostles, and Ministers of Holy things, which, in Scripture are called Pillars, as Gal. 2. 9. and elsewhere.

2 * She hath killed † her beasts d; she hath mingled her wine e; she hath also furnished her table f.

*Mat. 22. 3, &c. † Heb. killing. d i. e. Made provision for the Guests: which is meant of the Ordinances, Gifts, Graces, Comforts and Eternal Felicities which God doth offer and give to men in and by the Church. e Either 1. with Spices, to make it strong and delightful, this mixed Wine being mentioned as the best, Prov. 23. 29, 30. Or 2. with Water, as they used to do in those hot Countries, partly for refreshment, and partly for wholsomness. Whereby also may be intimated that Wisdom teacheth us temperance in the use of our comforts. f With all necessaries, and now waits for the Guests.

3 She hath sent forth her maidens g; * she crieth † upon † the highest places h of the city:

† Heb. wings of the high places. g Her Servants to invite the Guests, Ministers of the Word whom he calls Maidens partly for the decency of the parable, for Wisdom being compared to a great Princess, was fit to be attended upon by Maidens; and partly to shew that God by his Word did work sweetly, though strongly, and did allure and draw, rather than drive sinners to repentance. h Either upon the tops of the Houses which were flat: Or rather from such high seats as those from which Judges delivered their Sentences, and Officers made Proclamations, for the conveniency of the Peoples better hearing.

4 Whoso is simple i, let him turn in thither: as for him that wanteth understanding k, she saith to him, i Ignorant, and weak, and subject to delusion and willing to learn: to shew that Wisdom rejects those Scholars, who are proud and self-conceited. k Heb. heart, which signifies understanding, Jer. 5. 21. Hos. 7. 11.

5 * Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine, which I have mingled.

*Cant. 5. 1. Isa. 55. 1.

6 Forsake the foolish l, and live: and go in the way of understanding m.

l i. e. The wicked, and their courses and society: you must either forsake them or me, for we are irreconcilable enemies. m Which leads to it and is prescribed by it.

7 He that reproveth a scorner n, getteth to himself shame o: and he that rebuketh a wicked man, getteth himself a blot p.

n The connexion may be conceived thus, Having invited the simple, he forbids the invitation of scorners: Or thus, He sheweth who who he meant by the foolish, v. 6. even scorners and wicked men, as they are here called, and he presseth his last advice of forsaking them because there was no good, but hurt to be got by conversation with them. o Partly from the scorner who will revile and deride him; and partly from others, because he is fruitrated in his design and hope, and by his imprudence hath brought an inconvenience upon himself. p A censure or reproach.

*Psal. 1. 1. 8 * Reprove not a scorner q, lest he hate thee r: rebuke a wise man s, and he will love thee t.

q An obstinate and incorrigible sinner who scornfully rejects and despiseth the means of amendment. Thus Physicians deny Physick to Persons in desperate condition. r Whereby thou wilt not only expose thy self without necessity to his malice and rage, but also make thy self utterly uncapable of doing him that good which possibly thou mightest do by other more prudent and proper means. s Who is opposed to the Scorner, to intimate that Scorners, howsoever they are thought by themselves or others to be witty or wise, yet in God's account, and in truth, are fools. t Both for that faithfulness and charity which he perceiveth in thee, and for that benefit which he receiveth from thee.

*Lev. 19. 17. 9 * Give instruction u to a wise man, and he will be yet wiser; teach a just man x, and he will increase in learning.

u In the Hebrew it is only, give: for as receiving is put for learning, Prov. 1. 3. so giving is put for teaching both in Scripture and in other Authors: of which see my Latin Synopsis. x Called a wise man in the former branch; to intimate that good men are the only wise men.

*Job 28. 28. Psal. 111. 10. Prov. 1. 7. & 15. 33. 10 * The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom: and the knowledg of the holy y is understanding z.

y Either 1. of holy men, whether such as all Saints learn, or rather such as the holy men of God, the Servants of this Wisdom, teach from God's Word: Or rather 2. of Holy things, the Hebrew word being here taken in the Neuter Gender, as it is Numb. 5. 17. and elsewhere: for this seems best to answer to the fear of the Lord in the other branch. z Is the only true and necessary and useful knowledge.

*Ch. 10. 27. 11 * For by me thy days shall be multiplied: and the years of thy life shall be increased.

12 If thou be wise, thou shalt be wise for thy self a: *Mal. 3. 15. but if thou scornest, thou alone shalt bear it b.

a Thou dost not profit me, but thy self by it: I advise thee for thine own good. b The blame and mischief of it falls wholly upon thee, not upon me or my Word or Ministers who have warned thee.

*Ch. 5. 11. 13 * A foolish woman c is clamorous d; she is simple and knoweth nothing e.

c By which he understands, either 1. folly, which is opposite to that Wisdom of which he hath been so long discoursing, and so it may include all wickedness, either in principle, as Idolatry, Heresie, &c. or in practice. Or 2. the Harlot: which with submission, seems most probable to me, partly because all the following description exactly agrees to her, especially what is said, v. 17. as also v. 18. which in effect was said of the Harlot before, Ch. 2. 18. & 5. 5. and partly because such transitions from discoursing of Wisdom, to a discourse of Harlots are frequent in Solomon, as we have seen Chap. 2. 16. & 5. 3. & 7. 5. d Speaks loudly that she may be heard and vehemently that Persons might be moved by her persuasions. e To wit, aright, nothing that is good, nothing for her good, though she be subtil in little artifices for her own wicked ends.

14 For she sitteth at the door of her house f on a seat, in the high places of the city.

f Which notes her idleness and impudence and diligence in watching for occasions of sin.

15. To call passengers, who go right on their ways g:

† Heb. the high places. g Who were going innocently and directly about their business without any unchast design; for others needed none of those invitations or offers, but went to her of their own accord. And he sides such loud Persons take a greater pleasure in corrupting the innocent.

16. Whoso is simple h, let him turn in hither; and as for him that wanteth understanding, she saith to him, h Which title is not given to them by her, for such a reproach would not have allured them, but driven them away; but by Solomon who represents the matter of her invitation in his own words that he might discover the truth of the business, and thereby dissuade and deter those whom she invited.

*Prov. 20. 17. 17. * Stolen waters i are sweet k, and bread † eaten in secret is pleasant.

i By which he understandeth, either 1. Idolatry or other wickedness, which in Solomon's time before his fall were publickly forbidden and punished, but privately practised, Or rather 2. Adultery. k Partly from the difficulty of obtaining them; partly from the art which men use in contriving such secret sins; and partly because the very prohibition renders it more grateful to corrupt Nature.

18. But he knoweth not l that the dead are there, and that her guests are in the depths of hell.

l i. e. He doth not consider it seriously, whereby he proveth his folly

CHAP. X.

From this Chapter to the five and twentieth, are simply Observations of Moral Virtues, and their contrary Vices, with Excellent Rules for the Government of our Conversation.

1 THe proverbs of Solomon a. * A wise b son maketh a glad father c: but a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother d.

*Ch. 15. 20.

a Properly so called; for the foregoing Chapters, though they had this title in the beginning of them, yet in truth were only a Preface or preparation to them, containing a general Exhortation to the study and exercise of wisdom, to stir up the minds of men to the greater attention and regard to all its Precepts, whereof some here follow. Of which in general these things are fit to be observed, to help us in the understanding of them: 1. That these sentences are generally distinct and independent, having no coherence one with another, as many other parts of Scripture have: 2. That such sentences being very short, as their nature requires, more is understood in them than is expressed, and the Causes are commonly to be gathered from the Effects, and the Effects from the Causes, and one opposite from another, as we shall see, 3. That they are delivered by way of comparison and opposition, which for the most part is between Virtue and Vice, but sometimes is between two Virtues, or two Vices b i. e. Prudent, and especially virtuous and godly, as this word is commonly meant in this Book, and in many other Scriptures. c And a glad Mother too: for both Parents are to be understood in both branches, as is evident from the nature of the thing which affects both of them, and from parallel places, as Ch. 17. 25. & 30. 17. although one only be expressed in each branch, for the greater Elegancy. d The occasion of her great sorrow, which is decently ascribed to the Mothers, rather than to the Fathers, because their passions are most vehement, and make deepest impression in them.

2 * Treasures of wickedness e profit nothing f: but righteousness g delivereth from death h.

*Ch. 11. 4.

e Either 1. All worldly Treasures and Riches, which are called the Mammon of Unrighteousness, Luke 16. 9. of which see the Reasons there, to which Righteousness or Holiness, which are spiritual and heavenly Riches, may be fitly opposed. Or 2. Such Treasures as are got by any sort of unjust or wicked practices. f They do the possessor no good, but, which is implied from the opposite member, much hurt; they do not only not deliver him from death, but oft expose him to it, either from men, who take away his Life that they may enjoy his Wealth, or from God, who shortens his days, and makes his death more terrible, as being attended with guilt, and with the second death. g Either 1. True Holiness of Heart and Life. Or 2. Justice and Equity in the getting of Riches, or an Estate honestly obtained, which may be fitly opposed to Treasures of Wickedness. Or 3. A liberal and charitable use of Riches, which is oft called Righteousness, as Psal. 112. 9. Dan. 4. 27. 2 Cor. 9. 10. &c. and is indeed but an act of Justice, of which see on Prov. 3. 27. which also is conveniently opposed to an unjust getting of Riches; and so this contains a great Paradox, yet a certain truth, that the charitable laying out of Money is more profitable to men than an unjust and covetous laying it up. h Oft times from temporal death, because men generally love, and honour, and will assist such persons in cases of danger, and God gives them the blessing of a long Life; and always from eternal death, when such Charity proceeds from a sincere and honest mind, and a good Conscience.

*Psal. 33. 19. ‖ Or, the wicked for edneſs. 3 * The LORD will not suffer the soul of the righteous to famish i: but he casteth away ‖ the substance k of the wicked l.

i Will preserve them from Famine, according to his Promises, Psal. 34. 10. and elsewhere, which, as other temporal Promises, is not to be understood simply and universally, but with this limitation, except this be necessary for Gods Glory, which in all reason should over-rule the Creatures good, and for their own greater benefit. For to say nothing of eternal Felicities which follow every good mans death, it is certainly in some times and cases, a less evil for men to be killed with Famine, than to survive to see and feel those miseries which are coming upon them, and upon the Land where they live. k As this word is used, Psal. 52. 7. or the Wickedness, i. e. the wealth gotten by wickedness, as Righteousness, v. 2. is by divers understood of an Estate got with Righteousness. l Who by that means shall be exposed to want and Famine.

*Ch. 12. 24. & 19. 15. *Ch. 13. 4. & 22. 5. 4 * He becometh poor, that dealeth with a slack hand m: but * the hand of the diligent maketh rich n.

m Negligently and slothfully, as appears from the diligence opposed to it in the next branch, and from the use of this word in this sense, Prov. 12. 24, 27. & 19. 15. Jer. 48. 10. Heb. with a deceitful hand, so called, partly because it seems and pretends to do something, when in truth it doth nothing; and partly because such persons usually endeavour to maintain themselves by deceit and wickedness, which they cannot or will not do by honest labour and diligence. n Not by it self, nor necessarily, as is manifest from Experience, and is noted, Eccles. 9. 11. but through God's blessing, which commonly is given to such, by comparing this verse with v. 22. here following.

5 He that gathereth o in summer p, is a wise son: but he that sleepeth in harvest is a son that causeth shame q.

o The fruits of his field. p In harvest, as it follows, which is a part of Summer. He that watcheth for and improveth the proper seasons and opportunities of doing good to himself, and to others. q Both to himself for his folly, and that Poverty and Misery caused by it, and to his Parents, to whose negligent or evil Education such things are oft, and sometimes justly imputed.

6 Blessings are upon the head of the just r: but * violence covereth the mouth of the wicked s. * Ver. 11.

r All sorts of blessings are wished to them by Men, and conferred upon them by God. He saith, upon their head, either to shew that these Blessings come from above: and that openly in the sight of the World, so that he can confidently speak of them to God's Praise, and to his own Comfort and Honour; or because Blessings were commonly pronounced by men with this Ceremony by laying their hands upon the Head of the party blessed. s Violence (either 1. Their own Violence or Injustice, which may be here put for the fruit or punishment of it, as Iniquity is oft put for the punishment of Iniquity. Or 2. Violence, or the violent and injurious, and mischievous practices of others against them, deserved by their own Violence committed against others, and inflicted upon them by the curse and righteous Judgment of God) shall cover the mouth of the wicked, i. e. shall fall upon them. This Phrase of covering their Mouth, is used either. 1. With allusion to the ancient custom of covering the Mouths and Faces of condemned Malefactors; of which see Esth. 7. 8. Job 9. 24. Or 2. To signifie that the Curse and Judgment of God upon them should be so manifestly just, that their mouths should be stopped, and they not be able to speak a word against God, or for themselves. Or 3. to intimate that Gods judgment upon them should be publick and evident to all that behold them, as any covering put upon a mans Mouth or Face is, as for the same reason the Blessings of the Just were said to be upon their Heads. And the Mouth may be put for the Face, or Countenance, by a Synecdoche: But this clause is otherwise rendred by divers learned Interpreters, the mouth of the wicked covereth (i. e. concealeth or smothereth within itself, and doth not utter that) violence or injury, which he meditateth in his Heart, and designeth to do to others, and therefore shall be accursed and miserable. But this suits not so well with the former clause, wherein the Blessings of the just are not meant actively of those Blessings which they wish or give to others, but passively of those Blessings which others with or give to them, and consequently this violence is not understood of that which they do to others, but of that which is done to them by others.

*Pf.112.6. 7 * The memory of the just is blessed t: but the name of the wicked shall rot u.

t i. e. Honourable and acceptable to those who mention them. Compare Job 31. 20. Psal. 62. 5. u Shall perish, and be cursed and detestable amongst men, shall stink above ground.

8 The wise in heart will receive commandments x: † Heb. a fool of lips. ‖ Or, shall be beaten. but † a prating fool y ‖ shall fall z.

x Is ready to hear and obey the Counsels and Precepts of God and of Men, by which means he shall stand fast and live. y One who is slow to hear, and swift to speak, who instead of receiving good Admonitions, cavils, and disputes against them. In the Hebrew he is called a fool of Lips, either because he discovers the folly of his Heart by his Lips, and thereby exposeth himself to the mischief here following, or because he is without heart, as is said of Ephraim, Hos. 7. 11. or, his Heart is little worth, as is said here, v. 20. or because he speaks rashly without any consideration. Or, it may be rendred, a fool by his lips, i. e. by his foolish and wicked speeches, contrary to the commands of God, by talking much and ill, when it is more comely and necessary for him to hear and receive Instruction from others. z To wit, into mischief: or, be punished, as the word is used, Hos. 4. 14. or, be beaten, as below v. 10.

*Pfal.23.4. 9 * He that walketh uprightly a walketh surely b: but he that perverteth his ways c shall be known d.

a Who is sincere, and just, and faithful in his dealings with God and with men. b Or, securely, or confidently, as the word properly signifies, and is here rendred by all the ancient Interpreters, and by most of the others, quietly resting upon Gods Favour, and gracious Providence for his Protection, and being supported by the Testimony of a good Conscience, and therefore not fearing nor caring who knows or observes his Actions, which he endeavours to approve both to God, and to men. c That walks perversly, or frowardly, or in crooked and sinful paths; that dealeth hypocritically and deceitfully with God, or with men, using all possible crafts to conceal his wickedness. d His wickedness shall be publickly discovered, and so he shall be exposed to all that shame and punishment which his sins deserve, and which he thought by his cunning practices to avoid.

*Ch.6.15. 10 * He that winketh with the eye e causeth sor-*Verf. 8. ‖ Or, shall be beaten. row f: but g a prating fool h ‖ shall fall.

e That secretly and cunningly designs mischiefs against others, as this Phrase is used, Psal. 35. 19. Prov. 6. 13. f To others, and afterwards to himself. g Or, and, as it is in the Hebrew: for vice is not here opposed to virtue, as it is in many other Proverbs, but one vice is compared with another. h Who is so far from such deceits, that he runs into the other extream, and uttereth all his mind, as is said of the Fool, Prov. 29. 11. and thereby speaks many things offensive to others, and mischievous to himself.

*Pf.37.30, 31. Ch. 14.14. Ver. 6. 11 * The mouth of a righteous man is a Well of life i: but * violence covereth the mouth of the wicked k.

i Continually sending forth Waters of Life, or such good and wholsome words, as are very refreshing and useful both to themselves and others, for the preserving of their natural Life, and for the promoting of their Spiritual and eternal Life. We have the same Phrase, Psal. 36. 9. k The same words were used before, v. 6. where see the Notes; and they may be understood in the same sense here, and the opposition of this clause to the former, may be conceived thus: As the Mouth of a good man speaketh those things which are good and beneficial to himself and others, so the Mouth of the wicked uttereth violence, or injury, or things injurious to others, which at last fall upon himself. But it is no new thing for the same words and Phrases to be taken in different senses, in the same Chapter, and sometimes in the same verse, as Matth. 8. 22. and elsewhere; and therefore these words may here be, and are, by many translated and interpreted thus, the mouth of the wicked covereth (i. e. concealeth,) violence or mischief, which he plotteth against others. And so here is a double opposition between the Righteous and the wicked; first in the contrary effects, the former causeth Life, the latter mischief and death; and secondly in the manner of producing them, the righteous doth it by uttering his words, and the wicked doth it by concealing his mind.

12. Hatred stirreth up strifes l: but * love covereth all sins m. *(Cor.13. 1 Pet.4.8.

l Upon every slight occasion, by filling men with suspicions and surmises, whereby they imagine faults where there are none, and aggravate every small offence. m Either doth not severely observe, or doth willingly forget and forgive the Offences or Injuries of others and so preventeth contention and mischief.

13. In the lips of him that hath understanding wisdom is found n: but * a rod is for the back of him † Heb. heart. that is void of † understanding p. *Ch. 26.3.

n His Wisdom sheweth it self in his prudent speeches, by which he escapeth that rod which fools meet with, and gaineth that Reputation and Advantage to himself which Fools lose. o He may expect Rebukes and Punishments from God and men. p Which he sheweth by his foolish words.

14. Wise men lay up q knowledg r: but the * mouth of the foolish is near destruction s. *Ch.18.7.

q To wit, in their minds and memories, to be brought forth thence upon fit occasions. r Whereby they may be enabled to speak both what, and when it is seasonable, for their own or others good. s Fools are more forward to lay out than to lay up, and for want of knowledge speak much and foolishly, whereby they frequently bring destruction upon themselves.

15. * The rich man's wealth is his strong city t: the destruction u of the poor is their poverty. *Ch.18.11.

t Either 1. really, as money is called a defence, Eccl. 7. 12. because it oft-times redeems a man from Dangers and Calamities. Or, 2. in his own conceit, as tis explained, and fully expressed, Ch. 18. 11. It makes him secure and confident. u It is the cause of their ruin. Or, the contrition, or the terrour, or consternation, as others, both ancient and modern, render it. Their Poverty takes away their Spirit and Courage, and fills them with Fear and Despair

16. * The labour of the righteous tendeth to life x: the fruit y of the wicked to sin z. *Ch.11.

x Either 1. the design of his labour is only this, that he may have wherewith to live honestly, without sinful shifts. Or, 2. the fruit or effect of his labour or industry (as this word, labour, is most commonly understood, and this best answers to the following clause, where fruit is put instead of this labour) is the preservation, and prolongation of this Life, and the obtaining of eternal Life, to which an honest and conscientious Diligence in mens Worldly Callings doth in some manner contribute. y The fruit of all their Labours and endeavous. z Tendeth to sin, serves only for fuel to mens Pride, and Luxury, and Worldliness, and by that means oft causeth Temporal, and always, without Repentance, Eternal Death.

17 He is in * the way of life a that keepeth instruction b: but he that refuseth reproof, ‖ erreth c. *Ch.6. ‖Or,is in error.

a Which leadeth to Life and Blessedness. b That observeth and obeyeth the wholsom Counsels of God, and of good men. c To wit, from the way of Life, or into the ways of sin, and so of Death. Heb. leadeth into errour, or seduceth, to wit, himself, as appears by the opposition of this to the former clause; he wittingly and willingly exposeth himself to Temptation and Wickedness, because he rejecteth that Admonition which is a proper Preservative from it.

18 He that hideth hatred with lying lips d, and he e that uttereth a slander, is a fool f.

d With flattering words and false pretences of Friendship. e Heb. he, i. e. both of them, one no less than the other. So he condemneth two opposite vices, secret Hatred, and manifest Slander. f Because a sinner; and because the mischief of these things will fall upon himself.

19 In the multitude of words there wanteth not sin g: but he that refraineth his lips h is wise.

g Men that love and commonly use much talking, do frequently run in many miscarriages, because such persons for the most part want Wisdom to order their words aright, Eccles. 5. 3. and speak hastily without care and consideration. h That forbeareth to utter what cometh into his mind, before he hath weighed whether it be true, and fit to be spoken, or not.

20 The tongue of the just is as choice silver i: the heart k of the wicked is little worth.

i Of great worth and use, bringing credit to himself, and much benefit to others. k And consequently the Tongue, which speaketh out of the abundance of the Heart, Mat. 12. 34.

21 The lips of the righteous feed many l: but fools die for want † of Wisdom m. † Heb. hearts.

l By their wise and pious Discourses, Counsels, and Comforts, which are so many evidences of their Wisdom. m They have not Wisdom to feed or preserve themselves, much less to feed others.

22 The blessing of the LORD, it maketh rich n, and he addeth no sorrow with it o.

n Riches are not got by Wisdom or diligence, but only by God's Favour and Blessing. o i. e. With that blessing which gives Riches, but gives them content and comfort in their Riches, which is a singular gift and blessing of God, of which see Eccles. 2. 24, 26. & 3. 13. & 5. 17, 18. whereas the Riches which wicked men get, are attended with God's Curse, with many discontents, with tormenting cares and fears, with horrours of Conscience, and with the just dread of a sad account to God for them.

23 * It is as a sport p to a fool to do mischief q: but a man of understanding hath wisdom r.

p He doth it with ease and delight, and without any shame, or remorse, or fear. q Or, as others, to work wickedness, yea, great and premeditated wickedness, as the Hebrew word properly signifies. r Whereby he is kept from committing Wickedness, and even learned Interpreters rendred thus, and, or is is Wisdom to a man of Understanding, it is a sport or pleasure to him to practise Wisdom or Piety. Which Translation makes the Opposition more evident.

24 The fear s of the wicked it shall come upon him: but the desire of the righteous shall be granted t.

s The evils which he feareth, or hath cause to fear, as fear is oft taken. t God will not only prevent the mischiefs which they fear, but grant them the good things which they desire.

25 As the whirlwind passeth u, so is the wicked no more x: but * the righteous is an everlasting foundation y. *Pro.10.25.

u Which is suddenly gon, though with great noise and violence. x His Power and Felicity is lost in an instant. y Or, hath an everlasting, &c. His hope and happiness is built upon a sure and unmovable Foundation.

26 As vinegar to the teeth z, and as smoak to the eyes, so is the sluggard a to them that send him.

z Which by its cold and sharpness it offends. a Unserviceable and vexatious.

27 * The fear of the LORD † prolongeth days b: but * the years of the wicked shall be shortned. *Pro.10.27. †Heb. addeth.

b Partly because it gives them a title to the Promise of long life, as well as to other Promises; partly because it gladdeth the heart, which doth good like a Medicine, Prov. 17. 22. and preserves a man from those wicked practices which tend to the shortning of the days.

28 The hope of the righteous shall be gladness c: but the * expectation of the wicked shall perish d. *Pro.10.28.

c Though at present it be mixed with doubts, and fears, and disappointments, yet at last it shall be accomplished, and turned into enjoyment. d Shall be utterly frustrated, and so end in sorrow.

29 The way of the LORD e is strength f to the upright; but destruction g shall be to the workers of iniquity.

e Either 1. The way or course of God's Providence in the government of the world. Or rather 2. The way of God's Precepts, as God's way or ways are most commonly understood in Scripture, or walking in God's ways; for this is opposed to working iniquity in the next clause. f Gives strength, i. e. either courage and confidence: or support and protection from that destruction here following. g Or, terrour or consternation, as the word properly signifies, and many render it. The design of this verse is to shew that Piety is the only true Policy.

30 * The righteous shall never be removed h: but Pro.10.30. the wicked shall not inhabit the earth i.

h They shall live long and happily here, when this is most expedient for them, and eternally in Heaven. i They shall not have so much as a long and quiet abode upon Earth, unless where this is a Curse and Mischief to them, and much less shall they have any possession in Heaven.

31 * The mouth of the just bringeth forth k wisdom l: but the froward tongue shall be cut out m. *Pro.10.31.

k Freely, and abundantly, and constantly, as the Earth or a Tree bring forth their proper fruit, as the word properly signifies. l Wise Counsels, by which he directeth and secureth himself and others. m Because it bringeth forth not Wisdom, but Folly and Wickedness.

32 The lips of the righteous know n what is acceptable o: but the mouth of the wicked speaketh † frowardness. *Pro.10.32. †Heb. turneth aside.

n To wit, practically, so as to consider and speak Knowledg is here ascribed to the Lips, as it is to the Hands, Psal. 78. 72. because they are conducted by knowledg and Wisdom. o To God and good men, or what is truly worthy of acceptation; for this is opposed to what is froward or wicked in the next clause.

CHAP. XI.

1 A * † false balance a is abomination b to the LORD c: but † a just weight is his delight. *Pro.20.23. †Heb. a stone of deceit.

a The use of all false weights and measures in commerce. b. i. e. Highly abominable, as the abstract signifies; which is opposed to the false opinion of men who account it a fineness of wit, or, at worst, but a trivial fault. c Partly because this wickedness is acted under a colour of Justice; and partly because it is destructive to humane Society, and especially to the poor, whose Patron the Lord owneth himself to be.

2 * When pride cometh, then cometh shame d: but *Pro.11.2. with the lowly is Wisdom e. †Heb. humble.

d Pride, as it is the effect of Folly, so it bringeth a man to contempt and destruction, such persons being commonly hated both by God, and by all men. e Whereby they are kept from those foolish and wicked actions which expose men to shame.

3 * The integrity of the upright f shall guide them g: but the perverseness of transgressors shall destroy them h. *Pro.11.3.

f Their sincere Obedience to Gods Laws. g Shall keep them from crooked and dangerous courses, and lead them in a right and safe way. h Those wicked devices by which they design and expect to secure themselves, shall be the instrument of their destruction.

4 * Riches profit not in the day of Wrath i: but righteousness k delivereth from death l. * Ch. 10.2. Ezek.7.19. Zeph.1.18.

i In the time of God's Judgments, when he is executing Wrath and Vengeance upon Sinners. k Or, Mercy, as this word is oft rendred, or Charity to the poor, which is fitly opposed to Riches laid up in store. l It moveth God to deliver them oft times from temporal Calamities, and always from eternal Death, where such actions are done from a right Principle.

5 The righteousness of the perfect shall † direct his way m: but the wicked shall fall by his own wickedness. †Heb. rectifie.

m Shall bring all his designs and endeavours to an happy issue, by comparing this clause with the next.

6 The righteousness of the upright shall deliver them n: but * transgressors shall be taken in their own naughtiness. * Ch. 5.22.

n From many snares and dangers.

7 When a wicked man dieth his expectation shall perish o: and the hope of unjust men p perisheth.

o All his hope and felicity, which he placed wholly in earthly things, is lost and gone with him. p So it is a repetition of the same thing in other words. Or, as divers render it, the hope of their strength, i. e. which they place in their carnal strength, their Riches, Children, Friends, &c. So this is added by way of aggravation.

8 * The righteous is delivered out of trouble, and the wicked cometh in his stead q. *Ch.21.18.

q Is by God's Providence brought into the same miseries which either he designed against the Righteous, or had formerly inflicted upon the Righteous, and now lately removed from them.

9 An hypocrite with his mouth r destroyeth his neighbour: but through knowledge s shall the just be delivered t.

r By his corrupt communication, whereby he endeavours to draw him to errour or wickedness. s To wit, of God, and of his word, which makes men wise, and discovers, and so prevents the frauds of Deceivers. t From the infection of the Hypocrites evil and crafty Counsel.

10 When it goeth well with the righteous u, the city rejoiceth x: and when the wicked perish, there is shouting y.

u When such men are encouraged and advanced into places of Power and Trust. x The Citizens or Subjects of that Government rejoyce, because they confidently expect Justice and Tranquility, and many other benefits, by their administration of publick affairs. y A common rejoycing, partly for the just vengeance of God upon them who have been the instruments of so much mischief; and partly for their deliverance from such publick grievances and burdens of the Land.

11 By the blessing of the upright z the city is exalted: but it is overthrown by the mouth of the wicked a.

z Wherewith they bless the City, to wit, by their sincere Prayers, and wise and wholsom Counsels. a By their Curses, and Oaths, and Blasphemies, and wicked and pernicious Counsels, whereby they both provoke God, and mislead men to their own ruine.

12 He that is † void of wisdom despiseth his neighbour b: but a man of understanding holdeth his peace c. †Heb. destitute of heart.

b Which contempt he sheweth, either 1. by contemptuous or reproachful expressions of him; or 2. by not asking, or not regarding his advice, but trusting wholly to his own understanding. c Either 1. He forbeareth all such expressions against his neighbour. Or 2. He silently and patiently bears these Reproaches from his neighbour, and doth not render one Reproach for another; wherein he sheweth true Wisdom. Or 3. He desireth and beseecheth to the Counsels of others. Any of these ways the opposition is sufficiently evident.

13 † A tale-bearer d revealeth secrets e: but he that is of a faithful Spirit f concealeth the matter g. †Heb. he that walketh, being a tale-bearer.

d Or, He that goeth about (from one place or person to another, as the manner of such is) telling tales, making it his business to scatter Reports. e This tatling humour is so prevalent with him, that he cannot forbear to publish, either his neighbours secret faults, or such things as were committed to his trust with a charge of secrecy. f That hath a sincere, and constant, and faithful mind, which both can and will govern his Tongue. g So far as he can lawfully do.

14 * Where no counsel h is, the people fall; but in the multitude of counsellors i there is safety. * 1 Kin.12. 1, &c. Pro.15.22.

h Or, No wise counsel, as the word properly signifies, as Job 37. 12. Prov. 1. 5. i To wit, of wise and good Counsellors, for such will employ and unite their Counsels together for the publick good.

15 He that is surety for a stranger k † shall smart for it: and he that hateth † suretiship l, is sure. †Heb. shall be sore broken.

k Whose condition he doth not throughly understand, and therefore knows not his own danger. l Of which see on Prov. 6. 1. † Heb. those that strike hands.

16 A gracious woman m retaineth honour n: and * strong men retain riches.

m Heb. a

m Heb. a Woman of grace and favour, i. e. one who by her meekness, and modesty, and prudence, and other Virtues renders her self acceptable and amiable to God and to men. n Or, holdeth fast her honour, or good reputation, with no less care and resolution, than strong men do Riches, as it here follows. o Or, as; for so this conjunction is often used in this Book, of which we have seen some, and may afterwards see more instances.

17 The merciful man doeth good to his own soul p: but he that is cruel q, troubleth his own flesh r.

p i. e. To himself, because his liberality shall turn to his own infinite advantage both in this life, and in the next. q Hard-hearted and uncharitable to others. r Either 1. his own Children or Kindred, who are commonly expressed by this very word, for whose sakes he is thus covetous and uncharitable, that he may hoard it up for them: but they, saith the wise Man, shall have nothing but trouble and vexation, and God's curse with it. Or 2. himself denominated here from his flesh or Body as in the former Branch from his Soul. But he may seem to mention his flesh rather than his Soul, to intimate that the mischiefs of his covetousness shall not only fall upon his Soul, which he despiseth, but upon his Flesh or outward Man, which is the only thing that he loveth.

18 The wicked worketh a deceitful work s: but to him that soweth t righteousness u, shall be a sure reward.

s A work which will deceive his expectation of that good for which he worketh. t That worketh it with constancy, and diligence, and hope of recompence, as they do who sow in Seed-time. u Good works, acts of Piety towards God, and Charity to men.

19 As righteousness tendeth to life, so he that pursueth evil x, pursueth it to his own death.

x Who are not over-taken by sin, as a good Man may be, Gal. 6. 1. but studiously design it, and follow after the occasions of it earnestly, and greedily, and industriously.

20 They that are of a froward heart y, are abomination to the LORD z; but such as are upright in their way a, are his delight.

y Hypocrites, as appears from the opposition of these to the upright in the next Clause: whose Hearts are false to God, and contrary to their own professions. z Though by their cunning Artifices they may deceive men, and gain their good opinion and favour, yet God sees their naughty Hearts and hateth them. a In the course of their lives and actions. By which changing of the Phrase, from Heart in the first Clause, to way here, he intimates that the sincerity and hypocrisie of mens hearts are discovered, and to be judged by their conversations.

* Ch. 16. 5. 21 * Though hand joyn in hand b, the wicked shall not be unpunished c: but the seed of the righteous d shall be delivered e.

b Though they are fortified against God's judgments by a numerous Issue and Kindred, and Friends, and by mutual strong combinations or confederacies. c They shall be punished even in their own Persons, as well as in their Posterity. They shall not be able either totally to prevent God's judgment, or to delay it from coming in their days. d Not only their Persons, but their Children. e Without any such Auxiliaries, by God's special Providence.

† Heb. departeth from. 22 As a jewel of gold in a swines snout f, so is a fair woman which † is without discretion g.

f Which would not adorn the Swine, but only be disparaged it self. It was the custom of some of the Jews to wear Jewels upon their Noses, and some of their Neighbours wore them in their Nose. g Which disgraceth the beauty of her Body by a foolish and filthy Soul.

23 The desire h of the righteous is only good: but the expectation of the wicked is wrath.

h Either 1. properly so called. So the sense is, His desires are generally and constantly to do good to men, as wicked mens designs are to do hurt, and to execute wrath and hatred against them. Or rather 2. the object, or event, or effect of their desire, as appears from the next Clause, where expectation is clearly put for the object or event of it: And the sense of the Proverb seems to be this, The desires and expectations of the Righteous shall end in their good and happiness, but the desires and expectations of wicked men shall be sadly disappointed, and end in the wrath of God, and their utter ruine.

24 There is that scattereth i, and yet increaseth k; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet l, but it tendeth to poverty m.

i That giveth liberally of his Goods to the Poor: for so this Hebrew word is used, Psal. 112. 9. He hath dispersed, which is explained in the following words, he hath given to the Poor. k Through God's secret Blessing upon his Estate. l Heb. from what is right or just, i. e. what by the Law of God, and the Rules of general Justice, he is obliged to give: of which see Prov. 3. 27. m By God's Providence secretly blasting his Estate, either in his own or his Childrens hands, as it very frequently befals covetous

* 2 Cor. 9. 8, 9, 10. Wretches.

† Heb. the soul of blessing. 25 * † The liberal soul n shall be made fat o: and he that watereth shall be watered also himself p.

n Heb. the Soul of Blessing, that man who is a Blessing to others, who blesseth them, i. e. doth good to them, as Blessing is oft used for a gift, as Gen. 33. 11. 1 Sam. 25. 27. 2 Cor. 9. 5. o Shall be greatly enriched both with Temporal and Spiritual Blessings. p Possibly it is a Metaphor from a Fountain, which when it poureth forth its waters is instantly filled again, whereas if it be stopped it groweth empty, and the Water seeketh another course. Others render it, he shall be a Rain, i. e. he shall receive such liberal supplies from God that he shall be able to pour forth showers of good things upon others.

26 * He that with-holdeth corn q, the people shall curse him: but blessing r shall be upon the head of him that selleth it s. * Ac. 5, 6

q In a time of scarcity, when others need and desire it. r The blessing of God which the People shall heartily beg for him. s Upon reasonable terms.

27 He that diligently seeketh t * good u, procureth favour x: * but he that seeketh mischief y it shall come unto him z. * Ch. 11. 27. † Psal. 7. 16.

t Which is opposed to those who content themselves with lazy desires, or cold and careless endeavours. u To do good to all men, as he hath opportunity. x With God and men. y To do any mischief or injury to others. z It shall be requited either by mens malice and revenge, or by God's just judgment. * 5. 21. & 10. 6. & 57.

28 * He that trusteth in his riches a shall fall b: * Job 24. but * the righteous c shall flourish as a branch d. * Psal. 52. 7. & 92. 12. Jer. 17.

a As his chief portion, and felicity, and ground of safety. b As a withered Leaf, by comparing this Clause with the latter. c Who makeith God alone, and not riches, his trust. d To wit, a green and flourishing branch.

29 He that troubleth his own house e, shall inherit the wind f: and * the fool shall be servant to the wise of heart g. * Ch. 11. 29.

e He who bringeth trouble and misery upon himself and Children, either 1. by carelessness, slothfulness, improvidence, prodigality, or any wickedness, whereby he consumeth his Estate. So this troubling of his House may be opposed to a Man's building of his House, Jer. 22. 28. Or 2. by covetous desires and restless endeavours to heap up Riches, whereby he greatly tires and troubles both himself and all his Family, with excessive cares and labours, which is called coveting an evil covetousness to his House, Habak. 2. 9. f Shall be as unable to keep and enjoy what he gets as a Man is to hold the Wind in his Fist, or to feed and satisfie himself with it: he shall be brought to poverty. g By which means such a troublesome fool shall through his extreme necessity be forced even to sell himself to such as are wiser.

30 The fruit of the righteous h is * a tree of life i, and he that † * winneth souls k is wise l. * Ch. 3. 18. † Heb. taketh. Dan. 12. 3.

h i. e. Which he produceth; his discourses and his whole conversation. i Is like the fruit of the Tree of Life; is a great preserver of his life, and a procurer of Eternal Life, not only to himself, but to others also. k Heb. that catcheth Souls, as a Fowler doth Birds; that maketh it his design and business, and useth all his skill and diligence to gain Souls to God, and to pluck them out of the snare of the Devil. l Sheweth himself to be a truly wise and good Man. But this Clause is and may be rendred thus, and he that is wise (the same with the Righteous in the former Clause) winneth Souls, or brings them to life. So this Clause agrees very well with the former.

31 Behold the righteous shall be recompensed m in the Earth n: much more o the wicked and the sinner p.

m i. e. Punished for his sins, as appears from the next Clause, the general word being here used of this one particular, by a Synecdoche. n Whereby he intimates, that all his sufferings are confined to this World, which is an unspeakable felicity. o They shall be punished more certainly and more severely, either in this life, or in the next. p Those who make sin their great study, and daily and most delightful exercise. Compare this Verse with 1 Pet. 4. 18. which is a good Comment upon it.

CHAP. XII.

1 WHoso loveth instruction a, loveth knowledg b: * but he that hateth reproof, is * Ch. 9. 8. brutish c.

a Admonition or reproof, as appears from the next Clause, which is a singular means of getting true and sound knowledge. b Sheweth that he is a true lover of knowledge, because he is willing to purchase it upon such unwelcome terms, as reproofs are generally esteemed. c Discovereth himself to be a most foolish and stupid Creature, because he is an enemy to himself and to his own happiness.

2 A good man † obtaineth favour d of the LORD: but a man of wicked devices e will he condemn f. † Heb. draweth out.

d Whereby he is and shall be acquitted and justified. e Who designeth and industriously committeth wickedness. f When he standeth in judgment; howsoever he may for the present justifie himself and deceive others into a good opinion of him.

3 A man shall not be established by wickedness g: but the * root of the righteous shall not be moved h. * Ch. 10. 30.

g By any sinful courses by which he useth to secure or stablish himself; whereby he implies that he shall be rooted up. h To wit, out of its place. He shall stand fast and flourish like a well-rooted Tree.

4 * A virtuous woman is a crown i to her husband: but she that maketh ashamed k, is as rottenness in his bones l. * Cor. 11. 7.

i A singular ornament and matter of his glorying and joy. k That by her folly or wickedness bringeth shame to her self and to her Husband. l Loathsom and vexatious, and pernicious.

5 The thoughts of the righteous are † right m: but the counsels of the wicked are * deceit n. † Heb. judgment. * Ch. 11. 18.

m His constant purpose is to deal justly and truly with God and with men. n His great care and contrivance is to wrong and deceive others by fair pretences and cunning Artifices.

6 * The words of the wicked are to lie in wait for blood o: but the mouth of the upright shall deliver them p. * Ch. 1. 11, 18.

o Are designed and ordered to intrap or deceive others, and to destroy them. p To wit, from those that lie in wait for them: which it doth, either 1. by prayer to God for their deliverance: Or 2. by pacifying the wicked with soft and gentle answers, or by diverting them from their evil course by their good counsels and admonitions: Or 3. by pleading their righteous cause in a judicial or other way.

7 * The wicked are overthrown, and are not q: but the house r of the righteous shall stand. * Psal. 37. 35, 36.

q Both they and their Families shall suddenly perish. r The Family or Posterity.

8 A man shall be commended s according to his wisdom t: but he that is † of a perverse heart u shall be despised x.

s To wit, by wise and good men. t More or less according to the degree of Wisdom which his discourses and actions discover to be in him. u Which he sheweth by his wicked words and conversation. x By God and all wise men.

9 He that is despised y and ‖ hath a servant z, is better a than he that honoureth himself b, and lacketh bread c.

y That liveth in a mean and obscure condition in the World, for such are commonly despised by men of an higher rank. z Hath but one Servant. Or rather, as it is in the Margent, is Servant to himself, hath none to wait upon him or work for him but himself, that getteth Bread by his own labours. a Is happier. b That glorieth in his high Birth or gay attire. c Wants necessaries for his own sustenance.

10 * A righteous man † regardeth the life of his beast d: but the ‖ tender mercies of the wicked are cruel e. * Deut. 25. 4. † Heb. doth know.

d Which is employed in his Service; he will not destroy it either by labours beyond its strength, or by denying to it necessary food or rest, or by any other way: and much more will he be pitiful to his own Servants, and to poor men. e There is much cruelty mixed even with their most merciful actions, when they pretend or intend to shew mercy. Heb. the Bowels of the, &c. those very Bowels which in others are the seat of pity, in him are hardned and shut up, and only stir him up to cruelty. In stead of that Mercy which is natural to other men, he hath nothing but cruelty. Their Mercies are here said to be cruel, as the foolishness, and weakness of God, are said to be wise and strong, 1 Cor. 1. 25.

11 * He that tilleth his land f shall be satisfied with bread: but he that followeth vain persons g is void of understanding h. * Ch. 28. 19.

f That employeth his time and strength in an honest calling. g That useth their society and idle course of living. h Shall through his own folly want Bread.

12 The wicked desireth ‖ the net of evil men i: but the root of the righteous yieldeth fruit k. ‖ Or, desireth.

i He approveth and useth those cunning and deceitful arts, which wicked men use like Nets to ensnare other men, and to bite their goods to themselves. Or, he desireth the Fortresses of wicked men, or, of wickedness, i. e. he seeks to fortifie and stablish himself by wicked practices. k That Justice and Piety, in which he is rooted, and which is the root of his actions, doth of it self, without the aid of any indirect and sinful courses, yield him sufficient fruit both for his own need, and to do good to others. But, because the word fruit is not in the Hebrew, and may seem to be too great a supplement, it is and may be rendred thus, the root of the Righteous giveth it, to wit, that Fortress or security which others seek in wickedness.

13 † * The wicked is snared l by the transgression of his lips m: but the just shall come out of trouble n. † Heb. in. * Ch. 18. 7.

l i. e. Brought into trouble. m By his wicked speeches against God and men. n To wit, by his wise and holy, and inoffensive speeches, whereby he pacifieth men and gaineth God's favour and protection.

14 * A man shall be satisfied with good by the fruit of his mouth o, and the recompense of a mans hands p shall be rendred unto him q. * Ch. 13. 2.

o By his pious and profitable Discourses. p i. e. Of his works and actions, of which the hand is the great instrument. Whereby also may be implied that God will not regard nor recompence good words, unless they be accompanied with a good conversation. q To wit, by God to whom the work of retribution belongs.

15 * The way of a fool r is right in his own eyes s: but he that hearkeneth unto counsel t is wise. * Ch. 21. 2.

r The counsel and course which his own mind suggests to him in ordering of his affairs. s Highly pleaseth him, so that he neglects and despiseth the opinions and advices of others. t That disatisfieth his own judgment, and seeketh counsel from others.

16 A fools wrath is † presently known u: but a prudent man covereth shame x. † Heb. in that day.

u By his rash words and indecent actions, whereby he exposeth himself to shame. x Either 1. the shame, or reproach, or injury done to him by others, which he concealeth and beareth with patience and passeth by, as his duty and interest obligeth him to do. Or 2. his own shame, to which the folly of rash anger would have betrayed him.

17 * He that speaketh truth y, sheweth forth righteousness z; but a false witness deceit a. * Ch. 14. 5. & 25. 18.

y Heb. He that will speak truth, i. e. he who accustometh himself to speak truth in common conversation; for the future Tense in the Hebrew tongue oft notes a continued act or habit. z To wit, as a witness in publick judgment, he will speak nothing but what is true and just; you may depend upon his Testimony. a He who useth himself to lying in his common talk, will use falsehood and deceit in judgment.

18 * There is that speaketh like the piercings of a sword b: but the tongue of the wise is ‖ health c. * Psal. 57. 4. & 59. 7. ‖ Or, healing. Ecclus. 5. 6.

b Hurtful and pernicious words, whereby they either corrupt mens minds and manners, or scandalize them, or injure them in their Reputation, Estate, or Life, or otherwise. c His speech both in judgment, and in common discourse, is sound and wholsom in it self, and tending to the comfort and benefit of others.

19 The lip of truth shall be established for ever: but a lying tongue is but for a moment d.

d The speaker of truth is constant, and always agreable to himself, and his words the more and longer they are tried, the more doth the truth of them appear; whereas Liars, though they may make a fair shew for a season, yet are easily and quickly convicted of falshood.

20 Deceit e is in the heart of them that imagine evil: but to the counsellors of peace is joy.

e Either 1. towards others, whom they design to deceive, and then to destroy, whilst good Counsellers bring safety and joy to others. Or rather 2. to themselves. So the sense of the Verse is, They whose hearts devise mischief against others, shall be deceived in their hopes, and bring that trouble upon themselves which they design against others; but they who by good counsels labour to promote the Peace and Happiness of others, shall reap the comfort and benefit of it to themselves.

21 There shall no evil f happen to the just: but the wicked shall be filled with mischief.

f Either 1. of sin, or rather 2. of suffering or mischief, as the next clause explains this: No such evil shall befall them, as doth commonly befall the wicked, who are filled, or overwhelmed, and utterly destroyed by it; whereas good men are supported under their troubles, and shall be delivered out of them, and receive much benefit by them.

22 * Lying lips are an abomination to the LORD; but they that † deal truly g are his delight. * Ch. 6. 17. † Heb. do truth. Joh. 3. 21.

g That speak and act sincerely and truly. He implies that although lying lips alone are sufficient to purchase God's hatred, yet truth in a mans speech is not sufficient to procure God's favour, unless there be also Truth and Justice in his actions.

23 * A prudent man concealeth knowledge h: but * Ch. 13. 16. & 15. 2. the heart of Fools proclaimeth foolishness i.

h He doth not vain-gloriously and unseasonably utter what he knows, but keeps it in his breast till he hath a fit occasion to bring it forth for God's Glory and the good of others. i Whilest he makes ostentation of his knowledge, he betrays his Ignorance and Folly. Compare Eccles. 20. 3.

24 * The hand of the diligent shall bear rule k: but the ‖ slothful l shall be under tribute. * Ch. 10. 4. ‖ Or, deceitful.

k Shall procure Wealth and Power. l Heb. The deceitful. So he calls the slothful, because Deceit and Idleness are commonly companions, and such men seek to gain by Fraud what they either cannot or will not get by honest Labour. Compare Prov. 10. 4.

25 * Heaviness in the heart of man maketh it stoop; but * a good word l maketh it glad. * Ch. 15. 13. * Isa. 50. 4

l A compassionate or encouraging word from a Friend or Minister.

26 The righteous is more ‖ excellent m than his neighbour n: but the way of the wicked † seduceth them p. ‖ Or, abundant. † Heb. causeth to err.

m Either 1. In his temper and disposition, more just, and generous, and publick spirited, and merciful, &c. Or 2. In his condition, more happy, notwithstanding all his sufferings and the contrary opinion of the world concerning them. n Than any other men. p Heb. maketh them to err or wander, to lose that excellency or happiness which they had promised to themselves, in and by their wicked practices.

27 The slothful man q rosteth not that which he took in hunting r: but the substance of a diligent man is precious s.

q Or, The deceitful man, as v. 24. who seeks to enrich himself by fraudulent and unjust practices. r Doth not enjoy the fruit of his Labours or devices, either because he doth not labour, and so hath nothing to waste or enjoy; or because God oft-times deprives him either of such ill-gotten goods, or at least of a quiet and comfortable fruition of them. s Yields him great comfort and satisfaction, partly because it abides with him, and partly because he hath God's Favour and blessing with it.

28 In the way of righteousness is life, and in the path-way thereof there is ‖ no death t. ‖ Or, immortality.

t The practice of Justice and Godliness, though it expose a man to some dangers and inconveniences in the world, yet it will certainly lead him to Life and Happiness, whereas the end of all wicked courses is death and destruction.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIII.

1 A Wise son heareth a his fathers instruction b: but a scorner heareth not rebuke c.

a Which word is understood out of the next clause, as is frequent in the Hebrew text. b Or, Rebuke or Reproof. c He hateth reproof either from his Father or from any other man.

*Ch.12.14. 2 * A man shall eat good d by the fruit of his mouth e: but the soul f of the transgressors g shall eat violence h.

d Shall receive much comfort, and credit, and benefit to himself. e By his wise and profitable discourses. f i. e. The person, as the soul is oft used. g Who transgress with their Lips, as this general Phrase may be restrained from the former clause. h Shall have that violence and injury returned upon themselves which they have offered to others in word or deed.

*Ch.18.21. & 21. 23. 3 * He that keepeth his mouth i, keepeth his life k: but he that openeth wide his lips l shall have destruction m.

i To wit, shut, for this is opposed to the opening of it: who speaks sparingly, and with due care and caution. k Prevents many sins and mischiefs which others run into. l That takes liberty to speak every thing which pleaseth him, or cometh into his mind. m From God or men.

*Ch.10.4. 4 * The soul of the sluggard desireth, and hath nothing n: but the soul of the diligent shall be made fat o.

n Because he contenteth himself with lazy desire without diligent endeavours. o He shall be enriched with the fruit of his own Labours.

5 A righteous man hateth lying p: but a wicked ‖ Or, causeth filench & shame. man q ‖ is loathsom, and cometh to shame r.

p Both in himself and in other men, whereby he getteth that good name which is like a pretious Ointment. q Who accustometh himself to lying, as may be gathered from the foreging words. r Makes himself contemptible and hateful to all that know him; there being scarce any reproach which men more impatiently endure, and severely revenge, than that of being called or accounted a Lyar.

*Ch. 11.3, 5, 6. † Heb. sin. 6 * Righteousness keepeth him s that is upright in the way: but wickedness overthroweth † the sinner t.

s Either from sin: or from that overthrow, which befals sinners in the next clause, t Heb. the man of sin, who giveth up himself to wicked courses.

*Ch.12.9. 7 * There is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing u; there is that maketh himself poor, yet hath great Riches x.

u Some men who have little or nothing, pretend to have great Riches, and carry themselves accordingly; either out of Pride and Vanity, or with a design to gain Reputation with others whom they intend to defraud. x Some rich men seem and profess themselves to be very poor that they may preserve and increase their estates by concealing them from those who would either desire a share in them, or take them away by deceit or violence.

8 The ransom of a mans life are his Riches; but the poor heareth not rebuke y.

y This Verse sets forth, Either 1. The several advantages of Riches and Poverty. Riches enable a man to redeem his life when it is in greatest danger, and Poverty preserves a man from those Rebukes and injuries which endanger and oft destroy the Rich. Or 2. The convenience of Poverty above Riches. Riches frequently expose men to the peril of losing their Lives by false Accusers, or Thieves. or Tyrants, which they are forced to redeem with the loss of their Riches; whereas Poverty commonly secures men not only from such kinds of death, but even from Rebukes and Injuries, partly because such persons are cautious, that they may not offend or provoke others; and partly because their persons and actions are neglected and slighted, and they are esteemed Objects of pity.

*Job 22. 28. 9 * The light z of the righteous rejoiceth a; * but the ‖ lamp of the wicked shall be put out b.

*Job 18.6. & 21. 17. ‖ Or, candle. z The Prosperity or Happiness, which is oft called a Light or Lamp in Scripture, and other Authors. a Shineth with a pleasant and constant Brightness and Glory; for this is opposed to the putting out in the next Clause. Rejoycing is here ascribed to the light, as it is to the Sun, Psal. 19. 5. both Metaphorically, because they would rejoyce in it, if they were capable of any such passions, and Metonymically, because they refresh and cheer mens Spirits. So Mountains and Trees are said to rejoyce, *Psal.*65. 12. & 96. 12. b Their felicity shall have a sudden and a dismal end.

10 Only by pride cometh contention c; but with the well-advised d is wisdom e.

c Which is not to be understood exclusively as to all other causes; for contentions oft spring from Ignorance, or Mistake, or Covetousness, or other Passions, but eminently, because as Pride bloweth up those coals of Contention which other Lusts kindle, so oftimes Pride alone, without any other cause, stirreth up strife; which it doth by making a man self-conceited in his opinions, and obstinate in his Resolutions, and impatient of any opposition, and many other ways. d Who are not governed by their own passions, but by prudent consideration, and the good Counsel of others. e Which teacheth them to avoid and abhor all contention.

*Ch. 10.2. & 20.21. †Heb. with the hand. 11 * Wealth gotten by vanity f, shall be diminished g; but he that gathereth † by labour h shall increase.

f By vain, or deceitful, or wicked practices. g Because the Curse of God attends upon it. h By diligence in an honest Calling.

12 Hope deferred i maketh the heart sick; but when the desire k cometh, * it is a tree of life l.

i Delays in obtaining that good which a man passionately desireth and hopeth for. k The good desired and expected; Acts being oft put for the Objects. l It is most sweet, and satisfactory, and reviving.

13 Whoso despiseth m the word n, shall be destroyed o; but he that feareth the commandment p, ‖ shall be rewarded. ‖ Or, be in

m Disobeyeth it wilfully and presumptuously. n The word of God, which is called the word by way of eminency, Deut. 30. 14. Compare with Rom. 10. 18. 1 Tim. 5. 17. and elsewhere. o Except he repent, and return to his Obedience. p That hath a Reverence to its authority, and is afraid to violate it.

14 * The law q of the wise r is a fountain of life, to depart from the snares of death.

q The Doctrine, Instruction, or Counsel; as the word, Law, is frequently understood in Scripture. r Of holy men, who are commonly called wise, as sinners are called Fools, in this Book.

15 Good understanding t giveth favour u; but the way x of transgressors is hard y.

t Discovering itself by a mans holy and righteous practices and ways, as appears from the opposition of the way of transgressors to it; and as words of Understanding in this and other Books of Scripture commonly include practice. u Maketh a man acceptable both to God and Men. x The carriage or manner of conversation. y Or, rough, as this very word is used, Deut. 21. 4. offensive and hateful to God and Men, as rough ways are to a Traveller; fierce, and intractable, and incorrigible.

16 * Every prudent man dealeth z with knowledg a; but a fool † layeth open his folly b. *Ch.12.23. & 15.2. † Heb. spreadeth.

z Heb. Acteth, or doth, manageth all his affairs. a Considerately and discreetly. b By his heady and foolish Actions.

17 A wicked messenger c falleth into mischief d; but a faithful ambassador is health e.

c Who is unfaithful in the execution of that which is committed to his charge, as appears by the opposite clause. d Shall not escape punishment from God, or from them who sent him. e Or, wholsom, procureth safety and benefit, as to his Master, so also to himself.

18 Poverty and shame shall be to him that refuseth instruction f; but he that regardeth reproof g shall be honoured h.

f Whereby he might have been kept from destructive and dishonourable courses. g That considers it seriously, receiveth it kindly, and reformeth himself by it. h And enriched, which is implied from the former branch. Not that it is so always, but commonly, and when God sees it good for a Man. Or, if he do not always gain Riches, he shall certainly have honour both from God and Men.

19 * The desire accomplished is sweet to the soul i; * Ver. 12. but k it is an abomination to fools, to depart from evil.

i The satisfaction of a mans desires by the enjoyment of the things desired is very acceptable to him. Which may be taken either 1. Of the desire of Fools, which may be understood out of the next clause. So the sense of the Verse is, It is sweet to sinners to indulge and satisfie their desires, which are wholly carnal and sinful, and for that reason they love sin, and hate the thoughts of leaving it, because their desires are wholly and fully set upon it. Or 2. Of good desires, or of the desires of wise and good men, as the LXX, and Chaldee, and Syriack, and Arabick Interpreters understand it, by the opposition of Fools in the next clause. So the sense may be this, The desires of good men are set upon what is good, and they rejoice when they attain to it, and are grieved when they fall short of it; but the desires of the wicked are set upon sin, and it is a pleasure to them to commit it, and an abomination to them to be hindred from it. Or rather 3. Of desires in general. Whatsoever men do earnestly desire, the enjoyment of it is very sweet and grateful to them; and therefore sinners rejoice in the pursuit and satisfaction of their sinful Lusts, and abhor all Restraint and Mortification of them: For this is certain and confessed, that many things are understood in these short proverbial Speeches which are not expressed. k Or, and, as this particle properly signifies; or, therefore, as it is frequently used.

20 He that walketh l with wise men, shall be wise m; but a companion of fools † shall be destroyed. † Heb. is broken.

l i. e. Commonly converseth and associateth himself. m Shall learn Wisdom and Goodness both from their Counsels and Examples. The design of this Proverb is to shew the wonderful influence which a mans society hath upon him, either to save, or to corrupt and destroy him.

21 Evil n pursueth o sinners p: but to the righteous good q shall be repayed.

n Evil of punishment proportionable to their evil of sin, as appears from the next clause. o And sooner or later shall certainly overtake them, albeit they please themselves with hopes of impunity. p Obstinate and incorrigible sinners. q Gods blessings and true happiness.

22 A good man leaveth an inheritance to his childrens children, and the * wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just r. *Job 21. & 27. Chap. 28. Eccl. 2.

r Is by God's powerful Providence oft-times translated to good men of another Family, who will be more faithful Stewards of it.

23 * Much

23 * Much food is in * the tillage of the poor s; but there is that is destroyed t for want of judgment u.

s Poor and mean persons by their diligent labours in tillage or other employments, and Gods Blessing upon them oft-times grow rich. t Or, consumed, to wit, in his estate, brought to poverty. u Either 1. For want of discretion and convenient care and diligence in tilling his Land, and in managing his Affairs which he neglects himself, and leaves to the care of others; whereas poor men are forced by their necessities to look to their own concerns, and to use their utmost diligence in them. Or rather 2. By Injustice, as this Phrase is used, Prov. 16. 8. Jer. 17. 11. & 22. 13. Ezek. 22. 29. Nor do I find it in any other Scripture. By his Frauds, Rapines, and Oppressions, and other unjust and wicked practices, whereby he seeks to enrich himself, as refusing and scorning to get an Estate by honest labours. So this agrees with what is said v. 11.

24 * He that spareth x his rod y, hateth his son z: but he that loveth him, chasteneth him betimes ‖. *Ch.13.24.

x Heb. with-holdeth it from his Son when it is due to him. y That correction which his Sons fault requires, and he as a Father is required to give him. z Not directly and properly in regard of his Affection, but consequently, and in respect of the event. His fond affection is as pernicious to him as his or another mans hatred could be. ‖ Either 1. In his tender years, as soon as he is capable of it. Or 2. Speedily, before he be hardened and inveterate in sin.

25 * The righteous eateth to the satisfying of his soul †; but the belly of the wicked shall want.

† Gods Favour and Blessing gives him a competent Estate, and an Heart to use it, and Comfort and Satisfaction in it; whereas wicked men commonly want either all these Blessings, or some of them.

CHAP. XIV.

1 EVery wise woman a buildeth her house b; but the foolish plucketh it down with her hands c.

a He speaks of the Woman not to exclude the Man, of whom this is no less true, but because the Women, especially in those times, were very industrious in managing their Husbands Estates; of which see Prov. 31. b Maintaineth and improveth her Family and Estate, as this Phrase is used, Exod. 1. 21. 2 Sam. 7. 11. Psal. 127. 1. c Either by her idleness and not using her hands, or by her foolish and sinful courses.

2 He that walketh in his uprightness d, feareth the LORD *; but he that is perverse in his ways, despiseth him e. *Ch.16.6.

d Whose conversation is sincerely pious and righteous. The design of this Proverb and Verse is to shew, that God doth, and men may judge of mens outward professions and inward dispositions by the common course of their lives. e Plainly declares that he doth not fear God, but despise him, and his commands, and threatnings.

3 In the mouth of the foolish is a rod of pride f; but the lips of the wise shall preserve them g.

f His proud and insolent speeches as they are like a Rod, offensive and injurious to others, so they make a Rod for their own Backs, by provoking God and men against them. Which sense seems most probable both from the opposite Clause, and by comparing this place with Prov. 10. 13. & 26. 3. For this Phrase, The Rod of Pride, it may be compared with other like Phrases, as the foot of Pride, Psal. 36. 11. The scourge of the Tongue, Job 5. 21. and the Rod of the Mouth, Isa. 11. 4. g From that Rod.

4 Where no Oxen are, the crib is clean h: but much increase is by the strength of the oxe i.

h The Barn or Stable is empty of food for Cattel, and much more for Man, whose food is more scarce and dear. In the same sense cleanness of Teeth is put for Famine, Amos 4. 6. i By their labours, or by diligence in Husbandry, which then was principally managed by Oxen.

5 * A faithful witness will not lie k; but a false witness will utter lies l. *Ch.12.17.

k To wit, in common discourse and conversation, whereby he sheweth his love to truth, and giveth assurance that when he is called to be a Witness, he will be true and faithful. l Or, as the words lie in the Hebrew, And or But he that will utter lies (that accustometh himself to lying) is or will be a false Witness, when occasion requires it. Having debauched his Conscience by daily lying, he is thereby prepared and disposed to false-witness-bearing. Compare Prov. 12. 17.

6 A scorner m seeketh wisdom and findeth it not n; but * knowledge is easy unto him o that understandeth p. *Ch.15.14.

m A proud, self-conceited, and profane Person. n Because he, doth not seek it aright, to wit, sincerely, and earnestly, and seasonably, and in a constant and diligent use of all the means which God hath appointed to that end, and with an honest intention of employing his knowledge to the service of God, and the furtherance of his practice of Religion. o Is plain and easily attained by him. p That knoweth and is deeply sensible of his own want of knowledge, and of the great worth and necessity of knowledge, which will make him use all possible means to it, and, among other ways, pray earnestly to God for it. Or, that is honest and pious: for words of knowledge are oft understood practically, especially in this Book.

7 Go from the presence of a foolish man q, when thou perceivest not in him the lips of knowledg r.

q Avoid the company and conversation of ungodly men. r When they break forth into foolish or wicked discourses, lest thou either be infected by them, or seem to approve of them.

8 The wisdom of the prudent is to understand his way s; but the folly of fools is deceit t.

s It consists not in vain Speculations, nor in a curious prying into other mens matters, nor in cunning arts of deceiving others, but in a diligent study of his own duty, and of the way to true and eternal happiness. t The wit of ungodly men, which, though they account their Wisdom, is really their folly, is employed only in finding out ways of over-reaching and deceiving others, and themselves too.

9 * Fools u make a mock at sin x; but among the * righteous y there is favour z. *Ch 10.23. *Ch.21.10.

u Wicked men, as appears from their opposition to the righteous in the next Clause. x Please and support themselves with their own and other mens sins, which is an high offence and provocation to God and Men. Or, as others render it, excuse or cover sin; sin against God or men, and then justifie or extenuate their sins, which is to double the injury. Possibly this Clause may be thus rendred, Sin deludes or makes a mock of Fools, or sinners, i. e. exposeth them to shame and contempt, which is fitly opposed to favour in the next Clause. And thus two Ancient and Learned Interpreters, Aquila and Theodotion, render it. And this suits exactly with the Hebrew words, whereas in the other Translation the Noun and Verb governed by it are of divers Numbers, which though somtimes it be allowed, yet is not to be supposed without necessity. But this I submit to the Learned and judicious. y Who are so far from making a mock of sin, or excusing it, that they do not allow themselves to commit it. z They find favour both with God and men, as this very word thus generally expressed is used, Prov. 11. 27. because they make conscience of ordering their lives so that they offend neither God nor men; or if they offend either, they heartily repent of it, so far are they from excusing it or pleasing themselves with it. Or, there is good will, as the word properly and usually is taken: they have a real love, and are ready to do all Offices of kindness one to another, and therefore neither sin against others, nor rejoyce in the sins of others.

a The sense of the Verse is this, The inward griefs and joys of mens Hearts, though somtimes they may be guessed at by outward signs, yet are not certainly known to any but a mans self. Compare 1 Cor. 2. 11. The scope of the Parable may be to keep men from murmuring under their own troubles or envying other mens happiness. b Any other Person without or besides a Mans self. c Doth not partake of it, nor understand it.

11 The house d of the wicked shall be overthrown; but the tabernacle e of the upright shall prosper.

d Their dwelling and family. e Which is a weak, and poor, and unstable thing, soon reared up, and soon taken down, and is here opposed to the large, and strong, and magnificent House of wicked men.

12 * There is a way which seemeth right unto a man f, but the end thereof is the ways of death g. *Ch.16.25.

f There are some evil actions or courses which men may think to be lawful and good, either through gross and affected ignorance; or through partiality or self-flattery; or through want of necessary diligence in examining them by the rule of God's will or word; all which are culpable causes of the mistake, and therefore do not excuse the error. g The event sheweth that they were sinful and destructive.

13 Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful, and * the end of that mirth is heaviness h *Ch. 5. 4.

h The outward signs of joy are commonly mixed with or end in real and hearty sorrow. The design of the Proverb is to declare the vanity of all worldly joys and comforts, and to teach men moderation in them, and to persuade us to seek for more solid and durable joys.

14 * The backslider in heart i shall be * filled with his own ways k; and a good man shall be satisfied from himself l. * Pf.44.18. *Ch. 1.31. & 12. 14.

i He who departeth from God and from the way of his Precepts with all his Heart, which implies the doing it upon deliberation, with free choice, and full purpose, and customary practice, as ungodly men commonly do, and is opposed to the slips of humane frailty; foe otherwife every sin is a revolt from God. k With the fruit of his ways or doings, the punishment of his sins. l i. e. From his ways, as appears by the opposition: from the pious temper of his own Heart which cleaveth to the Lord, when the hearts of sinners forsake him, and from the holy and righteous course of his life, from which he shall receive unspeakable comfort and satisfaction, both here and hereafter to all Eternity.

15 The simple m believeth every word n; but the prudent man looketh well to his going o.

m Either the harmless Man: or rather a foolish Man, because he is opposed to the prudent. n Is easily deceived with the smooth words and fair pretences of false and deceitful men. o Either 1. to his own going, as this is generally understood; he ordereth his conversation and dealings in the World with due circumspection, not considering so much what other men say as what he ought to do. Or, 2. to the going of the deceiver, whose the word in the former clause is supposed to be. So the sense is, he judgeth of mens words and professions by their conversations; which is a good rule.

16 * A wise man feareth p, and departeth from evil q; but the fool rageth r, and is confident s. * Ch. 22.3.

p Trembleth at God's judgments when they are either inflicted or threatned. q From sin, which is the procuring cause of all calamities. r Fretteth against God; or is enraged against his Mellengers who bring the threatning; or disquieteth himself in vain. Or transgresseth, as this Verb in its simple form and first Conjugation commonly signifies; or, goeth on in sin constantly and resolutely, according to the Emphasis which this Conjugation commonly adds to the simple Verb. And this is most fitly opposed to departing from evil; as being confident is opposed to fearing. t Secure and insensible of his danger till God's Judgments overtake him.

17 He that is soon angry dealeth foolishly t, and a man of wicked devices u is hated x.

t His passion hurries him into many rash and foolish speeches and actions. u One who suppresseth his passion, but designeth and meditateth revenge, watching for the fittest methods and opportunities of executing it. x Both by God and men, as being most deeply malicious and like the Devil, and most dangerous and pernicious to humane Society; whereas men that are soon angry give a Man warning and are quickly pacified, and therefore pitied and pardoned.

18 The simple inherit folly y; but the prudent are crowned with knowledg z.

y They possess it as their Inheritance or portion, holding it fast, improving it, delighting and glorying in it. In like manner David took God's Testimonies for his Heritage, Psal. 119. 111. where the word is the same: Withal he may imply that folly is Natural and Hereditary to them. z They place their honour and happiness in a sound and practical, and saving knowledge of God and of their own duty, and therefore earnestly pursue after it, and Heartily embrace it.

19 The evil bow before the good a, and the wicked at the gates b of the righteous.

a Giving Honour to them, and supplicating their favour and help, either for supply of their wants, as being brought low for their sins, or for counsel or comfort, or for their prayers to God for them. b As Clients, and Petitioners, and Beggers use to wait at the Doors, and Houses of Great and Potent men. The sense is, Good men shall have the pre-eminency over the wicked, oft times in this life, when God sees it expedient, but assuredly in the next life.

20 * The poor is hated c even of his own neighbour d; but † the rich hath many friends.

c i. e. Despised and abandoned, as hateful Persons and Things are. d Strictly so called, who is nearest to him, either by habitation or by relation, and therefore most obliged to love and help him.

21 He that despiseth his neighbour e, sinneth d: * he that hath mercy e on the poor, happy is he f.

e That doth not pity and relieve the poor, as this is explained in the next Clause, the word Neighbour being here generally taken for any Man, as it is most commonly used in Scripture; which not relieving him, proceeds from a contempt of his Person. d And therefore shall be punished for his inhumanity, which is opposed to his being happy in the next Clause. e That sheweth his compassion by his bounty and relief. f He doth a worthy action, and shall be blessed in his deed.

22 Do they not err g that devise h evil i? but mercy and truth k shall be to them that devise good l.

g They do certainly err from the right way, and mistake their mark, and shall miss of that advantage and felicity which they promise to themselves by such practices. h That do not only commit it, but make it their design, and study, and business; that are Artists or Masters in it, as the word signifies. i Either 1. mischief to men. Or 2. any kind of wickedness against God or men; for the expression is general; and this seems best to agree to the following Clause. k Either 1. from men; Men shall deal truly and kindly with them, partly because such men by their carriage oblige them to do so, and partly because God indineth their hearts to it. Or 2. from God to whom these two properties are jointly ascribed in divers places of Scripture. l That delightedly and industriously apply themselves to the doing of all good offices to God and men.

23 In all labour there is profit; but the talk of the lips tendeth onely to penury m.

m Diligent labour is the ready way to riches, but idle talking, wherein too many spend most of their precious time, will bring a Man to poverty.

24 The crown of the wise is their riches n: but the foolishness of fools is folly o.

n They are a singular advantage and ornament to them, partly as they make their Wisdom more regarded, when the poor Man's wisdom is despised, Eccles. 9. 16. and partly as they give a Man great oppotunity to discover and exercise his Wisdom or Vertue by laying out his Riches to the honour and service of God, and to the great and manifold good of the World; which also highly tends to his own glory and happiness. o But as for rich fools, for to them the general word is to be restrained from the opposite Clause, their folly is not cured, but made worse and more manifest by their riches. Their Riches find them Fools, and leave them Fools; they are not a Crown, but a reproach to them, and an occasion of their greater contempt. For the Phrase, we have the like in the Hebrew Text, 1 Sam. 1. 24. The Child Samuel was a Child. It is an elegant Figure called Antanaclasis used in all Authors.

* Verf. 5. 25 * A true witness delivereth Souls p; but a deceitful witness speaketh lies q.

p i. e. Persons, to wit, such as are innocent from the mischief of false Accusations, by declaring the truth, which is sufficient for their Vindication. q To the injury and destruction of the Innocent; which is easily understood out of the former Clause, and from the practice of false Witnesses.

26 In the fear of the LORD is strong confidence r; and his children s shall have a place of refuge.

r A sure ground of confidence; or a strong refuge, as the next Clause explains it. s Either 1. God's Children. Or 2. the Children of them that fear God, who are sufficiently understood out of the former Clause.

27 * The fear of the LORD is a fountain of life, to depart from the snares of death t. * Ch. 13. 14.

t To preserve men from deadly and destructive courses.

28 In the multitude of people is the kings honour u; but in the want of people is the destruction of the prince.

u Because it is an evidence of his wise and good government. Under honour he here comprehends also strength and safety, (as appears from the opposite Clause,) which depend much upon a Princes reputation. And honour may be here put for strength, as strength is put for honour or glory, Psal. 8. 2. and 29. 1. and 96. 7.

29 He that is slow to wrath is of great understanding x: but he that is † hasty of spirit, exalteth folly.

† Heb. short spirit.

x Sheweth great and true wisdom in conquering his sinful and shameful passions. y Heb. lifteth up, like a Banner, makes it known and visible to all men.

30 A sound heart z is the life of the flesh a; but envy the rottenness of the bones b.

z Free from envy and such like inordinate passions, which are commonly called the Diseases of the Soul, not only in Sacred, but even in Heathen Writers. Or, as others render it, An healing Heart, mild, and merciful, and kind to others, which is opposed to envy. a Procureth and maintaineth the health and vigor of the whole Body. b It wasteth the Spirits, and consumeth even the strongest and most inward parts of the Body.

31 * He that oppresseth the poor c, reproacheth his maker d: but he that honoureth him e, hath mercy on the poor f. * Ch. 17. Mat. 25. 40, 45.

c That useth him hardly, as the Syriack renders it; that withholdeth from him that which is his due, either by the rules of strict justice, or by the great Law of Charity, of which see Prov. 3. 27. and so it is opposed to having Mercy in the next Clause. d Whose Image the poor Man bears, which might challenge respect; Job 31. 15. by whose counsel and providence he is made poor; 1 Sam. 2. 7. Prov. 22. 2. and who hath declared himself to be their protector and avenger. e His Image, and Works, and Laws. f Doth not only forbear oppressing or injuring of him, but affords him his pity and help.

32 The wicked is driven away g in his wickedness h: * but the righteous hath hope i in his death k. * Job 27. & 19. Psal. 23 1 Cor.

g To wit, in his Death, as is gathered from the opposite Clause. driven away from God's favour and presence, and from the Society of the Just, and from all his hopes of Happiness both in this life and in the next. This expression notes that this is done suddenly, violently, and irresistibly, as the smoke or chaff are driven away by a strong wind. h Or, for his wickedness, Heb. in his evil, which may be understood of the evil of punishment; in the day of his calamity, when he shall flee to God for help. i Of deliverance from it, or of great and everlasting advantage by it. k In his greatest dangers and distresses, yea even in Death it self, which therefore he can receive with comfort and confidence.

33 * Wisdom resteth l in the heart of him that hath understanding; but that which is in the midst m of fools is made known n. * Ch. 1.

l Is laid up and hid there, and not vainly nor rashly uttered by him, but only upon necessary or fit occasions. m i. e. In the heart, which is expressed by this very word, Psal. 64. 6. and elsewhere. That Folly which is there instead of Wisdom: or, that small degree of Wisdom or Knowledge which they have. n They will publish it in all times and companies, without any consideration or discretion.

34 Righteousness exalteth a nation o: but sin is a reproach † to any people p. † Heb. nations.

o Maketh it honourable in the Eyes of God, and of all other Nations, as it did the ancient Romans. p Brings contempt and ruine upon them by provoking both God and men against them.

35 The kings favour is toward a wise servant; but his wrath is against him * that causeth shame q. * Ch.

q Both to himself, by his foolish management of the Kings affairs committed to him, and to the King who made so foolish a choice of a Servant.

CHAP. XV.

1 A * soft a answer b turneth away c wrath; but grievous words d stir up anger e. * Ch. 25.

a Mild or gentle. b Which may imply a foregoing charge or accusation, although the word is and may be rendred, speech or discourse. c From the speaker. d Fierce and vexatious Replies or Speeches. e Kindle it, and cause into flame forth.

2 The tongue of the wise useth knowledg aright f; * but the mouth of fools † poureth out g foolishness. * Verf. & Ch. & 13. † Heb. boileth, bubbleth.

f Expressing what he knows prudently and gracefully; taking due care both what, and when, and to whom, and in what manner he speaks. g Plentifully, continually, promiscuously, and vehemently as a Fountain doth Water, as this word signifies.

3 * The

3 * The eyes of the LORD h are in every place, beholding the evil i and the good.

h His Knowledg and Providence. i Who are first mentioned, because they either doubt of, or deny God's Providence.

4 † A wholsom tongue k is a tree of life l; but perverseness therein m is a breach in the Spirit n.

k Which uttereth found, and comfortable, and useful Counsels. l Is greatly useful to preserve the present Life, and to promote the Spiritual and Eternal Life, both of the Speaker and Hearers. m All sorts of false or corrupt Speeches. n Disturbs and wounds, and oftimes corrupts and destroys the Spirits or Souls both of the Speaker and Hearers.

5 * A fool despiseth o his fathers p instruction; but he that regardeth reproof q is prudent.

o Doth not regard nor obey it, which is an evidence of contempt. p Who hath both Love to him, and Authority over him; which greatly aggravates his Folly. q The reproof of any person whatsoever, and much more of a Father.

6 In the house r of the righteous is much treasure; but in the revenues of the wicked is trouble s.

r Or, Family. Whereby he implies that it is not only enjoyed by him, but also left to his posterity. s Though he may obtain great revenues, yet they are attended with much trouble & vexation; either because they are strangely blasted and taken from them, or because they are imbittered to them by their own insatiable desires, or tormenting cares and fears, or the horrours of their guilty Consciences, or by divers other ways.

7 The Lips of the wise disperse knowledge t; but the heart of the foolish doth not so u.

t Freely communicate to others what they know, as they have opportunity. u Either because he hath no knowledge to disperse, or because he hath not an heart to perform his duty, or to do good to others. Or, as others render it, and as the last Hebrew word is rendred, Gen. 42. 34. and elsewhere, is not right; or, the place may be rendred, the heart of foolish (understand out of the former clause, as is very usual, disperseth by his Lips) that which is not right, foolish and corrupt discourse, which is fitly opposed to knowledge.

8 * The sacrifice x of the wicked is an abomination to the LORD; but the prayer y of the upright is his delight.

x All the religious services, yea, the best and most costly of them; one kind being put for all the rest. y The cheapest and meanest services.

9 The way z of the wicked is an abomination unto the LORD; but he loveth him that followeth after righteousness a.

z The Conversation or Course of Life. This verse seems to contain a reason of the foregoing. God hates wicked mens religious Performances, because they are accompanied with ungodly Lives, and they pull down with one hand what they build with another. a That earnestly desires, and constantly and diligently endeavours to be holy and righteous in the course of his Life, although he doth not attain to that perfect Righteousness which he thirsts after.

10 ‖ Correction is grievous b unto him that forsaketh the way c, and he that hateth reproof shall die d.

b He hateth Reproof, because it is a reproach to him, and because it strikes at that sin which he loveth. c God's way, emphatically called the way here, as also Psal. 119. 1. & 139. 24. Prov. 2. 13. d i. e. Be destroyed, both here and for ever: which is a more grievous thing than an hasty reproof.

11 * Hell and destruction c are before the LORD; how much more then * the hearts f of the children of men? * Job 26. 6. Psal. 139. 8. Prov. 27. 20.

c Put for the place of destruction, by an usual Metonymy; the place and state of the damned, of which men know nothing but by divine Revelation. f Whose thoughts and affections, though they lie deep, discover themselves by outward signs and actions.

12 A scorner loveth not g one that reproveth him, neither will he go unto h the wise i.

g i. e. Hateth and avoideth it; for more is here understood than is expressed, as it is Prov. 11. 21. & 12. 3. and elsewhere. h Seek their Company and Conversation, as his duty and interest obligeth him. i i. e. The godly, because he knows they who are so indeed will make Conscience of reproving him.

13 * A merry heart maketh a chearful Countenance; but by sorrow of the heart the spirit k is broken. * Prov. 17. 22.

k Either 1. His vital Spirits. Or rather 2. His Courage and Vigor, the decay whereof sheweth it self in his Countenance, as is implied from the former clause.

14 The heart of him that hath understanding seeketh knowledg; but the mouth of fools feedeth on foolishness l.

l Their hearts are set upon wickedness, which is meat and drink to them.

15 All the days of the afflicted m are evil n; but he that is of a merry heart o hath a continual feast p.

m Of the troubled in mind or heart, as this general Expression may very fitly be restrained from the following clause. n Tedious and uncomfortable; he takes no content in any time or thing. o Heb. of a good heart, i. e. composed, and quiet, and contented. p Hath constant satisfaction and delight in all conditions, yea, even in affliction.

16 * Better is little with the fear of the LORD q, than great treasure, and trouble r therewith. * Ps. 37. 16. Prov. 16 8. 1 Tim. 6. 6.

q Which gives a man Tranquillity and Comfort in what he hath. r Tumultuous Lusts and Passions, Vexatious Cares, and Fears, Horrours of Conscience, and expectation of God's Curse and Judgment, which Riches gotten without God's Fear do commonly produce.

17 * Better is a dinner of herbs where love s is, than a stalled Ox, and hatred therewith. * Ch. 17. 1.

s True Friendship and Kindness between those that eat together.

18 * A wrathful man stirreth up strife t; but he that is slow to anger appeaseth strife. * Ch. 26. 21. & 29. 22.

t Because he is very apt both to give, and to take all occasions of contention.

19 The way of the slothful man u is as an hedge of thorns x: but the way of the righteous y † is made plain z. † Heb. is raised up.

u The way in which he doth or ought to walk; any good work which he pretends or desires to undertake. x As a way hedged up with Thorns, as it is expressed, Hos. 2. 6. troublesom, and perplexed, and full of such difficulties as he despaireth, and therefore never striveth, to overcome. y Who is always diligent in his Calling, which is one branch of Righteousness, and therefore is fitly opposed to the slothful, who is joyned with the wicked, Mat. 25. 26. and censured as such both in Scripture and Heathen Authors, because idleness is both in itself a sin, and it leads the way to many other wickednesses. z Is easie and pleasant to him, notwithstanding all his discouragements and difficulties. as a cause.

20 A wise son maketh a glad father a; but a foolish man despiseth his mother b.

a By giving him that Honour and Obedience which he oweth to him. b Whereby he maketh her sad. See the notes on Prov. 10. 1. where we have the same Proverb.

21 * Folly is joy c to him that is † destitute of wisdom; but a man of understanding walketh uprightly d. * Ch. 10. 23. † Heb. void of heart.

c He doth not only work Wickedness, but taketh pleasure in it. d Heb. directeth, or maketh streight his going, i. e. ordereth all his actions by the rule of God's word, and delighteth in so doing, which is understood from the opposite clause.

22 * Without counsel e purposes are disappointed f; but in the multitude of counsellors g they are established h. * Ch. 11. 14. & 20. 18.

e When men do not seek, or will not receive advice from others in weighty affairs. f Their designs are ill managed, and succeed accordingly. g i. e. Of wise and good Counsellors, for such only deserve that name. h i. e. Accomplished and brought to a good issue.

23 A man hath joy by the answer i of his mouth; and a word spoken † in due season k, how good is it! † Heb. in his season.

i i. e. By a wise, or good and seasonable Answer or Advice, as is manifest both from the opposite clause, and from the nature of the thing, because it is manifest and undeniable, that a foolish Answer can be no credit nor comfort to the Answerer. Thus above v. 10. the way is put for Gods way; and such Synechdoche's are frequent in Scripture. k Counsel or comfort given to another in fit time and manner. l It is highly acceptable and useful.

24 The way of life is above to the wise m, that he may depart from hell beneath n. * Phil 3. 20. Col. 3. 1, 2.

m The way or course which a wise man taketh to preserve and obtain Life, is to place his Heart, and Treasure, and Conversation in things above, and to manage all his affairs in this world with due respect and subserviency to the happiness of a better Life. n Or, from the lowermost Hell; not from the grave, as this word is elsewhere used, for no wisdom can prevent that, but from hell properly so called, as this word is elsewhere used, as hath been formerly observed.

25 * The LORD will destroy the house of the proud o; but * he will establish the border p of the widow. * Ch. 12. 7. & 14. 11. * Psal. 68. 5, 6.

o Of the most mighty Oppressors, who conceit to themselves to be unmoveably fixed. p Either 1. The Estate, the border being oft used, for the Land within the Borders, as Psal. 105. 31, 33. and elsewhere. Or 2. The Border by which Lands were then bounded and distinguished, which those proud persons endeavoured to remove contrary to God's Law, Deut. 19. 14. & 27. 17.

26 * The thoughts of the wicked q are an abomination to the LORD; but the words of the pure r are † pleasant s words. * Ch. 6. 18. † Heb. words of pleasantness.

q And much more their words which express their thoughts; for thoughts are said to be free, and wicked men are seldom, and but little concerned for the sins of their thoughts. r Which discover and proceed from their thoughts, Mat. 15. 19. s Acceptable to God, which is opposed to abomination to him.

27 * He that is greedy of gain t troubleth his own house u; but he that hateth x gifts y shall live z. * Ch. 1. 19.

t That seeketh wealth by unjust courses, as appears from the opposite clause. u Bringeth God's Curse and Destruction upon himself and his Family, whom he designed to enrich and establish. x Who refuseth them not with dissimulation, nor only from prudential Reasons, but from an hearty abhorrency of all Unrighteousness. y i. e. Bribes given to corrupt Judgment. See Exod. 18. 21. & 23. 8. Deut. 16. 19. z Shall preserve himself and (which is understood out of the former clause) his Family from ruine.

*Ch.16.23. 28 * The heart of the righteous ſtudieth to anſwer a: but the mouth b of the wicked poureth out evil things c.

a He anſwers or ſpeaks conſiderately and conſcientiouſly, and therefore profitably, or to the uſe and Edification of the Hearers. b Not the Heart, for he is without Heart in Scripture account, and he raſhly ſpeaks what comes into his mouth, without the direction of his Heart, or Conſcience. c Fooliſh, and unprofitable, and hurtful Speeches.

*Pſ.34.16. *Pſal. 145. 18, 19. 29 * The LORD is far from the wicked d, but he heareth the prayer of the righteous.

d To wit, when they pray to him, as the next clauſe explains, and therefore doth not hear nor regard them, as he is ſaid to be nigh to the righteous, Pſal. 34. 18. & 145. 18. But this farneſs or nearneſs reſpecteth not God's Eſſence, which is every where, but his gracious and helpful preſence.

30 The light of the Eyes rejoiceth the heart e: and ‖ a good report f maketh the bones fat g.

‖ Or, goodneſs. as Ch. 25. 25.

e The light which we ſee with our Eyes, and by the help of which we ſee many other pleaſant Objects, is a great comfort and refreſhment. Compare Eccleſ. 11. 7. Truly the light is ſweet, and a pleaſant thing it is for the eyes to behold the Sun: which is a good Comment upon this place. f Either 1. Glad tidings. Or rather 2. A Good-Name, which is a more laſting thing, and makes deeper impreſſion. g Not only cheareth a man for the preſent, but gives him ſuch ſolid and ſtable comfort as doth both revive his ſoul, and give Health and Vigour to his body. So he compares two Senſes together, Seeing and Hearing, with reſpect to their ſeveral Objects, and prefers the latter before the former.

31 The ear that heareth h the reproof of life i, abi-
*Ver. 5. & Ch. 12. 1. deth * among the wiſe k.

h The man that hearkeneth to it, and delights in it. i That Reproof and good Counſel which leads to Life. k Heb. ſhall, or will abide, &c. Either 1. He will thereby be made wiſe, and be eſteemd one of that number. Or rather 2. He ſeeketh and delighteth in the Company and Converſation of the Wiſe, by whom he may be admoniſhed; as on the contrary, Fools, who hate Reproof, do avoid and abhor the Society of Wiſe men and Reprovers, Amos 5. 10.

‖ Or, correction. 32 He that refuſeth ‖ inſtruction, deſpiſeth his own ſoul l; but he that ‖ heareth reproof, † getteth underſtanding m.

‖ Or, obeyeth. † Heb. poſſeſſeth an heart.

l Which hereby he expoſeth to the danger of utter deſtruction, whereby he ſhews his Folly. m Whereby he ſaveth his Soul. Heb. poſſeſſeth an heart, which the Hebrews make the ſeat of Wiſdom.

33 The fear of the LORD is the inſtruction of *Ch.18.12. wiſdom n, and * before honour is o humility p.

n Doth inſtruct men in, or lead them to true Wiſdom; whence it is ſaid to be the beginning of Wiſdom, Prov. 1. 7. & 9. 10. o i. e. It is the ready way to Honour both from God, and from Men. p Whereby men ſubmit to God, and yield to Men, which gains them Love and Reſpect; whereas Pride procures them Hatred and Contempt from God and Men.

CHAP. XVI.

*Ver. 9. & Ch. 19. 21. & 20. 24. Jer. 10. 23. ‖ Or, diſpoſings. THE * ‖ preparations of the heart in man, and the anſwer of the tongue is from the LORD a.

a Men can neither think nor ſpeak wiſely and well of themſelves, or without divine aſſiſtance. Or, as many others, both ancient and modern Interpreters render the Verſe, The preparations, or diſpoſitions, or orderings of the heart are in or from a man, (i. e. a man may conſider and contrive in his own thoughts what he wills or deſigns to ſpeak. Which is ſpoken by way of conceſſion, yet not excluding mans dependance upon God therein, which is evident both from many plain Texts of Scripture, and from undeniable Reaſon.) But the anſwer or ſpeech (as this word is oft uſed) of the tongue it from the Lord. Men cannot expreſs their own thoughts without Gods leave and help, and their tongues are oft over-ruled by God to ſpeak what was beſides and above their own thoughts, as he did Balaam, Numb 23. and Caiaphas, Joh. 11. 49, 50, 51.

*Ch. 21.2. 2 * All the ways of man are clean in his own eyes b, but the LORD weigheth c the ſpirits d.

b Many Men can eaſily flatter and deceive themſelves into a good opinion of themſelves, and of their own actions, though they be ſinful. See below, v. 25. and compare 1 Cor. 4. 4. c i. e. Exactly knoweth, as men do the things which they weigh and examine. d The hearts of men, from which both mans actions, and the goodneſs and badneſs of them in a great meaſure, proceeds; their ends and intentions, their diſpoſitions and affections, which are hid not only from others, but oft-times from a mans ſelf; whereby he is unfit to judge in his own cauſe, and eaſily miſtaken, if he do not uſe great diligence and fidelity. In this laſt clauſe he intimates the reaſon why men deceive themſelves, in judging of their ſtate and Actions, becauſe they do not ſearch their own hearts.

*Pſal.37.5. & 55. 22. Mat. 6. 25. Luk. 12. 22. 1 Pet. 5. 7. † Heb. roll. 3 * † Commit thy works unto the LORD e; and thy thoughts ſhall be eſtabliſhed f.

e Heb. roll, &c. as a man rolls a burden to another, which is too heavy for himſelf, imploring his help. Refer all thy actions and concerns to God, and to his Glory, as the end of them, and in the diſcharge of thy own duty depend upon God's Providence, for aſſiſtance and ſucceſs. f Thy honeſt deſires and deſigns ſhall be brought to an happy iſſue one way or other.

4 The LORD hath made g all things h for *Job 21.20. Rom 9.22. himſelf i; * yea, even the wicked k for the day of evil l.

g Or, hath wrought, or doth work; for the Hebrews expreſs the preſent as well as the paſt time by this tenſe: he ordereth or diſpoſeth: for this may be underſtood either of the works of Creation, or of Providence. h And eſpecially all men. i For his own ſervice and glory; for the diſcovery and illuſtration of his own Wiſdom, Power, Goodneſs, Truth, Juſtice, and his other moſt glorious Perfections. k Wilful and impenitent Sinners. l For the time of puniſhment, as this Phraſe is uſed, Pſal. 49. 5. Jer. 17. 18. and elſewhere: of which the Scripture frequently ſpeaks, both to warn ſinners of their danger, and to ſatisfie the minds of them which are amazed and diſquieted with the conſideration of the preſent impunity and felicity of wicked men. Men make themſelves wicked, and God therefore makes them miſerable.

5 * Every one that is proud in heart m, is an abo-
*Ch. 8. 13. mination to the LORD; though hand joyn in hand n, he ſhall not be † unpuniſhed.

† Heb. innocent.

m Though he diſſemble it in his outward carriage and countenance, as Pſal. 10. 4. In whoſe heart Pride rules. n Though they have many Friends and Aſſiſtants. See the ſame Phraſe, Prov. 11. 21.

6 By mercy and truth o iniquity is † purged p; † Heb. covered, pierced. and by the fear of the LORD q men depart from evil r.

o Either 1. By God's Mercy or Grace, and by his truth in performing his Promiſes made to ſinners in Chriſt. Or 2. By mens Mercy and Truth, as thoſe very words are joyntly uſed, Prov. 3. 3. & 20. 28. and elſewhere; and 2ly, in the following clauſe, the fear of the Lord is a Grace or Diſpoſition in men: by a merciful and juſt and faithful frame of heart and courſe of life: which are here oppoſed to Sacrifices, as mercy is, Hoſ. 6. 6. by which the hypocritical Jews expected to obtain the expiation of their ſins. p Not meritorioufly but inſtrumentally, as they qualifie a man to offer up acceptable Prayers to God for the Pardon of his ſins, and to receive and apply to himſelf that pardon which Chriſt by his Blood hath purchaſed for all ſincere Believers, who are filled with Mercy and Truth, and other Graces. q By a filial Reverence or Reſpect unto God, and by an holy fear of offending God, and by a dread of God's Judgments r They are kept from abuſing pardoning Mercy, and from returning to Folly or Wickedneſs. So he ſheweth that Juſtification and Sanctification are conſtant and inſeparable Companions.

7 When a mans ways pleaſe the LORD, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him s.

s By diſpoſing their hearts to kindneſs towards him.

8 * Better is a little with righteouſneſs, than great *Pſ.37.16. revenues without right t.

t This was in effect ſaid before, Prov. 15. 16. and is here repeated, partly becauſe of the great importance and uſefulneſs of this truth, and partly becauſe men are very hardly brought to a ſerious belief of it.

9 * A mans heart deviſeth his way u, but the LORD *Ver. 1. directeth his ſteps x.

u Conſiders and propoſeth to himſelf what he will do. x Overruleth and diſpoſeth all their deſigns and actions as he pleaſeth, and not as they liſt.

10 † A divine ſentence y is z in the lips of the † Heb. divination. king a; * his mouth tranſgreſſeth not b in judgment.

y Heb. Divination, which is ſomtimes taken in a good ſenſe for Prudence, as it is, Iſa. 3. 2. A great ſagacity and piercing judgment to diſcern dubious and difficult caſes. z Or, ſhould be, for the verb is wanting in the Hebrew, and this may be ſupplied as well as is. And he ſeems not ſo much to ſpeak of the matter of Fact, as if it were thus in all Kings, which is notoriouſly and confeſſedly untrue, as of the duty of Kings, in whom Wiſdom is a neceſſary qualification. For thus the two following Proverbs concerning Kings, v. 12. 13. muſt be underſtood, otherwiſe they are repugnant to common Experience. a Either 1. Of wiſe Kings; who only are worthy of that Name and Office; King being here put for a wiſe King, as a Name is put for a good Name, and a Woman for a good Woman, Eccleſ. 7. 28. and then this is true in fact, as it was in David, 2 Sam. 14. 17. and in Solomon, 1 King. 3. 28. Or, 2. Of Kings in general, in the ſenſe before given: for ſeeing the word is generally expreſſed without any limitation both here and v. 12, 13. it may ſeem preſumption to confine it to thoſe few Kings which are, or were, wiſe and good. b Or, Shall, or ſhould not tranſgreſs, or go beyond the bounds of Religion and Juſtice.

11 * A juſt weight and balance are the LORD's c; *Lev.19. 36. Ch.11. 1. † all the weights d of the bag are his work. † Heb. the ſtone.

c Are God's work, as it follows; made by his direction and appointment, ſo as no man can corrupt or alter them without violating God's Rights and Authority, and incurring his diſpleaſure. d Heb. the ſtones, which they then uſed as weights. See on Prov. 11. 1.

e They ſhould not only abſtain from all wicked practices, but abhor them both in their own perſons, and in all their ſervants and ſubjects. It is too plain, that he ſpeaks not of the common practice, but of the duty, of Kings, as on v. 10. And ſuch affirmative expreſſions are oft uſed in Scripture to expreſs mens duty only, as 2 Cor. 6. 19. your body is (i. e. ſhould be) the temple, &c. and 7. 32. careth, &c. i. e. ought to care. f And (which is implied) weakned, and ſometimes overthrown by unrighteouſneſs; and therefore this is neceſſary for their own ſecurity and happineſs.

13 Righteous lips are the delight of kings g, and they love him that ſpeaketh right.

g All wiſe and good Kings do, and all Kings ſhould, delight in employing ſuch Counſellors, Judges, and Officers under them, as are juſt and faithful in their Counſels, and Sentences, and Actions because ſuch bring great honour and advantage to them.

14 * The wrath of a king is as meſſengers of death h; but a wiſe man will pacifie it i.

u He who orders his affairs with diſcretion. Or, as others, both ancient and later Interpreters take it, He that underſtandeth, or attendeth to the Word, to wit, the Word of God, which is called abſolutely the Word, Prov. 13. 13. and elſewhere, making that the rule of his actions. x Shall obtain happy ſucceſs. y Who doth not truſt to his own prudence or diligence, but to God's providence and bleſſings. Or, who mixeth God's Word with Faith, as the Phraſe is, Heb. 4. 2. z He ſhall not only find ſome good, but ſhall certainly attain to true happineſs.

21 The wiſe in heart ſhall be called prudent a, and the ſweetneſs of the lips b increaſeth learning c.

a The ſenſe is either, 1. He who hath Wiſdom or ſound knowledg in his Heart, will ſhew it by his prudence in ordering his Actions. Or rather, 2. He who is truly wiſe, or prudent, or intelligent (all which words moſt commonly ſignifie one and the ſame thing, both in this and in other Books of Scripture) ſhall be ſo called or accounted by others. b Eloquence added to Wiſdom; the faculty of expreſſing a Man's mind fitly, and freely, and acceptably. c Both in himſelf, for whilſt a Man teacheth others, he improveth himſelf; and eſpecially in others, who by this means are induced to hear and receive his good inſtructions. Wiſdom gets a Man repute with others, but this faculty of right ſpeaking, makes a wiſe Man more inſtrumental to do good to others.

l This whole Verſe was delivered before Ch. 14. 12. and is here repeated partly for its great importance and uſefulneſs to prevent that ſelf-deceit, which is ſo common and dangerous; and partly to keep men from leaning too much to their own underſtanding, and to oblige them to ſeek and receive the good counſels of wiſe and holy men.

But this, as also many other Proverbs, are to be understood of the common course or effect with most men, but not universally of all men.

§ Or, a reproof worketh more a wise man, than to strike a fool an hundred times. 10 ‖ A reproof entreth more into a wise man a, than an hundred stripes into a fool.

a Is more effectual for his reformation.

11 An evil man seeketh only rebellion b; therefore a cruel messenger c shall be sent against him.

b It is the constant study and business of wicked men to rebel, either 1. against men in Authority. But this is not universally true, for many most wicked Persons are not guilty of that sin. Or rather 2. against God: For 1. thus it is true of all wicked men. 2. This word is used of rebellion against God, Deut. 31. 27. Ezek. 2. 5, 6. & 3. 9, &c. 3. This word being put alone without any addition of the object seems most probably to be meant of the highest and worst kind of rebellion, according to the common rule of interpretation in such cases. c Or, a cruel Angel, the Angel of Death, the Devil, or some bloody men employed by God to avenge his quarrel; or some dreadful punishment; it being very usual in Scripture to represent things under the notion of Persons, as Rom. 7. and elsewhere.

*Hos.13.8. 12 Let * a bear robbed of her whelps d meet a man, rather than a fool in his folly e.

d When she is most cruel and fierce. e In the heat of his Lust or passion, because the danger is greater, all things considered, and more unavoidable.

f From his Person and Family; because such a Man is most hateful to God and to all Mankind; God will punish him, and men will not pity nor relieve him.

14 The beginning of strife is as when one letteth
*Ch. 20. 3. out water g; therefore * leave off contention before it be meddled with h.

g By cutting the Bank of a River, in which case the Water quickly widens the breach and breaks in with irresistible violence and fury, and causeth great mischief and destruction. h Avoid the occasions, any prevent the beginnings of contention.

*Ex. 23. 7. Ch. 24. 24. Isa. 5. 23. 15 * He that justifyeth i the wicked, and he that condemneth the just, even they both are abomination to the LORD.

i That acquitteth him as innocent by a judicial Sentence, or otherwise approveth or commendeth his evil practices. By which we may easily understand what it is to condemn the just.

16 Wherefore is there a price l in the hand of a fool to get wisdom m, seeing he hath no heart to it n?

k The Question implies that it is unworthily placed, and that it is to no purpose or benefit of the Possessor. l Possessions or Riches as all the ancient Translators render it, of which this word is used, Isa. 55. 1. and elsewhere, under which all opportunities and abilities of getting it are comprehended. m For the obtaining whereof, rich Men have many and great advantages above others. n Neither common discretion to discern the worth of Wisdom, and his advantage to get it; nor any sincere desire to get it; for the heart is commonly used in Scripture both for the understanding, and for the will and affections.

17 * A friend o loveth at all times p, and a brother q is born for adversity r.

o A sincere and hearty Friend. p Not only in prosperity, but also in adversity, when false Friends forsake us. q Who is so not only by Name and Blood, but by brotherly affection. r Was sent into the World for this among other ends, that he might comfort and relieve his Brother in his adversity. So this Proverb compareth a Friend with a Brother, and sheweth that a Friend doth that freely, and by a choice, which a Brother doth by the force and obligations of Nature, But this last clause may be, and is by divers otherwise rendred, and he (to wit, the Friend) is Born a Brother (or, becomes, or is made a Brother, i. e. puts on brotherly affection, as if he had received a second Birth and was born his Brother, such expressions being not unusual both in Scripture, and in other Authors) in or against the time of adversity. So the sense is, He is a Friend at all Times, but in adversity he is more than an ordinary Friend, even a Brother.

*Ch.6.1. 18 * A man void of † understanding striketh hands s, and becometh surety in the presence of his friend t.

s In token of his becoming Surety: Of which Phrase, and of the thing it self, see on Prov. 6. 1. & 11. 15. t The Friend here is either 1. before, and to the Creditor. Or rather 2. before, and with and for the Debtor, for whom, as being his Friend, he becomes Surety, as the manner of Friends is. See on Prov. 6. 3. And this Proverb is fitly placed after that v. 17. to intimate, that although the laws of Friendship oblige us to love and help our friends in trouble, as far as we are able, yet they do not oblige us to become Surety for them rashly, and above what we are able to pay, for by that means we make our selves unable to do good either to them, or to others, or to our selves.

19 He loveth transgression, that loveth strife u; and he that exalteth his † gate x, seeketh destruction y.

u Because contention is in it self a sin, and is commonly accompanied or followed with many sins, as detraction, malice, hatred, pride, &c. x Either 1. his mouth. i. e. who speaketh loftily: for we read of the gate or doors of ones Mouth in Micah. 7. 5. and elsewhere: but then the word Mouth or Tongue is added to determine the sense: but the Mouth is nowhere called the gate, simply or absolutely. Or 2. the Gate of his House, that maketh it, and consequently his House, lofty and Magnificent, beyond what befits his quality, which being an evidence and effect of pride and haughtiness of Spirit is here mentioned for all the rest. So the sense is, He who carries himself loftily and scornfully. y He seeks those things which will expose him to destruction, because he maketh himself odious both to God and men. Or findeth destruction; seeking being put for finding or procuring, as above v. 9.

20 † He that hath a froward heart z, findeth no good a; and he that hath a perverse tongue b, falleth into mischief.

z Whose Heart is not plain and upright, but false towards God or men. a Shall not get that advantage by his dissimulation which he intends and expects, but shall fall into mischief, as is implied from the opposite Clause. b That speaks deceitfully or wickedly. So here is a comparison between an evil heart and an evil Tongue, and the ill effects of both of them.

21 * He that begetteth a fool c, doth it to his sorrow; and the father d of a fool hath no joy e.

c Not a Natural, but a wilful fool, or a wicked Son. d And consequently the Mother also. e Which Parents usually have in the Birth of a Child, and especially of a Son, but hath great cause of sorrow, the contrary being implied in this and such like expressions, as in Scripture, as Prov. 10. 1, &c. so also in profane Authors: whose words see in my Latin Synopsis.

22 * A merry heart f doth good g ‖ like a medicine; but a broken h spirit drieth the bones i.

f Chearfulness of Soul, especially that which is solid, and ariseth from the witness of a good Conscience. g Even to the Body; it contributes very much to the restoration or preservation of bodily Health and Vigour, as Physicians observe, and Experience sheweth. h Sad and dejected. i Wasteth the marrow of the Bones, and the moisture and strength of the Body.

23 A wicked man k taketh a gift out of the bosom l to pervert the ways of judgment m.

k Whether Judge or Witness. l In secret, as this Phrase is expounded, Prov. 21. 14. being privily conveyed from the bosom of the giver into his own bosom. m To give or procure an unjust sentence.

24 * Wisdom is before him n that hath understanding; but the eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth o.

n Or, in (as the particle beth is used, Deut. 2. 7. and is here rendred by divers Interpreters) the face or countenance. The sense is either 1. His Wisdom appears even in his gestures and looks, which are modest, and composed, and grave. Or 2. Wisdom is before him, or in his sight, as the mark at which he aims, or as the rule by which he constantly walketh, and ordereth all his steps, from time to time minding his present duty and business. o The sense of this clause also is either 1. His folly appears in his light, and unsteddy, and disorderly carriage and looks. Or 2. His mind is wavering and unsettled; he neither proposeth a right and certain end to himself, nor is he constant in the use of fit means to attain it; he neglects his present business, and true interest, and wanders hither and thither in the pursuit of earthly vanities, minding most most those things which are remotest from him, and least concern him.

25 * A foolish son is a grief to his father, and bitterness to her that bare him p.

p This he said before, Prov. 15. 20. and elsewhere, but he here repeats it as a point of great moment and constant use, and as a powerful motive to oblige both Children to carry themselves wisely and dutifully to their Parents, as they would not be thought to be unnatural or inhumane, and Parents to educate their Children prudently and religiously, at least for their own comfort, if not for the publick good.

26 Also q † to punish the just r is not good s; nor to strike princes for equity t.

q This particle seems to have relation to the next foregoing Proverb to imply that it is a very evil thing for Children to cause grief to their Parents, as it is also to do what here follows. r For Parents, or Princes, or Rulers, to whom alone this power belongs to punish innocent and good men. s Is highly evil and abominable, as is implied. See above, v. 20. and Prov. 16. 29. & 17. 10. &c. t Nor to smite Magistrates, either with the Hand or Tongue, for the execution of Justice, as condemned persons are apt to do. Or, as some learned Interpreters render it, Nor for Princes to strike any man for equity, or for doing his duty, or what is just. So this clause best agrees with the former. Besides it belongs to Princes or Magistrates to punish or strike.

27 * He that hath knowledg spareth u his words; and a man of understanding is of ‖ an excellent spirit x.

u Heb. restraineth, as at other times, so especially when he is provoked to passion, in which case fools utter all their mind. x Which he sheweth by commanding his passions, and bridling himself from lasty and unadvised speeches. Or, as others render it, is of a cool Spirit, calm and moderate, not easily provoked, humble, as the Chaldee renders it, patient or long-suffering, as the LXX and Arabick Interpreters render the words. Or as others, sparing (Heb. precious, which is put for rare or scarce, 1 Sam. 3. 1. Prov. 25. 17. Isa. 13. 12.) of his breath, i. e. of his speech, as this very word is used, Prov. 29. 11. Isa. 11. 4. compared with 2 Thes. 2. 8.

28 * Even a fool when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise y: and he that shutteth his lips is esteemed a man of understanding.

y Because he is sensible of his own folly, and therefore forbears to speak lest he should discover it; which is a great point of true Wisdom.

CHAP. XVIII.

1 ‖ THrough desire a man having separated himself, seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom a.

a According to this interpretation the sense is, Through desire (of it, to wit, of Wisdom, which is easily understood out of the end of the verse; such Ellipses being frequent in Scripture) a man having separated himself (being sequestred from the company, and noise, and business of the World, betaking himself to retirement and solitude, as men do that apply themselves to any serious study) seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom, i. e. useth all diligence, that he may search and find out all solid knowledge and true Wisdom. And this earnest desire and endeavour to get true Wisdom within a mans self is fitly opposed to the fools contempt of Wisdom, or to his desire of it, not for use and benefit, but only for vain ostentation; which is expressed in the next verse, although coherence is little regarded by Interpreters in the several Verses and Proverbs of this Book. But this verse is otherwise rendred in the margin of our English Bible, and by divers others, He that separateth himself (either 1. From his friend. Or rather 2. From other men; who affects singularity is wedded to his own Opinion and through self-conceit despiseth the opinions and conversation of others) seeketh and intermeddleth (for this word is used in a bad sense, Prov. 17. 14. & 20. 3. and it is not found elsewhere, save in this place) in every business, as proud and singular persons are commonly pragmatical, delighting to find faults in others, that they may get some Reputation to themselves by it. Heb. in every thing that is, thrusting themselves into the actions and affairs of other men. Or, as this last clause is and may be rendred, and contendeth (Heb. mingleth himself; for words of that signification are commonly used for contending or fighting, as Deut. 2. 5, 9, 19. Isa. 36. 8. Dan. 11. 10.) with or against (for the Hebrew prefix beth oft signifies against) all Reason or Wisdom: whatsoever any man speaketh against his opinion and desire, though it be never so reasonable and evident, he rejecteth it, and obstinately maintains his own opinion.

2 A fool hath no delight in understanding b, but that his heart may discover it self.

b In getting found and saving knowledg, either by his own study, or by the instructions of wise and good men. c Heb. but (his delight is) in the discovery of his own heart, i. e. in uttering that folly and wickedness which is in his heart: being more forward to speak than to hear, which is one badge of a fool.

3 When the wicked cometh d, then cometh also contempt e, and with ignominy reproach f.

d Into any place or company. e Either 1. Passively; he is justly contemned and reproached by those who converse with him. Or rather 2. Actively; he despiseth and scorneth all Instruction and Reproof, neither fearing God, nor reverencing Man: For he forms here to note his sin, rather than his punishment. f And he doth not only contemn others in his heart, but sheweth his contempt of them by ignominious and reproachful expressions and carriage.

4 * The words of a mans g mouth are as deep waters h, and the well-spring of wisdom as a flowing brook i.

*Ch. 20. 5.

g i. e. A wise mans, as the next clause explains this; who is worthy of the name, and hath the understanding of a man in him. This Hebrew word oft-times notes an eminent or excellent person, and therefore is opposed to Adam, which designs any ordinary man. h Full of deep Wisdom. i That Wisdom which is in his heart is continually pouring forth wise and good counsels.

5 * It is not good k to accept the person l of the wicked, to overthrow the righteous in judgment.

*Lev. 19. 15. Deut. 1. 17. & 16. 19. Ch. 24. 23.

k i. e. It is a most wicked and hateful thing. See on Prov. 17. 15, 26. l To favour his unrighteous cause.

6 A fools lips enter into contention m, and his mouth calleth for strokes n.

m A fool by his rash and wicked speeches provoketh others to quarrel with him, and, as it follows, to strike him. n Procureth strokes to himself.

7 * A fools mouth is his destruction, and his lips are the snare of his Soul.

*Ch. 10. 14. & 12. 13. & 13. 3.

8 * The words of a ‖ tale-bearer are ‖ as wounds p, and they go down into the † innermost parts of the belly q.

*Eccl. 10. 12. *Ch. 12. 18. & 26. 22.

‖ Or, whisperer. † Heb. chambers.

o Who privily slandereth his Neighbour. p Deeply wound the Reputation, and afterwards the Heart, of the slandered person. Compare Prov. 12. 18. Or, as others render the word, are as smooth or flattering, i. e. they really are so; the particle as, being oft used to express the truth of the thing, as hath been noted before. See also Job. 1. 14. They are softer than Oil, as is said Psal. 55. 21. For slanderers use to cover and usher in their calumnies with pretences of kindness and compassion to them whom they traduce. q They wound mortally, piercing to the heart, which is oft meant by the belly, as Job 15. 35. & 32. 19. &c.

‖ Or, like as ‖ Or, but, when men are wounded.

9 He also that is slothful in his work, is brother to him that is a great waster r.

r They are alike, though they take several paths, yet both come to one end, even to extream want and poverty.

10 * The name of the LORD s is a strong tower t; the righteous u runneth into it, and † is safe.

*2 Sam. 22. 51. Psal. 18. 2. & 27. 1. & 61. 3. & 91. 2. & 144. 2.

† Heb. is set aloft.

s i. e. The Lord, as he hath revealed himself in his works, and especially in his word by his Promises, and the Declarations of his infinite perfections, and of his good will to his People. t Is sufficient for our Protection in case of the greatest dangers. u Which limitation he adds to beat down the vain confidences of those men, who though they live in a gross neglect and contempt of God, will expect Salvation from him.

11 * The rich mans wealth is his strong city, and as an high wall in his own conceit u.

*Ch. 10. 15.

u He trusts to his Wealth, as that which will either enable him to resist his enemy, or at least purchase his favour.

12 * Before destruction the heart of man is haughty x, and before honour is y humility.

*Ch. 11. 2.

x Pride is a cause and presage of ruin, as is noted Prov. 16. 18.
y Or, goeth. This clause we had, Prov. 15. 33.

13 He that † answereth a matter before he heareth it z, it is folly and shame a unto him.

† Heb. returneth a word.

z Before he hath fully heard and considered what another is speaking about it. a It is a shameful folly, though he seek the reputation of a wise man by it, as if he could readily and throughly understand all that another can say before he hath uttered it.

14 The spirit b of a man will sustain his infirmity c; but a wounded d spirit who can bear e?

b i. e. The soul, to wit, which is unwounded, as appears by the opposite branch of the verse; which is vigorous and chearful, supported by the sense of God's Love, and the Conscience of its own Integrity, and the prospect of its present Peace, and future Happiness. c Will easily support him under any bodily or outward troubles, as God's people have oft found by experience d Dejected with the sense of its own guilt and misery. e It is most grievous and intollerable without divine assistance.

15 The heart of the prudent getteth knowledg f, and the ear of the wise getteth knowledg g.

f By employing his thoughts and studies upon it. g By a greedy and diligent attention to those from whom he may learn it.

16 * A mans gift maketh room for him h, and bringeth him before great men i.

*Ch. 17. 8. & 21. 14.

h Procures him free access to great men. Heb. enlargeth him, as this very Phrase is rendred, Psal. 4. 1. and elsewhere; freeth him from straits and oppressions. i Gets him favour and free conversation with them.

17 He that is first in his own cause k seemeth just l; but his neighbour cometh m and searcheth him n.

k He that first pleadeth his cause. l Both to himself and to the Judg or Court, by his fair pretences. m To contend with him in judgment, and to plead his cause. n Examineth the truth and weight of his Allegations, and disproveth them, and detecteth his weakness. Or, discovers him: for seeking or searching are oft put for finding, as Prov. 17. 9, 19. and elsewhere.

18 The lot causeth contentions to cease o, and parteth p between the mighty q.

o By determining the matters in difference. p Maketh a partition, giveth to every one what is right or meet, by the disposition of divine Providence. q So it doth also between mean persons, but he mentions the mighty because they are most prone to contention, and most fierce and intractable in it, and most capable of doing great mischief to themselves and others by it, and therefore they most need this remedy.

19 A brother offended r is harder to be won s than a strong city t, and their contentions are like the bars of a castle u.

r To wit, by his Brothers unkindness or injury. s Or, is stronger, which is sufficiently understood by the mention of a strong City, to which he is compared, such Ellipses being frequent in the Hebrew, as hath been noted before. t Which is hardly to be conquered. u Which are very strong, and not to be broken, and make the castle strong, and hardly to be won. The truth of this assertion is confirmed by the testimony of Aristotle and other learned Authors, who affirm the same thing; and the reason of it is evident, because the nearness of the Relation greatly heightens the provocation, and Love abused frequently turns to extream hatred.

*Ch.12.14. & 13.2. 20 * A mans belly shall be satisfyed with the fruit of his mouth x, and with the encrease of his lips shall he be filled.

x Wise and edifying discourses tend to the comfort and satisfaction of the Speaker, as well as to the good of the Hearers.

21 Death and life are in the power of the tongue y, and they that love it z shall eat the fruit thereof a.

y Are brought upon men by the good or bad use of their tongues. z Either 1. The Tongue; that love and use much talking, which is oft censured as a sin, and a cause of mischief. See Prov. 10. 19. Jam 1. 19. Or, 2. The use of their tongue in either of those ways, which are plainly supposed in the former clause of the verse: they who do not only speak well, which a wicked man may sometimes do; or speak ill, which a good man may possibly do, but do love, and therefore accustom themselves to speak well or ill. a Shall receive either good or evil according to the quality of their Speeches.

*Ch.19.14. 22 *Whoso findeth a Wife b, findeth a good thing c, and obtaineth favour of the LORD d.

b Either 1. Simply a Wife; for a Wife, though she be not the best of her kind, is to be esteemed a blessing, being useful both for society of life, Gen. 2. 18. and for the mitigation of a mans cares and troubles, and for the prevention of sins. Or, 2. Good Wife; one that deserves the Name, and performs the dury of that relation; a wise and worthy Wife, as this word may seem to imply, being deduced from the Hebrew word, iseh, which sometimes notes a man of Eminency. And this limitation and explication of the word may be gathered both from the following commendations, which would hardly be given to a bad Wife, and from the usage of Scripture in which this Ellipsis is frequent, as a path or way is put for a good path or way, Psal. 119. 1. Prov. 15. 10. an answer for a good answer, Prov. 15. 23. a King for a good King, Prov. 16. 10. & 29. 4. a name for a good name, Prov. 22. 1. Eccles. 7. 1. &c. c A singular Blessing. d Obtaineth her not by his own Wit, or Art, or Diligence, but by God's good Providence towards him, which ordereth that and all other events as it pleaseth him.

23 The poor useth intreaties e, but the rich answereth * roughly f. *Jam. 2.3.

e Humbly begs the favour of rich men, as his necessities and occasions require it. f Speaketh proudly and scornfully either to the poor, or to others that converse with him, being puffed up with a conceit of his Riches, and of his self-sufficiency.

24 A man that hath Friends g must shew himself friendly; * and there is a friend that sticketh closer h than a brother. *Ch.17.17.

g Heb. A man of Friends; either 1. Who desires the friendship of others. Or, 2. Who professeth friendship to others. h To him that desires and needs his help: Who is more hearty in the performance of all friendly Offices.

CHAP. XIX.

*Ch. 28.6. 1 * BEtter is the poor that walketh in his integrity a, than he that is perverse in his lips b, and is a fool c.

a Who is upright in his words and actions. b That useth to speak wickedly, which proceeds from a wicked heart, and is usually attended with an evil Life. c Is an Hypocrite, or a wicked man, for this is opposed to the upright man in the former clause, yea, though he be rich, which is implied from the same clause.

2 Also that the soul d be without knowledge e, it is not good f: and he that hasteth with his feet g, sinneth.

d Which is the principal cause and director of all mens actions. e Without Wisdom or Prudence to discern his way, and what, and how, he ought to act in his several cases and concernments. f It is very evil and pernicious. g That rashly and headily rusheth into actions without serious consideration. So two vices are here censured, the want of knowledg, and the neglect or disuse of knowledg in a mans actions.

3 The foolishness of man perverteth his way h, and his heart fretteth against the LORD i.

h Either 1. enticeth him to sin. Or, rather 2. Crosseth and blasteth his designs and enterprises, and brings losses and miseries upon him. i He ascribes his unhappiness not to his own sin and folly, which is the true cause of it, but to God and his Providence, against which he unjustly murmurs.

*Ch.14.20. 4 * Wealth maketh many friends; but the poor is separated from his neighbour k.

k Is disowned and forsaken by those who are most obliged to help him.

*Ver. 9. Ex. 23.1. Deut.19.16, he that speaketh lies l shall not escape. 5 * A false witness shall not be † unpunished l, and 19 Ch. 6. l Though he escape the observation and punishment of men yet 19. & 21.28. he shall not avoid the judgment of God. m That accustometh him- † Heb. shall self to lying, either in judgment, or in common conversation. not be innocent.

6 Many will entreat the † favour of the prince n, and every man is a friend o to † him that giveth † gifts. † Heb. bribes.

n Or, as others, of the liberal or bountiful man: which comes to the same thing: for Kings were anciently called Benefactors, Luke 22. 25. o Not sincerely, as daily experience shews, but in shew or profession, or in the outward expressions of it, whereby they may oblige him.

7 * All the brethren p of the poor do hate him q, † Ch. how much more do his friends r go far from him? he pursueth them with words s, yet they are wanting to him t.

p His nearest and dearest Relations, who are oft called Brethren in Scripture, by a common Synecdoche. q i.e. Despise and shun him, as men do any thing which they hate, and as the following words explain it. r His former companions, who in his prosperity professed friendship to him. s Earnestly imploring their pity, Or, he urgeth (Heb. pursueth) their words, i.e. alledgeth their former promises, and professions of Friendship. Or, without any supplement, he seeketh words, as the Preacher sought to find out acceptable words, Eccles. 12. 10. wherewith he might prevail or move them to pity. † Heb. they are not, either 1. His friends are not, to wit, what they pretended to be, friends to him. Or, 2. Their words are vain, and without effect; there is no reality in them.

8 He that getteth † wisdom, loveth his own soul u; † He he that keepeth understanding x shall find good y. heart.

u Or loveth himself, because he procures great good to his Soul, or to himself, as it follows, as sinners on the contrary are said to hate their Souls, Prov. 29. 24. because they bring mischief upon them. x That observeth and carefully practiseth its precepts, as that Phrase is commonly used. y Shall have great benefit by it, both for his conduct in this Life, and for his happiness in the next.

9 A false witness shall not be unpunished, and he that speaketh lies shall perish z.

z This was said before, v. 5. and seems to be here repeated, either for its great use and weight in humane society, and to shew how much God abhors such practices; or to shew the pernicious effects of this sin, and consequently of all other sins, one eminent kind being put for all the rest, and this in opposition to the good effects of Wisdom or Piety, which he declared in the foregoing verse.

10 * Delight a is not seemly for a fool b; much less † Eccl. * for a servant c to have rule over princes d. † Ch.

a To live in Pleasure, and Plenty, and outward Glory. b It doth Eccl. not become him, nor suit with him; partly because Prosperity corrupts even wise men, and makes fools mad; and partly because it gives him more opportunity to discover his folly, and to do mischief both to himself and others. He implies that a rod or punishment is fitter for him than pleasure, as is noted, Prov. 10. 13. & 26. 3. c Who is of a servile condition and disposition, not much differing from a Fool; who is a servant to his Lusts, and wholly unfit to rule other men. d i.e. Over men of better quality than himself: for servants are commonly ignorant, and when they are advanced they grow insolent, and presumptuous, and intolerable.

11 * The ‖ discretion of a man deferreth his anger, ‖ Ch. and it is his glory to pass over a transgression e. ‖ Or, Heb.

e This is opposed to the perverse judgment of worldly men who account it folly and stupidity, not quickly to resent a provocation, and a dishonour and reproach not to revenge it.

12 * The King's wrath is as † the roaring of a lion, * Ch. but his favour is as † dew upon the grass. & 20. † Ter

13 * A foolish son is the calamity of his father, * and the contentions of a wife are a continual dropping f. f Are like rain continually dropping upon an house which by degrees marreth the House and Houshold stuff, and driveth the inhabitants out of it. He compareth her to a continual dropping, because of that inseparable Union and necessary cohabitation of Husband and Wife together, notwithstanding such contentions.

14 House and riches are the inheritance of fathers, and a prudent wife is from the LORD g. g Is vouchsafed to a man by the singular providence of God, who is the only Searcher and Ruler of hearts, exactly discerning who are prudent or pious, in which even wise mens judgments are commonly mistaken, and inclining the minds and hearts of persons one towards another.

15 Slothfulness casteth into a deep sleep h, and an idle soul shall suffer * hunger. * Ch. & 20.

h Maketh a man careless and negligent, and like one asleep in his businesse, whereby he cometh to want, as it follows.

16 * He that keepeth the commandment i, keepeth *Luk his own soul; but he that despiseth his ways k, shall die.

i The commands of God, called by way of eminence the commandment, as the Word is oft used Emphatically for the word of God, as hath been noted before. k Either 1. His own ways, by not taking heed to his ways, so as to order his Conversation aright. Or 2. The ways of God, who is understood in the former clause.

17 * He that hath pity on the poor, lendeth unto *Mat. the LORD l, and ‖ that which he hath given will he pay 42.&c him again. ‖ Or,

l Who takes what is done to them as done to himself, because it is done to them whom God, as to this particular, hath put in his own stead, to be his receivers, and whom God hath in a peculiar manner commended to the care and charity of all other men.

18 * Chasten thy son while there is hope m, and let * Ch. not thy soul spare ‖ for his crying o. & 23. ‖ Or, m Before custom in sin, and thy indulgence hath made him hard- or, to hearted and incorrigible. n Forbear not to give him due and necessary him to correction.

correction. o Which oft stirs up a foolish and pernicious pity in Parents towards them. This word, with some small difference in the points, is used in this sense, Isa. 14. 11. Or, as it is in the margent, to his destruction, intimating that this is a cruel pity, and a likely way to expose him to that death threatned to stubborn Sons, Deut. 21. 18. 21. But this clause is, and may be, rendred otherwise, yet, or but do not lift up thy soul (which signifies a vehement desire, Deut. 24. 15. Psal. 25. 1. Jer. 44. 14. let not thy passion, or eager desire of chastening him, transport thee so far as) to cause him to die, i.e. use moderation in this work.

19 A man of great wrath p shall suffer punishment; for if thou deliver him q, yet thou must † do it again r. † Heb. add p Or, He who is of great wrath, of strong passions. Which may be understood either 1. More particularly, of a Son of such a temper, who is very impatient of correction, and breaks forth into violent passions upon that occasion; and then the following words contain the Parents duty, which is to take care to punish him, because if he spare him that time for his passion, he must do so again and again, the same cause returning upon him, and so must wholly forbear to chasten him. Or 2. More generally, of any man of a fierce and furious temper and carriage, and then the next words declare only the event, by his great and repeated provocations he will bring punishment upon himself either from God or Men. q If either a Parent, or another person provoked by him, forbear to punish him. He turneth his speech to the party, as is usual in Scripture, and in other Authors. r Heb. thou must add, to wit, to deliver him again and again, as oft as he shall offend: or, thou wilt add or encrease, to wit, his wrath, which thou should subdue.

20 Hear counsel, receive instruction, that thou mayest be wise in * thy latter end s. * Ch. 23.19.

s Before thy Death come. Which he adds not exclusively, as if he ought not to be wise before, but Emphatically to shew, that how foolishly soever he had spent his former and younger years, it highly concerned him to be wise before it was too late, or before Death came.

21 *There are many devices in a mans heart t, nevertheless the counsel of the Lord u that shall stand x. *Ch.16.

t Understand out of the opposite Clause, which shall not stand but be disappointed. u His eternal and unchangeable and most wise Decree, which oft-times contradicts, and always over-rules the designs and purposes of men. x i.e. Be certainly fulfilled, as this Phrase is used, Jer. 44. 28, 29. and elsewhere.

22 The desire of a man y is his kindness, and a poor man z is better than a liar a.

y Either 1. of any or every man. All men desire, and it is desirable to be in a capacity of being kind and bountiful to others, whereby they gain love and honour, and many other great advantages. Or 2. of the poor man, expressed in the next Clause. The herty will or desire of being kind or liberal to others in necessity is all the kindness which a poor Man can shew, and is accepted by God, and should be owned by men as a real kindness. Compare 2 Cor. 8. 12. Or 3. of the rich Man, as may be gathered from the opposition of this Man to the poor Man in the following Clause; such Ellipses being very common in this Book, as hath been noted again and again. So the sense may be this, There be a sort of rich men all whose kindness and charity consists in good desires and well-wishes to Persons in misery, saying to them, depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled, but not giving them those things which are needful, as it is expressed, Jam. 2. 16. And this sense seems to agree very well with the following Clause. But being singular in this exposition, I submit it to the Judicious Reader. z Who is not able to give what he desires to do. a Than a rich Man who feeds the poor with good words and fair promises, but doth not perform what he pretends, and is able to do.

23 The fear of the LORD tendeth to life, and he that hath it shall abide satisfied b; he shall not be visited with evil c.

b Shall want nothing, and shall be fully contented with God's favour and blessing. c With any destructive affliction.

24 * A slothful man hideth his hand in his bosom d, and will not so much as bring it to his mouth again e.

d Either to keep it warm in cold Weather: Or, to give it rest, being loth to oppress it with the labour of any action. It is a sarcastical Hyperbole. e To wit, to feed himself; he expects that the Meat should drop into his Mouth.

25 * Smite a scorner f, and the simple g † will be- † Heb. ware; and reprove one that hath understanding, and he will understand knowledge h.

f An obstinate and impudent Transgressor, who rejects and scorns all admonitions, and therefore is to be taught with blows. g Who sin through ignorance, and imprudence, and infirmity, being possibly drawn to sin by the scorners evil counsel or example. h A verbal reproof will be more effectual for his reformation than the severest punishments will be to a scorner.

26 He that wasteth his father i, and chaseth away his mother k, is a son that causeth shame, and bringeth reproach l.

i i.e. His Fathers estate by unjust or riotous courses. k Causeth her to avoid and abhor his presence and society, and to go from the House where he is. l Both to himself and to his Parents and Family. But this Verse may very well be rendred otherwise, the last words being made the subject of the Proposition, as is usual in Scripture. A Son that causeth shame and bringeth reproach (upon himself and his friends by wicked ways) wasteth his Fathers (estate and health and comfort) and chaseth or driveth away his Mother. These are the effects of his wickedness.

27 Cease, my son, to hear the instruction that causeth to err from the words of knowledge m.

m If thou hast formerly, yet do not now any longer hearken to those false Doctrines or evil counsels which tend to withdraw thee from the belief or practice of God's holy Word.

28 † An ungodly witness scorneth judgment n, and † Heb. a the mouth of the wicked devoureth iniquity o. witness of Belial.

n Hath no reverence to the place of Justice, nor to the presence of God there, nor to that Sacred and Solemn Work of executing Judgment, but in spight of all gives in a false Testimony. o Uttereth with as great greediness, and delight, and ease, as they swallow down delicious Meats and Drinks. Compare Job. 15. 16.

29 Judgments are prepared p for scorners, and stripes for the back of fools.

p Either by men, or at least by God; although they be deferred for a time, yet they are treasured up for them, and shall infallibly be inflicted upon them.

CHAP. XX.

1 WIne is a mocker a, strong drink is raging b, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise c.

a Wine immoderately drunk makes men mockers or scoffers at God and men. Compare Hos. 7. 5. b Makes men full of rage and passion. c Is a Fool, or a mad Man, because he depriveth himself of the use of his reason.

2 * The fear of a King d is as the roaring of a lion; *Ch.16.14. whoso provoketh him to anger, sinneth against his own & 19. 12. soul e.

d Passively taken, the terror which the wrath of a King causeth, by comparing this with Ch. 19. 12. e Exposeth himself to manifest danger of Death.

3 * It is an honour to a man to cease from strife f; *Ch.17.14. but every fool will be medling g.

f Either to prevent it, or, if it be begun, to put an end to it: which, although proud and prophane Persons esteem dishonourable to them, is indeed their glory, because it is an evidence of their great wisdom and power over their passions, and of their respect and obedience to their Soveraign Lord, in which their Honour and Happiness consists. g To wit, with matters of strife; he is always ready to begin strife, and obstinate in the continuance of it.

4 * The sluggard will not plow by reason of the * Ch. 10.4. ‖ cold h; therefore shall he beg in harvest, and have no- ‖ Or, Winter. thing i.

h Of the Plowing season, which is in Autumn and towards Winter. He hates and avoids all laborious and difficult work, although his own necessity and interest oblige him to it. i And not obtain an Alms; not in that time of Plenty and bounty, because mens Hearts are justly hardened against that Man who by his own sloth and wilfulness hath brought himself to want.

5 * Counsel k in the heart of man is like deeep Wa- * Ch. 18.4. ter l; but a man of understanding will draw it out m.

k Either 1. Wisdom or ability to give good Counsel. Or 2. Designs or purposes of doing something of moment: for this word is frequently used in both senses, but the last seems fittest here. l Either 1. is there in great abundance. Or 2. is secret and hard to be discovered. m By prudent Questions and Discourses, and a diligent Observation of his words and actions.

8 * A King that sitteth in the throne of judgment s, *Ch.16.10. scattereth away all evil t with his eyes u. Ver. 26.

s That makes it his great care and business to execute Judgment and Justice among his People, especially if he do this in his own Person, as was usual in ancient Times, and sees things with his own Eyes. As for the Phrase, the sign or gesture is here put for the thing signified by it. t Effectually punisheth and suppresseth all wickedness. u With his very looks, or by his diligent inspection into affairs.

12 * The hearing ear, and the seeing eye, the * Ex. 4.11. LORD hath made even both of them c. Pf. 94. 9.

c It is God alone who gives us our Senses, and Natural Faculties, and the use and exercise of them, and especially a power of employing them aright to see and observe the works of God, and to hear and receive his Word and all wholsome instructions. Whence he leaves it to us to gather, that God doth exactly see and hear all mens words, and actions though never so secret. He names the Eye, and Ear, because these are the two Senses by which instructions are conveyed to the mind; but under them he seems to comprehend all other Senses and powers of Soul or Body, by a Synecdoche.

*Ch. 6. 9. & 12. 14. & 19. 15. 13 * Love not sleep d, lest thou come to poverty: open thin eyes e, and thou shalt be satisfied with bread.

d i. e. Immoderate sleep, or sloth or idleness. Take sleep because necessity requires it, not from any love to it. e Awake out of sleep, shake off sloth and betake thy self to thy employment with diligence and vigor.

14 It is naught f, it is naught saith the buyer g, but when he is gone his way h, then he boasteth i.

f The commodity is but of little worth. g To wit, to the Seller: he discomends it that he may bring down the price of it. h With the commodity purchased. i That by his wit he hath over-reached the Seller, and got a great advantage to himself. This he notes as a common but reprovable practice.

*Ch. 3. 15. & 8. 11. 15 There is gold k, and a multitude of rubies, but * the lips of knowledge are a precious jewel l.

*Ch. 22. 27. & 27. 13. 16 * Take his garment m that is surety for a stranger n; and take a pledg of him o for a strange woman p.

m To wit, as a pledg, without which he ought not to be trusted because by this action he sheweth himself to be a Fool, and he taketh the ready way to beggery. Obj. This precept contradicts that Law which forbad the taking of a Garment for a Pledge, Exod. 22. 26. Answ. It doth not contradict it, for the cases vastly differ; for that Law concerned only the poor, who were forced to borrow for their own necessity, and therefore deserve pity; whereas this reacheth only those who are or would be thought rich and sufficient Security for others, and who borrow not for their own need, but for a meer Stranger, for which folly they deserve to be severely punished. Besides, this may be only a Prediction, though it be delivered in the form of a Precept, as many Predictions are; and so shews what may be expected by him that is guilty of such folly, even that he shall be stripped of his Garments and other necessaries. n For a Forreigner or a Person unknown to him. o That is surety: which words are to be understood out of the foregoing Clause. p For an Harlot, who is so called, Prov. 2. 16. and ellewhere.

*Ch. 15. 22. *Ch. 24. 6. 18 * Every purpose is established by counsel s, and * with good advice make war.

s The way to bring our purposes and desires to a good effect, is to manage them with serious consideration and good advice. t Or, therefore. This is necessary in every common undertaking, and much more in a thing of such high importance as War is.

*Ch. 11. 13. ‖ Or, inticeth. 19 * He that goeth about as a tale-bearer, revealeth ‖ secrets u; therefore x meddle not with him y that ‖ flattereth with his lips z.

u He that delighteth in and accustometh himself to the practice of spreading Tales or evil Reports, will not forbear to publish the greatest secrets which are committed to his trust. Or, as others render it, and as the words lie in the Hebrew Text, He that revealeth secrets (contrary to his promise or the trust reposed in him, you may by that token be assured that) he doth and will go about as a Tale-bearer. He who divulgeth secrets cannot or will not forbear to publish other things, and so is not fit to be trusted with any thing. x To prevent that mischief. Heb. and. So the following Sentence is not inferred from the former, but only added to it. y Avoid frequent and familiar society and conversation with him. z By which artifice he seeks to gain thy affections, and so to fish out all thy secrets, which he may impart to others whom he may oblige hereby, and so render his company more acceptable.

*Ex. 21. 17. Lev. 20. 9. Mat. 15. 4. ‖ Or, Candle. 20 * Whoso curseth his father or a his mother, his ‖ lamp b shall be put out in obscure darkness c.

*Ch. 28. 20. 21 * An inheritance may be gotten hastily at the beginning d; but the end thereof shall not be blessed e.

d An Estate sometimes is got suddenly in the very beginning of a Man's labours for it, in which case it may be presumed that some undirect and unrighteous courses were used, for the getting of it, because Riches are very seldom given by God, or gotten by men, without mens diligence. But this, as well as many other Proverbs, are to be understood of the common course, although it admit of some exceptions. For sometimes Merchants or others get great Estates speedily by one happy Voyage, or by some other prosperous event. This Translation follows the Hebrew Marginal reading, but according to the Textual reading, it may be thus rendred and understood. An Inheritance gotten in the beginning (to wit, of a mans endeavours) is abominable; to wit, unto God, being supposed to be unjustly gotten, as was now said. e At last it shall be cursed and wither by God's just judgment.

*Deut. 32. 35. Ch. 17. 13. & 24. 29. Rom. 12. 17. 1 Thef. 5. 15. 1 Pet. 3. 9. 22 * Say not thou f, I will recompense evil; but wait on the LORD, and he shall save thee.

24 * Man's goings k are of the LORD l; how can a man then understand his own way m?

k All mens purposes and actions. l Are ordered and over-ruled by God's wise and powerful Providence to accomplish his own counsel and good pleasure, and not what men lift or intend. m Either 1. what course he ought to take; which he cannot know without God's direction and assistance, Compare Prov. 16. 9. Jer. 10. 23. Or 2. what the issue of his designs will be, whether they shall succeed or be disappointed; the way being taken for the end or event to which it leads, as it is in many other places. The scope of the Proverb is to shew, that all the events of humane life are neither ordered nor foreseen by Man's, but only by God's Providence, and therefore men should only mind the doing of their duty, and then quietly depend upon God for a good issue to their endeavours.

*Pr. 10. 23.

25 It is a snare n to the man who devoureth that which is holy o, and after vows to make enquiry p.

n It brings guilt and God's curse and vengeance upon him. o i. e. Those Meats or Drinks which were devoted or consecrated to God. Under which one kind he comprehends and forbids all alienation of Sacred or Dedicated things from God to a Man's private use or benefit: Of which see Levit. 27. 9. Deut. 23. 21. Mal. 3. 8, 9. Acts 5. 1. &c. p After a Man hath made Vows to consider whether he can possibly, or may lawfully keep them, and to invent or enquire of others all ways possible to break his Vow, and to satisfie or deceive his Conscience in so doing. Which enquiry is justly censured as a sin and snare, because it is an evidence of a covetous or irreligious Mind, and is the ready way and first step towards the open violation of it.

*Pfal. 5. &c. Verf. 8.

26 * A wise King q scattereth r the wicked, and bringeth the wheel over them s.

q Who seriously minds his Duty and his true interest. r Breaks their Companies and Confederacies, and forceth them to flee several ways for their own safety; driveth them from his presence, and from the Society of honest men, as the Chaff is by the Husbandman separated from the Corn, and driven away by the Wind, of which this Hebrew word is commonly used; and to which the next Clause hath some reference. s As the Cart-wheel was anciently turned over the Sheaves to beat the Corn out of them, Isa. 28. 27, 28. He punisheth them severely, as their Offences deserve. This or such like punishments were not unusual among the Eastern Nations, as we may gather from, 2 Sam. 8. 2. & 12. 31. Amos 1. 3.

27 The spirit t of a man is the ‖ candle u of the LORD x, searching all the inwards parts of the belly y.

*Pr. 20. ‖ Or, light.

t i. e. The reasonable Soul. u Is a clear and glorious light set up in Man for his information and direction. x So called partly because it comes from God in a more immediate and peculiar manner than the Body doth, Eccles. 12. 7. and partly because it is in God's stead to observe and judge all a Man's actions. y Discerning not only his outward actions, which are visible to others, but his most inward and secret thoughts and affections, which no other Man can see, 1 Cor. 2 11. The Belly is here put for the Heart, as it is frequently. The Soul can reflect upon and judge of its own dispositions and actions. Which plainly sheweth that the Heart is not so deceitful, but that a Man by diligent study of it, and the use of the means appointed by God, may arrive at a certain knowledge of its state and condition, in reference to God, and to Salvation.

*Pf. 101. 5. Ch. 29. 14. 28 * Mercy z and truth a preserve the king b, and his throne is upheld by mercy c.

z Clemency to Offenders, and bounty to worthy, and to indigent Persons. a Faithfulness in keeping his Word and Promises inviolably. b Because they engage God to guard him, and gain him the reverence and affections of his People, which is a King's greatest safety and happiness. c Which is again mentioned, to shew that although it be an act of Grace, and therefore in some sort free, yet Princes are obliged to it both by their duty, and by their interest, because it is a singular means of their preservation.

*Ch. 16. 31. 29 The glory of young men d is their strength; and * the beauty of old men is the gray head e.

d That wherein they glory as their Priviledge above old men. e i. e. Their old Age expressed by the outward sign of it, wherein they glory as their peculiar Priviledge, as a Testimony of their Piety and God's Blessing, and as a token of their great experience and wisdom. The design of this Proverb is to declare the several advantages of several Ages, and the mutual need they have one of another, and thereby to engage them to mutual love and assistance, and to friendly converse, and to make every one contented with his own Age and Condition, and not to envy nor yet despise his Brother, or the difference of their Ages, as is very usual among men.

† Heb. purgeth Medicines gainful

30 The blueness of a wound f † cleanseth away evil g; so do stripes h the inward parts of the belly i.

f Grievous wounds which make men black and blew, or severe punishments. g Are the most effectual means to reclaim a wicked Man, and to purge out his corruption. h Heb. and stripes, which answer to the wounds in the former Clause. i Either 1. Which pierce even to the inward parts of the Belly, and so we are to understand out of the former Branch, cleanse away evil. Or 2. They cleanse the inward parts of the Belly, i. e. of the Heart. So this is an addition to the former Clause, and the sense of the whole is, Grievous wounds or stripes do cleanse not only the outward Man by keeping it from evil actions, but even the inward Man, by expelling or subduing vile affections. Which is mentioned as a great and blessed benefit of afflictions.

CHAP. XXI.

1 THe kings heart a is in the hand of the LORD, as the rivers of water b; he turneth it c whithersoever he will d.

a His very inward purposes and inclinations, which seem to be most in a Man's own power, and out of the reach of all others, and much more his Tongue and Hand, and all his outward actions. He names Kings not to exclude other men, but because they are more arbitrary and uncontrollable than other men. b Which Husbandmen or Gardiners can draw by little Channels into the adjacent grounds as they please, and as their occasions require. c Directeth and boweth, partly by suggesting those things to their Minds which have a commanding influence upon their wills, and partly by a direct and immediate motion of their wills and affections, which being God's Creatures must needs be as subject to his power and pleasure as either mens Minds or Bodies are, and which he moves sweetly and suitably to their own Nature, though strongly and effectually. So as they shall fulfil his counsels and designs, either of Mercy or of Correction to themselves, or to their People.

2 Every way of a man is right in his own eyes; but the LORD pondereth the hearts e.

e This was said, Chap. 16. 2. where it is explained, and is here repeated, either for the great importance and usefulness of it, or because he perceived that the Israelites were very prone to self-deceit.

*Ch. 15. 8. 3 * To do justice and judgment f, is more acceptable to the LORD than sacrifice g.

f The conscientious performance of all our duties to men. g Than the most costly, outward services offered to God, joyned with the neglect of our Moral duties to God or men. The same thing is affirmed, 1 Sam. 15. 22. Hos. 6. 6. Mic. 6. 7, 8, &c.

*Ch. 6. 17. 4 * † An high look h, and a proud heart i, and ‖ the plowing k of the wicked, is sin l.

h One gesture or sign of Pride put for all the rest. Prov. 6. 17. i Pride lurking and reigning in the Heart, though it do not discover it self to men by outward actions, but be disguised with a shew and shadow of humility, as it is frequently. k Either 1. strictly and properly so called: even their civil or natural actions, which in themselves are lawful and good, are made sinful as they are managed by ungodly men, without any regard to the service and glory of God, which ought to be the great end of all our actions, 1 Cor. 10. 31. and with a design of serving their own wicked lusts by it. Or 2. Metaphorically, their designs and endeavours, which are said to be sin, because they are wholly and fully set upon sin, and they make sin their trade or business, which is called Plowing wickedness, Job 4. 8. But all the ancient Interpreters, and divers others render the word the Lamp or Light, as this Hebrew word, even thus pointed, is rendred, 1 Kings 11. 36. & 15. 4. 2 Kings 8. 19. 2 Chron. 21. 7. and the Lamp of the wicked is a Phrase used in this Book, Chap. 13. 9. & 24. 20. as also, Job 21. 17. whereas the Plowing of the wicked is a Phrase not elsewhere used. And this seems best to agree with the Context, for by their Lamp he seems to understand all their pomp and glory, that worldly Greatness and Prosperity, which is the Fewel of their Pride, and therefore is most fitly joyned with it. l It is by them turned into sin, and made the occasion of much wickedness. The whole Verse may be thus rendred, An high look, and a proud Heart, which is the light or glory of the wicked (i. e. wherein they glory, esteeming it magnanimity or gallantry of spirit) is sin, i. e. is a great and grievous sin. And in this manner the learned Mercer renders the Verse, save only that he translates the Hebrew word Nir, the Plowing.

*Pf. 127. 2. 5 * The thoughts of the diligent m tend only to plenteousness; but of every one that is hasty n, only to want o.

m Who carefully and industriously prosecutes what he hath wisely contrived and resolved. n Who manageth his affairs rashly without due consideration. o Is likely to bring himself to poverty.

*Ch. 10. 2. & 13. 11. 6 * The getting of treasures by a lying tongue p is a vanity tossed to and fro q of them that seek death r.

p By false-witness-bearing, or by any other false or deceitful words or actions, whereby many men get riches. q Is like the Chaff or Smoak driven away by the Wind; it is neither satisfactory nor durable, but quickly vanisheth away, as hath been frequently observed of Estates ill gotten. r Not designedly but eventually, that take those courses which will bring Death or Destruction upon them or theirs.

10 * The soul of the wicked desireth evil d: his neighbour † findeth no favour in his eyes e.

d His Heart is fully and earnestly set in him, as it is expressed, Eccles. 8. 11. to do evil, to work wickedness, to do mischief to others, to satisfie his own lusts, though it be with injury of others. e If he either dissuade him from his wickedness, or stand in the way of his Lusts. He spares neither friend nor foe.

*Ch. 19. 25. 11 * When the scorner is punished, the simple f is made wise: and when the wise is instructed g, he receiveth knowledg.

f The honest or plainhearted man, as Chap. 19. 25. where this whole verse for the substance of it is contained and explained. g Or, prospers, as this word is used, Prov. 17. 8. and elsewhere. So the sense of the verse is, The simple learn Wisdom, both from the punishment of wicked men, and from the prosperity of good men.

12 The righteous man wisely considereth the house of the wicked h; but God overthroweth k the wicked for their wickedness.

h He looketh through its present Power and Glory (which dazleth the Eyes of others) unto that ruine to which it is designed. i Or, now, or that, this being the thing which he wisely considereth. k Or, will overthrow in his due time, though for a season he bear with them.

n To a person offended and angry with us, as the following words shew. o Which makes it more acceptable; for gifts openly given favour of ostentation in the giver, and cause some shame or contempt to the receiver. p Secretly conveyed into his bosom. See on Prov. 17. 8. & 18. 16.

15 It is joy to the just q to do judgment r; but destruction s shall be to the workers of iniquity.

q The sense is either 1. He is highly pleased and delighted with it. Or 2. He reapeth much comfort and benefit by it, which is opposed to the following destruction: joy is put for matter or cause of joy. r To do what is just or good, for this is opposed to working of iniquity. s Or, as others render it, terror or horror, opposite to joy.

16 The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding t shall † remain in the congregation of the dead.

t That forsaketh the rule of Gods word, and walketh after his own Lusts. u Shall, without Repentance, be condemned to eternal Death or Damnation.

*Ch. 11. 8. 18 * The wicked shall be a ransom for the righteous a, and the transgressor for the upright.

a The wicked shall be brought into those troubles which were either threatned by God, or designed by wicked men against the righteous, and by that means, as by a ransom, the righteous shall be delivered. Thus Achan was a ransom for Israel, Jos. 7. 26. and Haman for Mordecai.

*Pſ. 112. 3. 20 * There is a treasure to be desired, and oil in the dwelling of the wise c: but a foolish man spendeth it up.

c Wise-men lay up all necessary and desirable treasures for their own use, and for their Children, and Families. Oil is particularly mentioned, partly because that was a considerable part of their Wealth and Treasures in those Countries, of which see Deut. 7. 13. & 28. 40, 51. Judg. 9. 9. Mic. 6. 15. &c. and partly to shew that his Providence reached not only to necessaries, but even to matters of just and lawful delight.

21 He that followeth after d righteousness and mercy e, findeth f life, righteousness, and honour.

d That fervently desires, and diligently and constantly endeavours to attain to them, for such shall and will certainly obtain them. e Living in the constant exercise of these virtues. f Shall obtain from God, what is right and due to him, either from God by virtue of his gracious promise, or from men, whose hearts God will dispose to deal justly and kindly with him.

*Eccl. 9. 14. &c. 22 * A wise man scaleth the city of the mighty g, and casteth down the strength of the confidence thereof h.

24 Proud and haughty scorner is his name m, who † Heb. in the wrath of pride. dealeth † in proud wrath n.

m Instead of that respect and glory which he seeks by such courses, he shall be branded with the Title and Imputation of an arrogant and scornful person, which is most contemptible and hateful to Mankind. n Who in the conduct of his affairs and dealings in the world, is not governed by Reason and Justice, but by his own Pride and Passions.

*Ch.13.4. 25 * The desire of the slothful killeth him o: for his hands refuse to labour.

o Either 1. Tormenteth him almost to death, whilst he passionately desires that which he sees he shall not enjoy, and will not take pains to procure. Or 2. Exposeth him to extream want, and so to death, or to such wicked courses for the supply of his wants, as bring him to an untimely death.

26 He p coveteth greedily all the day long q: but

p The slothful man mentioned in the last verse. But because the Verses in this Book are for the most part independent one upon another, this clause is and may be otherwise rendred, There is that coveteth, &c. Or, the wicked (which may be understood from the oppositiort of the righteous in the next clause) coveteth, &c. q Spends his whole time in vain and lazy desires, but will not labour to get any thing, either to use himself, or to give to others. r By Gods Blessing upon his industry he procures enough, not only for his own support, but also for the liberal relief of others.

*Pſal.30.9. Chap.15.8. Iſa. 66. 3. Jer. 6. 20. Amos 5.22 † Heb. in wickedneſs: 27 * The sacrifice s of the wicked is abomination t: how much more when u he bringeth it † with a wicked mind x!

s All the most glorious and costly services which they offer to God. t God rejects and abhors them, because they are offered by such men, and in such manner as God justly abhors. u Or, because, as all the ancient Translaters render it, the Hebrew particle, aph, being expletive: Or, even because; so the following clause gives the reason of the former Proposition. x With an hypocritical and impenitent Heart, or with a bad design, not in obedience to Gods Command, and with respect to his honour and service, but either to cover, or countenance, or promote some wicked intention or course, which, notwithstanding all his professions of Religion, he is resolved to prosecute.

*Ch.19.5.9 † Heb. wit-neſs of lies. 28 * † A false witness y shall perish z: but the man that heareth a, speaketh constantly b.

y Heb. A witneſs of lies, one who is forward to swear or speak false things, or such things as he hath not heard nor learned from others, nor seen, but devised in his own heart. z Shall be severely punished either by God or Men, and shall be confounded and silenced, because none will for the future regard or credit his testimony. a He who hears before he speaks, and witnesseth nothing but what he hath heard or seen, and knows to be true. b Doth not contradict himself, but always affirmeth the same thing. Or, as most other Interpreters render the words, speaketh (or, may speak, dare speak freely and boldly) for ever; when lyars are cut off, he lives, and is in a capacity of speaking and bearing witness again and again, as occasion requires, as long as he lives, and his Testimony will be received.

c Continueth in evil courses with obstinacy and impudence, in spight of all the Commands of God, or Counsels of Men. d He ordereth his steps aright, and if at any time he goeth awry, he doth not add Rebellion to his sin, nor perſist in his errour, but considereth his ways, and turneth his feet to Gods testimonies, as David did, Pſal. 119. 59. Or, conſidereth his way, remembring with grief and shame what he hath done, and taking better heed to himself for the future.

*Jer. 9.23. 30 * There is no wisdom, nor understanding nor counsel against the LORD e.

e Which can prevail against the Counsel and Will of God.

*Pſal.20.7. & 33.17. 31 * The horse f is prepared against the day of battle: but * ‖ safety is of the LORD g.

*Pſ. 3. 8. ‖ Or, victory. f Under which particular all warlike provisions are comprehended. g The success of the battle depends not upon any humane strength or art, but meerly upon Gods Providence, who gives the victory when and to whom he pleaseth, and oft times to those that have least reason to expect it. Compare Eccl. 9. 11.

CHAP. XXII.

*Eccl. 7. 1. ‖ Or, favour is better than, &c. 1 A * good name a is rather to be chosen than great riches b, and ‖ loving favour c rather than silver and gold.

a Heb. name put for good name, as Eccleſ. 7. 2. the word good being easily understood out of the next clause, in which it is expressed in the Hebrew text. A good reputation amongst wife and good men. b Partly because it is a most special blessing from God being appropriated to worthy Persons, whereas God commonly throws away Riches upon the baseſt of men: partly because it gives a man that tranquility and satisfaction of mind, and that content and comfort in his condition, which no Riches can purchase: and partly because as it is commonly an evidence of a mans Virtue and Piety, so it is accompanied with God's Love and Favour, whereas Riches are oft given by God in wrath, and to the hurt of the owner. c Or, good Grace or Favour, a good Report among men, especially among good men, and that hearty Love and Kindness which attends upon it.

*Ch.29.13. 2 The rich and poor meet together d: the LORD is the maker of them all e.

d Either 1. In a way of hostility or opposition, as this word is sometimes used, the rich contemning and oppressing the poor, and the poor envying and purloining from the rich, and so the following words are a reason why that hostility should cease. Or 2. In the way of mutual converſe, they live together, and need one another.

e Not only as they are men, but also as they are poor or rich, which difference comes wholly from God's Providence. They have one common Creator, and Lord, and Judge, and the one cannot despise nor grudge at the other without a reflection upon God.

3 * A prudent man foreſeeth the evil f, and hideth *Ch.14.

f The Calamity or Judgment of God threatned, and approaching. g Retireth to his strong Tower, mentioned Prov. 18. 10. by Prayer and Repentance, putteth himself under the Protection of the Almighty. Compare Iſa. 26. 20. h In their former road and course of sin, carelesly and secretely, as Travellers do in a road where they apprehend no danger.

riches, and honour, and life l. ‖ Or, the reward of humility

i Or, because of humility: or, as many others render it, the reward of humility, that reward which God hath graciously promised, and will give to Humility; which is a grace of great price in God's Eyes. See Iſa. 57. 15. Jam. 4. 6. k By which he distinguisheth true and Christian Humility from counterfeit and moral humility, because that ariseth from a deep sense of God's greatness, and purity, and perfection, compared with our meanness and filthiness, and manifold imperfections, whereas this is quite of another nature, and from other grounds. l The comforts of this life, and the happiness of the next, both which are promised to Godliness, 1 Tim. 4 8.

5 Thorns and snares are in the way of the froward m:
he that doth keep his soul n shall be far from them o.

m The wicked by their evil courses expose themselves to many dangers and occasions both of sin and mischief. n That taketh heed to himself, and to his actions, and to the saving of his Life and Soul. o Either 1. Will avoid the society of such froward persons. Or 2. Shall by that circumspection preserve himself from those thorns, &c. with which the Pronoun, them, agrees in number.

6 ‖ Train up p a child † in the way he should go q, ‖ Or, chiſe. and when he is old, he will not depart from it r.

p Or, initiate or inſtruct. q Heb. in, or according to his way, i. e. † Heb. his way either 1. according to his capacity. Or rather 2. In that course or manner of life which thou wouldst have him chuse and follow. Or, as one learned man renders it, in the beginning of his way, i. e. in his tender years, as soon as he is capable of instruction. Heb. in the mouth, &c. The mouth is oft put for the beginning or entrance of a ny place, as Gen. 29. 2. Joſ. 10. 18. Prov. 8. 3. Dan. 6. 17. r To wit, not easily and ordinarily. The impressions made in childith years will remain, as hath been observed by all sorts of learned Writers. But this, as many Proverbs of like nature, are not to be understood as if this were universally and necessarily true, which Experience confutes, but because it is so for the most part, except some extraordinary cause hinder it.

7 * The rich ruleth over the poor s, and the borrower is servant † to the lender t.
*Jam. 2. † Heb. that lends.

s To wit, with rigor and Tyranny, taking advantage of his necessities. t Is at his mercy, and therefore forced to comply with his pleasure. The design of the Proverb is partly to correct this miscariage of the rich, and partly to oblige all men to diligence, whereby they may deliver themselves from this servitude.

8 * He that soweth iniquity u shall reap vanity x:
*Job 4. ‖ and the rod of his anger shall fail y. ‖ Or, with the rod of u Or unrighteouſneſs whose common practice it is to wrong or oppress others. x Or trouble or misery, as this word is commonly used, and as divers here render it. The mischief which he hath done to others shall be returned to him by God's righteous sentence. anger he ſhall be conſumed.

y That power which he used with fury and cruelty shall be taken away from him.

9 * † He that hath a bountiful eye z, shall be bleſſed a: for he giveth of his bread to the poor.
*Cor. 9. † Heb. of eye.

z Heb. A good eye. He who looks upon the wants and miseries of others with compassion and kindness, as this Phrase is used, Mat. 20. 15. as an evil eye, is put for one that beholds others with envy and unmercifulness, Deut. 15. 9. Prov. 23. 6. & 28. 22. a Both by God and Men.

b Out of your society, avoid converſation with him. c Who neither fears God, nor reverences Man, but scorns all admonitions, and minds only the pleasing of himself, and the gratifying of his own Lusts, which is the chief cause of most contentions. d Wherewith he loads those that either oppose or admoniſh him.

11 * He that loveth pureneſs of heart e, ‖ for the * Pſ. 101.
grace of his lips f, the king shall be his friend g. Ch. 16. ‖ Or, hath grace in his lips

e Who is plain hearted or sincere, and abhors dissimulation. f For those gracious speeches which naturally and commonly flow from a pure heart. Or, and (understand, loveth, out of the former clause) grace of his lips. Whose discourse is gracious and sincere. g The greateſt men will, or should, desire, and highly prize the acquaintance and advice of such persons, rather than of Dissemblers and Flatterers, wherewith they are most commonly pestered.

12 The eyes of the LORD preſerve h knowledge i,
‖ Or, the matters. and he overthroweth ‖ the words k of the transgreſſor.

h God by the watchful Eye of his Providence maintains and defends. i To wit, men of knowledge; the abstract being put for the concrete, as Pride is put for a proud man, Pſal. 36. 11. Deceit for the deceitful, as Prov. 12. 17. So here Knowledge for knowing and good men, such as the last verse spoke of, whose hearts are pure, and speeches gracious, not only the King shall be their friend, as he said there, but God also, which he adds here. k Their false and flattering speeches, whereby they designed and expected to gain the favour and friendship of great men, which are opposed to the sincere and gracious speeches of good men, implied in the first clause of this verse, and expressed in the foregoing verse, or, as others render it, and the word is very commonly used, the matters, all his Counsels, Hopes, Enterprizes, and Concerns.

*Prov. 26. 13.

l Alledgeth as his excuse to them who upbraid him with idleness, or perſwade him to diligence. m There are extream dangers and incredible difficulties in my way. n By that Lion, or some other way. o Which is added to shew the ridiculousness of his excuse; for Lions abide in the woods or fields, not in the streets of Towns or Cities.

14 * The mouth p of strange women is a deep pit q: he that is abhorred of the LORD r shall fall therein.
*Ch. 23. 27.

p Her fair and flattering speeches wherewith she enticeth him to gross filthiness, as it is noted, Prov. 7. 21. q Into which it is easie to fall, but hard, if not impossible, to get out of it. It is a rare thing for any person, once entred into the course of Whoredom, sincerely to repent of it, and turn from it. See Prov. 2. 19. r To wit, in an high and singular manner; who by his former impieties, and contempt of God and of his Grace, hath provoked God to leave and loth him, and to punish one sin with another: for otherwise all sinners, as such, are abhorred by God.

15 Foolishness is bound s in the heart of a child; but

*Ch. 29. 15.

s Is fixed and setled there, as being born with him, and rooted in his very nature, and not plucked up without great difficulty and diligence. t The smart of punishment makes him weary of his sin, and watchfull against it.

16 He that oppreſſeth the poor to encreaſe his riches, and he that giveth to the rich u, ſhall ſurely come to want.

u That vainly and prodigally casts away his estate upon those who do not need it, or gives it to them with evil design, as that they may assist him in oppressing the poor, or at least hinder him in it.

17 Bow down thine ear, and hear the words of the wiſe x, and apply thine heart y unto my knowledge z.

x Of wise and holy men of God. y Thirst after it, and give up thy self to the diligent study of it. z The knowledge of God, and of thy several duties, which I am here delivering to thee.

a The words of the wise. b Heb. in thy belly, i. e. in thine heart, which implies receiving them in Love, and retaining them in mind and memory. c Be fitly expressed: or, be diſpoſed or ordered. The sense is, when thou hast got them into thine heart, thou wilt be able and ready to discourse pertinently and profitably of them.

d That knowing God, and his word, and Promises, thou mayst chearfully and confidently trust in him, which is the only way to thy safety and happiness.

20 Have not I written unto thee † excellent things e

† Heb. Hoſt. 8.

e Or, princely things, as they are called, Prov. 8. 6. the great things of Gods Law, as Hoſ. 8. 12. f Consisting of Counſels to direct thy practice, and Knowledg to inform and enrich thy mind. Or by that known Figure Hendiadis, in counſels of knowledg, i. e. in good counsels which proceed from found knowledge, and make a man knowing and wise, which are oppoſed to the counſels of the wicked, Prov. 12. 5. which are without knowledg.

21 That I may make thee know the certainty of

g That I may teach thee, not false, or vain, or uncertain things, as the Teachers of the Heathen Nations do, but the true and infallible Oracles of God. h That being inſtructed by me, thou mayst be able to give true, and solid, and satisfactory answers. i To wit, for thine advice in great and difficult matters. Or, to thoſe that ſend thee, i. e. that employ thee in any business of moment, whersoever they expect an account from thee.

22 Rob not the poor, because he is poor k: * neither oppreſs the afflicted in the gate l.
*Ch. 14. 31.

k This may be mentioned, either 1. As a motive to this Robbery, because he was unable to reſiſt him, or to revenge himself upon him: Do not take advantage of his Poverty. Or 2. As an Argument against it, because he is a fitter object for thy pity and Charity, than for thy Injustice or Cruelty. It is base and inhumane to crush such a person. l In the place of Judgment, or under pretence of Justice, and much less in other ways where there is no colour of Justice.

23 * For the LORD will plead their cauſe m, and 24 Make no friendſhip with an angry man, and with a furious man thou ſhalt not go o:

o Into his company: not converse frequently and familiarly with him, as friends use to do.

25 Leſt thou learn his ways p, and get a ſnare q to thy ſoul.

p Lest thou be infected by his example, or provoked by his passion to return the like to him. q Either 1. A mischief, which is oft the effect of unbridled rage. Or 2. An occasion of sin, either by drawing thee to an imitation or requital of his rage; or by tempting thee to unfaithfulness in performing the great office of a Friend, to wit, Admonition or reproof, which, by reason of his furious temper, thou either canst not, or wilt not do.

26 * Be not thou one of them that ſtrike hands, or * Chap. 6. 1. & 11. 15.
of them that are ſureties for debts r.

r To wit, rashly, or unnecessarily.

27 If thou haſt nothing to pay, why ſhould he * take *Ch.20.16.
away thy bed from under thee s?

s Why wilt thou put thy self into the hands of such a man, who will exact the debt from thee without any compassion? For though God did not allow this practice, covetous Creditors would frequently do it.

28 * Remove not the ancient ‖ land-mark t which * Deut. 19.

† mean men.
† Heb. obſcure men.

u Or, expeditious, as the word properly signifies, one of quick dispatch, vigorous and speedy in executing what hath been well and wisely contrived. x He is fit to be employed in the affairs of the greateſt Princes.

CHAP. XXIII.

1 WHen thou ſitteſt to eat with a ruler a, conſider diligently what is before thee b.

a When thou art invited to a Feast with a great man. b Either 1. What person or persons. Or rather 2. What things, what plenty and variety of meats and drinks, by which thou mayst easily be tempted to excess, and by that means induced to use such speeches or carriages, as may be unfit for thee, or many ways hurtful to thee.

2 And put a knife to thy throat c, if thou be a man given to appetite d.

c Restrain and moderate thine appetite, as if a knife, or some other thing stuck in thy Throat, and hindred thee from swallowing what thou didſt desire; or, as if a man stood with a knife at thy Throat ready to kill thee, if thou didſt transgress; or, though it be as irksom to thee to do so, as if thou hadſt a knife put to thy Throat. So this is to be understood metaphorically, as that Phrase of cutting off the right hand, &c. Mat. 5. 29, 30. Or, For thou doſt (or, leſt thou ſhouldſt, as the Syriack Interpreter renders it; or otherwiſe thou wilt or ſhouldſt) put a knife to thy throat. So the sense is, when thou gosst to their Feasts, thou dost expose thy self to great and manifest hazards, to thy own intemperance, and to all its dangerous consequences, and to the ill effects of other mens intemperance. d Prone to excess in eating and drinking.

3 Be not deſirous of his dainties: for they are deceitful meat e.

e Either because they do not yield thee that satisfaction which thou didſt expect from them, but rather load thee with ill humors and the seeds of divers diseases; or because they are not provided for thee with sincerity and good Will, but with some evil design upon thee, either to discover and betray thee, or to enslave thee. See below v. 6, 7.

4 * Labour not f to be rich: ceaſe form thine own *Ch.28.20. 1 Tim.6.9, 10.
wiſdom g.

f Heb. Do not weary thy self with immoderate cares and labours, as many covetous men do. g From that carnal Wisdom which is natural to man in his corrupt estate, which perſuades men to believe that it is their interest to use all possible means to get Riches, and that the happiness of their Lives consists in the abundance of their Possessions, directly contrary to the assertion of our blessed Lord, Luke 12. 15.

5 † Wilt thou ſet thine eyes upon that h which is † Heb. Wilt thou cauſe thine eyes to fly upon.
not? for riches certainly make themſelves wings, they fly away as an eagle k towards heaven.

h i. e. Look upon it with earnestness and greedy desire, employing the Eyes of thy Mind and Body about it. i Which hath no fixed and setled being; which is ours to have, but not to hold; which is always upon the wing, and oft times gone in the twinkling of an Eye, so that the owner is frequently at a loss, and cannot tell whether he hath his Estate, or whether he hath loſt it. k Swiftly, strongly, and irrevocably. We quickly lose the fight and possession of them. Their flying away from us is elegantly opposed to our Eyes being set, or, as it is in the Hebrew, flying upon them in the beginning of the verse.

6 Eat thou not the bread of him that hath an evil eye l, neither deſire thou his dainty meats.

l Of the envious or covetous man, who secretly grudgeth thee the meat which he sets before thee, as this Phrase is used, *Prov.*28.22. Mat. 20. 15. as on the contrary a liberal man is said to have a good Eye, Prov. 22. 9.

7 For as he thinketh in his heart, ſo is he m: Eat and drink, ſaith he to thee, but his heart is not with thee n.

m You are not to judge of him by his words, for so he professeth kindness, as it follows, but by the constant temper of his mind, which he hath fully discovered to all that know him by the course of his life. n He hath no sincere kindness to thee, but inwardly grudgeth thee that which he outwardly offers to thee.

8 The morſel which thou haſt eaten, ſhalt thou vomit up o, and loſe thy ſweet words p.

o When thou perceivest his churlish disposition and carriage, his meat will be loathsom to thee, and thou wilt wish either that thou hadſt never eaten it, or that thou couldſt vomit it up again. p Thy pleasant discourse wherewith thou didſt adorn his Table, and design both to delight and profit him, is loſt, and of no effect to him, and thou wilt be ready to repent of it.

9 * Speak

*Ch.9.8. 9 * Speak not in the ears of a fool q: for he will despise the wisdom of thy words r.

q Cast not away good Counsels upon obstinate and incorrigible sinners. We have the same advice given. Mat. 7. 6. r He will scornfully reject thy wise and good admonitions.

*Deut.19.14. & 27.17. 10 * Remove not the old ‖ land-mark; and enter not into the fields of the fatherless s: t Heb. their near kinsman, to whom it belongs to avenge their wrongs, and to recover and maintain their rights, of which see Lev. 25. 25. Numb 35. 12. Thus God is pleased to call himself, to shew how much he concerns himself for the relief of oppressed and helpless persons.

12 Apply thine heart unto instruction u, and thine ears unto the words of knowledg.

u Content not thy self with outward hearing or reading of it, but affectionately receive it into thine heart, and lay it up there as choice Treasure.

a Let not the consideration of their present impunity and prosperity stir thee up, either to envy them, or to approve and imitate their evil courses. b Reverence the presence of the Divine Majesty, and dread his power and justice, and those judgments which he hath prepared for sinners, and thou wilst see no cause to envy, but rather to pity them. c Not only when thou art in trouble, but in all times and conditions.

*Ch.24.14. ‖ Or, reward. 18 * For surely there is an ‖ end d, and thine expectation shall not be cut off e.

d An expected and happy end for such as fear God, which was required v. 17. Or, a reward, as this Hebrew word is rendred, Prov. 24. 20. e Thou shalt certainly enjoy that good which thou expectest, as the wicked shall lose that Happiness which they enjoy.

19 Hear thou, my son, and be wise f, and guide thine heart g in the way h.

f Rest not in hearing, but see that thou growest wiser and better by it. g Order the whole course of thine affections and actions. h In Gods way, oft called the way, as hath been observed before.

*Ch.4.5,7. 23 * Buy n the truth o, and sell it not p; also wisdom, and instruction, and understanding q.

*Ch. 10. 1. & 15. 20. 24 * The father of the righteous shall greatly rejoyce, and he that begetteth a wise child, shall have joy of him.

r He repeateth this again as a powerful Argument to prevail with all Children, that are not void of natural affection, to labour to be wise and good, that th they may glad the hearts of their Parents to whom they have such high and indelible obligations s With so great pain and hazard, and brought thee up with such tender care, whom thou canst not better requite.

26 My son, give me thine heart t, and let thine eyes observe u my ways x.

t Receive my Counsels with thy whole heart. Solomon speaking in God's Name, and cause, requires the heart to be given to him.

u Let thy mind seriously and practically consider. x Either 1. The ways in which I have walked, my evil practices: take warning by my sad example. Or 2. The ways which I prescribe, to you; as the Apostles called the Gospel which they preached, their Gospel, 1 Thes. 1. 5. 2 Tim. 2. 8.

27 * For a whore is a deep ditch y; and a strange woman is a narrow pit.

y In which a man is in evident danger of perdition, and out of which it is exceeding difficult to escape.

28 * She also lieth in wait ‖ as for a prey z, and increaseth the transgressors among men a.

z Watching all opportunities of ensnaring young men to their destruction. a She is the cause of innumerable sins against God, and against the Marriage-Bed, against the Soul and Body too, and by her wicked Example and Arts, involveth many persons in the guilt of her sins.

‖ Or, robbeth.

29 * Who hath woe b? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babling c? who hath wounds without cause d? who hath redness of eyes?

*Isa. 5. 22.

b From the sin of Lust he proceeds to that of drunkenness, which doth frequently accompany it. c The sin of much and impertinent talking: or, tumultuous noise or clamour, which is usual among Drunkards. See Prov. 20. 1. d Upon every slight occasion, which men enflamed with Wine are very apt to take.

30 They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixt wine e.

e Either mixed with Water, or with other ingredients to make it strong and delicious. Heb. mixture, mixed drinks of several sorts suited to their Palats.

31 Look not thou upon the wine f when it is red g, when it giveth his colour in the cup; when * it moveth it self aright h.

f Earnestly, so as to enflame thine Appetite towards it; in which sense men are forbidden to look upon a Woman, Job 31. 1. Mat. 5. 28. g Which was the colour of the best Wines in that Country, which therefore are called Blood, Gen. 49. 11. Deut. 32. 14. and such were used by them in the Passover. h When it sparkleth and frisketh, and seems to smile upon a Man.

32 At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like ‖ an adder i.

‖ Or, a Cockatrice.

i It hurts the Body in many respects, impairs the vigor of the Mind, wastes the Estate and Reputation, wounds the Conscience, and without Repentance, will destroy the Soul.

33 Thine eyes shall behold k strange women, and thine heart shall utter perverse things l.

k With evil intent, or lustfully, which is the effect of drinking much Wine, as is noted in Scripture, Gen. 19. 31, 35. Hos. 4. 18. and other Authors. l Thine Heart, which when thou hadst the use of thy wit, concealed, will then discover its wickedness, by filthy and perverse speeches.

34 Yea, thou shalt be as he that lieth down m † in the midst of the sea, or as he that lieth upon the top of a mast o.

† Heb. the heart of the Sea

m To sleep, of which that word is frequently used. n In a Ship in the midst of the Sea. This Phrase notes the temper and condition of the Drunkard, the giddiness of his Brain, the unquietness of his Mind, and especially his extream danger joyned with great security. o The worst part of the Ship, both for its perpetual tossings, and for the hazard of him that sleeps in it.

35 They have stricken me p, shalt thou say; and I was not sick q; they have beaten me, and † I felt it not: when I shall awake, I will seek it yet again r.

† Heb. knew it

p I cannot deny that I exposed my self by my Drunkenness to manifold abuses and injuries. q I was not then sensible of it, neither do I now find any great hurt by it; it was but the effect of a present frolick, at which I have no cause to be much troubled. r At present I find some inconvenience, and my condition requires sleep to settle my self, and when I am composed and refreshed, I purpose to return to my former course. But that which Solomon here expresseth, seems, rather to be the Language of their Hearts or Lives, than of their Tongues. Compare Prov. 1. 11.

*Pf. 37. 1. &c. & 73. 3. Chap 23. 17. Ver. 19. † Heb. strength. † Heb. eth with strength. *Ch.11. & 15. & 20. 18 a Their Company or manner of life.

1 BE not thou * envious against evil men, neither desire to be with them a.

2 * For their heart studieth destruction b, and their lips talk of mischief.

b How they may oppress and destroy others, which yet at last falls upon their own heads, 3 Through wisdom is an house built, and by understanding it is established c.

c There is no need that thou shouldst raise thy Self and Family by ruining others, as the manner of wicked men is, which thou must more easily and effectually do by Wisdom, and the fear of God.

4 And by knowledge d shall the chambers be filled with all precious and pleasant riches.

d Which in Scripture Phrase includes the love and practice of that which we know.

5 * A wise man † is strong e; yea, a man of knowledge † encreaseth strength.

e Is couragious and resolute, and able by Wisdom to do greater things than others can accomplish by their own strength.

6 * For by wise counsel thou shalt make thy war f: and in multitude of counsellors there is safety.

f War is better managed by Wisdom than by strength. So this proves what he said in the last Verse.

7 Wisdom is too high g for a fool h; he openeth not his mouth in the gate i.

g Either 1. really, it is above his reach or capacity. Or 2. in his opinion; he judgeth it too hard for him, he despairs of attaining it, he pretends the impossibility of it, because he will not put himself to the charge or trouble of getting it; as on the contrary Wisdom is said to be easie to him that understandeth, Prov 14. 6. because he seriously giveth his mind to it, and therefore easily and certainly attains to it. h For a wilful Fool, or a wicked Man, whose lusts enfeeble and darken his Mind, and make it uncapable of Wisdom. i Either 1. he can say nothing for himself when he is accused before the Magistrate, for which he gives frequent occasion. Or 2. he knows not how to speak acceptably, and profitably in the publick Assembly among wise men.

8 He that deviseth to do evil, shall be called a mischievous person k.

k Heb. a Master of mischief. The sense is, Though he cover his wicked devices with fair pretences and would be better esteemed, yet he shall be noted and branded with that infamy which is due to him.

9 The thought of foolishness is sin l: † and the scorner m is an abomination to men n.

l The very inward thought or contrivance of evil, of which he spake, v. 8. even before it break forth into action, sits a sin in God's sight, and it is hateful to God. Or, foolishness is put for foolish or wicked men, by comparing this with the next clause where the scorner is opposed to it. So the sense is, All the Thoughts of wicked men are only evil and that continually, as is said of man in his corrupt estate, Gen. 6. 5. and therefore abominable to God. m He who not only deviseth and practiseth wickedness, but obstinately persists in it, and rejects all admonitions against it. n Is abominable not only to God, as all sinners are, but to all sober men.

10 If thou faint o in the day of adversity, thy strength is † small p.

o If thou art impatient and unable to bear sufferings; if thy resolution flag, and thou giveest way to despondency or dejection of Mind. p Heb. is narrow, it lives in a little compass; it is as straight as thy condition is; for there is an elegant allusion in the Hebrew words. The sense is, This is a sign that thou hast but little Christian strength or courage, for that is best known by adversity.

11 * If thou forbear to deliver them q that are drawn unto death r and those that are ready to be slain s:

q When it is in thy power to do it lawfully. r To wit, unjustly or by the violence of lawless men. s That are in present danger of Death or Destruction.

12 If thou sayest, Behold, we knew ‖ it not t, doth not he that pondereth the heart consider it u? and he that keepeth thy soul x, doth not he know it? and shall not he render to every man * according to his works y?

‖ Or, nor

t I was ignorant either of his innocency, or of his extream danger, or of my power to relieve him. u That this is only a frivolous excuse, and that the true reason of thy neglect was thy want of true love to thy Brother, whose life thou wast by the Law of God, and of Nature obliged to preserve, and thy sinful self-love, and a carnal fear of some mischief or trouble which might befal thee in the discharge of thy duty. x God who is the preserver of men, Job 7. 20. who daily doth and who only can keep thee both in and from the greatest dangers. And this favour of God may be here mentioned partly as a strong obligation upon him to preserve him who is made after God's Image, and whom God hath commanded him to love and preserve; partly as an encouragement to the performance of his duty herein from the consideration of God's special care and watchfulness over those that do their duty; and partly to intimate to them the danger of the neglect of this duty whereby they will forfeit God's protection over themselves, and expose themselves to manifold dangers and calamities. Or, as others render it, and as the Hebrew Verb is frequently used, he that observeth thy Soul, that seeth all the secret Thoughts and inward motions of the Heart. Which exposition is favoured both by the following words, Doth not he know it? Which agrees better to God's observing than to his preserving a man's Soul, and by the former clause, to which this Translation doth more exactly answer, the same thing being here repeated in other words, after the manner of the Sacred Writers. y God will certainly deal with thee as thou hast dealt with him, either rewarding thy performance of this duty, or punishing thy neglect of it.

13 My son, eat thou honey z, because it is good; and the honey-comb which is sweet † to thy taste.

† Heb. to my taste.

z This is not a command but a concession, and is here expressed only to illustrate the following Verse. Honey in those parts was excellent, and an usual and an acceptable food. See Deut. 8. 8. Judg. 14. 18. 1 Sam. 14. 25.

14 * So shall the knowledg of wisdom be unto thy soul, when thou hast found it a; * then there shall be a reward b, and thy expectation shall not be cut off.

*Pf. 19. 10. Prov. 2. 10. Ver. 20.

a Whereby he implies, that there is indeed some difficulty and trouble in the pursuit of Wisdom, but that it is abundantly compensated with the sweetness and advantage of it when a Man arrives at it. Heb. and, or, also there is a reward. It is not only as good as honey, sweet for the present, but it is infinitely better, bringing a sure and everlasting reward with it.

15 Lay not wait, c O wicked man, against the dwelling of the righteous d. spoil not his resting place.

*Ch.12. Eccl. 9.

c Do him no injury either by subtile and secret devices, or, as it follows by manifest violence. d Against his Person or Family or Possession.

16 * For a just man falleth e seven times f, and riseth up again: but * the wicked shall fall into mischief g.

*Pf. 37. 24. Mic. 7. 8.

e Either 1. Into sin. Or, rather 2. into calamities, of which he evidently speaks both in the foregoing Verse, and in the opposite and following branch of this Verse, and so this word is used in the next Verse, and Psal. 27. 24. Isa. 24. 20. Jer. 25. 27. Amos 8. 14. &c. And so this is fitly alledged as a just reason to dissuade wicked Men from their unjust attempts against righteous Men, because they should not succeed in them; and although they might, by God's permission, bring them into some distress for a time, yet God would deliver them out of their hands, and they should be disappointed of their hopes. f i. e. Frequently. g Into unavoidable and irrecoverable destruction, oft-times in this life, and infallibly in the next.

17 * Rejoyce not when thine enemy falleth h, and let not thine heart be glad when he stumbleth:

*Job 31. 29. Pfal. 35. 15. Chap. 17. 5.

g To wit, into mischief, as in the former Verse. Please not thy self in his destruction. Which plainly shews that the love of our enemies is a Precept of the Old Law as well as of the Gospel. See Exod. 23. 4, 5.

18 Lest the LORD see it, * and † it displease him and he turn away his wrath from him.

*Isa. 58. 2. † It be evil in his eyes.

i Understand, upon thee, which is implied in the Hebrew Phrase, such defects being usual in that concise Language, Psal. 84. 11. Prov. 19. 1. and oft elsewhere. This consideration strikes at the root of that sinful and inhumane disposition, which is an expectation of safety or advantage to himself by his enemies downfal, which, saith he, by this very mean thou shalt lose, for thine enemy shall be raised, and thy danger greatly increased by thy provoking both God and him against thee.

19 * ‖ Fret not thy self k because of evil men l, neither be thou envious at the wicked.

*Isa. 37. 1. Ch. 23. 17. Verf. 1. ‖ Or, keep not company with the wicked.

k Which Translation of the word is confirmed by the Parallel word in the following clause. l For their present impunity and good success.

20 For there shall be no reward to the evil man m, * the ‖ candle of the wicked shall be put out n.

* Job 18. ‖ Or, lamp.

m All his hopes and happiness shall quickly and eternally perish, 5, 6. and he shall have no share in those solid Felicities and blessed recompences of a better life which thou shalt enjoy. Therefore thou and he not to envy him. n All their comfort and glory shall cease.

*Pf. 37. 9, 10. & 21. 17. Chap. 13. 9. & 20. 20.

21 My son, fear thou the LORD, and the king o and meddle not with † them p that are given to change q.

o Honour and obey both God and the King, and all in Authority. He puts God before the King, because God is to be served in the first place, and our obedience is to be given to Kings only in subordination to God, and not in those things which are contrary to the will and command of God, as is manifest both from plain Scripture, as Act. 5. 29. and from the judgment and practice of wise and sober Heathens. p Heb. Mix not thy self with them, either in their counsels and practices, or in familiar conversation. q That love or use changes; that are unstable in their Obedience to God or to the King, and are prone to rebellion against either of them. Those men that wickedly forsake God, and break his Laws are said to change their God, Jer. 2. 11. and to change God's Judgments and Ordinances, Isa. 24. 5. Ezek. 5. 6.

22 For their calamity shall rise suddenly; and who knoweth r the ruin of them both s?

r Who can conceive how sore and sudden it will be! s Of them that fear not God, and of them that fear not the King, for they have two potent and terrible enemies; and therefore if they will not obey them out of Conscience, as their duty binds them, yet they should do it at least for their own sakes, and for fear of those severe punishments which they will certainly inflict upon Rebels.

23 These things also t belong to the wise u. * It is not good † to have respect of persons in judgment x.

*Lev. 19. 15. Deut. 1. 17. & 16. 19.

t These Proverbs or Counsels here following to the end of the Chapter no less than those hitherto mentioned. u Are worthy of * Ch. 18. 5. the consideration, and fit for the use of them who are or would be wise; for only such are capable of understanding and improving them. x For Judges to determine Controversies partially, according to the quality of the Persons, and not according to the merits of the Cause. † Heb. to acknowledge.

24 * He that saith y unto the wicked, Thou art righteous z; him shall the people curse; nations shall abhor him a.

*Ch. 17. 15. Isa. 5. 23.

y To wit, publickly and in judgment, as he now said, and as appears by the publickness of the Curse following upon it, for People or Nations do neither observe nor hate every Man who saith thus privately. z That justifie wicked men in their unrighteous courses. a Partly for the grosness and odiousness of the Crime; and partly for the great and general mischief which such practices bring to civil Societies.

25 But to them that rebuke him b shall be delight c, and † a good blessing d shall come upon them.

† Heb. a blessing of good.

b That publickly and judicially rebuke and condemn the wicked. c The peace of a good Conscience, and the Comfort of a good Name. d Which the People shall wish, and by their Prayers obtain from God for them; which is fitly opposed to the Peoples curse in the last Verse.

26 Every man shall kiss his lips e † that giveth a right answer f.

† Heb. that answereth right words, or, plain words, as Chap. 9. 9.

e Shall highly respect and love him, of which kissing was a sign. f Who being called to speak either as a Judge, or Witness, or otherwise, in weighty matters, speaks pertinently, and plainly, and truly to the conviction and satisfaction of the hearers.

27 Prepare thy work without, and make it fit for thy self in the field; and afterwards build thine house g.

g This is a Domestical Precept requiring both Industry and Prudence in the management of a Man's concerns, that he take care in the

the first place to furnish himself with Cattel and the Fruits of the Field which are necessary for his subsistence, and after that he may procure such things as are for Ornament and Comfort, such as the building of a convenient House is.

28 Be not witness against thy neighbour h without cause i: and † deceive not k with thy lips.

†Gr. be not wide in thy lips.

h Either in judgment or in private conversation. i Rashly or falsly, without just and sufficient cause. k Neither thy Neighbour, to whom thou hast made a shew of friendship, nor the Judge, nor any other hearers with false information. Or, this clause forbids flattering him to his face, as the former forbids slandering him behind his back.

*Ch.20.22. Rom. 12. 17, 19.

29 * Say not l, I will do so to him as he hath done to me: I will render to the man according to his work m.

l Within thy self: give not way to any such Thoughts or Passions. m I will repay him all his calumnies and injuries.

30 I went by the field of the slothful, and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding;

31 And lo, it was all grown over with thorns, and Nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall thereof was broken down.

†Heb. Set my Heart.

32 Then I saw, and † considered it well: I looked upon it, and received instruction n.

n I learned Wisdom by his folly, and by his gross idleness was provoked to greater care and diligence.

* Ch. 6. 9, &c.

33 * Yet a little sleep o, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep:

c See this, and the following Verse in Prov. 6. 10, 11.

34 So shall thy poverty come, as one that travelleth; and thy want as † an armed man.

Observations about Kings, 1, 2–7. a caution against Contention, 8. against revealing of Secrets, 9. The reason of this Caution, 10. With divers other Rules, 11—28.

1 THese a are also proverbs of Solomon, which the men of b Hezekiah king of Judah copied out c.

a Which are contain'd in this and the following Chapters. b Certain persons appointed by Hezekiah for that work, whether Prophets, as Isaiah, Hosea, or Micah, who lived in his days, or some others, it is neither evident nor material. Most of them are political Precepts, and such as in a special manner concerned Hezekiah, and other Princes, to know, for the conduct of their House and Kingdom. c Either out of other Books or Writings of Solomon, concerning natural or civil things, of which we read, 1 Kin. 4. 32. Or out of the historical Records which were then extant concerning Solomon's speeches and actions in the History of the Kings of Judah, which is oft mentioned in holy Scripture.

* Deut. 29. 29.

2 * It is the glory of God d to conceal a thing e: but the honour of kings is f to search out a matter g.

Rom. 11. 33.

d It is agreeable to the Nature, and highly conducing to the Honour of God, because it is a Testimony of his infinite Wisdom and Knowledg, of his absolute Power and Soveraignty, and of his other incomprehensible Perfections. e To keep his counsels, and the reasons of his actions in his own Breast, that he needs not to impart them to any other for their advice and assistance, as being self-sufficient both for the contrivance and execution of whatsoever pleaseth him, and accountable to none for any of his matters. f But Kings must not affect to be like God in this respect, because they are Creatures, and therefore ignorant and insufficient, and accountable to an higher Authority. g In the conduct of their great affairs, not to lean to their own understandings, nor to be wedded to their own wills, but to communicate their counsels to others, that so they may search and find out the true and right way, and to be ready to give a satisfactory account of the Justice and reasonableness of them as occasion shall require.

3 The heaven for height, and the earth for depth h, and the heart of kings † is unsearchable i.

† Heb. there is no searching.

h As no Man upon Earth can exactly discover the height of Heaven, or the depth of, or discern what is contained in them. i Though wise Kings will search out other men and things, yet their inward thoughts and purposes are hardly discoverable; partly because every Man's Heart lies out of the sight of others; and partly because it is the practice of Kings industriously to conceal their intentions.

4 Take away the dross from the silver, and there shall come forth a vessel for the finer k.

k Then, and not till then it is fit for that use.

* Ch. 20. 8.

5 * Take away the wicked from before the king, l and his throne shall be established m in righteousness n.

l From his Court and Councels. m By removing them who by their wicked counsels and practices provoked God's displeasure against the King, and blasted his Reputation, and alienated the hearts of his People from him. n By such impartial execution of Justice.

† Heb. Set not out thy glory.

6 † Put not forth thy self o in the presence of the king, and stand not in the place of great men p.

o Heb. Do not magnifie, or, glorifie thy self, by vaunting speech or carriage, but, which is implied, carry thy self humbly and modestly, which is most pleasing to Kings, and most becoming and safe for thee. p Do not affect nor use frequent and familiar Society with greater Persons than thy self, whereby thou maist easily involve thy self in much guilt, and expose thy self to envy or contempt, and to many other inconveniences.

*Luk. 14. 10.

7 * For better it is q that it be said unto thee r, Come up hither: than that thou shouldst be put lower in the presence of the prince whom thine eyes have seen s.

q It is more for thy credit and comfort. r By some publick Officer, or by the King himself. s Into whose presence and acquaintance thou hast so boldly intruded thy self, who as before he observed thy impudence, so now he sees and suffers this publick disgrace to be cast upon thee.

8 Go not forth hastily t to strive u; lest thou know not what to do in the end thereof, when thy neighbour hath put thee to shame x.

t Without necessary cause and due consideration. u Either judicially or otherwise. x For thy folly in undertaking what thou wast not able to accomplish, and for thy injustice in charging him wrongfully.

9 Debate thy cause with thy neighbour himself y; and ‖ discover not a secret z to another,

‖ Or, reveal not.

y If thou hast any quarrel with him, first try to compose it by private discourse with him. Compare Mat. 5. 25. & 18. 15. Luk. 12. 58. z Any secret. Let no heat of contention provoke thee to divulge any of his secret counsels committed to thy trust, or to reproach him with any of his secret faults, as is usual in Law-suits, and other contentions. Or, the secret, any secret difference between thee and him, which therefore is first to be ended secretly between you, and not to be imparted to any other.

19 Confidence in an unfaithful man in time of trouble, is like a broken tooth and a foot out of joynt x.

x It is not only deceitful, but hurtful, as a broken Tooth though it make shew of helping, yet is not only unhelpful to a Man for chewing his Meat, but also troublesome and painful; and as a Foot out of Joynt, doth not help but hinder, and pain him that attempts to walk upon it.

Rom. 12. 20. 22 For d thou shalt heap * coals of fire upon his head e, and the LORD shall reward thee f.

* Psal. 140. 10.

d Understand, in so doing, which words are expressed Rom. 12. 20. where this Text is quoted. e Either 1. In a bad sense, Thou shalt hereby aggravate his Sin, and occasion a more speedy and grievous Vengeance from God, which, like fire from Heaven, shall fall upon his head and consume him. Not that he perfuades him to do a kindness with an evil intent, with an expectation or desire, or design of bringing God's wrath upon him, but only he foreseeth what would happen, and dissuades him from taking Vengeance, and provokes him to kindness instead of it, because Vengeance is God's peculiar Work which he will certainly inflict upon such Persons; which Argument is used to that very purpose by St. Paul, Rom. 12. 19. Or 2. in a good sense, Thou shalt melt him into Repentance, and inflame him with Love and Kindness to thee for so unexpected and undeserved a Favour; he shall be as heartily grieved and tormented with the Thoughts of his vile and wicked Carriage to thee, as a man would be that had burning Coals of Fire heaped upon his head. But if these Coals of Fire do not melt him, but still he hardens his heart against thee, they will consume him. Thus either by the one or by the other way thou shalt be secured and deliver'd from him. The Metaphor may seem to be taken from Founders, who melt the hardest Metals by heaping Coals of Fire upon them. And the Head may be here mentioned rather than any other part, because in Scripture Phrase both Blessings and Curses are said to fall upon men's Heads, i. e. upon them, Heads being frequently put for Persons. f Thy Charity to him shall be fully recompensed to thee, if not by him, yet by God, which is far better.

23 * ‖ The North-wind driveth away rain: so doth an angry countenance g a backbiting tongue h.

† Heb. keen or sharp.

g In the Hearer, who by his Countenance sheweth his Dislike of such Persons and Practices. h Heb. a secret Tongue, which privily slandereth his Neighbour, as it is expressed Psal. 101. 5. and as the manner of Backbiters is. But this Verse is otherwise rendred in the Margent, and by divers others, The North-wind bringeth forth (as this Verb properly and most frequently signifies, and as it is rendred by all the Ancient Interpreters, and by many others) Rain: (which it doth in Judea, because the Sea lies Northward as well as Westward, from it, as also in Africa, as Aristotle observes, though it drive away Rain in Countries of another situation) so doth a backbiting Tongue (cause) an angry Countenance: it causeth much Anger and Mischief, both to the Person slandered, and to the Slanderer, and to other Persons who may be concerned with or for either of them, as is manifest from common Experience.

24 * It is better to dwell in a corner of the house top, than with a brawling woman and in a wide house.

25 As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country i.

i Because it comes thither more rarely and difficultly, after it hath been long expected and earnestly desired; all which Circumstances make it more acceptable.

26 A righteous man falling down k before the wicked, is as a troubled fountain, and a corrupt spring.

k Either 1. into Sin. So the Sense is, When a just Man is either allured or terrified into any sinful Practice before wicked Men, or into any base and servile Compliance with their Lusts, he who by his excellent Counsels was like a Fountain or Well of Life, as his Mouth is called Prov. 10. 11. sending forth refreshing Streams for the Benefit of many, is now corrupted and rendered unserviceable. Or rather, 2. into Misery, of which kind of falling this Word is constantly used, and never to my remembrance of falling into Sin. And so the Sense is this, When righteous Men are oppressed and devoured by the Wicked, the face of that Commonwealth is as deplorable, as if the publick Fountains, from whence all the People fetch their Water, were corrupted, and it is a sign that the Fountains of Justice are poisoned.

Prov. 25. 16. 27 * It is not good l to eat much honey; so for men m to search their own glory n, is not glory o.

l To wit, for the health of the Body. m Which words are easily understood both out of the foregoing Clause, where the Honey is supposed to be eaten by Men, and out of the following words which are evidently meant of them. n Industriously to seek for Honour and Applause from Men. o Is not only sinful, but shameful also, and a sign of a vain and mean Spirit. The Negative Particle Not, is here understood out of the former part of the Verse, as it is Psal. 1. 5. and 9. 18.

Ch. 13. 23 28 * He that hath no rule over his own spirit p, is like a city that is broken down and without walls q.

p Over his Passions, and especially his Anger, which is signified by this Word, Prov. 16. 2. Eccles. 10. 4. q Exposeth himself to manifold Dangers and Mischiefs.

CHAP. XXVI.

Rules how to carry it towards Fools, 1—12. The Slothful Man described, 13—16. The Charakter of a Contentious Man, and of a Busiebody, and Tale-bearer, 17—23. The Evil of Hypocrisie and Lying, 24—28.

1 AS snow in summer, and as rain in harvest a, so honour is not seemly for a fool b.

a Unbecoming and unseasonable. b Because he neither deserves it, nor knows how to use it, but his folly is both increased and publickly manifested by it.

2 As the bird by wandring c, as the swallow by flying, so the curse causeless shall not come d.

c From place to place; by its perpetual Restlessness it secures it self from the Fowler, that he cannot shoot at it, nor spread his Net over it. f To wit, upon the innocent Person, but he shall escape from it like a Bird, &c.

3 * A whip for the horse, a bridle e for the ass, and a rod f for the fools back.

* Pf 32. 9. Ch. 10. 13.

e Which was very proper and useful for an Ass, when they rode upon it, (as the Jews most commonly did) though not to restrain him from running away, which is the principal use of it in Horses, yet that the Rider might rule and guide him, which was very necessary for that stupid Creature. Although the ancient Interpreters render it a Goad, or Spur, or something of the like Nature and Use. f Which is most proper and necessary for him. Not Words, but Blows, must make him better.

4 Answer not a fool g according to his folly h, lest thou also be like unto him i.

g How can these contrary Rules be reconciled, answer him not, and answer him? Ans. Easily, by considering the difference of Persons, and Times, and Places, and other Circumstances, and of the manner of answering. And such seemingly contradictory Precepts are not only used by, but are esteemed elegant in, other Authors. Answer him not, when he is incorrigible, or when he is enflamed with Passion or Wine, &c. or when it is not necessary, nor likely to do him good. Answer him, when he is capable of receiving good by it, or when it is necessary for the Glory of God, or for the discharge of a Man's Duty, or for the good of others. h So as to imitate his Folly, by such passionate, or reproachful, or foolish Speeches as he useth to these. i Shew thy self to be as great a Fool as he.

5 Answer a fool according to his folly k, lest he be wise in † his own conceit l.

† Heb. his own eyes.

k So as his Folly needs and requires, convincing him strongly, reproving him sharply, exposing him to just Shame, and correcting him with a Rod, where he deserves it, and thou hast a just power to use it. l Lest thy silence make him arrogant and presumptuous, as if his Words were unanswerable.

6 He that sendeth a message by the hand of a fool m, cutteth off the feet n, and drinketh ‖ damage o.

‖ Or, Violence.

m He that employeth a Fool upon any important Errand or Business which is too hard for him. n To wit, of his Messenger; for he bids one go that wants Legs; he sends one who wants that Discretion, which is as necessary for that Employment as Legs are for going. o He bringeth upon himself abundance of Loss and Mischief, not only spoiling that business about which he sends him, but making himself contemptible to the Person to whom he sends him, and to others with him, as if he had not common Prudence to chuse a fit Messenger, and giving occasion, by the Folly of his Messenger, to further Misunderstandings, and Jealousies, and Inconveniencies. For the Phrase, we may observe that Drinking in Scripture frequently notes the plentiful doing or receiving of any thing, as they who multiply Sins are said to drink iniquity like water, Job 15. 16. and 24. 7. and they who are greatly afflicted are commonly said to drink the Cup.

7 The legs of the lame † are not equal p, so is a parable in the mouth of fools q.

† Heb. are lifted up.

p Heb. As (which note of Similitude is plainly understood from the Particle so in the following Clause) the legs of the lame are lifted up, to wit, in going, or rather in dancing, which is done with great Inequality and Uncomeliness. q No less absurd and indecent are wise and pious Speeches from a foolish and ungodly man, whose Actions grossly contradict them, whereby he makes them contemptible, and himself ridiculous.

8 ‖ As he that bindeth a stone in a sling r, so is he that giveth honour to a fool s.

‖ Or, As he that putteth a precious stone in an heap of stones.

r Whereby he hinders his own Design of throwing the Stone out of it. Or, who fastens it there only for a season, that he may speedily and violently throw it away. Or, as it is rendred in our Margent, in an heap and by many others, As he that putteth a precious stone (Heb. a Stone, of Stones, which is oft emphatically used for a precious Stone, both in Scripture, as Exod. 39. 10. 1 Chron. 29. 8. and elsewhere, and also in other Authors) in an heap of Stones, where it is obscured and lost. s No less absurd is he that giveth to a Fool that Honour and Praise which he is not capable either of receiving, or retaining, or using aright, but it is quite wasted upon him, and doth him more hurt than good.

9 As a thorn goeth up into the hand of a drunkard t, so is a parable in the mouth of fools.

t As a Thorn is in a Drunkards hand, which he cannot hold and manage cautiously, but employeth to his own and others hurt. u As improper and unprofitable, and, by accident, hurtful to himself and others. See on Verse 7.

10 ‖ The great God that formed all things, both rewardeth the fool, and rewardeth transgressors x.

‖ Or, a great man grieveth all, he that teth a fool, he that teth also Transgressors.

x God, who is oft called great, as Psal. 86. 10. and 135. 5. &c. and is described by the name of the most high, as Psal. 9. 2. and 21. 7. &c. who created all things, and therefore observeth and governeth all Men and Things, will certainly give that Recompence which is meet for and deserved by Fools and Transgressors, i. e. by such as Sin either through Ignorance and Heedlessness, or wilfully and wickedly. Or, as it is in the Margent, A great man (a Prince or Potentate, who are called by this Title, Esth. 1. 8. Dan. 1. 3. &c.) grieveth (as this Word is used, Isa. 51. 9. and 53. 5. and elsewhere) all (to wit, all that are subject to him, or all that stand in his way) he hireth (as this Word most commonly signifies) the fools, he hireth also Transgressors. So the Sense is, It is the manner of many Princes to vex and oppress their Subjects, which because they cannot do by themselves alone, they hire others, both Fools, who do not know or consider what they do, and Transgressors, who are ready to execute all their Commands, right or wrong, that they may be their Instruments in that Work.

11 * As a dog returneth to his vomit y, so a fool † returneth to his folly z.

* 2 Pet. 2. 22. † Heb. itteth his folly.

y To lick up that which he had lately vomited, forgetting how burdensome and vexatious it was to him. z Such like is the Impudence and Madness of Sinners, who having smarted for their Sins, and been forced to forsake them for a time, do afterwards return to the Commission of them.

12 * Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit? a there is more hope of a fool b than of him.

* Ch. 29. 20.

a Who, being a Fool, thinks himself wise, and therefore scorneth the Counsels of others. b Of doing good to one who is a Fool, and liable of his Folly, and ready to receive instruction.

13 The slothful man saith, b There is a lion in the way, a lion is in the streets.

b To excuse his idleness, and keeping himself at home. See on Chap. 22. 13.

14 As the door turneth upon his hinges, c so doth the slothful upon his bed.

c Moving hither and thither upon it, but not removing one jot from its place.

15 * The slothful hideth his hand in his bosom; ‖ it grieveth him to bring it again to his mouth d.

* Ch. 19. 24. ‖ Or, he is weary.

d He will not take the least pains for the most necessary things.

16 The sluggard is wiser in his own conceit e, than seven men that can render a reason f.

e Because by his Idleness he avoids those Troubles and Dangers on which other Men by their Activity expose themselves, forgetting in the mean time what Reproach and loss, and how much greater Mischiefs, both here and hereafter, are brought upon him by his slothfulness. f To wit, a Solidatory Reason of all their Actions, i. e. who are truly wise Men.

17 He that passeth by g, and ‖ meddleth with strife belonging not to him b, is like one that taketh a Dog by the ears i.

‖ Or, is enraged.

g Who is going upon the way, and about his business. But this word is by some referred to the last clause, is like one that taketh a dog by the ears as he is passing by him, without any thought of doing him harm; which agrees very well both with the order of the Words in the Hebrew Text, and with the Matter of the other Clause to which this Similitude is referred. h In which he is not concerned, nor any way obliged to meddle. i Exposeth himself to great and needless Hazards, as a Man that causelessly provoketh a Mastiff dog against himself.

18 As † a mad man k who casteth † fire-brands l, arrows, and death m:

† Heb. one that maketh himself mad. † Heb. flames or sparks.

k As one feigneth himself mad, that under that pretence he may do Mischief with Impunity. l To hurt his Neighbour's Person, or to consume his House or Goods. m Any instruments of Death.

19 So is the man that deceiveth his neighbour, and saith, Am not I in sport n?

n That wrongs him under a false pretence of Kindness and Familiarity.

20 † Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out, so * where there is no ‖ tail-bearer o, the † strife ceaseth.

† Heb. without wood. * Ch. 22. 10. ‖ Or, whisperer.

o To carry such Reports from one to another, as may provoke them to mutual Rage and Strife.

21 * As coals are to burning coals, and wood to fire, so is a contentious man p to kindle strife.

† Heb. is silent. * Ch. 15. 18. & 29. 22.

p Heb. a man of Contentions, that loveth and giveth himself up to Contentions.

22 The words of a tale-bearer are as wounds, and they go down into the † innermost parts of the belly q.

q This was delivered before, Chap. 18. 8. and is here repeated as being a Point of great Concernment to the Peace and Welfare of all Societies, and fit to be oft and earnestly prest upon the Consciences of Men, because of their great and general proneness to this Sin.

23 Burning r lips, and a wicked heart, are like a potsherd covered with silver dross s.

r Either 1. With Love. Words delivered with shew of true and fervent Affection. Or rather 2. With Malice or Hatred. A slanderous or evil Tongue: For this Word is constantly used in a bad Sense, and notes the heat of Rage and Perfecution. s Such a Tongue and Heart are of no real worth, although sometimes they make a shew of it, as Dross doth of Silver.

24 He that hateth ‖ dissembleth t with his lips, and layeth up deceit within him.

‖ Or, is known.

t Or, carrieth himself like another man, pretends Love and Kindness; which Sense seems to agree best both with the next Clause of this Verse, and with the two following Verses.

25 When he † speaketh fair, believe him not, for there are seven abominations in his heart.

26 ‖ Whose hatred is covered by deceit u, his wickedness shall be shewed before the whole congregation x.

u With false Professions of Love. x Instead of that Secrecy and Impunity which by this Art he designed and promised to himself, he shall be brought to publick Shame and Punishment.

* Pfal. 7. 15, 16. & 9. 15. & 57. 6. Eccles. 10. 8.

27 * Whoso diggeth a pit y shall fall therein, and he that rolleth a stone z it will return upon him.

y That another may fall into it. It is a Metaphor from Hunters, who used to dig deep Pits, and then to cover them slightly with Earth, that wild Beasts passing that way, might fall into them, and sometimes in the heat of pursuit fell into them themselves. z To wit, up the Hill with design to do mischief to some Person or Thing with it.

28 A lying tongue hateth those that are afflicted by it ‖, and a flattering mouth † worketh ruine.

‖ Because by his Calumnies he hath made them his Enemies. † Which though it be more smooth and plausible than a slandering Mouth, yet is in truth no less pernicious, betraying others either to Sin, or to Danger and Mischief.

CHAP. XXVII.

Counsel against Self-confidence, 1, 2. The Love of Friends, 5, 6. The Praises of a Faithful Friend, 5—10. The different Events of Prudence and Folly, 11, 12. Sundry Rules and Answers, 13—27.

1 * BOast not thy self of † to morrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth b.

* Jam. 4. 13. † Heb. to-morrow.

a Of any good thing which thou purposest to do, or hopest to receive in morning, or hereafter, the time being here put Metonymically for things done or had in the same. 2 Kings 7. 1. Luke 12. 19. The same Caution is given, Exod. 16. 23. &c. b What may happen in the space of one day, which may hinder thy designs or expectations. The day is said to bring forth what God by his Almighty Power and Providence doth either cause or suffer to be brought forth or done in it.

2 Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth; a stranger, and not thine own lips.

a Because it is basely necessary, either for thy own just vindication, or for the honour of God, or for the edification of others, in which cases this hath been allowed and practised by wise and virtuous men, as particularly by St. Paul, 2 Cor. 11. 12.

3 A stone is † heavy, and the sand weighty; but a fool's wrath is heavier a than them both.

a More grievous and insupportable, as being without cause, which, without measure, and without end.

4 † Wrath is cruel, and anger is outrageous, but who is able to stand before ‖ envy c?

c Envy is worse than both of them; partly because it is more unworthy, just and unreasonable, as not caused by any provocation, as wrath and anger are, but only proceeding from a malignity of mind, where, seeing a man is grieved for another mans happiness in which he should rejoice; partly because it is more deeply rooted and implacable, whereas the other passions are commonly allayed; and partly because, cause it is more secret and undiscernible, and therefore the mischievous effects of it are hardly avoidable; whereas wrath and anger discover themselves, and so forewarn and forearm a man against the danger.

5 Open d rebuke is better g. than secret h love.

d Heb. which is manifested or discovered, either, 1. Publickly and before others, when it is needful, in which case, though it put a man to some shame, yet it doth him good. Or, 2. Privately, and to the offenders face, a plain and down-right reproof. g More desirable and beneficial. h Which lies hid in the heart, and doth not shew it self by friendly Actions, and particularly by free and faithful Reproof, which is a principal End and Benefit of Friendship.

6 * Faithful are † the wounds k of a friend; but the * Pf. 141. 5. † Or, precious.

kisses l of an enemy are ‖ deceitful m.

i They proceed from an upright, and truly loving, and faithful Soul, and really promote the good of the person reproved. k The stiff, or sharpest reproofs which for the present wound his Spirit and Reputation. l All the fair Speeches and outward Professions of Friendship. m Or, are to be deprecated, are perfidious and pernicious, and deprecate. such things as one may pray to God to be delivered from them. Or, are forced, like things which are procured with great difficulty, and many inreaties.

7 The full soul n † loatheth an honey comb o; but † Heb. treadeth * to the hungry soul every bitter thing is sweet. under foot.

n A man whose appetite or desire (which is oft expressed in Scripture by the name of Soul) is fully satisfied. o The most delicious meats. The design of this Proverb is to shew the inconvenience that oft times attends upon plenty, and the advantage of Poverty, that the Rich might learn moderation, and the Poor content. * Job 6. 7.

8 As a bird that wandereth from her nest p, so is a man that wandereth from his place q.

p That flies very much abroad from place to place, whereby she is exposed to all the arts of Fowlers, and to Birds of Prey, from which she is safe whilest she keeps her nest. q That through vanity or lightness changeth the place of his abode, or, his Calling and course of Life, the ill effects whereof have been frequently observed and noted, even in vulgar Proverbs, as when we say, A rolling Stone gathers no Moss.

9 Ointment and perfume rejoyce the heart r; so doth the sweetness of a mans friend † by hearty counsel s.

† Heb. from the counsel of his soul.

r By increasing and comforting the spirits. s No less grateful and pleasant is the company and conversation of a true friend, in respect of his good and faithful counsel, which comes from his very Heart, the Soul, and Soul, and contains his most inward and serious Thoughts, whereas deceitful persons give such counsels, not as they think to be best, but as most serve their Lusts or Designs.

10 Thine own friend and thy fathers friend t forsake not; nither go into thy brothers house u in the day of thy calamity; for * better is a neighbour x that is near, y than a brother far off.

* Ch. 17. 17. & 18. 24.

t Of whose friendship thou hast had long experience. u To wit, for comfort and relief, and so as to forsake or neglect thy friend for him. x The friend mentioned in the beginning of the verse, who hath shewed himself to be a true and a good neighbour. y Either 1. In place by cohabitation. Or rather 2. In affection, in which respect God is oft said to be near to the righteous, and far from the wicked.

11 * My son, be wise, and make my heart glad, that I may answer him that reproacheth me z.

* Ch. 10. 1. & 23. 15.

z For being the father of a wicked son, as if I had either deserved it from him as a curse from God, or made him so by my example, or by the neglect of his education. See Ezek. 16. 44. 1 Tim. 3. 4.

12 A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself, but the simple pass on, and are punished a.

a This a This was delivered Chap. 22. 3. and is here repeated to enforce the foregoing Exhortation, by representing the great advantage of wisdom.

13 * Take his garment that is surety for a stranger, and take a pledge of him for a strange woman b.

* Ch. 20. 16.

b Possibly this is here repeated as a part of the Fathers counsel to his Son begun v. 11. to avoid rash Suretyship, to which Young men are most prone, and by which they are exposed in the beginning of their days to many sins and miseries, which they carry with them to their graves.

14 He that blesseth his friend c with a loud voice d, rising early in the morning e, it shall be counted a curse to him f.

c That falsereth, or praiseth, and applaudeth him to his face, as the manner of flatterers is. d That both he, and others, may be sure to take notice of it. e To perform this Office, to shew his great forwardness, and diligence, and zeal in his Service, which was the custom of the Romans afterward, and possibly of some of the Jews at this time. f His friend will value this kind of blessing no more than a curse, because it plainly discovers a base design, and is an high reflection upon him, as if he either did not understand such gross and palpable flattery, or were so ridiculously vainglorious as to be pleased with it.

15 * A continual dropping in a very rainy day, and a contentious woman are alike g.

* Ch. 19. 13.

g Are equally troublesom, the first not suffering a man to go a-bread with comfort, the latter not permitting him to stay at home with quietness.

16 Whosoever hideth her h, hideth the wind i, and the ointment of his right hand k which bewrayeth it self.

h i. e. Attempts to smother or bridle her passion, that it may not break forth to her shame, and to his own discomfort and reproach. i Undertakes that which is impossible. k Which being the great instrument of action by its much stirring diffuseth the savour of it.

17 Iron sharpeneth iron l, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend m.

l Iron Cutting-tools are made bright, and sharp, and fit for use by rubbing them against the File, or some other Iron. m So a Man, who being alone is sad, and dull, and unactive, by the Company and Conversation of his Friend is greatly refreshed, his very wits are sharpened, and his Spirit revived, and he is both fitted for and provoked to Action. The Countenance is here put for the Mind or Spirit, whose Temper or Disposition is commonly visible in Mens Countenances.

18 Whoso keepeth the fig-tree n, shall eat the fruit thereof; so he that waiteth on his master o shall be honoured p.

n Which he mentions because they abounded in Canaan, and were more valued and regarded than other Trees. o That serves him faithfully, prudently, and diligently. p Shall receive that Respect and Recompence which he deserves.

19 As in water face answereth to face, so the heart of man to man q.

q The Sense is either, 1. As the image of a Man's Face in the water answers to his natural Face who looks into it; or, as in water one Man's Face is like anothers, the Difference of Mens Faces being not there visible, so one Man resembles another, either in the Temper of his Mind or Body, in which many Men are alike one to another; or in the Corruption of his Nature, in which all are alike. Or, 2. As a Man may see his own Face if he look into the Water, which is Nature's Looking-glass, or into any other Looking-glass, so a Man may discern his own Heart, if he look into those Glasses whereby it discovers it self; if he examine his Thoughts and Inclinations, together with the general course of his Actions. Or, 3. As the Face of a Man standing by the Waters, is visible not only to himself, but to others, by the Shadow or Image of it in the Waters, so the Heart of a Man is in some measure discernible, not only to himself, but to others also, who observe his Disposition and Carriage.

20 * Hell and destruction are † never full r, so * the eyes s of man are never satisfied.

* Prov. 30. 15, 16. † Heb. always ready to receive and devour more and more without end.

r The Grave devours all the Bodies which are put into it, and is always ready to receive and devour more and more without end. s i. e. The Desires which work and discover themselves by the Eyes, 1 John 2. 16. and other Senses; for otherwise the Eyes in themselves are neither capable of Satisfaction nor of Dissatisfaction.

21 * As the fining-pot for silver t, and the furnace for gold, so is a man to his praise u.

* Ps. 12. 6. & 66. 10. Isa. 48. 10. Zech. 13. 9. 1 Pet. 1. 7.

t Is appointed and used for the trial of Silver, and the detection and separation of the Dross from it. u Or, according to his Praise. The Sense is, So a Man is known by his Praises, either 1. By the quality of those who praise and applaud him; and as they are good or bad, so is he thought to be. Or 2. By his Carriage under Praises; as he carries himself either humbly and modestly with Thankfulness to God, and a due Sense of his own Infirmities, which is the Case and Temper of a good Man; or ambitiously and vaingloriously taking to himself the Honour which he should give to God, as ungodly Men generally do in that case.

22 Though thou shouldst bray a fool x in a mortar, among wheat with a pestil, yet will not his foolishness depart from him.

x Not a natural, but a moral and wilful Fool, who by long continuance in Sin is hardened and stupified, and so incorrigible under all the means of Amendment.

23 Be thou diligent to know the state of thy flock y, and † look well z to thy herds.

† Heb. set thine heart.

y That thou may'st preserve and improve what thou hast, and take care that thine Expences may not exceed thine Incomes. Flocks and Herds are here put for all Riches and Possessions, because anciently they were the chief part of a Man's Riches. z Heb. set thine heart. Trust not wholly to thy Servants, as many do, that they may give up themselves wholly to Ease and Pleasure, but make use of thine own Eyes and Reason for the Conduct of thine Affairs, lest thou come to ruin, as many have done by this very means.

24 For † riches a are not for ever, and doth the † crown b endure † to every generation?

† Heb. strength. † Heb. to generation and generation.

a Or, Treasure. The Sense is, What thou dost now possess, or hast laid up, will not last always, but will soon be spent, if thou dost not take care to preserve and improve it. b By which he understands a condition of the greatest Honour and Plenty. If a Man had the Wealth of a Kingdom, without provident Care and due Diligence it would quickly be brought to nothing. Hence the greatest Kings have minded Husbandry, as Solomon, Uzziah, and others.

25 The hay appeareth, and the tender grass sheweth it self c, and herbs of the mountains d are gathered e.

c In their proper Seasons. These things may be here mentioned, either, 1. As the matter of his Diligence. Take care that thy Hay and Grass may be well managed, and seasonably gathered for the use of thy Cattel. Or rather 2. As another Argument and Encouragement to Diligence, because God invites thee to it by the plentiful provisions wherewith he hath enriched the Earth for thy sake. Thou needest not compass Sea and Land for them, for God puts them into thy hand if thou will'st but receive them. d Even the most barren parts afford their help. e Or, are to be gathered, as such Passive Verbs are oft used; they are ripe and ready for the gathering. So this Clause suits best with the former.

26 The lambs are for thy cloathing f, and the goats are the price of the field g.

f By their Wool and Skins, either used to cloath thy self with, or sold to purchase all manner of Cloathing for thy self and Family. g By the Sale whereof thou may'st either pay the Rent of the Field which thou hirest, or purchase Fields or Lands for thy self. Either Goats are put for all Cattel, or he mentions Goats, because these might better be spared and sold than Sheep, which brought a more certain and constant Profit to the Owner.

27 And thou shalt have goats milk enough for thy food h, for the food of thy houshold, and for † maintenance for thy maidens i.

h Or, if thou chusest rather to keep than to sell thy Goats, the Milk of them will serve thee for Food to thy self, and to thy Family. In ancient times men used a plain and simple Diet, and neither knew nor used that Curiosity and Luxury in it which After-Ages invented. i Who are named, because this Nourishment was more proper for the weaker Sex, whereas Men required a stronger Diet.

CHAP. XXVIII.

The Character of the Righteous and of the Wicked, with the blessed Fruits of Integrity, and evil Effects of Sin, 1——12. The Evil of Concealing, and blessedness of Confessing Sin, 13. The Evil of Oppression and Violence, the Benefit of Industry and Faithfulness, with sundry other Observations, 15——28.

1 THe * wicked flee when no man pursueth a: but the righteous are bold b as a lion.

* Lev. 26. 17, 36.

a Because the Conscience of their own Guilt puts them into a continual Expectation and Dread of God's Judgments. b Are courageous and resolute, having the Witness of a good Conscience, and the Assurance of Divine Favour and Protection, and the Supports and Consolations of the Holy Ghost.

2 For the transgression of a land, many c are the princes thereof: but ‖ by a man of understanding and knowledge d the state thereof shall be prolonged e.

‖ Or, by men of understanding.

c Either 1. Together, contending for Supremacy. Or rather 2. Successively, as appears from the following Clause. Their Princes are soon cut off, and other persons, and oft times persons of other Families, come in their stead, which is justly threatned as a Curse, because such frequent Changes are seldom for the better, and commonly for the worse, and are frequently attended with Blood and Slaughter, with the Change and Subversion of Laws, with heavy Taxes and Charges, with the Ruin of many Families, and with many other Mischiefs. d By a wise and good Man. Which may be understood either 1. Collectively, for Men of Understanding, &c. as it is rendred in the Margent; i. e. when the Men or People of a Land are wise and good. Or rather 2. Singularly, and that either 1. Of a wise and righteous Prince, who by the good Government of himself, and his Family, and Kingdom, by punishing and preventing the Transgressions of the People, turns away God's Wrath, and saves himself and People. Or 2. Of any other Man of eminent Wisdom or Piety, who prevents this Judgment, either by his good Counsels given to the Prince and People, and entertained by them, or by his Intercession to God; for God hath sometimes spared a People for the sake of one Man, as he did Zoar for Lot, Gen. 19. 20, 21. and the Israelites for Moses, Psal. 106. 23. e The Land shall enjoy its former State and Tranquillity, and the Life of their good Prince shall be prolonged. and discerning.

3 A poor man that oppresseth the poor f, is like a sweeping rain † which leaveth no food g.

† Heb. without food.

f When a poor Man being advanced into a place of Authority, abuseth it to oppress those that are poor and unable to resist him. g Is like a violent Rain or Flood, which washeth away the very Seeds which are in the Earth, and spoileth the Corn and Fruits which are upon it. He is the worst of all Oppressors, because as he is of a base Mind, which also is made much worse by a sudden Change and Elevation into an high Condition, so his own Necessities inflame his Desires, and make him greedy to take all, yea, even the small Advantages of enriching himself. Which the Ancients expressed by the Similitude of an empty Horseleach; which sucketh much more strongly than that which is already filled; and of a dry Sponge, which licks up far more water then that which was wet before.

* Pf. 10. 3. Rom. 1. 32. 4 * They that forsake the law h praise the wicked i: but such as keep the law contend with them k.

h That live in the Contempt of, and Disobedience to God's Law. i Honour their persons, contrary to Psal. 15. 4. freely and familiarly associate themselves with them, and approve of their sinful Courses; all which proceeds from their great Likeness to them. k Are so far from praising or applauding them, that they severely rebuke them, and to the utmost of their power oppose them in their wicked Enterprizes.

* 1 Cor. 2. 15. 1 Joh. 2. 20, 27. 5 Evil men understand not l judgment m: but * they that seek the LORD n, understand all things o.

l Because their Minds are naturally blind, and are farther blinded by their own Prejudices and Passions, and by the God of this World who rules in and over them. m i. e. What is just and right; what is their Duty in all Cases and Conditions, as Judgment is frequently understood. n By diligent study of his Word, and by fervent Prayers to him for Advice. o Which are necessary to be known by them, either for the discharge of all their present Duties to God and Men, or for their everlasting Happiness.

* Ch. 19. 1. † Heb. two ways. 6 * Better p is the poor that walketh in his uprightness, † than he that is perverse † in his ways q, though he be rich.

p In a much safer and happier Condition. q Heb. in two ways, halting between two ways, pretending to Virtue, but practising Vice; or, covering his wicked Designs with good Pretences; or sometimes erring on one hand, and sometimes on the other, as wicked Men commonly do.

* Ch. 29. 3. ‖ Or, feedeth gluttons. 7 * Whoso keepeth the law, is a wise son r: but he that ‖ is a companion of riotous men s, shameth his father t.

r And consequently a Credit and Comfort to his Father, as hath been oft noted before. s Which is both a manifest Violation of God's Law, which forbids this Society, and is the ready way to a total and final Apostacy from God, and from his Law. t Because he is a foolish Son.

* Chap. 13. 22. Eccles. 2. 26. † Heb. by increase. 8 * He that by usury and † unjust gain u increaseth his substance, he shall gather it for him that will pity the poor x.

u Heb. By usury and (or, or) encrease, i. e. by any kind of Usury, whereby the Poor are oppressed, as is implied from the opposite Clause; or by any unrighteous Practices. See more of these Words and of this thing on Exod. 22. 25. Lev. 25. 35, 36. Psal. 15. 5. Ezek. 18. 8. x It shall not long continue with him or his, but shall by God's righteous and powerful Providence be disposed into more just and merciful hands.

* Pf. 66. 18. 9 * He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law y, even his prayer shall be abomination z.

y That obstinately refuseth to yield Audience or Obedience to God's Commands. z To God, whose Law he despised, God will abhor and reject his Person, and all his Services.

* Ch. 26. 27. 10 * Whoso causeth the righteous to go astray in an evil way a, he shall fall himself into his own pit; but the upright shall have good things in possession b.

a That by evil Counsel, or Example, or Artifice, draws them into such Practices as expose them to great Danger and Mischief. b Shall by God's good Providence towards him, both keep the Good of which the Wicked seeks to deprive him, and escape that Mischief which he plotteth against him.

† Heb. in his eyes. 11 The rich man is wise † in his own conceit c: but the poor that hath understanding searcheth him out d.

c Thinks himself to be wise when he is not, being puffed up with the Opinion of his Riches, which also he imputes to his own Wisdom, and with the Admirations and Applauses of Flatterers, which commonly attend upon them. d Knoweth him better than he knoweth himself, and, looking through all his pomp and vain shew, he sees him to be what indeed he is, a foolish and miserable Man, notwithstanding all his Riches, and discovers the Folly of his Words and Actions.

* Ver. 28. Chap. 11. 10. Eccl. 10. 6. ‖ Or, fought for. 12 * When righteous men do rejoyce e there is great glory f; but when the wicked rise g, a man is ‖ hidden h.

e Are encouraged and promoted to Places of Trust and Power. f In that Commonwealth. The state of that Kingdom is honourable, and comfortable, and safe, so as good Men can shew their Faces with Courage and Confidence. g Are advanced to Honour and Authority. h The state of that Nation is so shameful and dangerous, that wise and good Men, who only are worthy of the Name of Men, wish draw themselves, or run into Corners and obscure Places; partly out of Grief and Shame to behold the Wickedness which is publickly and impudently committed; and partly to avoid the Rage and Injuries of wicked Oppressors, and the Judgments of God, which commonly follow such persons and their Confederates in Sin. Or, as others, both ancient and later Interpreters render it, a man is sought out. Sober and good Men who had retired themselves, are searched for, and brought forth like Sheep to the slaughter, as being most suspected, and hated, and feared by bloody Tyrants.

* Pf. 32. 3, 5. 1 John 1. 9, 10. 13 * He that covereth his sins i shall not prosper k: but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them i shall have mercy m.

i That doth not confess them (as appears by the opposite clause) to God, and to Men too, when occasion requires it. That being convinced or admonished of his Sins, either justifieth, or denieth, or excuseth them. k Shall not succeed in his Design of avoiding Punishment by the Concealment of his Sins; shall not find mercy, as is implied from the next Clause. l By hearty Dislike and Hatred of all his Sins, and by a resolved Cessation from a sinful Course of Life. This is added, to shew, that although the dissembling or hiding ones Sins is sufficient for his Damnation, yet meer Confession without forsaking of Sin is not sufficient for Salvation. m Both from God who hath promised, and from Men who are ready to grant Pardon and Favour to such persons.

14 Happy is the man n that feareth o alway p: * but he that hardeneth his heart q shall fall into mischief. * Rom. 2. 5.

n Because he shall thereby avoid that Mischief which befalls fearless Sinners, which is expressed in the next Clause, and procure that eternal Salvation which they lose. o To wit, the Offence and Judgments of God. Who having confessed and forsaken his Sins, as was now said, is afraid to return to them again, and careful to avoid them, and all occasions of them. p In all Times, Companies, and Conditions; not only in the time of great trouble, when even Hypocrites will in some fort be afraid of sinning, but in times of outward Peace and Prosperity. q That goeth on obstinately and securely in sinful Courses, casting off due Reverence to God, and just Fear of his Threatnings and Judgments.

15 As a roaring lion, and a ranging bear r, so is a wicked ruler s over the poor people t.

r The Lion and Bear are always cruel and greedy in their natures, and especially when they are hungry and want Prey, in which case the Lions roar Psal. 104. 21. Isa 31. 4. and Bears range about for it. s Instead of being a nursing Father, and a faithful and tender Shepherd, as he ought to be, he is a cruel and infatiable Oppressor and Devourer of them. t Whom he particularly mentions, either to note his policy in oppressing them only who were unable to withstand him, or to revenge themselves of him; or to aggravate his sin in devouring them, whom the Laws of God, and common Humanity bound him to relieve and protect; or to express the effect of his ill government, in making his people poor by his frauds and rapines.

16 The prince that wanteth understanding, is also a great oppressor u; but he that hateth covetousness x, shall prolong his days y.

u The Tyranny or Oppression of a Prince, though by some accounted Wisdom, is in truth a manifest act and sign of great folly, because it alienateth from him the Hearts of his People, in which his Honour, and Safety, and Riches consist, and oft times causeth the shortning of his days, either from God who cuts him off by some sudden judgment, or from men who are injured by him and exasperated against him. x Which is the chief cause of all oppressions and unjust practices. y By Gods favour, the peace and satisfaction of his own mind, and the hearty love of his people, which makes them careful to preserve his life by their fervent Prayers to God for him, by willingly hazarding their own Estates and Lives for him, when occasion requires it, and by all other possible means.

17 A man that doeth violence to the blood of any person z, shall flee to the pit a; let no man stay him b.

z That sheddeth any mans Blood, or taketh away his Life unjustly. a Shall speedily be destroyed, being pursued by divine Vengeance, and the Horrours of a guilty Conscience, and the Avengers of Blood. b So it is a prohibition that no man should endeavour to save the Life of a wilful Murderer, either by intercession, or by offering satisfaction, or any other way. Of which see Gen. 9. 6. Exod. 21. 14. Numb. 35. 31. Or, as the ancient and many other Interpreters render it, no man shall stay him: None shall desire or endeavour to save him from his deserved punishment: He shall die without pity, being an object of publick hatred.

18 * Whoso walketh uprightly, shall be saved c: * Ch. 10. 9. but he that is perverse in his ways d, shall fall at once e. 25 c To wit, from destruction, because God hath undertaken, and promised to protect him. d Heb. in two ways, of which Phrase see above on v. 6. e Once for all, so as he shall not need a second thrust, 1 Sam. 26. 8. and so as he shall never rise more. Or, in one, to wit, of his ways. Though he hath various ways and arts to secure himself, yet none of them shall save him, but he shall perish in one or other of them, and shall be given up by God to the mistake of his way, that he shall chuse that course which will be most pernicious to him.

19 * He that tilleth his land shall have plenty of * Ch. 12. bread: but he that followeth after vain persons f, shall 11. have poverty enough.

f Chusing their Company, and imitating their Example; who gives up himself to vanity and idleness, and so is fitly opposed to the diligent man in the former clause.

20 * A faithful man g shall abound with blessings; * Ch. 13. but he that maketh haste h to be rich, shall not be 11. & 20. 21. & 28. ‖ innocent i.

g Heb. A man of truth, or truths, who deals truly and justly in all his bargains and transactions with men. h More than God alloweth him; that taketh the nearest and readiest way to Riches, whether it be right or wrong; that is unfaithful and unjust in his dealings. i Shall not obtain the blessings which he seeks, but shall bring curses and miseries upon him instead of them. 1 Tim. 6. 9. ‖ Or, unpunished.

21 * To have respect of persons, is not good: for, * Ch. 18. for a piece of bread that man will transgress k. 5. Ezek. 13. 19. 24. 25 k When a Man hath once viriated his Conscience, and accustomed himself to take Bribes, a very small advantage will make him sell Justice, and his own Soul into the Bargain. The design of the Proverb is to warn men to take heed of the beginings of that sin, and consequently of other sins.

22 He that hasteth to be rich, hath an evil eye l, ‖ and

‖ and considereth not that poverty shall come upon him m.

l Is uncharitable to Persons in want, envious towards those who get any thing besides him, and covetous or greedy of getting Riches by all ways possible, whether just or unjust. Thus an evil Eye is Taken, Prov. 23. 6. Mat. 20. 15. as a good Eye notes the contrary dispostion, Prov. 22. 9. m And consequently that he shall need the pity and help of others, which he cannot expect either from God or men, who hath so hardened himself against others in misery.

23 * He that rebuketh a man, afterwards n shall find more favour than he that flattereth with the tongue.

n When he comes calmly to consider the fidelity of the reprover, and the benefit coming to himself by the reproof, and withal the baseness and mischief of flattery.

24 Whoso robbeth his father or his mother, and saith n, It is no transgression; the same is the companion of † a destroyer o.

n In his Heart, supposing that he hath a right to his Fathers goods. o Either 1. he hereby sheweth that he is fallen into such wicked Society, from whom he had such counsel or example. Or 2. he is no less guilty than a Thief who robs and destroys men upon the Highway: he is a Thief and Robber, because he hath no right to the actual possession of his Fathers goods before his Death or without his consent.

25 * He that is of a proud heart p stirreth up strife q: but he that putteth his trust in the LORD r, shall be made fat s.

p Whose property it is to overvalue himself, and to trust to himself and his own Wit, or Wealth, or Strength. q Because he makes it his great business to advance and please himself, and hateth and opposeth all that stand in his way, and despiseth other men, and is very jealous of his honour and impatient of the least slighting, or affront, or injury, and indulgeth his own passions; and therefore shall not be far, but lean and miserable, as is implyed from the opposite clause. r Which is mention'd as a plain and certain evidence of an humble Man, who is mean and vile in his own Eyes, and therefore trusts not to himself, but to God only, making God's will, and not his own will, and passion, and interest, the rule of all his actions, and can easily deny himself, and yield to others, all which are excellent preventives of strife. s Shall live happily and comfortably, because he avoids that strife which makes mens lives miserable.

26 He that trusteth in his own heart t is a fool u: but whoso walketh wisely x, he shall be delivered y.

t Who trusts to his own wit, neglecting or slighting the advice of others, and the counsel of God himself. u And shall receive the fruit of his folly, to wit, destruction. x Distrusting his own judgment, and seeking the advice of others, especially of God, as all truly wise men do. y From those dangers and mischiefs which fools bring upon themselves; whereby he sheweth himself to be a wise Man.

27 * He that giveth unto the poor shall not lack z: but he that hideth his eyes ‖, shall have many a curse †.

z Shall not impoverish himself by it, as covetous men imagine or pretend, but shall be inriched, which is implied. ‖ Lest he should see poor and miserable men, and thereby be moved to pity or obliged to relieve them. So he cunningly avoids the beginnings and occasions, and provocations to Charity, teaching us to use the same caution against sin. † Partly from the Poor, whose Curses being not causeless shall come upon him, and partly from God, who will curse his very Blessings, and bring him to extream want and misery.

28 * When the wicked rise, men hide themselves †: * Ch. 11. 10. but when they perish, the righteous increase ‖.

† Men, i. e. righteous men, as appears from the following clause, are ashamed and afraid to appear publickly; of which see on v. 12. ‖ They who were righteous do now again appear in publick, and being advanced to that power which the wicked Rulers have lost, they use their Authority to encourage and promote Righteousness, and to punish Unrighteousness, whereby the number of wicked men is diminished, and the righteous are multiplied.

CHAP. XXIX.

The Excellency of Wisdom, with Rules for Government, 1—14. The Parents Duty to correct their Children, 15—17. The misery of them that know not God's Law, 18. Of Anger, Pride, Thieving, Cowardise, and Corruption, 18—26. The godly and wicked an Abomination to each other, 27.

1 † HE that being often reproved, hardneth his neck a, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy b.

a Is incorrigible and obstinately persists in those sins for which he is reproved. b Utterly and irrecoverably.

2 * When the righteous are ‖ in authority c, the people rejoyce d: but when the wicked beareth rule the people mourn e.

c Which interpretation is confirmed from the opposite clause. The Hebrew word signifies to increase either in number, or in dignity and power. d For the blessed effects of their good government. e Both for the oppressions and mischiefs which they feel, and for the dreadful Judgments of God which they justly fear.

3 * Whoso loveth wisdom f, rejoyceth his father: * but he that keepeth company with harlots g, spendeth his substance h.

f And therefore hateth and escheweth all folly and wickedness. g Whereby he plainly discovers himself to want Wisdom; of which see Prov. 7. 7, &c. h Whereby he not only ruineth himself; but also grieveth his Father, as is implied from the opposite clause.

4 The king by judgment i stablisheth the land: but † he that receiveth gifts k, overthroweth it. † Heb. a Man of Oblations.

i By the free and impartial exercise of Justice. k Heb. a Man (for he would not vouchsafe to call him a King, as being unworthy of that Name and Office) of Oblations, or Gifts, i. e. whose delight and common practice it is to take Bribes, and sell Justice.

5 A man that flattereth his neighbour k, spreadeth a net for his feet l.

k That praiseth or applaudeth another in a sinful state or course. l Kills him under a pretence of kindness: is an occasion of his sin, and consequently of destruction, which possibly he may design to accomplish by that means.

6 In the trangression of an evil man there is a snare m: but the righteous doth sing and rejoyce n.

m His sin will bring him to dreadful horrors and certain ruin. n Because he hath sweet peace in his own Conscience and assurance of present safety and eternal happiness.

7 * The righteous o considereth the cause of the poor p: but the wicked regardeth not to know it q. * Job 29. 16.

o Whether Magistrate or any private Person concerned to know it, and capable of helping him in it. p His poverty neither hinders him from taking pains to examine it, nor from a righteous determination of it. q Will not put himself to the trouble of searching it out, either because it yields him no profit, or because he resolves to give away his right.

8 Scornful men ‖ bring a city into a snare r: but ‖ wise men s turn away wrath t. ‖ Or, set a City on fire.

r Expose it to God's wrath and to destruction by their self-conceit and wilfulness, by their wicked counsels and courses whereby they seduce and infect the generality of the People, by their Contempt of God, of his just Laws and righteous Judgments, and of the Opinions and Advices of wise men. s Who do not scorn, but hearken to the Counsels of God and of prudent men. t The wrath of God or of men who were enraged against it.

9 If a wise man contendeth with a foolish man u, whether he rage or laugh, there is no rest.

u Either judicially or otherwise debating any matter with him, endeavouring to convince him of any error. x Whether he, the wise man, rageth (or is angry) or laugheth, (i. e.) whether he deal sharply and severely with him, rebuking him for his Folly, or mildly and pleasantly smiling at it, there is no rest, no end or fruit of the Debate, the Fool will not be satisfied nor convinced. Or, as it is in the Hebrew, He (to wit, the Fool last named, to whom the following Carriages may seem more fitly to agree) both rageth and laugheth, (He will not yield nor be convinced, but persists in his folly, which he discovers sometimes by his furious and unbridled Passions, and sometimes by foolish Laughter and Scorning) and there is no rest, he will never be quieted.

y And consequently seek their ruin, as is implied from the following Clause. z Either 1. to require his Soul or Life at the hands of those who have taken it away. Or, 2. to preserve it from those who attempt to take it away, as this Phrase is taken, Psal. 142. 4. though commonly it signifie to seek to destroy it.

11 * A fool uttereth † all his mind a: but a wise man keepeth it in till afterwards b. * Ch. 14. 33. † Heb. all his spirit.

a All at once, unnecessarily, and unseasonably, without reservation or caution. b Till he have fit occasion to express it.

12 If a ruler hearken to lies c, all his servants are wicked d.

c Delight in Flatteries or Calumnies, or any lying Words or deceitful and wicked Practices. d Partly because he chooseth only such for his Service; and partly, because they are either corrupted by his Example, or engaged by their place and interest to please him, and comply with his base Lusts.

13 The poor and ‖ the deceitful e man meet together f: the LORD lighteneth both their eyes g. ‖ Or, the Usurer.

e Heb. the Man of Deceits, or of Usuries, i. e. who hath enriched himself by such Practices. f Converse together, and one needeth the other, as Chap. 22. 2. g Either their bodily eyes with the Light of the Sun, which promiscuously shines upon both; or the Eyes of their Minds with the light of Reason and Grace, which he indifferently gives to them; and therefore the one should not envy nor despise the other, but be ready to do good one to another, as God doth good to both.

14 * The king that faithfully judgeth the poor h, his throne shall be established for ever. * Ch. 20. 28.

h And the rich too: but he names the poor, because these are most oppressed and injured by others, and least regarded by Princes, and yet committed to their more special care by the King of Kings.

15 * The rod and reproof i give wisdom: but a * child left to himself k bringeth his mother l to shame. * Ver. 17. * Ch. 10. 1. & 17. 25.

i Correction and Instruction going together. k Suffered to follow his own Will or Lusts without restraint and chastening. l And Father too; but he names only the Mother, either because her Indulgence oft spoils the Child, or because Children commonly stand in least awe of their Mothers, and abuse the weakness of their Sex, and tenderness of their Natures.

16 When the wicked are ‖ multiplied m, transgression increaseth n: but * the righteous shall see their fall o. ‖ Or, in Authority. * Pf. 37. & 58. 10, & 92. 8.

m Or rather, are advanced, because this is opposed to their falling in the next Clause; and so this Hebrew word is taken above, verf. 2. 36. n Sin and Sinners abound and grow impudent by Impunity, and the Example and Encouragement of such Rulers. o The Destruction of such Transgressors, in due time.

17 * Cor-

17 * Correct thy son, and he shall give thee rest p; yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul.

p Satisfaction to thy Mind, and Comfort in his Amendment.

18 Where there is no vision q, the people ‖ perish r: but he that keepeth the law s, happy is he.

q i. e. No Prophecy, for the Prophets were anciently called Seers; 1 Sam. 9. 9. i. e. no publick Preaching of God's Law or Word (as appears by the opposite Clause) which is called Prophecy, Rom 12. 6. 1 Cor. 14. 1, &c. Where the People are destitute of the means of Instruction. r Because they want the only means of Salvation. Or, is made naked, stripped of their best Ornaments, God's Favour and Protection, as this Word is taken, Exod. 32. 25. s This he saith rather than, he that hath vision, which the Laws of Opposition might seem to require, to teach us, that although the want of God's Word be sufficient for Mens Destruction, yet the having, and hearing, or reading of it, is not sufficient for their Salvation, except they also keep or obey it.

‖ Or, made naked.

19 A Servant t will not be corrected by words u: for though he understand x he will not answer y.

t Who is so not only in Condition, but also in the temper of his Mind, disingenuous, perverse, and stubborn. u By meer Words without Blows. Compare Prov. 19. 29. x Though he know thy Mind, and Words, and his own Duty. y Either by Words, expressing his Readiness; or by Deeds, speedily and chearfully performing thy Commands; but will neglect his Duty, pretending that he did not hear or understand thee.

‖ Or, in his matters

20 Seest thou a man that is hasty ‖ in his words z? there is more hope of a fool a, than of him b.

z Or rather, in his Business; who is rash and heady in the management of his Affairs. a Who is sensible of his Folly, and willing to hearken to the Advice of others, as this Word is used Chap. 26. 12. though commonly it be meant of a wilful and wicked Fool. b Because he is self-conceited, and neither considers things seriously within himself, nor seeks Counsel from the wise.

21 He that delicately bringeth up his servant c from a child, shall have him become his son d at the length.

c Allowing him too much Freedom, and Familiarity, and delicious Fare. d Will find him at last grow insolent and presumptuous, and forgetful of his servile Condition.

* Ch. 15. 18. & 29. 21.

22 * An angry man stirreth up strife e: and a furious man aboundeth in transgression e.

e Is by his Passion easily transported into grievous and manifold Sins against God, and others, and himself, as Swearing, and Cursing, and Violence, yea sometimes even to Murder.

* Job. 22. 29. Ch. 15. 33. & 18. 12. Mat. 23. 12. Luk. 14. 11 & 18. 14. Jam. 4. 6, 10. 1 Pet. 5. 5.

23 * A mans pride shall bring him low f: but honour shall uphold the humble in spirit g.

f Because both God and Man conspire against him and abhor him. g Or, as others render it, without any difference in the Sense, the humble in spirit shall hold their honour, shall be honoured by God and Men. Thus Honour, like a shadow, flees from them that pursue it, and follows them who flee from it.

24 Whoso is partner with a thief h, hateth his own soul i: he heareth cursing k, and bewrayeth it not l.

h By receiving a share of the stolen Goods upon condition of his concealment of the Theft. i He carreth himself towards it as if he hated it; he woundeth and destroyeth it. k He heareth the voice of swearing, as is said Levit. 5. 1. the Oath given to him by a Judge adjuring him and other suspected Persons to give Information concerning it. l Which he is bound to do both by virtue of his Oath, and for the publick Good, which ought to be preferred before all private Contracts or Friendships.

† He's, shall be set on high.

25 The fear of man m bringeth a snare n: but whoso putteth his trust in the LORD o, † shall be safe.

m Inordinate fear of harm or mischief from Men, which is fitly opposed to trust in God, because it comes from a distrust of God's Promise and Providence. n Is an occasion of many Sins, and of great danger, both of Injuries from Men, and of fore Punishments from God. o Keeping God's ways, and securely relying upon God to protect him from the Designs and Rage of wicked Men.

* Ch. 29. 6. † Heb. the face of a Ruler.

26 * Many seek † the rulers favour p; but every mans judgment q cometh from the LORD r.

p Men study to please and engage their Rulers by their obliging Carriage, and humble Petitions, and all other means, supposing that to be the only way to procure either Right or Favour from them, as they need or desire it. q The Decision of his Cause, and the Success of all his Endeavours. r Dependeth wholly upon God who ruleth and inclineth their Minds and Hearts as it pleaseth him, Prov. 21. 1.

27 An unjust man is an abomination to the just s: and he that is upright in the way, is abomination to the wicked t.

s Because such Men, as such, are hated by God, and Haters of, and Enemies unto God and all Goodness, and publick Plagues to the Church and State in which they live; and therefore he who loves these must needs hate them, as true Friends hate those who are Enemies to their Friends. t Of which see above on Ver. 10.

CHAP. XXX.

Agur's Prophecy, 1. Wherein he acknowledgeth his own Ignorance, 2, 3. The Purity of God's Word, with the Happiness of them that trust in him, 5. He dehorts from adding to the Scriptures, by the danger of it, 6. The two points of his Prayer, with their reason, 7—9. Four wicked Generations, 10—14. Four things insatiable, 15. Parents not to be despised, 17. Four things hard to be known, 18, 19. The way of an Adulterous Woman, 20. Four things intolerable, 21—23. Four things little, but wise, 24—28. Four things stately, 29—31.

1 THE words of Agur the son of Jakeh a, even the prophecy b: the man spake unto Ithiel, even unto Ithiel and Ucal c.

a A Person so called, as appears from the Designation of his own and his Father's Name, who lived either in Solomon's time, or rather afterwards, and was famous in his Generation for Wisdom, and Piety, and Prophecy, and therefore his Proverbs were thought fit to be added to those of Solomon either by those men of Hezekiah mentioned Chap. 25. 1. or by some other. But that this should be meant of Solomon, may easily be supposed, but cannot be proved; nor is it probable, as being contrary both to the Style of the whole Chapter, and to the Matter of some parts of it, as Ver. 7, 8, 9. which agrees not to Solomon; and to the Laws of good Interpretation, one of which is, that all Words should be taken in their most natural and proper Sense, when there is no evidence nor necessity of understanding them improperly and figuratively, which is the present case. b The Prophetical Instruction; for as the Prophets were publick Preachers as well as Foretellers of things to come, so their Sermons, no less than their Predictions, are commonly called their Prophecies. c Two Friends or Disciples, and Contemporaries of Agur, called by those Names, who having a great and just Opinion of his Wisdom, desired his Instructions. Others, concerning-Ithiel and Ucal; which they understand of Christ called Ithiel, which signifies God with me, and answers to Immanuel, which is God with us; and Ucal, which signifies Power or Prevalency. But if he had meant this of Christ, why should he design him by such obscure and ambiguous Names, as if he would not be understood? Why did he not call him by the Name of Shiloh or Messiah, or some other Scripture-Title belonging and ascribed to him? Besides, this Interpretation agrees not with the Contents of this Chapter, wherein there is only a short and occasional mention of Christ, but the Chapter consists in a manner wholly of Counsels and Sentences of a quite other kind.

2 Surely I am more brutish than ‖ any man, and have not the understanding of ‖ a man d.

‖ Or, a great man

d You come to me with a great opinion of my Wisdom, and you expect that I should inform and instruct you in all things, yea, even in the greatest Mysteries: but you are much mistaken in me; I am as ignorant and foolish as other men generally are, yea more than many others. Which he utters either 1. from a deep sense of the common Corruption of Humane Nature, and of the blindness of mens minds in things concerning God and their own Duty, and of the necessity of Instruction from God's Word, and of Illumination from his Spirit, without which they can never understand these matters. Or 2. from a modest and humble apprehension of his own Ignorance, which hath extorted such like Expressions even from Heathen Philosophers: whence Pythagoras rejected the Title of a Wise Man when he was ascribed to him; and Socrates, though reputed the Wisest Man of his Age, professed that he knew nothing but this, that he knew nothing.

Ch. 8. 5. Or, I mean ‖ Heb. know.

3 I neither learned wisdom e, nor † have the knowledge of the holy f.

e I have not been taught in the Schools of Wisdom, as the Sons of Prophets were, but must own my self to be an unlearned Man, as the Prophet Amos was, Amos 7. 14, 15. Or, I have not learned it, neither by my own Understanding and Study, nor by the help of other men. f Either 1. of the Holy Angels, who are called Holy by way of Eminency, as Deut. 33. 2. Job 15. 15. Dan. 4. 13, 17, 23. and 8. 13. But it was vain to deny that Angelical Knowledge to be in him, which no man imagined to be in him, and which was not in Adam in the state of Innocency. Or 2. of the Holy Prophets. So the Sense is, I have not such Divine Inspirations as Prophets strictly so called have received, whereby I should be enabled to know or explain those great Mysteries wherein you desire Information from me. Or 3. of holy things, of the Mind and Will of God concerning Man's Salvation, and the way which leads to it. Not that he denieth that he had any knowledge of these things, but only a full and comprehensive and perfect Knowledge, which they falsly supposed to be in him.

† Joh. 3. 13. † Heb. ascended Job 38. 4, &c. Psal. 104. 3.

4 * Who g hath ascended up into heaven h, † or † descended? who hath gathered the wind in his fists k? who hath bound the waters l in a garment? who hath established all the ends of the earth m? what is his name, and what is his sons name, if thou canst tell n?

g What meer Man? None at all; and therefore I may truly say, &c. that I have not that which no mortal Man ever yet had. h There to learn the Mind of God who dwells there, and that Wisdom which is from above. i Or rather, and descended, to teach Men below what he had learned above. The Meaning of the Place is, No Man can fully know and teach us these things unless he hath been in Heaven, and sent down from thence to the Earth to that end. Whence our Saviour Christ justly applies these Words to himself, Joh. 3. 13. and appropriates this work of declaring God's Nature and Will, to Men, to himself, upon this account, that he alone was in his Fathers bosom, Joh. 1. 18. k To hold them in, or let them out, and rule them at his pleasure? Where is there a Man that can do this? And none but he who made and governs all the Creatures, can know and teach these things. l Those above in the Clouds, and those below, the Sea which God keeps as it were within Doors, and in a Garment, and Swadling-band, as it is expressed Psal 38. 8, 9. and the Waters which he shuts up in the Bowels of the Earth. m The whole Earth from one end to another, which God upholdeth in the Air by the Word of his Power, and secureth from the Rage of the Sea, by the Banks and Shores wherewith he hath begirt it for that purpose. n The Sense is, Either 1. seeing it is apparent that no Man hath this Power, and consequently this Knowledge, but that this is the Prerogative of the great God, declare, if thou are able, his Name. i. e. his Nature and Perfections, and the eternal Generation, and the Perfections of his Son. Or rather 2. if thou thinkest there be any such Man who can do these things, I challenge thee to produce his Name; or, if he be long since dead, and gone out of the World, the Name of any of his Posterity that can assure us that their Progenitor was such a Person. Which because thou canst not do, I must conclude, that none can throughly understand this matter but the blessed God and his Son Christ, and they to whom God shall reveal them by Christ.

5 * Every

5 * Every word of God is † pure o: he is a shield unto them that put their trust in him p.

† Heb. tried.

o And therefore you, Ithiel and Ucal, must not expect the full knowledge of Divine Mysteries from me, nor from any Man, but from the Word of God, which is a certain Rule both of your Belief and Practice, because every part and parcel of it is Holy, and True, and Good, and there is not the least mixture of Falshood and Folly in it, as there is in all the Words and Writings of Men. p Which supposeth their knowledge of him by his Word, Psal. 9. 10. and consists their reliance upon his Promises, joined with Obedience to his Commands.

6 * Add thou not unto his words q, lest he reprove thee r, and thou be found a liar.

q And as the Word of God is pure, do not thou corrupt or abuse it, by adding to it thine own or other Mens Inventions and Opinions, and delivering or receiving of them in the Name and as the Words of God. He here forbids only adding to it, not diminishing from it, which yet is equally forbidden, Deut. 4. 2. and 12. 32. because the Israelites then and always were, and others are more prone to add than to diminish, because it is more easie to add under colour of interpreting, and because it is more agreeable to the humour of Mankind, which is much delighted with its own Inventions, as the experience of all Ages sheweth. r By words or deeds; by discovering thy folly and bringing thee to deserved shame and punishment.

7 Two things have I required s of thee, † deny me them not before I die t.

s I do earnestly and especially desire. t Heb. Withhold them not from me before I die, i. e. whilst I live, as things of great and continual necessity for thy honour and service, and my own good.

8 Remove far from me u vanity x and lies y: give me z neither poverty nor riches, * feed me with food † convenient for me a:

u From my Heart, and from the course of my Life. This is the first of Agur's Petitions. x Either 1. all vain and false Opinions concerning God or the things of God; all Unbelief, Idolatry, or Misbelief. Or 2. all vanity of Heart and Life; a vain Conversation, an Affectation of the vain things of this World, as Riches, Pleasures, or Honours, the bewitching power and sad effects whereof he had observed in others, and feared in himself, as the following Request implies. y All Falshood and Deceit in my Words and Carriage towards God or Men. z This is his second Request, which may seem to have some reference to the former, Poverty being commonly the Occasion and Temptation to the Sin of Lying, and Riches being the great Occasions and Enticements to Vanity. Thus as his first Petition was against the Sins themselves, so this latter is against the Occasions of them. a Moderate and suitable both to my natural Necessities, and to that estate and condition of Life in which thou hast put me, and to that work and service which thou hast for me to do. And this Mediocrity of Estate is so amiable, that it hath been oft desired by wise Heathens as more eligible than a state of the greatest plenty and glory.

9 * Lest I be full, and † deny thee b, and say, Who is the LORD c? or lest I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain d.

b By trusting to Riches, which is a Denial of God, Job 31. 24-28. by unthankfulness for, and abuse of his Mercies, and by Rebellion against him, and divers other Courses and common Practices of rich Men, whereby God is denied in Truth, and in Works, even when he is owned in words and in shew. c That I should obey or serve him. I do not need him, I can live of my own without him. Lest by degrees I should arrive at downright Atheism or Infidelity, which is most incident to rich and great men, as is manifest from Experience. d Use false Oaths either to vindicate my self when I am suspected or accused of Theft, and my Oath is required according to the Law, Exod. 22. 8—11. or to gratifie others for filthy lucre, as poor men frequently do.

10 † Accuse not e a servant f unto his Master, lest he curse thee g, and thou be found guilty h.

e To wit, malitiously, rashly, or without just and sufficient Cause: for otherwise, in some cases this may be not only lawful, but a Duty, as when a Servant lives wickedly, or robs his Master, or the like. f Whose Condition is in it self mean and miserable, and therefore thou should'st not make it worse without great and apparent necessity. g Desire God to curse and punish thee, which, though it may be sinful in him, yet being deserved by thee, thou hast reason to fear and expect. h By God, who is ready to plead the Cause of the afflicted, and upon strict search shall find thee guilty, and punish thee accordingly.

11 There is a generation i that curseth their father k, and doth not blesh their mother.

i A sort of Men, abominable both to God and Men; which is implied concerning these and the following kinds of Sinners, v. 12. 13, 14. k And Mother too, as it follows; ungrateful and unnatural Monsters.

12 There is a generation that are pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness l.

l Who not only pretend to others, but conceit within themselves that they are truly religious Persons, when they live in a course of Wickedness.

13 There is a generation, O how * lofty are their eyes! and their eye-lids are lifted up k.

k Who are proud and insolent, advancing themselves, and despising all others in comparison of themselves, and shewing the pride of their Hearts in their Countenances and Carriages.

14 * There is a generation whose teeth are as swords, and their jaw-teeth as knives, to devour the poor l from off the earth, and the needy from among men.

l Extortioners, and cruel Oppressors, who grind the Faces of the Poor.

15 The horse-leach m hath two daughters n, crying, Give, give o: There are three things † that are never satisfied q, yea, four things say not r, † It is enough.

m An insatiable Creature, sucking blood till it be ready to burst. n Which are either 1. The two Forks into which her Tongue is divided, and wherewith she sucks: But those who have more accurately observed and described the frame of that Creature, tell us that they have no Tongue, and that they suck either by three little Teeth, or several parts of the Mouth gathered and compressed together. Or rather 2. The following things, which resemble the Horse-leach in its insatiableness; nothing being more ordinary than to call those Persons or Things the Sons or Daughters of those whose Examples they imitate. And whereas it is objected, that they are not only two, but three, yea, four, as is said in the next Clause, the Answer is easie, That though he begin with two, yet he proceeds from thence to three, and four, all which are said to be the Daughters of the Horse-leach, if the Words be rendred commodiously, and as they are in the Hebrew, as we shall presently see. o Never filled, and always craving, and ready to receive more and more. p Or, yea (which may be understood in this, as it is in our Translation of the next Clause) they (to wit, the Daughters of the Horse-leach) are three. q Which is added partly to explain the former Clause, give, give, and to shew the cause of that excessive Desire of more, because they were not contented with what they had, and partly to give the reason why he calls them the Daughters of the Horse-leach. r Or, yea, they (the Daughters forementioned) are four, which say not.

16 † The grave, and the barren womb s, the earth t that is not filled with water, and the fire u that saith not, It is enough.

† Heb. hell. Ch. 27. 20. Hab. 2. 5.

s For as the Israelitish Women did generally and vehemently desire many Children, for divers Reasons elsewhere mentioned, so those who were barren amongst them, were most eager in those Desires, as we see in Rachel, Gen. 30. 1. and as in all other cases, Persons most prize and thirst after those good things which they want. t Which when it is dry thirsts for Rain, and in a little time sucks up great quantities of Water, and gapes for more. u Which continually burns as long as there is any combustible matter left for it.

17 The eye that mocketh at his father u and despiseth to obey his mother, the ravens of ‖ the valley shall pick it out x, and the young eagle y shall eat it.

‖ Or, the brook.

u He that scorneth or derideth his Parents, though it be but with a Look or Gesture, and much more when he breaks out into opprobrious Words and Actions. x He shall die an unnatural, and untimely, and ignominious Death, and after Death shall lie unburied, and to be exposed to the Birds and Beasts of Prey, and amongst others, to the Crows, or Ravens, who use to feed upon dead Carcases, and particularly to pick out their eyes, as is noted by all sorts of Writers; of which see my Latin Synopsis. He saith, the ravens of the valley, either because they most delight in Valleys, or with a particular respect unto that Valley near Jerusalem; which was called the valley of dead bodies, Jer. 31. 40. from the Carcases cast out there, to which therefore the Ravens resorted in great numbers according to their manner: Or, as others render, the ravens of the brooks, because they are of an hot and dry temper, and therefore delight in places adjacent to the brooks of Water. y Which also preyeth upon dead Carcases, and especially upon their eyes, as the Ravens do, the reason being the same in both, whether it be the softness of that part which makes it more easie to them to take, or from the pleasant taste of it.

18 There be three things which are too wonderful for me y, yea, four which I know not:

y The way whereof I cannot trace or find out.

19 The way z of an eagle in the air, the way of a serpent upon a rock a, the way of a ship in the † midst of the sea b, and the way of a man with a maid c.

z Either 1. The manner of her Flight, which is exceeding high, and swift, and strong. Or rather 2. The way or part of the Air through which she passeth, without leaving any print or sign in it, which though it be true of all Birds, yet is here attributed to the Eagle, of whom this is more true, because she flies out of sight, where neither her Body, nor any sign of it, can be discerned. a Where she leaves no impression, nor Slime, nor Token where she was, as she doth in foster Bodies, and as Birds leave their Feathers there. b Which though at present it make a Furrow, yet is speedily closed again. c Either 1. The various Methods and Artifices which Young-men use to entice or perswade young Virgins, either to honest Love and Marriage, or to unlawful Lust and Uncleanness. Or rather, 2. The impure Conversation of a Man with one who goeth under the name of a Maid, but is not so in truth, which is managed with so much Secrecy and Cunning, that it can very hardly be discovered. Which Exposition agrees best with the foregoing Similitudes referred to it, and with the following Verse.

20 Such d is the way of an adulterous woman e; she eateth f, and wipeth her mouth g, and saith, I have done no wickedness h.

d So secret and undiscernible. e Of her who though she be called and accounted a Maid, yet in truth is an Adulteress, not a common Strumpet; for of such the following words are not true, but one that secretly lives in the Sin of Adultery or Fornication. f To wit, the bread of deceit in secret, by which is understood the act of Filthiness, Prov. 9. 17. and 20. 17. which such persons do as greedily desire, and as delightfully feed upon, as hungry persons do upon Bread. Thus chastly doth the Holy Ghost express the most filthy actions, to teach us to avoid all immodest and obscene Speeches as well as Actions. g As a Child doth when it hath eaten some forbidden food, and would not be discovered. h Denies the Fact, and avoweth her Innocency.

21 For three things the Earth i is disquieted, and for four which it cannot bear k.

i Either 1. The earth it self trembleth and is moved, so it is an Hyperbole. Or rather 2. The Inhabitants of the Earth. They do by their insolence and impudence cause great and dreadful disturbances in the places where they live. k Which are intolerable in humane societies.

* Ch. 19. 10. Eccl. 10. 7. 22 * For a servant when he reigneth l, and a fool m when he is filled with meat n; l When he is advanced to great Power and Dignity; for such an one is ignorant and unfit for his place, and therefore commits many errours; he is poor, and therefore an insatiable oppressor, according to Prov. 28. 3. he is proud and imperious, and being maligned and hated by others he is provoked to hate them, and to be injurious and cruel to them. m A conceited and wilful fool, or an obstinately wicked man. n Either 1. When he is glutted with meat or drink, which dulls mens Reason, and heats their Blood, and stirs them up to many insolencies. Or rather 2. When he abounds in Wealth, which in that case is like a Sword in a mad mans hand, being an instrument and occasion of innumerable wickednesses and mischiefs, as appears from common experience.

23 For an odious o woman when she is married p, and an handmaid that is heir to her mistress q.

o Proud, and perverse; and full of hateful and offensive qualities. p For then she displayeth, and exerciseth all those ill Humours, which before for her own ends she concealed; then she is puffed up, and imperious, and becomes intolerable to her own Family, and to her Relations and Neighbours. q That possesseth her Estate, either by the gift of her Mistress, into whose Favour she had insinuated her self by her cutting and officious Carriage: or rather by the Marriage of her Master, which great and sudden change transports her beside her self, and makes her insufferably proud, and scornful, and injurious to all that converse with her.

24 There be four things which are little upon the †Heb. wise, made wise. earth, but they are † exceeding wise r.

r Comparatively to other brute Creatures. They act very wisely and providently, not from any reason which they have, but by the direction of Divine Providence, which secretly guides them to do those things for their own Preservation which are most agreeable to the Rules of Wisdom. The Design of this Observation is either 1. To commend Wisdom to us, and to teach us to imitate the Providence of these Creatures, as we are provoked to imitate their diligence, Prov. 6. 6. Or 2. To keep us from being proudly conceited of our own Wisdom, because we are either equalled or exceeded therein by the unreasonable Creatures in the wise Conduct of their Affairs. Or 3. To direct us to whom to retort for Wisdom when we want and desire it, even to that God who is able to inspire Wisdom even into the brute Creatures.

* Ch. 6. 6, &c. 25 * The ants are a people s not strong, yet they prepare their meat in the summer t, s Which Title is oft given to the unreasonable Creatures both in Scripture, as Joel 1. 6. and 2. 2. and in Homer, and Virgil, and divers other Authors. t Of which see on Prov. 6. 6, 7, 8.

* Ps. 104. 18. 26 * the conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses in the rocks u.

u In rocky ground, or in the holes of Rocks for their safety, against their too potent Enemies.

† Heb. gathered together. 27 The locusts have no king x, yet go they forth all of them † by bands y.

x To rule and order them. y In great numbers, and in several Companies, and in exact order, as is observed in Scripture, as Judg. 6. 5 & 7. 12. Joel 1. 7. & 2. 7. and by other Writers.

28 The spider taketh hold z with her hands a, and is in kings palaces b.

z Of the thread which she spins out of her own bowels. a With her Legs which he calls Hands, because they serve her for the same purpose, to do her work, to weave her web, and to catch Gnats or Flies, &c. b Is not only in poor Cottages, but many times in Palaces also, where she makes a shift to keep her abode, notwithstanding all the care and pains which is taken to sweep and cleanse it.

29 There be three things which go well, yea, four are comely in going c:

c That walk decently, and with great Alacrity and Courage; which are here commended to us to imitate in the management of our affairs.

30 A lion which is strongest among beasts, and turneth not away for any d.

d He doth not flee from his Pursuers, whether Men or Beasts, but walketh away with a slow and majestick pace, as is observed by Aristotle, and many others.

‖ Or, Horse. † Heb. girt in the loins. 31 A ‖ † gray-hound e, an he-goat f also, and a king, against whom there is no rising up g.

e Called in Hebrew, girt in the loins, either because its loins are slender, and as it were girt up into a little compass, and tight or well trussed up: or because of its great agility and swiftness, for the girding of the loins was used for expedition in going or working. Or as it is rendred by others, an Horse, to wit, a War-horse, having his Armour girt about him, and marching to the Battel, which he doth with great Majesty and Courage, as God himself observes at large, Job 39. 19, &c. f Which marcheth in the head of the Flock in grave and stately manner, conducting them with great Courage and Resolution, and being ready to fight for them, either with Beasts or Men that oppose him. Whence great Captains are oft compared to he-goats, as Isa. 14. 9. Jer. 50. 8. Dan. 8. 5, 21. Zech. 10. 3. g A mighty and victorious King, whose power none can withstand, who therefore goeth hither and thither, and proceedeth in his affairs with invincible Courage and Majesty. But this place, with the variation of one Hebrew Point, reading ammo for immo, may be rendred, as I very learned Man observes, a King and his People with him, a King when he hath the Hearts and Hands of his People going along with him in his Undertakings.

32 If thou hast done foolishly in lifting up thy self h, or if thou hast thought evil i, * lay thine hand upon thy mouth k. * Job 5. 5.

h Either 1. By Rebellion or Sedition against the King last mentioned. Or 2. By Anger or Wrath, of which he speaks in the next Verse. But this Verse hath no necessary dependance either upon the foregoing or following Verse. Or 3. Through thy Pride, which makes men carry themselves very foolishly, and scornfully, and injuriously, and is the root of Contention, as was observed Prov. 13. 10. i i. e. Designed any mischief or injury against thy Neighbour. k To wit, to shut it: Be silent, as this Phrase is used, Job 21. 5. and 29. 9. Restrain thy self, do not speak one word, much less do any thing tending to the accomplishment of it: Do not open thy mouth to justifie or excuse it, but silently and seriously consider the evil of it, and repent of it, and do so no more.

33 Surely the churning of milk bringeth forth butter, and the wringing of the nose bringeth forth blood: so the forcing of wrath l bringeth forth strife m.

l The stirring up of Wrath, either 1. In a mans self towards others, by giving way to Passion, or by fixing his Thoughts upon those things which may enflame it. Or 2. In others by Reproaches, Injuries, or any other Provocations. m Is the cause of many Quarrels, and much mischief among men.

CHAP. XXXI.

Lemuel's Lesson concerning Chastity and Temperance, 1—5. The proper use of Wine, 6, 7. An Exhortation to righteous judgment, 8, 9. A Description of a virtuous Wife, 10. With her Husband's Confidence in her, 11. Her work and careful provision for her Houshold, 12—20. Their Furniture and Cloathing, 21, 22. The Properties and Praise of a good Wife, 23—29. The Vanity of Beauty, the Good are to be praised, 30, 31.

1 THe words of king Lemuel a, the prophecy b that his mother c taught him.

a i. e. Of Solomon, by the general Consent both of Jewish and Christian Writers; to whom this Name doth very fitly agree, for it signifies one of, or from God, or belonging to God, and such an one was Solomon eminently, being given by God to David and Bathsheba, as a pledge of his Reconciliation to them after their Repentance, of whom it is expressly said, that the Lord loved him, 2 Sam. 12. 24. and who was by God himself appointed to succeed David in the Kingdom. Possibly his Mother gave this name to mind him of his great Obligations to God, and of the Justice and Necessity of his devoting himself unto God's Service and Glory. b So called, either 1. More especially, because she did either by natural Sagacity, or by divine Inspiration, foresee Solomon's Danger, and what sins he was most likely to be either inclined or tempted to commit; and therefore thought fit to give him these Precautions. Or 2. More generally, as all godly Discourses or Counsels are called Prophecies; of which see on Prov. 30. 1. and elsewhere. c Bathsheba, who having truly repented of her Adultery, did not only avoid it in her self for the future, but seriously endeavoured to prevent that and such like sins in others, and especially in Solomon, whom the remembrance of her sin might possibly provoke to an imitation of her example. But when she gave him these Instructions, is but matter of conjecture. Probably it was, either 1. When the first discerned his inclinations to those sins of which she here warns him, to which she saw he was like to have many and strong Provocations. Or 2. After he was made King, and had more plainly discovered his proneness to these Excesses, although he had not yet broken forth into those scandalous Enormities into which he afterwards fell.

2 What d, my son! and what, the son of my womb! e! and what the son of my vows f!

d A short Speech, arguing her great passion for him; What dost thou do? or, What words shall I take? What Counsels shall I give thee? My heart is full, I must give it vent: but where shall I begin? e My Son, not by Adoption, but whom I bare in my Womb, and brought forth with great pain, and brought up with tender care; and therefore it is my Duty to give thee Admonitions, and thine to receive them; and what I speak is from sincere and fervent Affection to thee, which I trust thou wilt not despise. f On whose behalf I have made many Prayers and Sacrifices, and solemn Vows to God; whom I have, as far as in me lay, devoted to the Work, and Service, and Glory of God.

3 * Give not thy ‖ strength g unto women, nor thy ways h to that * which destroyeth kings i. * Ch. 5. 9. ‖ Or, loins.

g The vigour of thy Mind and Body, which is greatly impaired by inordinate Lusts, as all Physicians agree, and frequent Experience sheweth. h Thy Conversation or Course of Life. † The same thing repeated in other words, as is very usual in these Books: To the immoderate Love of Women, which is most destructive to Kings and Kingdoms, as was well known to Solomon by the Example of his Father David, and by many other sad Instances left upon record in all Histories.

4 * It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine i, nor for princes strong drink. * Eccl. 10. 17.

i To wit, to Drunkenness or Excess, as the next Verse explains it.

5 Lest they drink and forget the law k, and † pervert the judgment † of any of the afflicted l.

k The Laws of God, by which they are to govern themselves and their Kingdoms. l Which may easily be done by a drunken Judge, because Drunkenness deprives a Man of the use of Reason; by of † Heb. all the children which m which alone men can distinguish between right and wrong, and withall stirs up those Passions which incline him both to Precipitation and Partiality.

6 * Give strong drink unto him m that is ready to perish n, and wine to those that be † of heavy hearts. * Job 5. 5.

m Which is to be understood comparatively, to him rather than to Kings, partly because he needs a liberal draught of it more than Kings do; and principally, because if it proceed to Excess, in him it is only a private inconvenience, but in Kings it is a publick Mischief and Grievance. n Sorely afflicted and overwhelmed with Sorrow, as it is explained in the following words; for such need a Cordial.

7 Let him drink, and forget his poverty o, and remember his misery no more.

o For Wine, moderately used, allayeth mens Cares and Fears, and cheereth their Spirits, Psal. 104. 15.

8 Open thy mouth p for the dumb q in the cause of all † such as are appointed to destruction r.

p Speak freely and impartially, as becomes a King and Judge to do. q For such as cannot speak in their own Cause, either through Ignorance and Infirmity; or because of the dread of their more potent Adversaries, or of the Majesty of the King sitting in judgment. r Who without such succour from the Judge, are like to be utterly ruined, whom therefore both Justice and Charity oblige thee to preserve.

9 Open thy mouth, * judg righteously, and plead the cause of the poor and needy. * Ps. 82. 3.

10 * Who can find † a virtuous woman s? for her price is far above rubies. * Ch. 12. 4. † Heb. valiant.

s Whom he may take to wife. Such a person is hardly to be found. Compare Eccles. 7. 28. And here he lays down several Characters or Qualifications of an excellent wife, which are here delivered in Alphabetical Order, each Verse beginning with a several and the succeeding Letter of the Hebrew Alphabet: which method is used in some, and but in a few places of Scripture, to oblige us to the more diligent consideration and careful remembrance of them, as things of more than ordinary importance. And such this matter is, partly because the good or bad Education even of private Families, which depends much upon the Mother's Qualifications, hath a mighty influence upon the welfare or misery of Commonwealths; and partly because the right Education of Royal Families is in it self a very publick Blessing, and therefore it is the interest and happiness of whole Kingdoms, that their Kings should have virtuous and pious wives.

11 The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her t, so that he shall have no need of spoil u.

t For the prudent and faithful management of all his domestick Affairs, which are committed to her care. u The sense is either, 1. He shall want no necessary Provisions for his Family, which are sometimes called spoil, or prey, as below, ver. 15. Psal. 111. 5. Luke 11. 22. Or, 2. He shall not need to use indirect and unlawful courses to get Wealth, by cheating or oppressing his Subjects or others, as Princes have oft done to maintain the Luxury of their Wives, and as Solomon himself afterwards did; of which see on 1 Kings 12. 4, 10, 11. because all shall be abundantly supplied to him by her Providence.

12 She will do him good and not evil x all the days of her life.

x She will improve, and not waste his Estate.

13 She seeketh wool, and flax y, and worketh willingly with her hands z.

y That she may find Employment for her Servants, and not suffer them to spend all their time unprofitably in ease and idleness. z She encourageth them to work by her Example; which was a common practice among Princesses in those first and purest Ages of the world. Not that it is the Duty of Kings and Queens to use manual or mechanical Operations, but that it is the duty of all Persons, the greatest not excepted, to improve all their Talents, and particularly their Time, which is one of the noblest of them, one way or other to the Service of that God to whom they must give an account, and to the good of that Community to which they are related and obliged.

14 She is like the merchants ships, she bringeth her food from afar a.

a By the sale of her home spun Commodities she purchaseth the choicest Goods which come from far Countries.

15 She riseth also while it is yet night b, and giveth meat c to her houshold, and a portion d to her maidens.

b Early in the morning, to redeem time. c Distributeth all her necessary Provisions. d Either 1. Of Work, which she allots to them. Or rather 2. Of Provisions for them; for so this word is used Gen. 47. 22. Lev. 10. 13, 14 Prov. 30. 8. and no where, to my remembrance, of an Allotment of Work. And so this Clause agrees best with the former, expressing the same thing in other words, according to the manner.

16 She considereth e a field, and † buyeth it: with the fruit of her hands f she planteth a vineyard g.

e Whether it be fit for her use, and of a reasonable price, and how she may purchase it. This excludes the Rashness, as her proceeding to buy it excludes the Inconstancy, which is oft Incident to that Sex. f With the effects of her Diligence. g She improveth the Land to the best Advantage.

17 She girdeth her loins with strength h, and strengtheneth her arms i.

h She useth great Diligence and Expedition in her Employment; for which end, Men in those times us'd to gird up their long and loose Garments about their Loins. i Putteth forth her utmost strength in her business.

18 † She perceiveth that her merchandise is good k: her candle goeth not out by night l.

† Heb. terr. † Heb. all the night.

k She finds great Comfort and good Success in her Labours. l Which is not to be taken strictly, but only signifies her unwearied Care and Industry, which is oft expressed by labouring day and night; or continually.

19 She layeth her hands to the spindle m, and her hands hold the distaff.

m By her own Example she provoketh her Servants to Labour. And although in these later and more delicate and luxurious times, such mean Employments are grown out of fashion among great Persons, yet they were not so in former Ages, neither in other Countries, nor in this Land; whence all Women unmarried are to this day called in the Language of our Law, Spinsters.

20 † She stretcheth out her hand to the poor n; yea, † she reacheth forth her hands to the needy. † Heb. spreadeth.

n To relieve their Necessities. Her Designs are generous and noble; for she labours not only to supply her own and her Houshold Necessities, or to support her own state, much less to feed her Pride and Luxury, but that she may have wherewith to supply the wants of others who crave or need her Assistance. Which also procures God's blessing upon her Husband, and Children, and whole Family, to whom, by this means, she brings both Honour and Advantage.

21 She is not afraid of the snow o for her houshold: for all her houshold are cloathed with ‖ scarlet p. ‖ Or, double garments.

o Or of any Injuries of the weather. p She hath provided enough, not only for their necessity and defence against Cold and other Inconveniences, which is here supposed, but also for their Delight and Ornament; so that not only her self, and Husband, and Children, but some of the better rank of her Servants, wear Scarlet; which was more cheap and familiar in those Times and Countries than now it is with us. Or, as it is rendred in our Margent, and by divers others, are cloathed with double Garments, which is necessary and customary in cold Seasons.

22 She maketh her self coverings of tapestry q, her cloathing is silk and purple r.

q For the Furniture of her house. r Which was very agreeable to her high Quality; though it doth not justifie that Luxury in Attire which is now usual among persons of far lower ranks both for Wealth and Dignity.

23 Her husband is known s in the gates, when he sitteth among the elders of the land t.

s Observed and respected, not only for his own worth, but for his wife's sake; not only for those rich Ornaments which by her care and diligence she provides for him, which others of his Brethren, by reason of their wives Sloth or Luxury, are not able to procure, but also for his wisdom in chusing, and his Happiness in enjoying so excellent a wife, by whose prudent care, in the management of his domestick concerns, he hath perfect freedom wholly to attend upon publick affairs. t In Counsel or Judgment.

24 She maketh fine linnen, and selleth it, and delivereth girdles u unto the merchants.

u Curiously wrought of Linnen, and Gold, or other precious Materials, Jer. 30. 1. Dan. 10. 5. which in those parts were used both by men, 2 Sam. 20. 8. and by women, Isa. 3. 24. Cant. 7. 1.

25 Strength x and honour y are her cloathing z, and she shall rejoice † in time to come a. † Heb. in the last day.

x Not strength of Body, which is no ornament of that Sex, save the latter only as she preserves her Health and Strength by Sobriety and Exercise, which other women waste by Intemperance and Idleness; but Gr. in the strength of Mind, Magnanimity, Courage, Resolution, Activity. y Either 1. Her prudent, and pious, and amiable behaviour, which true Honour principally consists. Or 2. That good Name and honourable Esteem which she hath gained amongst all that know her by her virtuous Disposition and Carriage. z These, and not her rich Garments mentioned before, are her great Ornament and Glory. a The Sense is, either 1. In her old Age she reaps the Comfort and Benefit of her youthful Labours. Or rather 2. She lives in constant tranquility of mind, and a confident and chearful expectation of all future events, how calamitous soever; partly because she hath laid in provisions for a rainy day, and chiefly, because she hath the comfortable remembrance of a wellspent Life, and which follows thereupon, a just confidence in Gods gracious Providence and promises made to such persons.

26 She openeth her mouth with wisdom b, and in her tongue is the law of kindness c.

b She is neither sullenly silent, nor full of vain and impertinent talk, as many Women are, but speaks discreetly and plously, as occasion offereth itself. c Her Speeches are not froward and provoking, as those of foolish Women frequently are, but most obliging and amiable, as being guided by Wisdom and Grace, and not by inordinate Lusts and Passions. And this practice is called a law in her tongue, because it is constant and customary, and proceeds from an inward and powerful Principle of true Wisdom, which in a manner necessitates and constrains her to discourse like her self, so that in a moral sense she cannot speak otherwise, unless she offer violence to her self, or the nature of the thing require sharp and severe Expressions.

27 She looketh well to the ways of her houshold d, and eateth not the bread of idleness e.

d She diligently observeth the management and progress of her domestick business, and the whole Carriage and Conversation of her Children and Servants. Whereby also he intimates that she spends not her time in gadding abroad to other Houses, and idle Discourses about the Concerns of other Persons, as the manner of many women is, but is wholly intent upon her own house and proper business. e That which is got by Idleness, or without Labour.

28 Her children f arise up g, and call her blessed h; her husband also, and he praiseth her i.

f Whose testimony is the more considerable, because they have been constant eye-witnesses of her whole Carriage, and therefore must have seen her Misdemeanours, if there had been any, as well as her Virtues.

Virtues. g Either 1. In token of Reverence to her, which agrees not to the following Clause, wherein the same Phrase is understood concerning her Husband. Or rather, 2. That they may seriously and industriously apply themselves to the work of setting forth her Praises, as this Phrase is used, Gen. 37. 25. Exod. 2. 17. and oft elsewhere. For Sitting being commonly the posture of Idleness, men that set about any work, are said to rise in order thereunto. h Both for her own Excellency, and for many happy fruits which they have gathered from her wise and godly Education. i In the following words.

‖ Or, have gotten riches.

29 Many daughters k ‖ have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all l.

k Daughters of Men, i. e. Women, so called also, Gen. 34. 1. Ezek. 30. 18. l He esteems it but just, that his Praises should bear proportion to her real and manifold Perfections.

30 Favour m is deceitful n and beauty is vain: but a woman that feareth the LORD o, she shall be praised.

m Comeliness, or, as the next clause explains it, Beauty, which commonly gives Women favour or acceptation with those who behold them. These are the words either 1. Of her Husband continuing to praise her. Or 2 Of Bathsheba, giving the summ of what she had said in few words. n Partly because it gives a false representation of the person, being oft times a cover to a most deformed soul; and to many evil and hateful qualities; partly because it doth not give a man that content and satisfaction, which at first view he promised to himself from it; and partly because it is soon lost, not only by death, but by many Diseases and contingencies. o Which character is here mentioned either as the Crown of all her perfections. Or 2. As a key to understand the foregoing passage of that Wisdom, and Fidelity, and Diligence, which proceeded from, or is accompanied with the fear of God.

31 Give her of the fruit of her hands p, and let her own works praise her q in the gates r.

p It is but just and fit that she should enjoy those Benefits and Praises which her excellent Labours deserve. q Give her the Praises which her own Works may challenge. If men be silent, the lasting Effects of her Prudence and Diligence will loudly trumpet forth her Praises. r In the most publick and solemn Assemblies.

ECCLESIASTES.

THree things in general are to be noted concerning this Book. 1. The Author of it; who was Solomon, as is manifest both from the common Consent of Jewish and Christian Writers, and from the express words of the first Verse. Nor can any thing be opposed to it, but bold and groundless Conjectures. That he wrote it in his Old Age, is more than probable from divers Passages in it, as, that he did it after his Buildings, chap. 2. 4. which yet took up Twenty years of his life, 1 Kings 9. 10. and after some considerable enjoyment of them, and planting of Gardens, and Orchards, and reaping the fruit of them, chap. 2. v. 5, 6. and after long and much consideration and experience of all those Methods in which Men expected to find Happiness, and after he had been deeply plunged in impure and inordinate Loves, ch. 7. 27, &c. and from many other places, which may be observed by any diligent Reader. And so this Book was written by him as a publick Testimony of his Repentance, and Detestation of all those vain and wicked Courses to which he had addicted himself: wherein he followed the Example of his Father David, who, after his sad Fall, penned the Fifty First Psalm. And the truth of this Opinion may be confirmed by that Expression, 2 Chron. 11. 17. they walked in the way of David and Solomon, i. e. wherein they walked both before their Falls, and after their Repentance. 2. The form or method of it. For whereas there are some Passages in it which may seem offensive and impious, for which some few persons have suspected its Authority, it must be considered, that it is in part dramatical, as was said before of the Book of Proverbs, and that Solomon speaks some and most things in his own Name, but some other things in the Names, and according to the Opinions of those worldly and ungodly Men, as is undeniably manifest both from the Scope and Design of the Book, as it is expressed both in the Beginning and in the Conclusion of it, and from his serious and large Dissuasion against those wicked Principles and Courses. And this way of writing is not unusual amongst both Sacred and Profane Writers. 3. The Design and Business of it; which is, to describe Man's true Happiness, and the way leading to it. Which he doth both Negatively, asserting and proving, that it is not to be found either in secular Wisdom, or in sensual Pleasures, or in worldly Greatness and Glory, or in abundance of Riches, or in a vain profession of Religion; and positively, shewing that it is to be had only by the Fear of God and Obedience to his Laws, which alone can give a Man a contented and chearful enjoyment of his present Comforts, and assurance of his future and everlasting Happiness.

CHAP. I.

All is Vanity; our Labour great and unprofitable, 1—3. The whole course of things is always going and returning, 4—7. Nothing in Nature is satisfied, 8. Nothing new: old things are forgot, 9—11. The search after Wisdom is it self a vain Labour; cannot supply our natural Wants; nor satisfie our Desires; but encreaseth Sorrow: all this the Preacher found out by Experience, 12—18.

1 THe words of the preacher a, the son of David, king in Jerusalem b.

a Who was not only a King, but also a Teacher of God's People, which he did both by Words, upon some solemn occasions, and by Writings. Who having sinned grievously and scandalously in the Eyes of all the World justly thought himself obliged to Preach or Publish his true Repentance for all his folly and wickedness, and to give publick warning and wholsom counsels to all Persons to avoid those Rocks upon which he had split. The Hebrew properly signifies either gathering or gathered, and so it signifies, either 1. a Preacher, as it is commonly rendred, whose Office it is to gather in Souls unto God or his Church. Or 2. A Penitent or Convert, or, one gathered, or brought back by true Repentance to God, and to his Church, from which he had so wickedly revolted. b This is added partly as a description of the Person or Author of this Book, Solomon, who was the only Man that was both Son of David, properly so called, and King in Jerusalem: and partly as an aggravation of his sin, because he was the Son of David, a wise and godly Father; who had given him both excellent Counsel, and for his general course, a good Example; and for the evil Example which he gave him in the matter of Uriah, that also, considered with his hearty and effectual Repentance for it, and the dreadful punishments of it upon his Person and Family, was a fair warning and most powerful instruction to him to learn by his Fathers Example; and because he was a King, not by Birth, for he was not David's eldest Son, but by the special favour and designation of that God whom he had now so ill requited, and that in Jerusalem, an Holy City, the place of God's special Presence, and of his Worship, where he had daily Opportunities to know, and Obligations to practise better things, which place he had defiled by his horrid sins, and thereby made it, and all God's People, and the true Religion, and the Name of the blessed God, odious and contemptible amongst all the Nations round about him.

2 * Vanity of vanities c, saith the preacher d, va- * Pf. 38. 5, 6. & 62. 9. & 144. 4. Ch. 12. 8. † Heb. all. * Rom. 8. nity of vanities, † * all e is vanity f.

c Not only vain, but vanity in the Abstract, which notes extream Vanity, especially where the word is thus doubled, as a King of Kings is the chief of Kings, and a Servant of Servants is the vilest of Servants, and a Song of Songs is a most excellent Song. d Upon deep Consideration and long Experience, and by divine Inspiration. This Verse contains the general Proposition, which he intends particularly to demonstrate in the whole following Book. e All worldly things, and all mens Designs, and Studies, and Works about them. f Not in themselves for so they are God's Creatures and therefore good and really useful in their kinds, but in reference to men, and to that happiness, which men seek and confidently expect to find in them. So they are unquestionably vain, because they are not what they seem to be, and perform not what they promise, content and satisfaction, but instead of that are commonly the causes or occasions of innumerable cares, and fears, and sorrows, and mischiefs, and because they are altogether unsuitable to the noble Mind or Soul of Man, both in nature or quality, and in duration, as being unstable and perishing things. And this vanity of them is here repeated again and again, partly because it was most deeply fixed, and perpetually present in Solomon's Thoughts; partly to shew the unquestionable certainty and vast importance of this truth; and partly that he might more throughly awaken the dull and stupid minds of men to the consideration of it, and might wean mens Hearts from those things upon which he knew they excessively doted.

3 * What profit g hath a man of all his labour h * Ch. 2. 22. & 3. 9. which he taketh under the Sun i?

g Or, as others render it, What remaindey? What real and abiding benefit hath a man by it? None at all. All is unprofitable as to the attainment of that happiness which Solomon here is, and all men in the World are enquiring after. h Heb. his toilsom labour, both of Body and Mind in the pursuit of Riches, or Pleasures, or other earthly things. i In all subluinary or worldly matters, which are usually transacted in the day-time, or by the light of the Sun. By this Restriction he implies that that profit and happiness which in vain is sought for in this lower World is really and only to be found in Heavenly places and things.

4 One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh k * but the earth † abideth for ever l.

k Men continue but for one, and that a short Age, and then they leave all their possessions to the succeeding Age, and therefore they cannot be happy here, because happiness must needs be unchangeable and eternal; or else the perpetual fear and certain knowledge of the approaching loss of all these things will rob a Man of all solid contentment in them. l i. e. Through all successive Generations of men: and therefore Man in this respect is more durable and miserable than the very Earth upon which he stands. And which, together with all the glories and comforts which he enjoyed in it, he leaveth behind him to be possessed by others.

5 The sun also ariseth, and the sun goeth down, and † hasteth to his place where he arose m.

m The Sun is in perpetual motion, sometimes arising, and somtimes setting and then arising again, and so constantly repearing its courses in all succeeding Days, and Years, and Ages; and the like he observes concerning the Winds and Rivers, v. 6, 7. And the design of these similitudes seems to be, either 1. that by representing the constant changes and restless motions of these particular things he might intimate that it is so with all other earthly things; and therefore no Man can expect satisfaction from them. Or 2. that by comparing the Sun and Wind, and Rivers, as v. 4. he compared the Earth with Man, he might shew that Man, considered as mortal, is in a more unhappy condition than these things, because when the Earth abides, Man goes; and when the Sun sets, he riseth again, and so the Wind and Rivers return to their former place and state, but Man when once he dies, he never returns again, to this life; of which comparison see Job 14. 7, 12. Or, 3. to shew the vanity of all worldly things, and that Man's mind can never be satisfied with them, because there is nothing in the World but a constant repetition of the same things, which is so irksom a thing, that the consideration thereof hath made some Persons weary of their lives; and there is no new thing under the sun, as is added in the foot of the account, v. 9. which seems to me to be given us as a Key to understand the meaning of the foregoing passages. And this is manifest and certain from experience that the things of this World are so narrow, and the mind of Man so vast, that there must be something new to satisfie the Mind, and even delightful things by too frequent repetition or long continuance, are so far from yielding satisfaction, that they grow tedious and troublesome.

6 The wind goeth toward the south, and turneth about unto the north n; it whirleth about continually, and the wind returneth again according to his circuits o.

n The Wind also sometimes blows from one Quarter of the World, and sometimes from another; all of them being Synecdochically comprehended under these two eminent quarters. But because this Word, the Wind, is not expressed in the Hebrew, but is only borrowed or understood from the latter Clause of the Verse, this first Clause is by other judicious Interpreters understood of the Sun, of whom he last spake; the words being thus rendred according to the Hebrew, He (the Sun) goeth towards the South (which he doth one half of the Year) and turneth about unto the North, which he doth the other half. And so here is the whole motion of the Sun towards the four quarters of the World particularly described; his daily motion from East to West, and back again, v. 5. and his yearly motion from North to South, between the Signs of Cancer and Capricorn. o This Clause is by all understood of the Wind, which is fitly mentioned immediately after the Sun, because it hath its rise from the Sun who is therefore called the Father of Winds, and the Winds do usually rise with the Sun, and are laid when he sets. But then it is rendred thus, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew, the Wind goeth continually whirling or compassing about, and he returneth again to his circuits, being sometimes in one, and sometimes in another quarter, and successively returning to the same quarters in which he had formerly been.

7 * All the rivers run into the sea, yet the sea is not full p: † unto the place from whence the rivers come q, thither they return again.

p To wit, to the brink, or so as to overflow the Earth, which might be expected from such vast Accessions to it. Whereby also he intimates the emptiness and dissatisfaction of mens minds, notwithstanding all the abundance of Creature Comforts. q Either 1. unto the Sea, from whence they are supposed to return into their proper Channels, and then, as it is expressed, thither (i. e. into the Sea) they return again. Or 2. unto their Springs or Fountains, to which the Waters return by secret Passages of the Earth, as is manifest from the Caspian Sea, and reasonably supposed in other places. Or rather 3. unto the Earth in general, from whence they come or flow into the Sea, and to which they return again by the Reflux of the Sea. For he seems to speak of the visible and constant motion of the Waters, both to the Sea and from it, and then to it again in a perpetual Reciprocation: which agrees best with the former Similitudes, ver. 5, 6.

8 All things r are full of labour s; man cannot utter it: the eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing u.

r Not only the Sun, and Winds, and Rivers, which I have mentioned, but all other Creatures. s Both subjectively, as they are in continual Restlesness and Change, never abiding in the same place or place; and efficiently, as they cause great and sore Labour to men, in getting, and keeping, and enjoying of them, yea even in the study of them, as is noted hereafter. t The Labour is inexpressibly and unconceivably great. u As there are many things in the World troublesome and vexatious to Mens Senses and Minds, so even those things which are comfortable and acceptable to them are not satisfactory, but Men are constantly desiring some longer Continuance or fuller Enjoyment of them, or variety in them, and they never say, It is enough, I desire no more. The Eye and Ear are here synecdochically put for all the Senses, because these are most spiritual and refined, most curious and inquisitive, most capable of receiving Satisfaction, because they are exercised with more Ease and Pleasure than the other Senses, whose Satisfactions are oft attended with greater Weariness, and manifold Dangers and Inconveniences.

9 * † The thing that hath been, it is that which * Ch. 3. 15. † Heb. what is it that hath been? the same that shall be. shall be; and that which is done, is that which shall be done: and x there is no new thing † under the sun.

x There is nothing in the World but a continued and tiresome Repetition of the same things. The Nature and Course of the Beings and Affairs of the World, and the Tempers of Mens Minds, are generally the same that they ever were and shall ever be; and therefore shall be, because no Man ever yet received satisfaction from any worldly things. So Gr. it is a vain and foolish thing for any Person hereafter to expect it. † To wit, in the nature of things, which might give us hopes of attaining that satisfaction which things have not hitherto afforded. For otherwise this doth not restrain the God of Nature who hath frequently done and still can do, new and miraculous works, and who can and doth discover to particular Persons new inventions, when it pleaseth him.

10 Is there any thing whereof it may be said See, this is new? it hath been already of old time a, which was before us.

y For the proof hereof I appeal to the Consciences and Experiences of all Men. a The same things have been said and done before, though possibly we did not know it.

11 There is no remembrance of former things; b neither shall there be any remembrance of things that are to come, with those that shall come after c.

b This seems to be added to prevent this Objection, There are many new Inventions and Enjoyments unknown to former Ages. To this he answers, This Objection is grounded only upon our ignorance of ancient times and things, which is very great, and which if we did exactly know or remember, we should easily find Parallels to all present Occurrences in former Ages. c This Clause tends both to illustrate and confirm the former. The Sense is, There are many thousands of remarkable Speeches and Actions done in this and the following Ages which neither are, nor ever will be, put into the publick Records or Histories, and consequently they must unavoidably be forgotten and lost unto succeeding Ages; and therefore it is just and reasonable to believe the same concerning former Ages; seeing the same Causes are most likely to produce the same effects.

12 I the preacher was king over Israel in Jerusalem d.

d This Verse is a Preface to the following Discourse, that by the consideration of the quality of the Speaker they might be induced to give more Attention and respect to his words. Having asserted the Vanity of all things in the general, he now comes to prove his Assertion in all those Particulars wherein Men commonly seek and with greatest probability expect to find true Happiness. He begins with secular Wisdom. And to shew how competent a Judge he was of this matter, he lays down his Character, that he was the Preacher, which implies eminent Knowledge and Ability to teach others, or, the Convert, who had learnt by dear-bought experience what he now taught them; and a King, who therefore had all imaginable Opportunities and Advantages for the Attainment of Happiness, and particularly for the getting of Wisdom, by consulting all sorts of Books and Men, by trying all manner of Experiments, and many other ways; and no ordinary King, but King over Israel, God's own and only beloved People, a wise and an happy People, Deut. 4. 6, 7. and 33. 29. whose King he was by God's special and gracious Appointment, and furnished by God with singular Wisdom for the discharge of that great trust; and whose Royal Palace and Abode was in Jerusalem, where were the House of God and the most wise and learned of the Priests attending upon it, and the Seats of Justice, and Colleges or Assemblies of the wisest Men of their Nation; of which see 2 Kings 22. 14. 1 Chron. 25. 8, &c. Psal. 122. 5. All which helps concurring together in him, which very rarely do in any other men, makes the Argument drawn from his Experience more convincing and undeniable.

13 And I gave my heart e to seek and search out f by wisdom g concerning all things that are done under heaven h: this sore travel i hath God given to the sons of man k, ‖ to be exercised therewith l.

‖ Or, to afflict them.

e Which Phrase notes his serious and fixed purpose, his great Industry and Alacrity in it. f To seek diligently and accurately. g Wisely, or by the help of that Wisdom wherewith God had endowed me. h Concerning all the works of God and Men in this lower World; the works of Nature, and their Causes, Effects, Properties, and Operations; the works of Divine Providence, and God's Counsels and Ends in them; the work and depths of humane Policy in the conduct of Personal, and Domestical, and Publick Affairs. i This difficult and toilsome work of searching out these things. k God hath inflicted this as a just punishment upon Man for his earing of the Tree of Knowledge, that instead of that sweet and perfect Knowledge which God had freely infused into Man at his first Creation, he should now grope after some small Parcels or Fragments of it, and those too not to be gotten without the Sweat of his Brows and Brains. l To employ themselves in the painful study of these things, which now is both their Duty and their Punishment. Or, as it is rendred in the Margin, and by many others, to afflict them in or by it, to chastise their former Curiosity, and to give them matter of continual Humiliation and Vexation. And therefore Knowledge is so far from making Men happy, that it exposeth them to Trouble and Infelicity.

14 I have seen m all the works that are done under the sun, and behold n, all is vanity and vexation of spirit o.

m i. e. Diligently observed, and in great measure understood.
n For it was a great surprise to me, and therefore may seem strange to you.
o And not only unsatisfying, but also troublesom, and an affliction or breaking to a mans spirit or mind. Or, as others, both ancient and modern Translators, render it, a feeding upon wind, as these very words, save only that there is the verb from which this noun seems most probably deduced, are rendred, Hos. 12 1. where also it signifies a fruitless or lost labour, and a disappointment of their hopes and desires of satisfaction. And so this is a repetition of the same thing in other words, according to the manner of these Books.

* Ch. 7. 13. † Heb. de-fect. 15 * That which is crooked cannot be made streight p: and † that which is wanting q cannot be numbred r.

p All our knowledg serves only to discover our diseases and miseries, but is of it self utterly insufficient to heal or remove them; it cannot rectify those confusions and disorders which are either in our own Hearts and Lives, or in the men and things of the world.
q To wit, in our knowledg, and in order to mans compleat satisfaction and felicity.
r We know little of what we should or might know, or did know in the state of Innocency, or shall know in the future Life.

* 1 Kin. 4. 30. & 10. 7. 23. † Heb. had seen much. 16 I communed with mine own heart s, saying, Lo, I am come to great estate t, and have gotten u * more wisdom than all they that have been before me x in Jerusalem y: yea, my heart † had great experience z of wisdom and knowledg a.

s I considered within my self in what condition I was, and what degrees of knowledg I had gained, and whether it was not my Ignorance that made me unable to rectifie those errours, and supply those wants, and wiser Men could do it, though I could not.
t Heb. I am grown great, to wit, in Wisdom: Or, I have magnified, or greatly enlarged.
u Heb. have added. As I had a large stock of Wisdom infused into me by God, 1 King. 3. 12. & 4. 29. so I have greatly improved it by Conversation, and Study, and Experience.
x Whether Governours, or Priests, or private Persons. Which was no vain boast, but a known and confessed truth, and profession hereof was necessary to demonstrate his assertion.
y Which was then the most eminent place in the World for Wisdom and Knowledg.
z Heb. had seen much; which intimates that his Knowledg was clear, and certain, and experimental, as that is which we have from our own eye-sight.
a Two words signifying the same thing, as may be gathered from v. 18. and from the promiscuous use of them in this Book, and in the Proverbs, and elsewhere, and implying all manner of knowledge, divine or humane, speculative or practical, political or philosophical.

* Ch. 2. 12. & 7. 23, 25. 17 * And I gave my heart to know wisdom, and to know madness and folly b: I perceived that this also is vexation of spirit c.

b That I might throughly understand the nature and difference of Truth and Error, of Virtue and Vice, all things being best understood by Contraries, and might discern if there were any Opinion or Practice amongst Men which would give him full satisfaction.
c Or, feeding upon wind, as v. 14.

‖ Or, indignation. 18 For in much wisdom is much ‖ grief d: and he that encreaseth knowledge encreaseth sorrow e.

d Or, indignation, or displeasure within himself, and against his present condition.
e Which he doth many ways, partly because he gets his Knowledge with hard and wearisome Labour, both of Mind and Body, with the Consumption of his Spirits, and shorning and imbitterment of his Life; partly because he is oft deceived with Knowledge sadly so called, and oft mistakes Errors for Truths, and is perplexed with manifold Doubts, from which ignorant Men are wholly free; partly because he forefees, and consequently feels the terror of many Miseries which are, or are likely to come to pass, which are unobserved by less knowing persons, and which possibly never happen; partly because he hath the clearer prospect into, and quicker sense of his own Ignorance, and Infirmities, and Disorders, and withal how vain and ineffectual all his Knowledge is for the prevention or removal of them; and partly because his Knowledge is very imperfect and unsatisfying, yet increasing his thirst after more Knowledge, and consequently after more Dissatisfaction, because instead of that just Honour, and Delight, and Advantage which he expects from it, he meets with nothing but Envy, and Opposition, and Contempt, because his Knowledge quickly fades and dies with him, and then leaves him in no better, and possibly in a much worse Condition than the meanest and most unlearned Man in the World.

CHAP. II.

Pleasure and Mirth also Vanity, 1, 2. Wherher in Wine, or Buildings and Gardens, or Servants, or Cattel, or Silver and Gold, or Musick, 3—8. This the Preacher searched out and found, and none need try after him, 9—12. Wisdom excelleth Folly, 13, 14. but the like Event is to both, and both are forgotten; therefore is Wisdom also Vanity, and Life hateful, 15—17. Men labour they know not for whom, but the Fool enjoyeth the wiseman's pains; this rendred his Toil irksome; that he reaped no fruit, and yet his days were Travel and Grief, 18—23. There is nothing better than to enjoy contentedly what God giveth us; and this also is of God, who giveth travel to the Sinner, 24—26.

1 I Said in mine heart a, Go to now, I will prove thee b with mirth c, therefore enjoy pleasure d: and behold, this also is vanity e.

a Being disappointed of my hopes from Knowledge, I resolved in my own Mind to try another course.
b O my Soul I will try whether I cannot make thee happy.
c By allowing to my self the free enjoyment of the present and sensible Delights of humane Life.
d Take thy fill of pleasure, and expect satisfaction there.
e Is vain, and unable to make men happy, because sensible pleasures are mean and unsuitable to the noble and heaven-born Soul of man, and if excessively used, apter to cloy and glut men, than to satisfie them, and are frequently mixed with, and most commonly end in bitterness, as being the great instruments and occasions of sin, and of all its fatal consequences.

2 I said of laughter f, It is mad g: and of mirth, What doth it h?

f Of excessive Mirth, which discovers it self by immoderate Laughter, and other outward gestures.
g This is an act and sign of madness, more fit for fools who know nothing, than for wise men at least in this sinful, and dangerous, and deplorable state of mankind, which calls for seriousness and sorrow from all considerate persons, in which case it is like the laughter of one in a phrenzy. And none but a Fool, or mad Man, can take satisfaction in such light and frothy Pleasures, or expect Happiness from them.
h What good doth it? Or how can it make men happy? I challenge all the Epicures in the World to give me a solid and satisfactory Answer.

3 * I sought in mine heart † to give my self unto wine i, (yet acquainting my heart with wisdom k) and † to lay hold on folly l, till I might see what was that good for the sons of men, which they should do under the heaven † all the days of their life m.

* Ch. 2. † Heb. drawing. † Heb. the taste of the heart. † Heb. of their life.

i To relax and gratifie my flesh with delicious meats and drinks, the Synecdochically expressed by Wine here, as also Prov. 9. 2. Cant. 2. 4. &c. as necessary food is by Bread, Amos 7 12 compared with 8. 11.
k Yet resolving to use my Wisdom, either 1. To set bounds to my pleasures. Or rather 2. That I might try whether I could not arrive at Satisfaction, by mixing Wine and Wisdom together, by using Wine to sweeten and allay the Toils of Wisdom, and Wisdom to prevent that Destruction which many bring upon themselves by intemperate Pleasures whilst they seek for Satisfaction, that so I might have the comfort, without the danger and mischief of Pleasures.
l To pursue and addict my self to carnal Pleasures, which was my Folly.
m Till by trying several methods I might find out the true way to Contentment and Satisfaction, during this mortal Life.

4 I made me great works n, I built me houses o, I planted me vineyards p.

n Magnificent works for my honour and delight.
o Of which see 1 King. 7. 1. &c. & 9. 15, &c. p See Cant. 8. 11.

5 I made me gardens q and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kind of fruits r, q Heb. Paradises, or Gardens of Pleasure.

r Mixing Pleasure and Profit together.

6 I made me pools of water s, to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees t.

s Because the Rain there fell but seldom.
t The nurseries of young Trees newly planted in the Orchards, which for the multitude of them were like a Wood or Forrest.

7 I got me servants and maidens, and had † servants † Heb. of my house born in my house u; also I had great possessions of great and small cattle, above all that were in Jerusalem before me.

u Of my Bond-servants, which therefore were a part of my possessions, See 1 King. 10. 1. Ezra. 2. 55.

8 * I gathered me also silver and gold, and the peculiar treasure of kings x, and of the provinces y: I gat me men-singers and women-singers z, and the delights of the sons of men a, as † musical instruments and that of all sorts.

* 1 Kin. 9. 28. & 10. 14. † Heb. musical instruments or a chest of women or choice men. Or men and women of all heart.

x Either 1. Vast Riches, answerable to the State of a King. Or 2 The greatest Jewels and rarities of other Kings, which they gave to me either as a Tribute, or by way of Present: of which see 1 King. 4. 21. & 9. 11. & 10. 2, 10.
y Which were imposed upon or presented by all the Provinces of my Dominions.
z Whose voices were more sweet than the Mens.
a Either 1. All other delightful things. Or 2. That in which men generally delight, to wit, musical instruments, as it follows.

9 So I was great b, and increased more than all that were before me in Jerusalem; also my wisdom remained with me c.

b In Riches, and Power, and Glory.
c As yet I was not wholly besotted and seduced from God by these things, as I was afterwards. I still had the use of my Reason, whereby I was capable of searching after and finding satisfaction, if it was to be had in those things.

* Ch. 3. 22. & 5. 18. 19.

d Whatsoever was grateful to my Senses, or my Heart desired.
He ascribes Desire to the Eyes, because the Sight of the Eyes is the usual and powerful Incentive of Desires; of which see Jos. 7. 21. Job 31. 1. Mat. 5. 28.
e I denied my self nothing, at least of lawful Delights, but went to the very utmost bounds of them: which was the occasion of his falling afterward into sinful Pleasures.
f As my Heart was vehemently set upon Pleasure, so I did not resist or curb it therein, but made all possible Provisions to gratifie it.
g I had the Comfort of all my Labours, and was not hindred from the free and full Enjoyment of them by Sickness or War, or any other calamitous calamitous occurrent.

h This present and temporary Enjoyment of them, was all the Benefit which I could expect or receive from all my Labours. So that I made the best of them, I had an heart to use them, which many men through Covetousness have not, and I tasted the sweetness of them, which others cannot do; and therefore if any man could arrive at Happiness by this means, I had done it.

11 Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do i: and behold, all was * vanity and vexation of spirit k, and there was no ‖ profit l under the sun.

* Ch. 1. 14. i I made a serious Review of my former Works and Labours, and considered whether I had obtained that Satisfaction in them which I designed and expected.
k I found my self suddenly disappointed and wholly dissatisfied in this course.
l The Pleasure was past and gone, and I was never the better for it, but as empty as before, and had nothing left but sorrowful Reflections upon it.

12 And I turned my self to behold wisdom, * and madness, and folly m: for what can the man do † that cometh after the king o? ‖ even that which hath been already done p.

m Of which see Chap. 1. 17. Being frustrated of my hopes in pleasure, I returned to a second and more serious Consideration of my first choice, to see whether there was not more Satisfaction to be got. even from Wisdom, than what I discovered at my first view.
n To find out the truth in this matter, to discover the utmost Satisfaction which was possibly to be found in Pleasures. So this is added as a Reason why he gave over the Thoughts of Pleasures, and directed them to another Object, and why he so confidently asserted their Vanity from his own particular Experience, because he had made the best of them, and it was a vain thing for any private man to expect that from them which could not be found by a King, and such a King, who had so much Wisdom to invent, and such vast Riches to pursue and enjoy all imaginable Delights, and who had made it his Design and Business to search this to the bottom.
o That succeeds me in this Enquiry.
p As by others in former times, so especially by my self. They can make no new Discoveries as to this point.

13 Then I saw q † that wisdom excelleth folly r, as † there far as light excelleth darkness s.

† Heb. I saw.

q Or, yet I saw. For this is added to prevent an Objection or Mistake.
r Although Wisdom is not sufficient to make men truly and perfectly happy, yet it is of a far greater Use and Excellency than vain Pleasures, or any other Follies i. e. Vastly and unspeakably.
s Light is very pleasant and comfortable, and withal of great necessity and singular use to discover the Differences of Persons and Things, to prevent Mistakes and Dangers, and to direct all a man's paths in the right way, whereas Darkness is in it self doleful, and leads men into innumerable Confusions, and Errors, and Miseries.

14 * The wise mans eyes are in his head t, but the fool walketh in darkness u: and x I my self perceived also, that * one event happeneth unto them all y.

* Ch. 9. 2, 3.

t In their proper place, and therefore they can see, which they could not do if they were out of his head. He hath the use of his Eyes and Reason, and sees his way, and orders all his Affairs with Discretion, and foresees, and so avoids many Dangers and Mischiefs.
u Manageth his Affairs ignorantly, rashly, and foolishly, whereby he sheweth that his Eyes are not in his head, but in his heels, or as it is expressed Prov. 17. 24. in the ends of the earth.
x Or, Yet, notwithstanding this Excellency of Wisdom above Folly, for our Conduct in the matters of this Life, yet at last they both come to one end.
y Both are subject to the same Calamities, and to Death it self, which utterly takes away all difference between them.

15 Then said I in my heart, As it happeneth to the fool, so it † happeneth even to me; and why was I then more wise z? Then I said in my heart, That this also is vanity.

† Heb. befal him.

z What Benefit have I by my Wisdom? Or, To what purpose did I desire and take so much pains for Wisdom?

16 For there is no remembrance of the wise more than of the fool for ever a; seeing that which now is, in the days to come shall all be forgotten: and how dieth the wise man? as the fool b.

a Their Name and Memory, though it may flourish for a season among some men, yet it will not last for ever, but will in a little time be worn out; as we see in most of the wise men of former ages, whose very Names, together with all their Monuments, are utterly lost, as hath been oft observed and bewailed by learned Writers in several Ages.
b He must die as certainly as the fool, and after death be as little remembred and honoured.

17 Therefore I hated life c, because the work that is wrought under the sun is grievous unto me d: for all is vanity and vexation of spirit.

* Ch. 2. 17. & 5. 18.

c My Life, though accompanied with so much Honour, and Pleasure, and Wisdom, was a burden to me, and I was apt to wish either that I had never been born, or that I might speedily die. d All humane designs and works are so far from yielding me that satisfaction which I expected, that the consideration of them encreaseth my Discontent.

Heb. labour. 18 Yea, I hated all my labour, which I had † taken under the sun e: because * I should leave it unto the man that shall be after me f.

* Ps. 49. 10.

e All these Riches and Buildings, and other fruits of my Labour, were the matter of my Repentance, and Aggravations of my Misery.
f Because I must, and that everlastingly, part with them, and leave them all behind me.

19 And who knoweth whether he shall be a wise man or a fool g? yet shall he have rule over all my labour wherein I have laboured, and wherein I have shewed my self wise under the sun. This is also vanity.

g Who will undo all that I have done, and turn the effects of my Wisdom into Instruments of his Folly, and Occasions of ruine. Some think he had such an Opinion of Rehoboam.

20 Therefore I went about to cause my heart to despair h of all the labour which I took under the sun.

h I gave my self up to Despondency, and despair of ever reaping that Satisfaction which I promised to my self.

21 For there is a man whose labour is in wisdom, and in knowledge, and in equity i: yet to a man that hath not laboured therein k, shall he † leave it for his portion. This also is vanity, and a great evil l.

† He's give.

i Who useth great Industry, and Prudence, and Justice too in the management of his Affairs, and therefore might as confidently expect God's blessing, and the comfort of his Labours, as any other Man.
k So as I have done: who hath spent his days in sloth and folly.
l A great disorder in it self, and a great disgrace to this World, and a great torment to a considering mind.

22 * For what hath man m of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart wherein he hath laboured under the sun?

* Ch. 1. 3. & 3. 9.

m What Comfort or Benefit remains to any Man after this short and frail Life is once ended? Or, what Advantage hath he by all his Labours above him who never laboured, and yet enjoyeth all the fruits of his Labours?

23 For all his days are * sorrows n, and his travel grief o; yea, his heart taketh not rest in the night p. This is also vanity.

* Job 14. 1.

n Or, Though all his days were sorrows, i. e. full of sorrows. For this seems added to aggravate the Evil mentioned in the foregoing Verse. Though he took great and unwearied pains all his days, yet after death he hath no more benefit by it than another man hath.
o The toils of his Body are, or were, accompanied with the Vexations of his Mind.
p Either because his Mind is distracted, or his Sleep broken, with perplexing Cares and Fears.

24 * There is nothing better for a man q, than that he should eat and drink, and that he ‖ should make his soul enjoy good r in all his labour. This also I saw that it was from the hand of God s.

* Ch. 3. 12, 13, 22. & 5. 18. & 8. 15. ‖ Or, delight his senses.

q Or, Is there any thing better for a man? Which implies that there is nothing better, to wit, for mans present comfort and satisfaction; this is the chief, and indeed the only considerable benefit of his labours.
r That he should thankfully take, and freely and chearfully enjoy the comforts which God gives him:
s That this also is a singular gift of God, and not to be procured by a mans own Wisdom or Diligence.

25 For who can eat t, or who else can hasten hereunto u more than I?

t Who can more freely and fully enjoy the Comforts of this Life than I did? This Verse is added to confirm what he said in the foregoing Verse from his own Experience, which was the more considerable, because no Man ever was a more capable Judge of these matters, none could either have more Creature-comforts, or more addict himself to the enjoyment of them, or improve them to better advantage than he did, and therefore he could best tell what was the greatest good to be found in them, and whether they were able of themselves, without Gods special gift, to yield a man satisfaction.
u To wit, to the procuring and enjoying of them. Who can pursue them with more diligence, or obtain them with more speed and readiness, or embrace them with more greediness and alacrity?

26 For God giveth to a man that is good † in his sight x, wisdom and knowledge y, and joy z: but to the sinner he giveth travel, to gather and to heap up ‖, that * he may give to him that is good before God †. This also is vanity, and vexation of spirit.

† Heb. before him. * Job 27. 16, 17. Prov. 28.

x Who not only seems to be good to Men, as many bad Men do, but is really and sincerely good. Or, who pleaseth him, as this Phrase is rendred, Eccles. 7. 26. and oft elsewhere. Whereby he seems to intimate the Reason why he found no more comfort in his Labours, because his ways had been very displeasing to God, and therefore God justly denied him that gift.
y To direct him how to use his Comforts aright, that so they may be blessings, and not snares and curses to him.
z A thankful and contented Mind with his portion. ‖ He giveth him up to insatiable desires, and wearisom labours, to little or no purpose. † That he may have no comfort in them, but leave them to others, yea to such as he least expected or desired, to good and virtuous men, into whose hands his Estate falls by the wise and all-disposing Providence of God.

CHAP. III.

Every thing hath its time: in which, to enjoy it, and therewith do good to others, is our good, 1—13. God doth all according to his Decree that we should fear him, and there is nothing new, 14, 15. The Vanity of unjust Judgment; God is the great Judge of all, 16, 17. And he will make men know, that they are here but as brute Beasts, 18—22.

1 TO every thing there is a season a, and a time to every purpose b under heaven.

a A certain time appointed by God for its being and continuance, which no humane Wit or Providence can prevent or alter. And by virtue of this Appointment or Decree of God, all the vicissitudes and changes which happen in the world, whether comforts or calamities lamities, do come to pass. Which is here added partly to prove what he last said, Chap. 2. 24, 26. that both the free and comfortable Enjoyment of the Creatures which some have, and the Crosses and Vexations which others have with them, are from the Hand and Counsel of God: partly to prove the principal Proposition of the Book, that all things below are vain, and Happiness is not to be found in them, because of their great uncertainty, and mutability, and transitoriness, and because they are so much out of the reach and power of Men, and wholly in the disposal of another, to wit God, who doth either give or take them away, either sweeten or imbitter them, as it pleaseth him; and partly to bring the minds of men into a quiet and chearful dependence upon Gods Providence and submission to his Will, and a state of preparation for all events. b Or, will or desire, to wit, of man. To all mens designs, attempts and businesses. Not only natural, but even the free and voluntary actions of men, are ordered and disposed by God to accomplish his own purpose. But it must be considered, that he doth not here speak of a time allowed by God wherein all the following things may lawfully be done, which is wholly besides his Scope and Business, but only of a time fixed by God, in which they would or should be done.

† Heb. to bear.

2 A time † to be born, and a time to die c: a time to plant d, and a time to pluck up that which is planted:

c A certain period unknown to Man, but fixed by God, in which a man must unavoidably die; of which see Job 14. 5. Joh. 13. 1. d Wherein God enclines a mans heart to planting.

3 A time to kill e, and a time to heal f: a time to break down g, and a time to build up:

e When a man shall die a violent death, either by chance, as Exod. 21. 13. or by the sentence of the Magistrate, or by the hands of Murderers. f When he who seemed to be mortally wounded shall be healed and restored. g When houses shall be demolished either by the fancy of the owner, or by the rage of other men, or otherwise:

4 A time to weep h, and a time to laugh: a time to mourn, and a time to dance:

h When Men shall have just occasion for weeping and mournings.

5 A time to cast away stones i, and a time to gather stones together: a time to embrace k, and a time

† Heb. to be far from.

† to refrain from embracing l:

i Which were brought together in order to the building of a Wall or House, but are now cast away, either because the man who gathered them hath changed his mind, and desists from his project, or by other causes or accidents. k When persons shall enter into Friendship, and perform all friendly offices one to another. l Either through alienation of affections, or grievous calamities. See Joel 2. 16. 1 Cor. 7. 5.

‖ Or, seek.

6 A time ‖ to get, and a time to lose m: a time to keep, and a time to cast away n.

m When Men shall lose their Estates, either by Gods Providence, or by their own choice. n When a man shall cast away his Goods voluntarily, as in a storm to save his Life, as Jonah 1. 5. Act. 27. 18, 19. or out of Love and Obedience to God, as Mat. 10. 37, 39— Heb. 10. 34.

7 A time to rent o, and a time to sew: a time to keep silence p, and a time to speak:

o When men shall rend their Garments, as they did in great and sudden griefs, as Gen. 37. 29. Joel 2. 13. p Wherein men will or shall be silent, either through grief, as Job 2. 12, 13. or by sickness or weakness, or because God denies a man ablity to utter his mind.

8 A time to love q, and a time to hate: a time of war, and a time of peace.

q When God will stir up the affection of Love, or give occasion for the exercise or discovery of it to others.

* Ch. 1. 3.

9 * What profit hath he that worketh, in that wherein he laboureth?

r Seeing then all actions and events in the world are out of mans power, and no man can at any time do or enjoy any thing at his pleasure, but only what and when God pleaseth, as hath been now shewed in many particulars, and it is as true and certain in all others, hence it follows, that all mens labours, of themselves, and without Gods help and blessing, are unprofitable, and utterly insufficient to make them happy.

10 I have seen s the travel t which God hath given to the sons of men u, to be exercised in it x:

s I have diligently observed and considered upon this occasion. t Or, the occupation or business, mens various employments, and the differing successes of them. u Either 1. Which God hath imposed upon Men as their duty: and therefore Men must labour, although it brings them no profit, as was now said. Or 2. Which God hath inflicted upon Mankind as a just punishment for their sins; to which therefore Men ought quietly to submit. x That hereby they might have constant matter of exercise for their diligence, and patience, and submission to Gods Will and Providence, and for all other Graces. Or, that they might be afflicted or humbled therewith; as the same phrase is rendred by divers, Eccl. 1. 13.

* Ch. 8. 17.

11 He hath made every thing beautiful in his time y: also he hath set the world in their heart z, so that * no man can find out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end a.

y This seems to be added as an Apology for Gods Providence, notwithstanding all the contrary events and confusions which are in the world. He (i. e. God, expressed in the last clause of the verse) hath made (or doth make or do, by his Providence in the government of the world) every thing (which he doth either immediately, or by the ministry of Men, or other Creatures, for God worketh in and with all his Creatures in all their actions, as is agreed by Divines and Philosophers) beautiful (decently and conveniently, so that, all things considered, it could not have been done better) in his time, in the time which he had appointed, or which he saw most proper and fit for it; or in its time or season, when it was most fit to be done. Many events seem to mens shallow and perverse judgments, at least for a time, to be very irregular and unbecoming, as when wicked men prosper in their impious and unrighteous Enterprizes, and good men are sorely oppressed and afflicted, and that for righteousness sake; but when men shall come throughly to understand God's works, and the whole frame and contexture of them, and to see the end of them, they will then say, that all things were done most wisely and most seasonably; whereof we have eminent instances in Joseph, and David, and Mordecai, and the Jews of his time. z i. e. In the hearts of men, as the following words shew, where Man is expressed. The sense is either 1. Although all God's works are beautiful, yet men do not discern the beauty of them, because the World is in their Hearts; their minds are so busied and distracted with the thoughts, and cares, and love, and business of this World, that they have neither leisure, nor heart, seriously to study God's works. But this inordinate Love of the present World comes from Man's own Corruption, and not from God, and therefore it seems harsh to impute it to God, and improbable that Solomon would have phrased it thus, that God hath set or put the World, i.e. worldly Lusts in mens Hearts. Or 2. As God's Works are beautiful in themselves, so Men are capable of discerning the Beauty of them, because God hath set the World in mens Hearts, he hath exposed the World, and all his Dispensations in the World, unto the view of mens minds; both because he hath wrought his Works so evidently, and publickly, that Men might easily observe them; and because he hath given Men Reason whereby they may discover the Wildom and Beauty of all God's works, if they diligently apply themselves to the study of them. a So this is another reason why Men do not discern the Beauty of God's works, because they do not see the whole Frame or Course of them from the Beginning to the End, but only some small Parcels or Fragments of them, the eminent works of God being oft begun in one Age, and finished in another. Or yet so that, &c. Or except that (as this Phrase properly signifies, and is elsewhere used) no Man can find out, &c. Thus it is an Exception to the next foregoing Clause, and the Sense is, It is true God hath put the World into Mens Hearts, or made them capable of observing all Events and Dispensations of God in the World; but this is to be understood with a Limitation, because there are some more mysterious works of God, which no Man can fully understand, because he cannot search them out through or from the Beginning to the End.

12 I know b that there is no good c in them d, but for a man to rejoyce, and to do good e in his life.

b By clear Reason, and my own long and certain Experience. c No other Satisfaction or Felicity which a Man can enjoy. d In Creatures or worldly Enjoyments. e Either 1. to himself, as it is fully expressed, Psal. 49. 18. Or 2. to others; to employ them in Acts of Charity and Liberality towards others. Or 3. towards God, to use them, and to live in the fear of God, which is necessary to the Happiness of this as well as of the other Life.

13 And also that every man should eat and drink f, and † enjoy the good of all his labour, it is the gift of God g.

† Heb. Job 7. 7. Ps. 34. 12.

f i. e. Hath power or an Heart to use what God hath given him, as it is expressed Ch. 6. 2. g Of which see the Notes on Ch. 2. 24.

14 I know that whatsoever God doth, it shall be for ever h: nothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it i: and God doth it, that men should fear before him k.

h All God's Counsels or Decrees are eternal and unchangeable, and his Providence works effectually, so as Men cannot resist or hinder it. i Men can neither do any thing besides or against God's Counsel and Providence, nor hinder any work or act of it. k Not that men should make this an occasion of despair, or idleness, or dissolute ness, as some abuse this Doctrine, but that by the consideration of his Sovereign and irresistible power in the disposal of all Persons and things as pleaseth him, men should learn to trust in him, to submit to him, to fear to offend or rebel against him, and more carefully and industriously to study to please him.

15 That which hath been, is now; and that which is to be, hath already been l, and God requireth m † that which is past n.

† Heb. that which is driven away.

l Things past, present, and to come, are all of the same nature, and all ordered in the same manner by one constant counsel, and settled course in all Parts and Ages of the World. There is a continual return of the same motions and influences of the Heavenly Bodies, of the same seasons of the Year; and a constant succession of new Generations of Men and Beasts, but all of the same quality. The same thing in substance was said before, Chap. 1. 9. m i. e Beneweth, as this word is used, Job 3. 4. n That time and those things which are irrecoverably gone in themselves, but are as it were recalled, because others of the same kind arise and come in their stead. Heb. that which is driven away, with a mighty force, as time present is violently thrust away by that which comes after it.

16 And moreover o, I saw p under the sun the place of judgment q, that wickedness was there r; and the place of righteousness s, that iniquity was there.

o This is mentioned, either 1. as another Vanity, to wit, the Vanity of Honour and Power, which is so oft an Instrument of Injustice and Oppression. Or rather 2. as another Argument of the Vanity of worldly things, or an hindrance of that Comfort which men expect in this Life, because they are oppressed by their Rulers. p I perceive it by Information from others, and by my own Observation. q In the Thrones of Princes and Tribunals of Magistrates, where Judgment should be duly executed. r Judgment was perverted, the guilty acquitted, and the innocent condemned. s In which Righteousness should be found and should dwell, if it were banished from all other places.

t Mine heart was sorely grieved at this Disorder, but I quieted it with this Consideration. u Absolving and saving the Just, and condemning the Wicked. x Fixed by God's unalterable Decree. He implies, that as this life is the Sinners time in which he doth whatsoever seemeth good in his own eyes, so God will have his time to reckon with them, and rectifie all these Disorders. y In the Presence or at the Judgment-seat of God; which is easily understood out of the foregoing words, the Relative being put for the Antecedent, as it is Numb. 7. 89. Esth. 9. 25. Job 1. 21. Psal. 14. 4. and 114. 2. Or it may be rendred then, as this Particle is used Psal. 14. 5. Hos. 2. 15. and as it is usual in other Authors for Adverbs of Place to be put for Adverbs of Time. z For the examining and judging not only all mens Practices or open Actions, but also all their secret Thoughts and Purposes; all the evil which they either did, or designed, or desired, or endeavoured to do. The design of this Verse is partly to strike a Terror into oppressing Potentates, and partly to satisfie the Doubts, and support the Spirits of good men who are oppressed in this life.

18 I said in my heart a concerning the estate of the sons of men b, ‖ that God might manifest them c, and that they might see that they themselves are beasts d.

‖ Or, that God might manifest them.

a And farther I considered with my self. b Concerning their condition and deportment in this present World. c God suffers these horrible Disorders among Men, expressed ver. 10. that he might discover men to themselves, and by permitting these Actions, shew what strange Creatures they are, and what vile hearts they have, which Men would not otherwise understand or believe. See 2 Kin. 8. 13, 14. d Heb. that they are Beasts to themselves, either 1. one to another, devouring and destroying one another. Or 2. in their own Judgment, or themselves being Judges; that although God made them Men or reasonable Creatures, yet they have made themselves Beasts by their brutish practices, and that Men, considered only with respect unto the present Life, which is the only thing valued and regarded by most Men, and the vanity whereof is the principal Subject of this Book, are as vain and miserable Creatures as the Beasts themselves, the great Differences between Men and Beasts being such as respect the other life. For Men seem here to be called Beasts in both these respects, and the latter he prosecutes more largely in the following Verses.

19 * For that which befalleth the sons of men, befalleth beasts e, even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other f; yea, they have all one † breath g, so that a man hath no preeminence above a beast: h: for all is vanity.

e They are subject to the same Diseases, Pains, and Casualties. f As certainly, and no less painfully. g One breath of Life, which is in their Nostrils; one and the same living Soul, by which the Beasts perform the same vital and animal Operations. For he speaks not here of Man's rational and immortal Spirit, nor of the future Life. h In respect of the present Life and sensible things. Nay the Beasts have quicker Senses than Men, and therefore enjoy more pleasure in those things, and that with less Dangers and Mischief than Men do.

20 All go unto one place i; * all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again k.

* Gen. 3. 19. Job 34. 15. Psal. 104. 29. Eccl. 12. 7.

i To the Earth, as it is expressed, ver. 21. out of which they were both taken. k Which is meant only of their Bodies, as it is explained, Eccles. 12. 7.

21 Who knoweth l the spirit † of man that † goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth.

† Heb. of the sons of men. † Heb. of the beast.

l It might be objected, that the Condition of Men and Beasts are vastly differing, because Man's Spirit goeth upward to God, Chap. 12. 7. but the Spirit of a Beast goeth downward together with its body, and perisheth with it. To this he answers, Who knoweth this? Which is not to be understood as if no Man did know it, or as if the thing were utterly uncertain and unknown, for he knew it, and positively affirms it, Chap. 12. 7. but that few know it; as the same manner of Expression is understood, Prov. 31. 10. Who can find? Isa. 53. 1. Who hath believed? &c. Which note the Scarcity or Difficulty, but not the Nullity or Impossibility of the thing. Besides, he seems here to speak not so much of a speculative, as of a practical Knowledge, as such words are most commonly used. Who considers or regards this, or layeth it to heart? True it is, there is such a difference, which also is known and believed by wise and good men: but the generality of Mankind never mind it: their Hearts are wholly set upon this life, and upon present and sensible things, and they place all their hopes and happiness in them, and take no thought nor care for the things of the future and invisible World. And as to them, with whom Solomon hath to do in this matter, the Argument is strong and good, being, as Logicians call it, an Argument to the Man; and there is no considerable difference between sensual men and beasts, because their affections are set upon the same Objects, and both of them are partakers of the same sensual satisfactions, and subject to the same sensual pains and miseries, and their hopes and felicity perish together, to wit, at death, and therefore such men are no more happy than the beasts that perish. Others understand it thus, Who knoweth this? to wit, by sense or experience; or meerly by his own reason, or without the help of Divine revelation. But, with the leave of so many worthy Interpreters, and with submission to better Judgments, the former seems to be the truer sense.

22 * Wherefore I perceive that there is nothing better m, than that a man should rejoyce in his own works n; for that is his portion o: for who shall bring him to see what shall be after him p?

* Ver. 12.

m To wit, for a Man's present satisfaction, and the happiness of this life. n That he comfortably enjoy what God hath given him, and not disquiet himself with cares about future Events. He seems to speak this, not in the Person of an Epicure, but as his own judgment, which also he declareth, Ch. 2. 24 & 5. 18, 19. & 8. 15. o This is the benefit of his labours: he hath no more than he useth, for what he leaveth behind him is not his, but another Man's. p When once he is dead he shall never return into this life to see into whose hands his Estate falls, and how it is either used or abused; nor is he at all concerned in those matters.

CHAP. IV.

The Vanity of Oppression, by reason of which the Dead and the Unborn are better than the Living, 1—3. Of Envy, Sloth, Quarrel, 4—6. Of Covetousness and Selfishness 7, 8. The Advantage of Society and Friendship, 9—12. The Poor better than foolish Kings, 13. He is advanced whilst one born King is made poor, 14. The People never contented, but rejoycing in Changes, 15, 16.

1 SO I returned, and considered a all the * oppressions that are done under the sun b; and behold the tears of such as were oppressed, and they had no comforter c: and on the † side of their oppressors there was power d, but they had no comforter e.

* Ch. 5. 8, &c.

a I considered again more seriously. b Whether by Supreme Magistrates or Judges, of which he spake, Ch. 3. 16. or by any other potent Persons. c None afforded them either pity or succour, either out of a selfish and barbarous disposition, or for fear of exposing themselves, thereby to the same injuries. d Both in themselves, and because most men were ready to joyn with the strongest and fisest side. So they were utterly unable to deliver themselves, and, as it follows, none else could or would do it. e Which is repeated as an Argument both of the great Inhumanity of Men towards others in Calamity, and of the extream misery of oppressed Persons.

Ps. 140. 4.

2 * Wherefore I praised f the dead which are already dead g, more than the living which are yet alive h.

* Job 3. 17, &c. Ch. 6. 3.

f I judged them more happy, or less miserable. Which he seems to deliver not only as the Judgment of the Flesh, or of the Sense, or of Men in Misery, as this is commonly understood, but as his own Judgment. For this is most true and certain, that setting aside the Advantage which this Life gives him for the Concerns of the future Life, which Solomon doth not meddle with in the present Debate; and considering the Uncertainty, and Vanity, and manifold Vexations of Mind, and outward Calamities of the present Life, a wise Man would not account it worth his while to live, and would choose Death rather than Life. g Those which are quite dead; who possibly are here opposed to them that in respect of their deplorable and desperate Condition, are even whilst they live, called dead men, Isa. 26. 19. and said to die daily, 1 Cor. 15. 31. h Which languish under their Pressures, of whom we can only say, as we use to speak of dying men, They are alive, and that is all.

3 * Yea, better is he than both they, which hath not yet been i, who hath not seen k the evil work that is done under the sun.

* Job 3. 11, 16, 21.

i Who was never born. How this is true, see on the foregoing verse. k i. e. Not felt: for as seeing good is put for enjoying it, Chap. 2. 24. so seeing evil is put for suffering it, as hath been more than once observed.

4 Again I considered all travel, and † every right work l, that † for this a man is envied of his neighbour m. This is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

† Heb. all the rightness of work. † Heb. this of a man from his Neighbour.

l All the worthy Designs and compleat Works of wise and virtuous Men. m Instead of that Honour and Recompence which he deserves, is the envy he meets with nothing but Envy and Obloquy, and many evil fruits thereof.

5 * The fool foldeth his hands together n, and eateth his own flesh o.

* Prov. 6. 10. and 24. 33.

n Is careless and idle, which is the signification of this Gesture, Prov. 6. 10. and 19. 24. and 26. 13. Perceiving that diligence is ascended with Envy, v. 4. he, like a Fool, runs into the other Extream. o Wasteth his Substance, and bringeth himself to Poverty, whereby his very Flesh pineth away for want of Bread, and he is reduced to Skin and Bone; and if he have any Flesh left, he is ready to eat it through extremity of Hunger.

6 * Better is an handful with quietness, than both the hands full with travel and vexation of spirit p.

* Prov. 15. 16, 17. and 16. 8.

p These are the words, either 1. of the Sluggard making this Apology for his Idleness, That his little with ease, is better than great Riches got with much trouble. Or 2. of Solomon, who elsewhere speaks to the same purpose, as Prov. 15. 16, 17. and 17. 1. and here proposeth it as a good Antidote against the Vanity of immoderate Cares and Labours for worldly Goods, against which he industriously directs his Speeches in divers places of this Book, and particularly as a seasonable Precaution against the Sin of Covetousness, of which he speaks in the following Passage.

7 Then I returned, and I saw vanity under the sun.

8 There is one alone q, and there is not a second; yea, he hath neither child nor brother r, yet is there no end of all his labour s; neither is his eye t satisfied with riches; * neither saith he u, For whom do I labour x, and bereave my soul of good y? This is also vanity; yea, it is a sore travel z.

* Ps. 39. 6

q Either 1. who lives by himself, as grudging that any other should partake of his Provisions. Or rather 2. who hath none but himself to care and labour for, as the next words explain it. r To whom he may leave his vast Estate. s He lives in perpetual Restlesness and excessive Toils. t i. e. His covetous Mind or Desire, fitly expressed by the Eye, partly because that is the Incentive of this Sin, Jos. 7. 21. and partly because he hath no good by his Riches, saving the beholding of them with his eyes, as it is affirmed Eccl. 5. 11. compared with 2. 10. 1 Job. 2. 16. u Within himself: he considers nothing but how he may get more and more. x Having no Posterity nor Kindred to enjoy it, as was now said. Shall I take all this pains for a Stranger, possibly for an Enemy, who will reap the fruit of all my labours? y Deny my self those Comforts and Conveniencies which God hath allowed unto me? z A dreadful Judgment and Misery as well as a great Sin.

9 Two a are better than one, because they have a good reward for their labour b.

a Who live together in any kind of Society, and joyn their Powers together in any Enterprizes. Which he opposeth to that Humour of the covetous Man who desired to live alone, as was now said. b Both have great benefit by such combinations and conjunctions of their Counsels and Abilities, whereby they do exceedingly support, and encourage, and strengthen one another, and effect many things which neither of them alone could do.

10 For if they c fall d, the one will lift up his e fellow: but wo to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up.

c One of them, the Plural being put for the Singular, as Jonah 1. 5. Matt. 21. 7. 1 Tim. 2. 15 Or, both of them successively. d In any kind, into any Mistakes and Errors, or Sins, or Dangers and Distresses. e Hold him up if he be falling, or raise him up if he be fallen.

11 Again, if two lie together, then they have heat f; but how can one be warm alone g?

f They will be sooner warm in a cold Bed, and cold Season. g Not so soon nor so throughly.

12 And if one prevail against him h, two shall withstand him; and a threefold cord is not quickly broken i.

h Against either of them. i If a Man have not only one, but two or more Friends, he is so much the safer and the happier.

13 Better k is a poor and a wise child l, than an old and foolish king m, † who will no more be admonished n.

† Heb. who knoweth not to be admonished.

k More happy. Now he proceeds to another Vanity, even that of Honour and Power, and of the highest places. l Who is doubly contemptible, both for his Age, and for his Poverty. m Venerable both for his Age and Gravity, and for his Royal Dignity. So that the Comparison is made with the greatest Disadvantage that may be. n Who hath neither Wisdom to govern himself, nor to receive the Counsels or Admonitions of wiser men, but is foolish, and wilful, and incorrigible.

14 For out of prison o he p cometh to reign q; whereas also he that is born in his kingdom r becometh poor s.

o Into which he was cast for his Poverty and Debt. p The poor and wise Child. q Is oft-times advanced by his wisdom to the highest Power and Dignity: which was the case of Joseph, and Mordecai, and many others. r That old King who was born of the Royal Race, and had possessed his Kingdom for a long time. s Is deprived of his Kingdom, either by the Rebellion of his Subjects provoked by his Folly, or by the Power of some other and wiser Prince.

15 I considered all the living t which walk under the sun u, with the second child x that shall stand up y in his stead.

t The general Disposition or Humour of common People in all Kingdoms, that they are fickle and unconstant, weary of their old Governours, and desirous of Changes. u This is a Periphrasis, or Description of living and mortal men, like that Eccles. 7. 11. that see the Sun. x These words may be joyned, either 1. with those which walk, or, that they walk under the Sun (i. e. upon the Earth) with the second Child, i. e. follow, and favour, and worship him as the rising Sun, upon whom the eyes and hopes of most People are fixed. Or 2. with the first words, I considered all the living which walk under the Sun, i. e. the temper of all Subjects or People, together with the condition of the second Child. Which may be understood, either 1. in general, of a King's Child, or Son and Heir, who is called Second, in respect of his Father, whose Successor he is to be. Or 2. that wise and poor Child mentioned ver. 13. who is said to come to Reign, ver. 14. and may well be called the Second to the old and foolish King who became poor, ver. 15. being deposed from his Kingdom, whom he succeeds, being put in his place either by the Humour of the People, or by some higher Power. y i. e. Arise to Reign, as that Phrase signifies, Dan. 8. 22, 23. and 11. 2, 3, 7, 20, 21.

16 There is no end of all the people z, even of all that have been before them ‖; they also that come after shall not * rejoyce in him †: Surely, this also is vanity and vexation of spirit.

* Ch. 2. 16.

z The Sense is either, 1. The People which have this Humour are without end, or innumerable, as this Phrase signifies, Job 22. 5. Isa. 2. 7. and 9. 6. Or 2. This Humour of the Common People hath no end, but passeth from one Generation to another; they ever were, and are, and will be unstable and restless, and given to change: which Sense the following words seem to favour. ‖ Either 1. before the two Kings abovementioned, the Father and the Son, or the Predecessor and Successor. All those who flood or desired to stand in their Presence, and waited upon them, as this Phrase is used, 2 Sam. 16. 19. 1 Kings 10. 8. Or rather 2. before the present Generation of Subjects who earnestly desired and promoted the Change of Government here expressed: for these are evidently opposed to them that come after, which all Interpreters understand of the People, not of the Kings. And so here are three Generations of People noted, the Authors of the present Change, and their Parents, and their Children, and all are observed to have the same Inclinations in these matters. † They shall be as weary of the Successor, though a wise and worthy Prince, as their Parents were of his foolish Predecessor. The reason whereof is partly from that itch of Novelty and Curiosity which is natural and common to Mankind, and partly from their vain and foolish hopes of Advantage from such Changes.

CHAP. V.

Vanities, in divine matters, 1—7. In murmuring and repining, 8. In Riches and Covetousness, 9. For Riches rob Men of Ease, 10, 11. Procure their Death, 13. Fly away, 14. Cannot be carried with them into the Grave, 15—17. a Contented Life best: Tis a the Gift of God, 18—20.

The seven first Verses of this Chapter are inserted partly as the only effectual Remedy against all the foregoing Vanities, and partly as a Caution to take heed of bringing Vanity into the Service of God, or of worshipping God vainly and foolishly.

1 KEep thy foot a when thou goest to the house of God b, and be more ready c to hear d, ‖ * than to give the sacrifice of fools e: for they consider not that they do evil f.

‖ Or, to hear

a The feet of thy Soul, which are the Thoughts and Affections, by which men go to God and walk or converse with him. Malè officiæ, straight steps. See that your Hearts be purged from sin, and prepared and furnished with all Graces or necessary qualifications, as good 15, 22. intention, reverence, humility, &c. It is a Metaphor from one that Psal. 50. walketh in a very slippery Path, in which there needs more than ordi- Prov. 15. nary care to keep him from falling. b The place of God's solemn and & 21. 27. publick worship, whether the Temple or Synagogue. c Heb. more near, more forward and inclinable. Prefer this duty before the following. d To hearken to and obey God's Word, there Read, and Preached by the Priests or Prophets; for hearing is very frequently put in Scriptures for obeying. e Such as foolish and wicked men use to offer, who vainly think to please God with the multitude and costlineſs of their Sacrifices without true Piety or Obedience. f They are not sensible of the great sinfulness of such Thoughts and Practices, but like Fools, think they do God good service; which is implied, as is usual in such expressions.

2 Be not rash with thy mouth g, and let not thine heart be hasty h to utter any ‖ thing before God i: for God is in heaven k, and thou upon earth l: therefore let thy words m * be few.

‖ Or, Word

* Prov. 10. 19.

g Speak not without good understanding and due consideration. h Do not give way to every sudden motion of thine Heart, nor suffer it to break out of thy Lips till thou hast well weighed it. i Either 1. in Prayers directed to him. Or, 2. in solemn Vows and Promises made in God's presence; which were very much in use in those times, and of which he speaks in the following Verses, where he presseth us to pay our Vows when we have made them, as here he seems to caution us in making them. k Is a God of infinite Majesty, not to be despised or abused; of infinite Holiness, not to be polluted or offended; of infinite Knowledge, observing all our words and carriages, not to be deceived. l Thou art a poor Earth-worm, infinitely below him, and therefore shouldest stand in awe of him and fear to offend him. m Either 1. In Prayer. Use not vain repetitions, nor multitude of words in Prayer, as if they were necessary to inform God of thy state, or to prevail with God to grant thy requests, or as if thou shouldest certainly be heard upon that very account, as Christ also cautions us Mat. 6. 7. For otherwise it is not unlawful, nay sometimes it is a duty, to use long Prayers and consequently many words, and to repeat the same words in Prayer, as is manifest from Nehem. 9. 3. Dan. 9. 18, 19. Mat. 26. 44. Luke 6. 12. and many other places. Or, 2. in vowing. Be not too prodigal in making more Vows and Promises than thou art either able or willing and resolved to perform, remembring that God looks down from Heaven, and heareth all thy Vows, and expects a punctual accomplishment of them. Compare the Notes on v. 3.

3 For a dream cometh through the multitude of business n, and a * fools voice is known o by multitude of words p.

* Prov. 10. 19.

n When mens Minds are distracted and oppressed with too much business in the Day, they dream of it in the Night. o It discovers the Man to be a foolish and rash, and inconsiderate Man. p Either 1. in Prayer. Or, 2 in Vowing, i. e. by making many rash Vows, of which he speaks in v. 4, 5, 6. and then returns to the mention of multitude of dreams and many words, v. 7. which Verse may be a Comment upon this, and which makes it probable that both that and this Verse are to be understood of Vows rather than of Prayers.

4 * When thou vowest a vow q unto God, defer not to pay it r: for he hath no pleasure in fools s; * pay that which thou hast vowed.

* Deut. 23. 21, 22. Psal. 50. 14. * Pſ. 66. 13, 14

q Which is a solemn Promise whereby a Man binds himself to do something which is in his power to do. r Perform it whilst the sense of thine Obligation is fresh and strong upon thee, lest either thou seem to repent of thy Promises, or lest delays end in denials and resolutions of Non-performance. See Numb. 30. 2. Deut. 23. 21. Psal. 66. 13, 14. & 76. 11. s In hypocritical and perfidious Persons, who, when they are in distress, make liberal Vows, and when the danger is past, neglect and break them: whom he calls fools, partly because it is the highest folly to despise and provoke, to think to mock mock and deceive, the All-seeing and Almighty God; and partly in opposition to the contrary Opinion of such Persons, who think they deal wisely and cunningly in serving themselves of God, by getting the advantage or deliverance which they desire by making such Vows, and yet avoiding the inconvenience and charge of payment, when once the work is done, whereas nothing is more impious or ridiculous than such an imagination.

5 Better is it that thou shouldst not vow, than that thou shouldst vow and not pay.

s For this was no sin; because men are free to make such Vows, or not to make them, as they think fit. See Numb. 30. 3, &c. Deut. 23. 22. Act. 5. 4. But having vowed we cannot forbear payment of them without sin.

6 Suffer not thy mouth t to cause thy flesh u to sin; neither say thou before the angel x, that it was an error y: wherefore should God be angry z at thy voice a, and destroy the work of thine hands b?

t By uttering any rash or foolish Vow. u i. e. Thy self, the word Flesh being oft put for the whole Man, as Gen. 6. 12. Isa. 40. 5. Rom. 3. 20, &c. And it seems to have some Emphasis here, and to intimate, either 1. that such Vows were made upon fleshly or carnal, and not upon spiritual and religious Motives. Or rather 2. that the Flesh or corrupt Nature of Man, which is oft called Flesh, was exceeding prone to set it self at ease and liberty from such Bonds, and to neglect the chargeable Duties of Religion. x Either 1. The blessed Angels, the Singular Number being put for the Plural, who are present in the publick Assemblies, in which these Vows were generally paid, Psal. 66. 13. where they observe both the matter and manner of mens religious performances as appears from 1 Cor. 11. 10. who as they rejoice in the conversion of a sinner, Luke 15. 10. So are displeased with the sins of men, and especially such as are committed in or against the Worship of God. Or 2. Christ, who in the Old Testament is frequently called an Angel, as hath been oft noted before, and the Angel of the Covenant, Mal. 3. 1. because even then he acted as God's Messenger, appearing and speaking to the Patriarchs and Prophets in his Father's Name, as a prefiguration of his future Incarnation; and who is, and was in a special manner present in all Religious Assemblies, and being Omnisicient and Omnipresent, exactly knew and observed all the Vows which men made, and whether they did perform or violate them. Or rather 3. the Priest or Minister of Holy things, who was to require of the People the payment of their Vows, to whom all Sacrifices for sins of ignorance or errors about Vows or other things were to be brought, Lev. 5. 4, 5. For such Persons are oft called Angels, or, as this Hebrew word is commonly rendered, Messengers, as Job 33. 23. Mal. 2. 7. Revel. 1. 20. And this Title seems to be given to the Priest here, not without some Emphasis, because the Vow made to God was paid to the Priest as one standing and acting in God's Name and Stead, and it belonged to the Priest, as God's Angel or Ambassador, to discharge Persons from their Vows when there was just occasion so to do. y I did foolishly and unadvisedly in making such a Vow, and therefore I hope God will excuse me, and instead of that which I had vowed, accept of a Sacrifice for my ignorance, according to his Law for sins of ignorance, Levit. 4. 2. & 5. 15. Numb. 15. 26. z Why will thou provoke God to anger? a Either 1. at the Vows which thou hast hastily uttered with thy Mouth, as he said above. Or rather 2. at these frivolous excuses, wherewith thou deludest thy own Conscience and vainly imaginest that thou canst deceive God himself. b Blast all thy Contrivances, and Labours, and Estate gotten by thy Labours, and particularly that work or enterprize for the success whereof thou didst make these Vows, which being, as thou thinkest, finished, thou refusest to pay thy Vows; but know that God can quickly undo that which thou hast done, and plentifully repay thine indignities and injuries offered to him into thine own Bosom.

7 For in the multitude of dreams and many words, there are also divers vanities c: but fear thou God d.

c There is a great deal of vanity and folly, as in multitude of dreams which for the most part are vain & insignificant, so also in many words, i. e. in making many vows whereby a Man is exposed to many snares and temptations. d Fear the offence and wrath of God, and therefore be sparing in making Vows, and just in performing them. Whereby he implies that this rashness in vowing, and slackness in performing Vows proceeds from the want of a just reverence and dread of the Divine Majesty, who is immediately concerned in these matters.

8 If thou seest the oppression of the poor e, and violent perverting of judgment and justice in a province, marvel not f † at the matter: for he that is higher than the highest g regardeth h, and there be higher than they i.

† Heb. at the matter, that, &c.

e Here is an account of another vanity, and a sovereign Antidote against it. f As if it were inconsistent with God's Wisdom, and Justice, and Truth, to suffer such disorders, or a just cause for any Man to throw off that fear and service of God, which I have now commended to thee. g The most High God who is infinitely above the greatest of men, and therefore, if he saw meet, could crosh them in an instant. h Not like an idle spectator, but like a Judge, who diligently observes and records all these miscarriages, and will so effectually punish them, that neither they shall have any cause of triumph in their former successes, nor good men to be grieved at the remembrance of them. i Either 1. the high and holy Angels, who are employed by God in the Government of Kings and Kingdoms, as we read in the Book of Daniel, and elsewhere, and for the defence of God's People, Psal. 34. 7. & 91. 11. Heb. 1. 14. Or 2 God: and so it is an Emphatical repetition of the same thing, which is frequent in Scripture, there is an higher than they. Or, as the words are by others fitly rendred, the most High (for Plural words are oft understood of God singularly) is above them, and therefore can controul them, and will certainly call them to an account.

9 Moreover, the profit of the earth k is for all l: the king himself is served by the field m.

k The fruits proceeding from the Earth by the skil and labour of the Husbandman. l Are necessary and beneficial to all men whatsoever. The Wise Man, after some Interruption, returns to his former subject, to discourse of the vanity of great Riches, one argument or evidence whereof he seems to mention in this Verse, to wit, that the poor Labourer enjoyeth the fruits of the Earth as well as the greatest Monarch, and that the richest Man in the World depends as much upon them as the poorest. m Is supported by the Fruits of the Field, Or, as many others render it, serves or is a servant to the Field, depends upon it, is obliged to see that his Fields be tilled and dressed that he may have subsistance for himself, and for his Servants and Subjects.

10 He that loveth silver, shall not be satisfied with silver n; nor he that loveth abundance o with increase: this is also vanity.

n The greatest Treasures of Silver do not satisfie the covetous possessor of it, partly because his mind is insatiable and his desires are increased by and with gains; partly because Silver of it self cannot satisfie his Natural desires and necessities as the Fruits of the Field can do, and the miserable Wretch grudgeth to part with his Silver, though it be to purchase things needful and convenient for him. i Or, that loveth it (to wit, Silver) in abundance, that desires and lays up great Treasures.

11 When goods increase, they are increased that eat them p: and what good is there to the owners thereof q, saving the beholding of them with their eyes r?

p They require and are more commonly attended with a numerous company of Servants, and Friends, and Retinues to consume them; which is a great torment to a covetous Man, of whom he here speaks. q What benefit hath he above others who feed upon his Provisions, and enjoy the same comforts which he doth without his fears and cares, and troubles about them? r Either 1. with a reflection upon his Propriety in them. Or, 2 with unlimited freedom. He can go and look upon his Bags or Chests of Silver as long and as oft as he pleaseth, whereas other men are seldom admitted to that prospect, and see only some few of the fruits or purchases of it.

12 The sleep of a labouring man is sweet s, whether he eat little † or much u: but the † abundance x of the rich will not suffer him to sleep.

† Heb. satiety, or, fulness.

s Because he is free from those cares and fears, wherewith the minds of rich men are oft distracted, and their sleep disturbed. t Then his weariness disposeth him to sleep. u In which case his healthful Constitution and laborious course of life prevents those crudities and indigestions which oft-times break the sleep of rich men. x Heb. the fulness either 1. of his Diet, which commonly disposeth their stomachs and hinders their rest: Or, 2 of Wealth; which is commonly attended with many perplexing cares which disquiet men both by ay and by Night. The Hebrew word is used in Scripture both ways, and possibly it is thus generally expressed to include both significations.

13 There is a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt y.

y Because they frequently are the instruments and occasions both of their present and eternal destruction, as they feed their Pride or Luxury, or other hurtful Lusts which waste the Body, and shorten the Life, and damn the Soul; and as they are great temptations to Tyrants or Thieves, yea sometimes to Relations or Servants, or others, to take away their lives that they may get their Riches.

14 But z those riches perish a by evil travel b, and he begetteth a son, and there is nothing in his hand c.

z Or, For: or, Or; or, Moreover: For this Particle is so rendred by divers others both here and in other places of Scripture. a If they be kept, it is to the owners hurt, and if not, they are lost to his grief. b By some wicked practices, either his own, or of other men; or by some secret hand of God cursing all his Enterprizes. c Either 1. In the Father's power to leave to his Son, for whose sake he underwent all those hard labours; which is a great aggravation of his grief and misery. Or, 2. In the Sons possession after his Fathers death.

15 * As he came forth of his mothers womb, naked * Job 1. 21. shall he return to go d as he came, and shall take no- Pſal 49. 17. thing of his labour, which he may carry away in his 1 Tim. 6. 7. hand e.

d Into the womb or belly of the Earth, the common Mother of all Mankind. See the Notes on Job 1. 21. Eccles. 12. 7. And return to go, is put for return and go; and going is here put for dying as Job 16. 22. Psal. 39. 13. e This is another vanity. If his Estate be neither lost, nor kept to his hurt, but enjoyed by him with safety and comfort all his days, yet when he dies he must leave it behind him, and cannot carry one handful of it with him into another World.

16 And this also is a sore evil, that in all points as he came, so shall he go: and * what profit hath he that hath laboured for the wind f? * Chap. 1. 3.

f Which I have last mentioned and shall now repeat. g For Riches, which are empty and unsatisfying, uncertain and transitory, fleeing away swiftly and strongly, Prov. 23. 5. which to Man can hold or stay in its course, all which are the properties of the Wind. Compare Prov. 11. 29. Hos. 12. 1.

17 All his days h also he eateth in darkness i, and he hath much sorrow, and wrath with his sickness k.

h To wit, of his life. i He hath no comfort in his Estate, but even when he Eats, when other men relax their Minds, and use freedom and chearfulness, he doth it with anxiety and discontent, as grudging even at his own necessary expences, and tormenting himself with cares about getting, and disposing, and keeping his Estate. k When he falls sick, and presageth or feareth his Death, he is filled with rage, because he is cut off before he hath accomplished his designs, and because he must leave that Wealth and World in which all his hopes and happiness lies, and must go to give up a doleful account to his Judge of all his actions and acquisitions.

18 Behold that which I have ſeen l: * † it is good and comely m for one to eat and to drink, and to enjoy the good of all his labour that he taketh under the ſun, † all the days of his life, which God giveth him *: for it is his portion n.

l i. e. Learned by ſtudy and experience m Good or comfortable to Man's ſelf, and Comely or Amiable in the Eyes of other men, as penuriouſneſs is baſe and diſhonourable. n To wit, of worldly goods: for he hath another and a better portion in Heaven. This liberty is given to him by God, and this is the beſt advantage, as to this life, which he can make of them.

19 * Every man alſo to whom God hath given riches and wealth, and hath given him power o to eat thereof, and to take his portion p, and to rejoice in his labour, this is the gift of God.

o Heb. hath given him the dominion; who is the Lord and Maſter of his Eſtate, not a Slave to it. Of this and the former Verſe ſee the Notes on Eccleſ. 2. 24. & 3. 12, 13. p To his own uſe, to uſe what God hath given him.

‖ Or, though he give not much, yet he remembreth, &c.

20 ‖ For he ſhall not much remember q the days r of his life: becauſe God anſwereth him s in the joy of his heart t.

q So as to diſquiet or vex himſelf therewith, r Either 1. the troubles; days being here put for evil or ſad days, by an uſual Synecdoche, as Job 18. 20. Pſal. 137. 7. Obad. v. 12. Mic. 7. 4. Or, 2. the time in general; which is irkſom and tedious to men oppreſſed with diſcontent or miſery, who uſually reckon every Hour or Minute that paſſeth, and have their Minds and Thoughts conſtantly fixed upon the vanity and uncertainty of this life, upon the afflictions which they have already endured, and may further expect; whereas to men of contented, and chearful minds the time is ſhort and ſweet, and paſſeth over them before they are aware of it, and they enjoy their preſent comforts without perplexing themſelves about former or future events. s Anſwereth, either 1. his labours with ſucceſs, as Money is ſaid to anſwer all things, Eccleſ. 10. 19. becauſe it is equivalent to all, and able to purchaſe all things. Or, 2. his deſires. t In giving him that ſolid joy and comfort of his labours which his Heart expected and deſired.

CHAP. VI.

The vanity of Riches without uſe, 1, 2. Of Children and Old age without competent wealth: their obſcurity is worſe than not to have been, 3—6. All labour is for neceſſaries of Life, which one getteth as at well as another, 7, 8. It is good for us to enjoy what we have; and not to deſire what we have not: for our portion is appointed us: and we our ſelves are vain: and other things do but increaſe our Vanity, 9—12.

1 THere is an evil which I have ſeen under the ſun, and it is common among men:

2 A man to whom God hath given riches, wealth a, and honour *, ſo that he wanteth nothing for his ſoul of all that he deſireth b, yet God giveth him not power to eat c thereof d, but a ſtranger eateth it: this is vanity, and it is an evil diſeaſe.

* Job 21. 10. Pſal. 17. 14. & 73. 7.

a All ſorts of Riches, as Gold and Silver, Cattel and Lands, &c. b Which he doth, or can reaſonably deſire. c Either becauſe they are ſuddenly taken away from him by the Hand and Curſe of God, and given to others: or becauſe God gives him up to a baſe & covetous mind, which is both a ſin and a plague d i. e. Any conſiderable part of it; whereas the Stranger eateth not thereof, but it, i. e. all of it; devoureth it all in an inſtant.

3 If a man beget an hundred Children e, and live many years f, ſo that the days g of his years be many, and his ſoul be not filled with good h, and * alſo that he have no burial i, I ſay, that an * untimely birth k is better than he.

* Iſa. 14. 19, 20. Jer. 22. 19.

* Job 3, 16. Pſal. 58. 8

e i. e. Very many Children, to whom he intends to leave his Eſtate. f Which is the chief thing that he deſires, and which giveth him opportunity of increaſing his Eſtate vaſtly. g He ſaith days, becauſe the Years of mens life are but few. h Hath not a contented mind and comfortable enjoyment of his Eſtate whilſt he lives. i And if after his Death he hath either none, or a mean and diſhonourable Burial, becauſe his ſordid and covetous carriage made him hateful and contemptible to all Perſons, his Children and Heirs not excepted, and he was by all ſorts of men thought unworthy of any teſtimonies of Honour, either in his Life or after his Death. Thus he deſcribes a Man who lives miſerably, and dies ignominiouſly. k Which as it never enjoyed the comforts, ſo it never felt the calamities of this life, which are far more conſiderable than its comforts, at leaſt to a Man that denied himſelf the comforts, and plunged himſelf into the toils and vexations of this life.

4 For I he m cometh in n with vanity o, and departeth in darkneſs p, and his name ſhall be covered with darkneſs q.

l Or rather, although, as this Particle is frequently rendred. For this Verſe ſeems to contain not ſo much a reaſon of what he laſt ſaid, that an untimely Birth is better than he, as an anſwer to an exception which might be made againſt it. Although all that is here ſaid be true of the Abortive, yet it is better than he. m Either 1. the covetous Man. Or rather 2. the abortive; of whom alone, and not of the former, that paſſage is true, He hath not ſeen the Sun, v. 5. n Into the World; this word being oft put for a Man's being Born, as Job 1. 21, Eccleſ. 5. 15. o Or, in vain, to no purpoſe; without any comfort or benefit by it, which alſo is in a great meaſure the caſe of the covetous wretch. p Dieth obſcurely without any obſervation or regard of men. q Shall be ſpeedily and utterly forgotten; whereas the Name of ſuch wicked men ſhall rot, and be remembred to their ſhame.

5 Moreover, he hath not ſeen the ſun r, nor known any thing s: this hath more reſt t than the other.

r He never beheld the light, and therefore it is not grievous to him to want it, whereas the covetous Man ſaw that light was very pleaſant, and therefore the loſs of it was irkſom to him. s Hath had no knowledge, ſenſe or experience of any thing whether good or evil. t Becauſe he is perfectly free from all thoſe incumbrances and vexations to which the covetous Man is long expoſed.

6 Yea, though he live a thouſand years twice told u; yet hath he ſeen no good x: do not all y go to one place z?

u Wherein he ſeems to have a privilege above an untimely birth. x He hath enjoyed little or no comfort in it, and therefore long life is rather a curſe and miſchief, than a bleſſing or advantage to him. y Whether Born out of and before their time, or in due time, whether their lives be long or ſhort. z To the Grave. And ſo after a little time all are alike as to this life, of which he here ſpeaks, and as to the other life his condition is infinitely worſe than that of an untimely birth.

7 * All the labour of man is for his mouth a, and yet the † appetite is not filled b.

* Prov. 16. † Heb. ſoul.

a For Meat to put into his Mouth, that he may get food; and as Bread is oft put for all food, ſo food is put for all neceſſary Proviſions for this life, as Prov. 30. 8. and elſewhere, whereof this is the chief, for which a Man will ſell his Houſe and Lands, yea the very Garments upon his back. b Although all that a Man can get by his labours is but neceſſary food, which the meaneſt ſort of men commonly enjoy, as is obſerved in the next Verſe, yet ſuch is the vanity of this World and the folly of Mankind, that men are inſatiable in their deſires, and reſtleſs in their endeavours, after more and more, and never ſay, they have enough.

8 For what hath the wiſe more than the fool c? what hath the poor, that knoweth to walk before the living d?

† Heb. the walking of the ſoul.

c To wit, in theſe matters. Both are equally ſubject to the ſame calamities, and partakers of the ſame comforts of this Life. d To wit, before the poor that doth not know this? Which words are eaſily anderſtood by comparing this clauſe with the former. And ſuch defects are uſual both in Scripture and other Authors, as hath been formerly noted, by a Figure which the Learned call Anantapodoton. And by this Phraſe, that knoweth, &c. he means ſuch a poor Man who is ingenious and induſtrious; who is fit for ſervice and buſineſs, and knows how to carry himſelf towards rich men, ſo as to deſerve and gain their favour, and to procure a livelihood.

9 Better is the ſight of the eyes e † than the wandring of the deſire f: This g is alſo vanity, and vexation of Spirit h.

† Heb. the walking of the ſoul.

e i. e. The comfortable enjoyment of what a man hath: for ſeeing is oft put for enjoying, as Pſal 34. 12. Eccleſ. 2. 1. & 3. 13. &c. f Reſtleſs and inſatiable Deſires of what a man hath not, wherewith covetous rich men are perpetually haunted and tormented. g This wandring of the deſire wherein moſt men indulge themſelves. h Is not the way to ſatisfaction, as they imagine, but to vexation.

10 That which hath been is named already b, and it is known that it is man i: neither may he contend with him that is mightier than he k.

b This verſe is added either as a proof of what he laſt ſaid concerning the vanity and wandring of inſatiable deſires; or as a further inſtance of the vanity of all things in this Life. That which hath been (or, is, for the Hebrew verb may be rendred either way, to wit, Man conſidered with all his endowments and enjoyments, whether he be wiſe or fooliſh, rich or poor, Man, who is the chief of all viſible and ſublunary beings, for whom they all were made) is named already, to wit, by God, who, preſently after his Creation, gave him the following name, to ſignifie what his nature and condition was or would be. Heb. What is that which hath been, or is, it is, or hath been named already. Others underſtand it thus, All the ſeveral conditions which men have had or ſhall have in the World, Riches or Poverty, &c. are already named, i. e. appointed or determined by God's unchangeable Council, and invincible Providence: But though this be true, it ſeems not to ſuit ſo well with the following clauſe, as the other Interpretation doth. i This is certain and manifeſt, that that being, which makes all this noiſe and ſtir in the world, howſoever magnified by themſelves, and ſometimes adored by flatterers, and howſoever differenced from, or advanced above others, by Wiſdom or Riches, or the like, is but a Man, i. e. a mean, earthly mortal and miſerable Creature, as his very name ſignifies, which God gave him for this very end, that he might be always ſenſible of his vain, and baſe, and miſerable eſtate in this world, and therefore never expect ſatisfaction or happineſs in it. k i. e. With Almighty God, with whom Men are very apt to contend upon every ſlight occaſion, and againſt whom they are ready to murmur for this Vanity, and Mortality, and Miſery of Mankind, although they brought it upon themſelves by their own ſins. So this is ſeaſonably added to prevent the abuſe of the foregoing paſſage.

11 Seeing there be many things that increaſe vanity l, what is man the better m?

l This ſeems to be added as a concluſion of the Diſputation managed in all the foregoing Chapters, ſeeing not only Man is a vain Creature in himſelf, as hath been now ſaid, but there are alſo many other things in the world, which inſtead of removing or diminiſhing, as might be expected, do but increaſe this vanity, as Wiſdom, Pleaſure, Power, Wealth, and the like, the vanity of all which hath been fully and particularly declared. Seeing even the good things of this Life bring ſo much Toil, and Cares, and Fears, &c. with them. m To wit, by all that he can either deſire or enjoy here. Hence it is evident, that all theſe things cannot make him happy, but that he muſt ſeek for happineſs elſewhere.

12 For who knoweth what is good for man n in this † life, † all the days of his vain life o which he ſpendeth as a ſhadow p? for who can tell a man what ſhall be after him under the ſun q?

* Job 8. 9. & 14. 2. & 47. 13. Pſal. 39. 6. & 144. 4.

n No man certainly knows what is beſt for him here, whether to be high or low, rich or poor, becauſe thoſe great things which men generally deſire and purſue, are very frequently the occaſions of Mens utter Ruin, as hath been noted again and again in this Book. o Life it ſelf, which is the foundation of all mens Comforts and Enjoyments here, is a vain, and uncertain, and tranſitory thing, and therefore all things which depend upon it muſt needs be ſo too. p Which, whilſt it abides, hath nothing real, and ſolid, or ſubſtantial in it, and doth ſpeedily paſs away, and leaves no ſign behind it. q And as no man can be happy with theſe things whileſt he liveth and enjoyeth them, ſo he can have no content in leaving them to others, becauſe he knoweth not either who ſhall poſſeſs them, or how the future owners will uſe or abuſe them, or what miſchief they may do by them either to others, or even to themſelves.

CHAP. VII.

A good name deſirable: and the Houſe of Mourning and Rebuke better than Songs and Laughter, 1—6. Exhortations to Patience and Perſeverance, 7—10. Wiſdom and Money a Defence, 11, 12. God's Providence ſhould render us contented; our duty both in Proſperity and Adverſity, 13, 14. Prudence and the fear of God neceſſary in this World, 15—18. The praiſe of Wiſdom, 19. All men are Sinners, 20. Other men's Opinions of thee not to much to be minded: The motive thereto, 21, 22. The Preacher's experience thereof, 23—25. An Evil Woman more bitter than Death, 26—28. God created man good, 29.

Having largely diſcourſed of the vanity of all worldly things, and having now ſaid in the foregoing verſe, that no man knew what was beſt for him, he now proceeds to preſcribe ſome Remedies againſt theſe Vanities, and to direct men to the right method of obtaining that felicity which is not to be expected or found in this World.

1 A * Good name a is better than precious Ointment b: and the day of death c, than the day of ones birth.

* Eccleſ. 12. 1. Cant. 1. 3.

a A good and well grounded report from wiſe and worthy perſons. Heb. A name, which is put for a good name by a Synecdoche, that only being worthy to be called a name, becauſe evil and worthleſs men quickly loſe their Name and Memory. Thus a Wife is put for a good Wife, Prov. 18. 22 and a day for a good day, Luk. 19. 41, 44. b Which was very fragrant, and acceptable, and uſeful, and of great price, eſpecially in thoſe Countries. See Deut. 33. 24. Pſal. 92. 10. and 133. 2. Iſa. 39. 2. c To wit, of a good man, or one who hath left a good Name behind him, which is eaſily underſtood both from the former clauſe, and from the nature of the thing; for to a wicked man this day is far worſe, and moſt terrible. Yet if this paſſage be delivered with reſpect only to this Life, and abſtracting from the future Life, as many other paſſages in this Book are to be underſtood, then this may be true in general of all men, and is the conſequent of all the former diſcourſe. Seeing this Life is ſo full of Vanity, and Vexation, and Miſery, it is a more deſirable thing for a man to go out of it, than to come into it. Which is the more conſiderable note, becauſe it is contrary to the Opinion and Practice of almoſt all Mankind, to celebrate their own or Childrens Birth-days with ſolemn Feaſts and Rejoicings, and their deaths with all expreſſions of ſorrow.

2 It is better to go to the houſe of mourning d, than to go to the houſe of feaſting: for that e is the end of all men f, and the living will lay it to his heart g.

d Where Mourners meet together to celebrate the Funerals of a deceaſed Friend. e To wit, death, the cauſe of that mourning. f It brings men to the ſerious conſideration of their laſt end, which is their greateſt Wiſdom and Intereſt. g Will be ſeriouſly affected with it, and awakened to prepare for it; whereas feaſting is commonly attended with Mirth, and Levity, and manifold Temptations, and indiſpoſeth mens minds to Spiritual and Heavenly Thoughts. Hence it is evident that thoſe paſſages of this Book which may ſeem to favour a ſenſual and voluptuous Life, are not ſpoken by Solomon in his own Name, or as his Opinion, but in the perſon of an Epicure.

3 ‖ Sorrow h is better than laughter: for by the ſadneſs of the countenance i the heart is made better k.

‖ Or, As good as an Inheritance, yea, better too.

h Either for ſin, or any outward troubles. i Which is ſeated in the heart, but manifeſted in the Countenance. k More weaned from the Luſts and Vanities of this World, by which moſt men are enfnared and deſtroyed, and more quickned to ſeek after, and embrace that true and everlaſting Happineſs which God offers to them in his Word.

4 The heart of the wiſe is in the houſe of mourning l; but the heart of fools is in the houſe of mirth m.

l Even when their bodies are abſent. They are conſtantly, or very frequently meditating upon ſad and ſerious things, ſuch as Death and Judgment, the Vanity of this Life, and the reality and eternity of the next; becauſe they know that theſe thoughts, though they be not grateful to the ſenſual part, yet they are abſolutely neceſſary, and highly profitable, and moſt comfortable in the end, which every wiſe man moſt regards. m Their minds and affections are wholly ſet upon feaſting, and jollity, becauſe, like Fools and brutiſh Creatures, they regard only their preſent delight, and mind not how dearly they muſt pay for them.

5 * It is better to hear the rebuke of the wiſe n, than for a man to hear the ſong o of fools.

* Prov. 13. 18. & 15. 31. & 29. 1. See Pſal. 141. 5.

n Which though it cauſeth ſome grief, yet frequently brings great benefit, even Reformation and Salvation, both from temporal and from eternal Deſtruction, both which are the portion of impenitent Sinners. o The flatteries, or other merry diſcourſes, which are as pleaſant to corrupt Nature, as Songs or Muſick.

6 For as the † crackling of thorns p under a pot, ſo q is the laughter of the fool: this alſo is vanity.

† Heb. a ſound.

p Which for a time make a great noiſe and blaze, but preſently waſt themſelves, and go out without any conſiderable effect upon the meat in the pot. q So vaniſhing and fruitleſs.

7 Surely oppreſſion r maketh a wiſe man mad, * and a gift s deſtroyeth the heart t.

* Deut. 16. 19.

r Either 1. Active. When a wiſe Man falls into the practice of this ſin of oppreſſing others, he is beſotted by it, and the very wiſe Riches which he by his great wit gets by it. Or rather 2. Paſſive, when a wiſe man is oppreſſed by fooliſh and wicked men, it makes him fret and rage, and ſpeak or act like a mad man; for the wiſeſt men are moſt ſenſible of indignities and injuries, whereas fools are ſtupid, and do not much lay them to heart. s A bribe given to a wiſe man. t Deprives him of the uſe of his underſtanding, which is oft called the heart, as Exod. 23. 8. Deut. 16. 19. Hoſ. 4. 18. or makes him mad, as was ſaid in the former clauſe. So this Verſe diſcovers two ways whereby a wiſe man may be made mad, by ſuffering oppreſſion from others, or by receiving bribes to oppreſs others. And this alſo is an argument of the vanity of worldly Wiſdom, that it is ſo eaſily corrupted and loſt, and ſo it ſerves the main deſign of this Book.

8 Better is the end of a thing, than the beginning thereof u: and * the patient in ſpirit x is better than the proud y in ſpirit.

* Pro. 14. 29.

u If this verſe relates to that next foregoing, it is an Argument to keep mens minds from being diſordered, either by oppreſſion or bribery, becauſe the end of thoſe practices will ſhew, that he who oppreſſeth another, doth himſelf moſt hurt by it, and that he who taketh Brib-s is no gainer by them. But if this be independent upon the former, as divers other verſes here are, it is a general and uſeful obſervation, that the good or evil of things is better known by their end, than by their beginning; which is true both in evil Counſels and Courſes, which are pleaſant at firſt, but at laſt bring deſtruction; and in all noble Enterprizes, in the ſtudies of Learning, and in the practice of Virtue and Godlineſs, where the beginnings are difficult and troubleſom, but in the progreſs and concluſion they are moſt eaſie and comfortable; and it is not ſufficient to begin well, unleſs we perſevere to the end, which crowns all. x Who quietly waits for the end and iſſue of things, and is willing to bear hardſhips and inconveniences in the mean time. y Which he puts inſtead of haſty or impatient, which the oppoſition might ſeem to require, partly becauſe Pride is the chief cauſe of impatience, Prov. 13. 10. and makes men unable to bear any thing, either from God or from Men, whereas Humility makes Men ſenſible of their own unworthineſs, and that they deſerve, at leaſt from God, all the indignities and injuries which they ſuffer from Men by God's permiſſion, and therefore patient under them; and partly to correct the vulgar error of proud men, who think highly of themſelves, and trample all others, eſpecially ſuch as are meek and patient, under their feet.

9 * Be not haſty in thy ſpirit to be angry z: for anger reſteth a in the boſom b of fools.

* Prov. 14. 17.

z Be not angry with any man without due conſideration, and juſt & 16. 32. and neceſſary cauſe; for otherwiſe anger is ſometimes lawful, and ſometimes a duty. a Hath its ſettled and quiet abode, is their conſtant companion, ever at hand upon all occaſions, whereas wiſe Men reſiſt, and mortifie, and baniſh it. b In the Heart, the proper ſeat of the paſſions.

10 Say not thou c, What is the cauſe that the former days were better d than theſe? for thou doſt not enquire † wiſely concerning this e.

† Heb. out of Wiſdom.

c To wit, by way of impatient Expoſtulation and Complaint againſt God, either for permitting ſuch diſorders in the World, or for bringing thee into the World in ſuch an evil time and ſtate of things. Otherwiſe, a man may ſay this by way of prudent and pious enquiry, that by ſearching out the cauſe, he may, as far as it is in his power, apply Remedies to make them better. d Either 1. Leſs ſinful. Or rather 2. More quiet and comfortable. For this, and not the former, is the cauſe of moſt Mens murmurings againſt Gods Providence. And this is an Argument of a mind diſcontented and unthankful for the many Mercies, which Men commonly enjoy even in evil times, and impatient under Gods hand. e This Queſtion ſheweth thy great folly in contending with thy Creator, and the Sovereign Lord and Governour of all things, in oppoſing thy ſhallow wit to his unſearchable Wiſdom, and thy Will to his Will.

11 Wiſdom ‖ is good f, with an inheritance: and by it there is profit g to them that ſee the ſun h.

‖ Or, As good as an Inheritance, yea, better too.

f i. e. Very good; the Poſitive being put for the Superlative, as it is frequently in the Hebrew Text. When Wiſdom and Riches meet in one man, it is an happy conjunction; for Wiſdom without Riches is commonly contemned, Eccleſ. 9. 16. and wants opportunities and inſtruments of diſcovering it ſelf, and of doing that good in the World which it is both able and willing to do; and Riches without Wiſdom are like a Sword in a mad Mans Hand, an occaſion of much ſin and miſchief, both to himſelf and others. g By Wiſdom joined with Riches there comes great benefit. Heb. and it is an excellency, or privilege, or advantage. h i. e. To mortal men, not only to a Mans ſelf, but many others who live with him in this World. Whereby alſo he intimates that Riches bear no price, and have no uſe in the other World.

12 For wiſdom is a † defence i, and money is a defence: but the excellency of knowledg is, that wiſdom giveth life to them that have it k.

i Heb. in a ſhadow; which in Scripture uſe notes both Protection and Refreſhment. And thus far Wiſdom and Money agree. k But herein Knowledg or Wiſdom (which commonly ſignifie the ſame thing) excels Riches, that whereas Riches frequently expoſe Men to death or deſtruction, true Wiſdom doth oft times preſerve a man from temporal, and always from eternal Ruin.

13 Consider the work l of God; for * who can make ‖ that streight which he hath made crooked m?

*Ch. 1.15. See Job 14. 4.

‖ Or, him, so Gr.

l Not of Creation, but of Providence; his wise, and just, and powerful Government of all Events in the World, which is propofed as the last and best Remedy against all murmurings and sinful disquietments of mind, under the sense of the great and many disorders which happen in the World, as is implied, v. 10. against which Wisdom is prescribed as one Remedy, v. 11, 12. and now here is another. m No Man can withstand, or correct, or alter any of Gods works; and therefore all self-tormenting fretings and discontents at the injuries of men, or calamities of times, are not only sinful, but also vain and fruitless. This reason implies that there is an Hand or Work of God in all mens actions, either effecting them, if they be good, or permitting them if they be bad, and ordering and overruling them, whether they be good or bad. And God is here said to make things crooked, as he is said to make the hearts of sinners fat or hard, Isa. 6. 10. and elsewhere, not positively, but privatively, because he denies or withdraws from men that Wisdom or Grace which should make them streight.

14 In the day of prosperity be joyful n, but in the day of adversity consider o: God also hath † set the one over against the other p, to the end that man should find nothing after him q.

n Enjoy Gods favours with chearfulness and thankfulness. o To wit, Gods work, which is easily understood out of the foregoing verse. Consider that it is Gods hand, and therefore submit to it; humble thy self under his hand, be sensible of it, and duly affected with it: Consider also why God sends it, for what sins, and with what design. This is a proper season for serious consideration, whereas Prosperity relaxeth the mind, and calls it forth to outward things. But this clause may be, and is by some rendred thus, and look for a day of adversity. In Prosperity rejoyce with trembling, and so as to expect a change. p God hath wisely ordained these vicissitudes, that Prosperity and Adversity should succeed one another in the course of mens Lives. q Either 1. After man himself, or, as it may be rendred, after it, i. e. after his present condition, whether it be prosperous or afflictive. So the sense is, That no man might be able to foresee, or find out what shall certainly befall him afterwards, and therefore might live in a constant dependence upon God, and might neither despair in trouble, nor be secure or presumptuous in prosperity, because of the frequent and sudden changes from one to the other. Or 2. After God, That no man might come after God, and review his works, and find any fault in them, or pretend that he could have managed things better, because this mixture of Prosperity and Adversity is most convenient both for the Glory of Gods Wisdom, and Justice, and Goodnes, and for the benefit of Mankind, who have an absolute need of this vicissitude, lest they should be either corrupted and ruined by perpetual Prosperity, as many have been, or overwhelmed with uninterrupted Adversity.

15 All things r have I seen in the days of my vanity s: * there is a just man that perisheth in his righteousnes t; and there is a wicked man that prolongeth his life in his wickednes u.

*Ch. 8.14.

r All sorts of events, both such as have been already mentioned, and such as I am about to declare. s Since I have come into this vain and transitory Life. t Either 1. Notwithstanding his Righteousnes; whom his Righteousnes doth not deliver in common calamities, Ezek. 21. 3, 4. & 33. 12. Or 2. For his Righteousnes, which exposeth him to the Envy, and hatred, and Rage of Persecutors or wicked men. In is sometimes used for for; but it is not so taken in the next clause which answers to this, and therefore the former seems to be the truer interpretation. u Notwithstanding all his wickednes, whereby he provokes and deserves the justice both of God and Men, who yet, for many wise and just reasons, is permitted to live long unpunished and secure.

16 Be not righteous overmuch x, neither make thy self over-wise y: why shouldest thou † destroy thy self z?

† Heb. be desolate.

x This Verse and the next have a manifest reference to v. 15. being two inferences drawn from the two clauses of the observation there recorded. And this verse was delivered by Solomon, either 1. In the name and person of an ungodly man, who taketh occasion to dissuade men from the practice of Righteousness and true Wisdom, because of the danger which attends it, and is expressed in the middle of the former, and the end of this, verse. Therefore, saith he, it is not good to be more nice than wise, take heed of Strictness, Zeal, and forwardness in Religion. And then the next verse contains an Antidote to this poisonous suggestion; yea rather, saith he, be not wicked or foolish overmuch; for that will not preserve thee, as thou maist imagine, from the last clause of v. 15. but will occasion and hasten thy ruine. But seeing these words are very capable of another sense, and there is no proof or evidence of this sense in them, as there is in all other places where Solomon speaks in the person of an Epicure, this Interpretation may seem to be dangerous, and liable to misconstruction. Or 2. In his own Person. And so these words are a caution to prevent, as far as may be, that destruction which oft attends upon righteous Men, as was observed v. 15. Be not righteous overmuch, either 1. By being too severe in observing, censuring, and punishing the faults of others beyond the rules of equity, without giving any allowance for humane infirmity, extraordinary temptations, the state of times, and other circumstances. Or 2. By being more just than God requires, either laying those yokes and burdens upon a mans self, or others, which God hath not imposed upon him, and which are too heavy for him, of which see on Matth. 23 4. or condemning or avoiding those things as sinful, which God hath not forbidden, which really is Superstition, but is here called Righteousness abusively, because it is so in appearance, and in the opinion of such persons. So he gives them the name, but by adding overmuch denies the thing, because Righteousness, as well as other virtues, avoids both the extreams, the excess as well as the defect. Or 3. By an imprudent and unseasonable ostentation, or exercise of Righteousness where it is not necessary, as if a Protestant travelling in a Popish Country should publickly profess his Religion to all whom he meets with, or when a man casts the pearl of reproof before Swine, against that caution, Matth. 7. 6. So this is a precept that men should manage their zeal with godly Wisdom, and with condescension to others, as far as may be. But this is not to be understood, either 1. Of such prudence as keeps a man from the practice of his duty, but only of that Prudence which directs him in ordering the time, manner, and other circumstances of it: Or 2. As if men could be too good, or too holy, since the strictest holiness which any man in this life can arrive at, falls far short both of the rule of Gods Word, and of those examples of God and Christ, and the Holy Angels, which are propounded in Scripture for our imitation. y Be not wise in thine own conceit, nor above what is written, 1 Cor. 4. 6. nor above what is meet. Which he here implieth to be the cause of being righteous overmuch. z For thereby thou wilt unnecessarily expose thy self to danger and mischief.

17 Be not overmuch wicked a, neither be thou foolish b: Why shouldst thou dye † before thy time c?

† Heb. in thy time.

a Do not take occasion, either from the impunity of sinners v. 15. or from the prohibition of excessive Righteousness, to run into the contrary extream, the defect of righteousness, or to give up thy self to the practice of all manner of wickedness, as the manner of many men is, Ch. 8. 11. But this is not to be understood as if he allowed a lower degree of wickedness, no more than that prohibition of not letting the Sun go down upon a mans wrath, Eph. 4. 26. permits him to keep his wrath all the day long; and no more than the condemnation of excess of riot, and of abominable lasciviries, 1 Pet. 4. 3, 4. doth justifie any kind of rioting or Idolatry. b Which he adds to shew that such sinners, howsoever they esteem themselves wise, yet in truth are egregious fools, as the following words prove. c Either by the justice of the Magistrate, or by the vengeance of God. For though I said that sometimes a wicked man prolongeth his days, &c. v. 15. yet commonly such persons are cut off, and thou hast sufficient reason to expect and fear it.

18 It is good that thou shouldst take hold of a this; yea also from this f withdraw not thine hand g: for he that feareth God h, shall come forth of them all i.

d Embrace and practise. e This Counsel last given, v. 17. f From that foregoing advice, v. 16. It is good to avoid both those extreams. g From the practice of it. h Who ordereth his actions so as to please God, and keep his Commands, and walk by the rule of his Word. i Shall be delivered from both these, and from all other extreams, and from all the evil consequences of them. The word all is sometimes put for both, as being used of two only, as Eccles. 2. 14.

19 * Wisdom k strengtheneth l the wife, more than ten m mighty men which are in the city.

* Prov. 22. & 24. Ch. 9. 18.

k True Wisdom which is always joined with the Fear of God, and which teacheth a man to keep close to the rule of his duty, without turning either to the Right Hand or to the Left. l Supporteth him in, and secureth him against troubles and dangers. m i. e. Many, uniting the forces together.

20 * For n there is not a just man upon earth o that doeth good, and sinneth not p.

* 1 Kings 8. 46. 2 Chr. 6. 36. Prov. 20. 9. 1 John 1. 8.

n So this is a reason either. 1. Of the forgoing Counsels v 16, 17, 18, the 19th verse being interposed only as a proof of the last clause of v. 18. Or 2. To shew the necessity and advantage of that Wisdom commended v. 19. because all men are very prone to folly and sin, and therefore need that Wisdom which is from above to direct and keep them from it. But this particle may be, and elswhere is commonly rendred, Yet, and so the sense is, although Wisdom doth exceedingly strengthen a man, yet it doth not so strengthen him, as if it would keep him from falling into all sin; or, because, or, seeing that, and so this relates to the following verse, seeing all men sin, we should be ready to pardon the offences of others against us, either by word or deed; or, surely, and so it is an intire sentence, such as there are many in this book. o Whereby he manifestly, implies, that the just in Heaven are perfect and sinless. p Who is universally and perfectly good, and free from all sin.

21 Also † take no heed q unto all words that are spoken r; lest thou hear thy servant curse thee s.

† Heb. give not thine heart.

q Do not severely observe, nor strictly search into them, nor listen to hear them. as many persons out of curiosity use to do. r To wit, concerning thee, or against thee. Under this one kind of Offences of the Tongue, which are most frequent, he seems to understand all injuries which we suffer from others, and adviseth us that we do not too rigidly examine them, nor too deeply resent them, but rather neglect and forget them. s Which will vex and grieve thee, and may provoke thee to vengeance and cruelty against him.

22 For oftentimes also thine own heart t knoweth, that thou thy self likewise hast cursed others u.

t Mind or Conscience, as that word is frequently used. u Either upon some great provocation, and sudden passion, or possibly upon a meer mistake, or false report. In which case thou hast both needed and desired the forbearance and forgiveness of others, and therefore by the Rules of Justice, as well as of Piety and Charity, thou art obliged to deal likewise with others.

23 All this x have I proved y by wisdom z: I said, I will be wise a but it was far from me b.

x Or, All these things; of which I have here discourfed. y I have diligently examined and found all this to be true. z By the help of that singular Wisdom which God had given me. a I determined within my self that I would by all possible means seek to attain perfection of wisdom, and I perfuaded my self that I should attain to it. b I found my self greatly disappointed, and the more I knew, the more I sawmine own folly and misery.

24 * That

25 * That which is far off, and exceeding deep, who can find it out c?

* Job 28. 12. Rom. 11. 33.

c No human Wit can attain to perfect Wisdom, or to the exact knowledg of God's Counsels and Works, and the reasons of them, because they are unsearchable deep, and far above our sight, some of them being long since past, and therefore utterly unknown to us, and others yet to come which we cannot foreknow.

26 † * I applied mine heart d to know, and to search, and to seek out e wisdom, and ‖ the reason of things f, and to know the wickedness of folly g, even of foolishness and madness.

† Job 1. 17. ‖ Or, work to undertake it.

d I was not discouraged, but provoked by the difficulty of the work to undertake it: which is an argument of a great and generous Soul. e He useth three words signifying the same thing, to intimate his vehement desire, and vigorous, and unwearied endeavor after it. f Both of God's various Providences, and of the differing and contrary counsels and courses of men. g That I might clearly and fully understand the great evil of sin, and all that wickedness, and folly, or madness which is bound up in the hearts of all men by Nature, and which discovers it self in the course of their Lives.

27 * And I find h more bitter i than death, the woman k whose heart is snares and nets l, and her hands m as bands n. † Whoso pleaseth God o shall escape from her p; but the sinner q shall be taken r by her s.

* Prov. 2. 16. & 5. 3. & 6. 24. & 7. 5. † Heb. the good before him.

h By my own sad experience. Which Solomon here records, partly as an instance of that folly and madness which he expressed in general, v. 25. and partly as a testimony of his true Repentance, for his foul miscarriages, for which he was willing to take shame to himself, not only from the present, but from all succeeding generations. i More vexatious and pernicious, as producing those horrors of Conscience, those reproaches, and diseases, and other plagues, both temporal and spiritual, from God, which are far worse than simple death, and, after all these, everlasting destruction. k The strange woman, of whom he speaks so much in the Proverbs. l Who being subtil of heart, Prov. 7. 10 is full of crafty devises to insnare men. m Either by Gifts, or rather by lascivious Actions. n Wherewith the holds them fast in cruel bondage, so that they have neither Power nor Will to forsake her, notwithstanding all the dangers and mischiefs which they know do attend upon such practices. o Heb. he that is good before God, either 1. Whom God loves and favours. Or rather 2. Who is good sincerely, or in the judgment of God who cannot be deceived; whereas Hypocrites are frequently good in the eyes or opinions of men. Which sense seems to be confirmed from the opposition of the sinner to him, both here, and Eccles. 2. 26. Hereby he intimates that neither a good temper of mind, nor great discretion, nor good Education and Instruction, nor any other thing, except God's Grace, is a sufficient preservative from the dominion of this Lust. p Shall be prevented from falling into that sin, or, if by surprisal or strong temptation he be drawn to it, he shall be recovered out of it by true Repentance. q The wilful and obstinate sinner, who gives himself up to the common practice of this or other sins; he who is a sinner before the Lord, as the Sodomites are called, Gen. 13. 13. who is fitly opposed to him that is good before God; he in whom there is not a dram of true goodness: for otherwise all men are sinners, as was said v. 20. r Shall be intangled and kept fast in her chains, as is implied, because this is opposed to escaping from her.

28 Behold t, this have I found (saith the Preacher u) ‖ counting one by one x, to find out the account x.

‖ Or, the penitent, who speaks what he hath learned, both by deep Study, and costly experience. u Considering things or persons very exactly and distinctly, one after another; and not only in general and confusedly, in which case a man may very easily be mistaken, and comparing them together, whereby I was inabled to make the truer judgment of them. x That I might make a true and just estimate in this matter. Or, as it is in the Margent, and was rendred v 25. the reason, to wit, of that which I am about to say. I considered the persons severally and critically, that from thence I might understand the reason of the thing.

29 Which yet my soul seeketh y, but I find not z: one man a among a thousand b have I found, but a woman c among all those d have I not found.

t It is a strange thing, and worthy of your serious observation. Or, the penitent, who speaks what he hath learned, both by deep y It seemed so wonderful to me that suspected I had not made a sufficient enquiry, and therefore I returned to search again with more earnestness and accurateness. z That it was so he found out, as he now said, v. 27. but the whole truth and reason of the thing he could not find out. a One worthy of the Name of a Man; a wise and virtuous Man. Man is put for a worthy or good Man, as Name is put for a good Name, above v. 1. and Wife for a good Wife, as was noted before. b With whom I have converfed. He is supposed to mention this Number in allusion to his Thousand Wives and Concubines, as they are numbred by parcels, 1 Kings 11. 3. c One worthy of that Name; one who is not a diffinour to her Kind and Sex, who is not brutish in her disposition and conversation. d In that Thousand whom I have taken into intimate society with my self. Whereby he also passeth a severe censure upon himself that he had sociated himself with such Persons, and not with the virtuous Women, which doubtless there were in his time, as appears from Prov. 31. It is not Solomon's design to disparage this Sex, nor to make a general comparison between men and women in all Places, and Ages, but only to suggest his own experience concerning it.

30 Lo, this only have I found e, * that God hath made man f upright g; but they h have fought out many inventions i.

* Gen. 1. 27. & 5. 1. & 9. 6. James 3. 9.

e Though I could not find out all the streams of wickedness and their infinite windings and turnings in the World, yet I have discovered the fountain of it, to wit, Original sin, and the corruption of Nature which is both in Men and Women. f God made our first Parents, Adam and Eve. g Heb. right, without any imperfection or corruption, conformable to his Nature and Will, which is the rule a Who is to be compared with a wise Man? He is incomparably the most excellent Man in the World. Or rather, who is truly wise? The Particle, as being here not a Note of similitude, but of reality, as it is Job. 1. 14. and in many other places as hath been noted. There are very few or no truly wise men in this World. This seems best to agree with the Next clause, which is not, Who is as he that knoweth, but who knoweth, &c. b How few are there who understand the reasons of things and can rightly expound the word and works of God, and instruct and satisfie himself and others in all the doubtful and difficult cases of humane actions? c Maketh a Man illustrious and venerable, chearful, and mild, and amiable in his carriage to others. The face is put for the mind or inward frame, because the mind discovers it self in the Countenance. d The roughness or fierceness, the pride or impudence of his disposition, as this Phrase is used, Deut. 28. 50. Prov. 7. 13. & 21. 29. Dan. 8. 23. e Into gentleness and humility.

2 I counsel thee f to keep the king's commandment g, and that in regard of the oath of God h.

f Which Verb is necessarily understood to make the sense full and compleat. See the like defects of speech, Psal. 120. 7, Isa. 5. 9. &c. g Observe and obey all his commands. Which is not to be understood universally, as if the King should have commanded them to deny or blaspheme God, or to worship Idols; in which case every Christian Man, who reads and believes the Bible, must needs confess that the Israelites especially were obliged to obey God rather than Man, but only of such commands as are not contrary to the will of God. h Either 1. Because of that Oath which thou hast taken to keep all God's Laws, whereof this of Obedience to Superiors is one, Or 2. because of that Covenant or Oath of Fealty and Allegiance whereby thou hast engaged thy self to him, of which see, 1 Chron. 11. 3. & 29. 24. Ezek. 17. 16, 18. Though this may also be understood, and is by some learned Interpreters taken as a limitation of their Obedience to Kings, the words being thus rendred, as the Hebrew will very well bear, but according to the word of the Oath of God, Obey the King's commands, with this caution that they be agreeable and not contrary to the Laws of God which thou art obliged by thy own and by thy Parents Oaths oft renewed, to observe in the first place.

3 * Be not hasty to go out of his sight i: stand not in an evil thing k, for he doth whatsoever pleaseth him l.

* Ch. 10.4.

i Heb. To go from his face, or presence, to wit, in dislike or in discontent, withdrawing thy self from thy King's service or obedience, as malecontents use to do; for this will both provoke him, and lead thee by degrees into Sedition or Rebellion. k If thou hast offended him, perfist not in it, but humbly acknowledg thine offence, and beg his pardon and favour. l His power is uncontrolable in his Dominions, and therefore thou canst neither resist nor avoid his fury.

4 Where the word of a king is, there is power m: and who may say n unto him, What doest thou?

m Whatsoever he commandeth he wants not power nor instruments to execute it, and therefore can easily punish thee as he pleaseth. n Heb. Who shall say? Who will presume or dare to say so? He doth not affirm that it is unlawful to say so, for Samuel said so to Saul, 1 Sam. 15. and Nathan to David, 2 Sam. 12. and several other Prophets to the Kings of Judah and Israel, but only that it is difficult and dangerous.

5 Whoso keepeth the commandment o † shall feel no evil thing p: and a wise man's heart discerneth both time and judgment q.

† Heb. shall not know.

o Either 1. of the King, of which he hath hitherto spoken. Or 2. of God, for the Word, or Commandments, or Law are oft used emphatically for the Word, Law, or Command of God, as hath been formerly and frequently observed, and the Commandment is put for the Commandments, as is very usual. And so Solomon passeth from his former to a new subject. p Shall be delivered from those mischiefs which befal the disobedient. q Both when, and how far, and in what manner he may or must keep the commands of the king or God. For the word here rendred judgment doth oft signifie right, as Deut. 21. 17. as also a cause or controversie, as Numb. 27. 5. and the manner or rule of actions, as Judg. 13. 12. The sense is, A wise Man knows both what he ought to do, and what are the fittest seasons for doing it, which he seeketh and embraceth

6 Because to every purpose there is time and judgment r, therefore s the misery of man is great upon him.

r There is a fit way and season for the happy accomplishment of every business which a man designeth or undertaketh to do, which is known to God, but for the most part hidden from man, as is implied plied and may be gathered from the following words. See the Notes on Ch. 3. 1. r Because there are very few who have that Wisdom which is necessary to discern this, as was now said, v. 5. and most men do by their ignorance and loss of opportunities deprive themselves of many advantages, and expose themselves to manifold miseries.

*Prov. 24. 22. 7 For * he knoweth not that which shall be s: for who can tell him t || when it shall be?

Ch. 6. 12. s Men are generally ignorant of all future events, and of the success of their endeavours, and therefore their minds are greatly disquieted, and their expectations frequently disappointed, and they fall into many mistakes and miscarriages, which they could and would prevent if they did foresee the issues of things. u No wise Man, no Astrologer or other Artist can discover this.

|| Or, how it shall be.

*Job 14. 5. 8 There is no man that hath power * over the spirit x || to retain the spirit y; neither hath he power in the day z of death: and there is no || discharge a in that war b, neither shall wickedness deliver those that are given to it c.

|| Or, casting off weapons.

x i. e. The Soul of Man, which is oft called a Spirit, as Job 7. 7. & 10. 12. Psal. 78. 39. & 104. 29, &c. y To keep it in the Body beyond the time which God hath allotted to it. This is added as another evidence of Man's misery. z Or, against the day, i. e. to avoid or delay that day. a As there is in other Wars, when Soldiers either are dismissed from the service, or escape by flight or otherwise. b In that fatal conflict between Life and Death, between Nature and the Disease, when a Man is struggling with Death, though to no purpose, for Death shall always be Conqueror. c And although wicked men, who most fear Death, use all possible means, whether good or bad, to free themselves from this deadly blow, yet they shall not escape it.

9 All this d I have seen, and applied my heart unto every work e that is done under the sun: there is a time wherein one man ruleth over another e to his own hurt.

d All these things before-mentioned. e I have been a diligent observer of all actions and events. There are some Kings, who use their power tyrannically and wickedly, whereby they do not only oppress their People, but hurt themselves, by bringing the vengeance of God and men upon their own heads. Which is here noted partly for the terrour of Tyrants, and partly for the caution and comfort of Subjects groaning under those heavy pressures which they are not able to remove, that they may forbear unlawful or rebellious courses and quietly commit themselves and their cause to God, who judgeth righteously, and who both can and will call the greatest Monarchs to a fad account for all their impious and unrighteous courses.

† Te. 10 And so f I saw the wicked g buried h, who had come † and gone i from the place of the holy k, and they were forgotten l in the city where they had so done m: this is also vanity n.

f In like manner, or such another vanity or disorder. g Wicked Princes or Rulers as the next clause limits this. h Die quietly in their Beds and afterward be buried with state and pomp, whereas in truth they deserved an untimely end, and no other than the burial of an Ass. i Who had administred publick Justice and Government, which is frequently signified by the Phrase of coming in and going out before the People, as Numb. 27. 17. Deut. 31. 2. The LXX Jewish Interpreters, whom some others follow, render the word, they were praised, applauded and adored, by the variation of one Letter in the Hebrew word, which also is very like that Letter which is in the Text. k By which he understands, either 1. the Holy City Jerusalem, or the Holy Land, where Israel dwelt: which may be added to aggravate the wickedness of such Persons from the obligations, and Counsels, and examples which they had to do better things. Or, 2. the Seat of Majesty, and Judgment, which may well be called the place, or seat of the Holy, i. e. of God, who is called the Holy one, Habak. 3. 3. and oft elsewhere, who is in a special manner present in, and president over those places, whose work, and for whom, and in whose Name and Stead Magistrates act, who therefore are called gods; of all which see, Exod. 22. 28. Deut. 1. 17. 1 Chron. 29. 23. Psal. 82. 1, &c. And the Throne or Tribunal seems to be so called here, to aggravate their wickedness, who being Sacred Persons and advanced by God into so High and Sacred a place, betrayed so great a trust, and both practised and encouraged that wickedness which by their Office they were obliged to suppress and punish. l Whereas they designed to spread and perpetuate their Names and Memories to succeeding Ages, Psal. 49. 11. m i. e. Come to and go from the place of the Holy; where they lived in great splendor, and were buried with great magnificence: which might have kept up their remembrance at least in that place. n That men should so earnestly thirst after and please themselves with worldly greatness and glory, which is so soon extinct, and the very memory of it quickly worn out of the minds of men.

*Pf. 50 21. Isa. 26. 10. 11 * Because sentence against an evil work o is not executed speedily, therefore p the heart of the sons of men is fully set q in them to do evil.

o Or, the Decree, &c. God's determinate counsel or sentence for the punishment of Tyrants and all evil doers. p Because God's forbearance makes them presumptuous and secure, and confident of impunity. q Heb. is filled, is carried on with full sail, as the Seventy understand it, like a Ship with a strong and violent wind: or, is bold or presumptuous, as the same Phrase is understood, Esther 7. 5. Acts 5. 3.

*Pf. 37. 11. Isa. 26. 10. Prov. 1. 32. Isa. 3. 10, 11. 12 Though a sinner do evil an hundred times r, and his days be prolonged, yet surely I know that * it shall be well with them that fear God s, which fear before him t.

r Frequently and innumerably. s The time of his Life and Prosperity. t Whereby he implies, both that good men might for a time suffer grievous things from such wicked Tyrants, and that it should be very ill with the wicked, which is manifest from the contrary course and condition of good and bad men, and which is expressed in the following words. Compare Psal. 2 12. u Or, at his presence: who stand in awe of God, and forbear and fear to sin out of a sincere respect and reverence to God.

13 But it shall not be well x with the wicked, neither shall he prolong his days y, which are as a shadow z; because he feareth not before God a.

x i. e. It shall go very ill with him; great miseries are prepared for him: which is a Figure oft used in Scripture, as hath been formerly and frequently observed. y To wit, very long, or for ever, as he desireth. z His life, though it may be or seem to be long, yet in truth is but a meer shadow, which will quickly vanish and disappear, and be as if it never had been, and many times like a shadow, when it is longest it is nearest to abolition. a This is the punishment of his wickedness and his casting off the fear and service of God. For although the lives of good men upon Earth are short, as well as the lives of the wicked, yet their days are not like a shadow, because they are prolonged far beyond this mortal state, even to all Eternity, and Death it self doth but open the way for them to an endless life.

14 There is a vanity which is done b upon the earth, that there be just men unto whom it * hapneth according to the work c of the wicked: again, there be wicked men to whom it hapneth according to the work of the righteous d: I said, that this also is vanity e.

Pf. 73. Ch. 7.

b Either by wicked Potentates, who do commonly advance unworthy men, and oppress Persons of greatest Virtue and merit: Or, by God's Providence, who sees it fit for many weighty Reasons so to manage the affairs of the present World. c i. e. The merit of their work. the work being oft put for the recompence given or belonging to it, as Levit. 19. 13. Job 7. 2. Psal. 109. 20. The sense is, Who meets with such hard usage as the worst of men deserve. d Who, instead of those just and dreadful punishments which they deserve by the Laws of God and men, receive those encouragements and rewards which are due to virtuous and worthy men: e This is a very unreasonable and foolish thing, if it be considered without respect unto another life as it is here, where Solomon is discoursing of the vanity of the present life, and of the impossibility of finding satisfaction and happiness in it.

15 * Then I commended mirth, because a man hath no better thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry f: for that shall abide with him of his labour g, the days of his life, which God giveth him under the sun.

Ch. 3. & 5. 18. & 9. 7.

f This he speaks, either 1. in the Person of a sensual Man. Things being so, as was related, v. 14. it is best to give a Man's self up to eating and drinking, and all manner of carnal delights. Or, 2. in his own Name and Person. Upon these considerations I concluded that it was most advisable for a Man not to perplex and torment himself with the Thoughts of the seeming inequality of Divine Providence and of the great disorders which are in the World, or with cares and fears about future events, or with infinite and insatiable desires of Worldly things, but quietly and chearfully and thankfully to enjoy the comforts which God gives him. See on Eccles. 2. 24. & 3. 12, 13. g This is the best advantage which he can make of this Worlds goods as to the present life.

16 When I applied mine heart to know wisdom h, and to see the business i that is done upon the Earth (for also there is that neither day nor night seeth sleep with his eyes k)

h This he seems to add as the reason of that judgment which he had now passed, v. 15. because he had diligently studied wherein Man's Wisdom did consist, and had observed the restlessness of mens minds and bodies in other courses. i Either 1. To find out the work of God, as the next Verse may seem to explain it, and all the Mysteries of God's Providence in the Government of this present and lower World. Or, 2. To observe mens various designs and employments, and there toilsome and unwearied businesses or labours about worldly things. Which sense seems best to agree, both with the use of this Hebrew word which is constantly used in this sense, in all the places of Scripture where it is, which are Eccles. 1. 13. & 2. 23. 26. & 3. 10. & 4. 8. & 5. 2, 13. & 8. 16. and never concerning the works of God; and with the foregoing and following words as we shall see. k The sense of the words thus translated and pointed seems to be this, There is a certain Man, whom it is needless to name, (which is a modest designation of himself, like that of St. Paul, 2 Cor. 12. 2. I know a Man in Christ, &c.) who studied those matters Day and Night, and therefore is very capable of passing a judgment about them. But, with submission, there seems to be no need of a Parenthesis to cut off these words from the former, with whom they have a fit connexion. For having now mentioned the business which is done, or which Man doeth, upon Earth, he further adds, as an evidence of Man's eagerness in pursuing his business, for even by Day and by Night he (to wit, the busie Man, which is easily understood from the foregoing clause) seeth not sleep with his eyes, i. e. He grudgeth himself even necessary refreshments, and disquiets himself with endless cares and labours, the fruit whereof he doth but little enjoy; and therefore it is better to eat and drink, &c. as I now said, v. 15. As for the Phrase of seeing sleep it is a figurative expression used in other Authors, and is like that of seeing death, Psal. 89. 48.

17 Then l I beheld all the work of God m, that a man * cannot find out n the work that is done under the sun: because though a man labour to seek it out, yet he shall not find it; yea further, though a wise man think to know it, yet shall he not be able to find it.

* Job 9. Ch. 3 & 11. 33. Rom.

l Heb. and, or moreover, m I considered the counsels and ways of God, and the various methods of his Providence towards good and bad men, and the reasons of them. n No Man, though never so wise, and inquisitive, and studious, as it follows, is able fully and perfectly to understand these things. And therefore it is best for Man not to perplex himself with endless and fruitless enquiries about these matters, but quietly to submit to God's Will and Providence, and to live in the fear of God, and the comfortable enjoyment of his blessings.

CHAP. IX.

All things in the hand of God: his Love or Hatred not visible in them; but the like happeneth to good and bad in this Life, and in Death they know nothing hereof, and are themselves forgotten, 1—6. It is best therefore for a Man to enjoy the Gifts of God with chearfulness, 7—9. To be diligent in his Calling, 10. and leave the issue to God, 11, 12. The praise of Wisdom, 13—18.

1 FOr a all this b † I considered in my heart, even to declare all this c, that the righteous, and the wise d, and their works e are in the hand of God f: no man knoweth either love, or hatred, by all that is before them g.

† Or, Therefore

a Or, Therefore, as the Seventy Interpreters render it. b All that I have said concerning the Methods of Divine Providence towards good and bad men. c To make this evident first to my self and then to others, as occasion required. d Whom he mentions not exclusively, as if wicked men were not in God's hand, for the next clause relates both to good and bad men, but eminently, because by the course of God's Providence towards them, they might seem to be quite neglected and forsaken by God. e Either efficiently, all their actions and employments; or objectively, all things done to them, all events which befal them. f Are subject to his Power and governed by his Providence, as this Phrase is used, Prov. 21. 1. Job. 3. 35. compared with Mat. 28. 11. And therefore although we cannot fully understand the reasons of all God's Works, as he now said, Ch. 8. 17. yet because they are done by his unerring Hand, we may be assured that they are done both righteously and justly, and that no Man hath cause to murmur at the Prosperity of the wicked, or at the calamities of good men. g No Man can judge by their present and outward conditions or dispensations of God's Providence, whether God loves or hates them, for whom he loves he chastens, and permitteth those whom he hates to prosper in the World. And this Translation and Interpretation agreeth well with the following Verse. But I must confess it differs from almost all other both ancient and modern Translations. And these words with the foregoing clause are translated otherwise, and that word for word according to the Hebrew, The righteous, and the wise, and their works are in the hand of God, also love and hatred: (understand out of the foregoing clause, are in God's hand. And this may be meant, Either 1. Of God's love and hatred which he dispenseth when, and to whom, and in what manner he pleaseth. Or, 2. Of mens love and hatred, also their love and their hatred, the Pronoun their being repeated out of the former clause as is frequent in Scripture. And so the sense is, That not only mens works, as he now said, but even their inward passions or affections, which seem to be most in their own power, are as much in God's disposal as their outward actions. Then follows the last clause in the same order in which the words lie in the Hebrew Text) No Man knoweth all, or, any thing which is before him. Which I thus understand, Whereas all men and all their affections, and actions, and the events of them are perfectly known to God and disposed by him, men know nothing, no not such things as are most plain and easie and familiar to them, and can neither foresee the plainest things, nor dispose of the smallest things as they please, but all things are wholly ordered and over-ruled by God's Providence, not as men imagine or desire, but as he sees fit.

2 * All things come alike to all h: there is one event to the righteous and the wicked, to the good and to the clean i, and to the unclean; to him that sacrificeth k, and to him that sacrificeth not; as is the good so is the sinner l, and he that sweareth m as he that feareth an oath m.

Job 21. 23, 24. 26.

h The good and evil things of this World do equally happen to good and bad men. i Either 1. morally clean or holy men. Or, 2. legally, who made Conscience of keeping himself pure from all legal defilements, according to the Law then in force, and consequently from all other sins upon the same ground. k That worshipeth God sincerely, though it be to his cost. l As to all outward things. m To wit, customarily, unnecessarily, rashly, without due consideration and reverence, or fallly and wickedly. For otherwise that some swearing was then allowed, and in some cases required, none do or can deny. n Who is afraid of offending God, or abusing his Name by vain, or rash, or false Oaths.

3 This is an evil o among all things that are done under the sun, that there is * one event unto all: yea also the heart of the sons of men p is full of evil q, and madness is in their heart r while they live, and after that they go to the dead s.

* Job 21. 32, 33.

o A great trouble and temptation to a considerate and good Man. p Of wicked men, such as the generality of Mankind are. q Either 1. of grief, upon this occasion. Or, rather 2. of wickedness, as appears from the next clause, and by comparing this place with Eccles. 8. 11. r Upon this account they go on madly and desperately in evil courses without any fear of an after-reckoning. s After all their mad and wicked pranks in the whole course of their life, they die in the same manner as the best men do. So hitherto there is no future difference. For Solomon here forbears the consideration of the future life. Only he seems to intimate that as the madness, so the happiness of the wicked is ended by Death, which is more fully expressed in the following words.

4 For to him that is joined to all the living t, there is hope u: for a living dog is better x than a dead lion.

t That continueth in the Land and Society of Living men. Or, according to the reading of the Hebrew Text, That is chosen or allotted to Life, whom God hath appointed yet to live in the World, when he hath appointed that many others shall die; or who are written among the Living, as the Phrase is, Isa. 4. 3. which is borrowed from the custom of Cities, where men are first chosen, and then inrolled Citizens. u He hath not only some comfort for the present, but also hopes of further and greater happiness in this World, which men are very prone to entertain and cherish in themselves. Yea, they may have the hopes of a better life, if they improve their opportunities. But he seems to confine himself here to the present life. x i. e. Much happier, as to the comforts and priviledges of this World, though in other respects Death be better than Life, as was said, Eccles. 7. 1.

5 For the living know that they shall die y: but the dead know not any thing z; neither have they any more a reward a; for the memory of them is forgotten b.

y Whereby they are taught to improve Life, whilst they have it, to their greatest comfort and advantage. z To wit, of the actions and events in this World, as this is limited in the end of the next Verse. Compare Job 14. 21. Isa 63. 16. a The reward or fruit of their labours in this World, which is utterly lost as to them, and enjoyed by others. See Eccles. 2. 21. For otherwise, that there are future rewards after death, is asserted by Solomon elsewhere, as we have seen and shall hereafter see. b To wit, amongst living men, and even in those places where they had lived in great power and glory; as was noted, Ch. 8. 10.

6 Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy is now perished b; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun c.

b They neither love, nor hate, nor envy any Person, or thing in this World, but are now altogether unconcerned in all things done under the Sun. c In any worldly thing. By which limitation he sufficiently insinuates his belief of their portion in the other World.

7 Go thy way d, * eat thy e bread f with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart g: for God now accepteth thy works h.

*Ch. 8. 15.

d Make this use of what I have said. e Thine own, the fruit of thy own labours, not what thou takest unjustly from others. f Necessary and convenient food. By which he excludes excess. g Chearfully and thankfully enjoy thy comforts, avoiding all distracting care and grief for the occurrences of this World. h Is gracious to thee, hath blessed thy labours with success, and alloweth thee a comfortable enjoyment of his blessings.

8 Let thy garments be always i white k; and let thy head lack no ointment l.

i In all convenient times and circumstances; for there are times of mourning, Eccles. 3. 4 & 7. 2. Compare Prov. 5. 19. k Decent, and splendid, as far as is suitable to thy condition. The Eastern People of the best sort used white Garments, especially in times of rejoycing. as Esth. 8. 15. Compare Revel. 3. 4, 5. & 6. 11. But by this whiteness of Garments, he understands a pleasant and chearful converfation. l Which upon joyful occasions was poured upon mens Heads, Amos 6. 6. Luke 7. 46, Joh. 12. 3.

9 † Live joyfully with the wife whom thou loveſt m, all the days of the life of thy vanity n, which he hath given thee under the sun, all the days of thy vanity: * for that is thy portion o in this life p, and in thy labour which thou takest under the sun.

† Heb. see, or enjoy life.

* Ch. 2. 10. & 3. 13. & 5. 18.

m So he limits him to lawful delights. Whereby it is evident that Solomon doth not speak this in the Person of an Epicure, as some understand it. n Of this vain and frail life. Which expression he industriously useth to moderate mens affections even towards lawful pleasures, and to mind them of their duty and interest in making sure of a better life, and more solid comforts. o Allowed to thee by God, and the best part of worldly enjoyments. p By which addition he is again admonishing him of seeking another portion in the future life.

10 Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do q, do it with all thy might r; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the † grave s whither thou goest.

q What thou hast opportunity and ability to do in the duties of thy calling and in order to thy comfort and benefit. r With unwearied diligence, and vigour and expedition. Whereby he again discovers that he doth not perfuade men to an idle and sensual life, but only to a sober enjoyment of his comforts in God's fear and with an industrious profecution of his vocation. s Thou canst neither design nor act any thing there tending to thy own comfort or advantage. Therefore slip not thine only season.

11 I returned and saw t under the sun, that the race is not to the swift, nor the battle x to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding y, nor yet favour z to men of skill a, but time and chance happeneth to them all b.

t This may have some respect to the foregoing Verse. For having prefled men to labour with all their might, he now adds by way of caution, that yet they must not be confident of their own strength, as if they were sure of success by it, but in all, above all to look up to God for his blessing without which all their endeavours will be in vain. But it seems chiefly to be added, either 1. as another instance of the liberty and power of God's Providence in the disposal of humane affairs, of which he spake above, v. 1. 2. 3. Or, 2. as another of the vanities of this present life. u Either ability to run, or success and victory in running. x The victory in Battle. y Who yet are most likely to get and to keep riches. z Good acceptance acceptance and love from men. a Who know how to manage themselves and all affairs, whereby they are neceſſary and ſerviceable to others, and therefore moſt likely to find favour in their eyes. b There are ſome times or ſeaſons, unknown and caſual to men, but certain and determined by God, in which alone he will give men ſucceſs.

12 For man alſo knoweth not his time c; as the fiſhes that are taken in an evil net d, and as the birds that are caught in the ſnare; ſo are the ſons of men * Pro.29.6. * ſnared in an evil time, when it falleth ſuddenly upon Luk.12.20 them e.

c To wit, the time of his death, or of ſome other ſore diſtreſs which God is bringing upon him. Which is oppoſed to the time of ſucceſs mentioned in the foregoing Verſe, and man is ſaid to be ignorant both of the one and of the other. d That wiliſt they are ſporting and feeding themſelves, are ſuddenly and unexpectedly enſnared to their ruin. e When they are moſt careleſs and ſecure.

13 This wiſdom have I ſeen f alſo under the ſun, and it ſeemed great unto me g.

f I have obſerved this among many other inſtances and effects of Wiſdom. Which he ſeems to add for the commendation of Wiſdom, notwithſtanding its inſufficiency for Man's ſafety and happineſs without God's bleſſing. g I judged it very praiſe-worthy, though others deſpiſed it, as it follows.

14 There was a little city h, and few men within it; and there came a great king againſt it, and beſieged it, and built great bulwarks againſt it:

h It matters not whether this was a real Hiſtory, or only a parable to repreſent the common practices of men in ſuch caſes.

15 Now there was found in it a poor wiſe man, and he by his wiſdom delivered the city; yet no man remembred that ſame poor man i.

i He was ſoon neglected and his great ſervice ſo far from being recompenced according to its merit, that both it and he were quite forgotten. Which may be noted as another great vanity.

* Prov. 21. 22.& 24.5. Ch. 7. 19. 16 * Then ſaid, I wiſdom is better than ſtrength k: nevertheleſs the poor man's wiſdom is deſpiſed l, and his words are not heard.

k As was manifeſt in the foregoing inſtance. l Becauſe men are generally vain and fooliſh, and have a greater value for outward Ornaments than for true worth.

17 The words of wiſe men m are heard n in quiet o, more than the cry p of him that ruleth among fools q.

m Though poor, as may be gathered both from the foregoing relation, and becauſe he is oppoſed to the ruling fool in the next clauſe. n To wit, by wiſe men: or ſhould be heard, as ſuch words are oft ken, as Mal. 1. 6. and elſewhere. For that they were not always actually heard he declared in the laſt words of the foregoing Verſe. o Uttered with a modeſt and low voice, to which the following cry is oppoſed. p The clamorous and ſenſleſs diſcourſes. q Of a rich and potent, but fooliſh Man, who hath ſome influence upon fools, like himſelf, but is juſtly neglected and his words diſregarded by wiſe men.

18 Wiſdom is better than weapons of war r: but one ſinner s deſtroyeth much good t.

r Than armed power. s A wicked fool. By which expreſſion and oppoſition of a Sinner to a Wiſe Man he gives us a Key to underſtand his meaning in divers places of his Books, that by Wiſdom he means true Piety, and by folly, wickedneſs: and withal ſheweth that ſin as it is the greateſt folly, ſo it is more pernicious to men than meer folly properly ſo called. t By his wicked counſels and courſes brings much damage and miſchief both to himſelf and others.

CHAP. X.

Obſervations on Wiſdom and Folly, 1—3. Of Rulers, 4—7. Of Wrong and Injuſtice, 8—10. Of Talkativeneſs, Imprudence, and it's Miſchiefs, 11—15. Kings, hurtful, and deſirable, 16, 17. Of Sloth, 18. Feaſts, 19. The King muſt not be Curſed, 20.

† Heb. ſt es of death. 1 † DEad flies a cauſe the ointment of the apothecary to ſend forth a ſtinking ſavour: ſo doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wiſdom and honour b.

a Falling into it and abiding and being putrefied in it, eſpecially in thoſe Countries, where there were more filthy and venemous Flies, and where the Ointments were more pure, and where the Air was more hot than in theſe parts. b Which comes to paſs, partly becauſe all the Actions, and conſequently the Follies, of ſuch men are moſt diligently obſerved and ſooneſt diſcerned and toſſed about in the mouths of men, whereas Fools and all their carriages are generally diſregarded; and partly becauſe of that envious and malicious diſpoſition of mens minds which makes them quick ſighted to diſcover, and glad to hear and forward to declare the faults of ſuch as by their greater eminency did out-ſhine and obſcure them.

c. i. e. His underſtanding or wiſdom. d Is always preſent with him and ready to direct him in all his actions. He manageth all his affairs prudently and piouſly. He mentions the right hand becauſe that is the chief and moſt common inſtrument of actions, which by moſt men are done with more ſtrength and expedition and orderlineſs and comelineſs by their right hand than by their left. e His underſtanding and knowledge ſerves him only for idle ſpeculation and vain Oſtentation, but is not at all uſeful or effectual to govern his affections and actions. He acts prepoſterouſly and fooliſhly, like one without heart, as it follows.

3 Yea alſo when he that is a fool walketh by the way f, † his wiſdom faileth him g, and he ſaith to every one that he is a fool h. † Heb. fayleth

f Not only in great undertakings, but in his daily converſation with men, in his looks and geſtures and common talk. g Or, he wants an Heart, as if he had ſaid, did I ſay, his Heart is at his left hand? I muſt recal it, for in truth he hath no heart in him. h He publickly diſcovers his folly to all that meet him or converſe with him.

4 If the ſpirit i of a ruler riſe up againſt thee, leave not thy place k; for * yielding k pacifieth l great offences m. * Prov. 15.

i The paſſion or wrath, as is manifeſt from the following word, which is oft called Spirit, as Judg. 8. 3. 2 Chron. 21. 16. Prov. 25. 28. Eccleſ. 7. 9. i To wit, in anger or diſcontent. Withdraw not thy ſelf raſhly and haſtily from his preſence and ſervice, according to the advice, Chap. 8. 3. Continue in a diligent and faithful diſcharge of thy duty, as becomes a Subject; do not return anger for anger, but modeſtly and humbly ſubmit thy ſelf to him. k Heb. healing, a gentle and ſubmiſſive carriage, which is of an healing nature; whereas pride and paſſion do exaſperate and widen the breach already made. l Heb. maketh them to reſt or ceaſe, preventeth or removeth them. m Heb. great ſins, either 1. ſuch ſins as the offended Ruler might commit in the proſecution of his wrath againſt thee. Or rather 2. ſuch as poſſibly thou haſt committed againſt him for which he is incenſed againſt thee; or the greateſt offences or injuries that one Man commits againſt another, and much more thoſe ſlight miſcarriages of thine towards the Ruler. Let not therefore a falſe opinion concerning his unreconcilableneſs to thee, make thee deſperate and draw thee into Rebellion.

5 There is an evil which I have ſeen under the ſun n, as an errour which proceedeth † from the ruler o. † Heb. before.

n I have obſerved another great vanity and miſdemeanour amongſt men. o So the ſenſe is like thoſe errours which Rulers commonly commit. Or rather, which is indeed an errour proceeding from the Ruler. For the following miſcarriage muſt needs come from thoſe who have power of conferring Honour and Power, &c. So the Hebrew, Caph, is not a Note of likeneſs, but of reality, as it is, Judg. 13. 23. Neh. 7. 2. Hoſ. 4. 4. & 5. 10. and oft elſewere.

6 Folly is ſet † in great dignity p, and the rich q ſit in low place r. † Heb. in great height.

p Fooliſh and unworthy Perſons are frequently advanced by the favour or humour of Princes into places of Higheſt Truſt and Dignity, which is a great reproach and miſchief to the Prince, and a ſore calamity to all his People. q Wiſe and worthy men, as is evident, becauſe theſe are oppoſed to fools in the former clauſe: ſuch as are rich in endowments of mind. The ground of the expreſſion may be this, that rich men are capable of all the advantages of men or Books for the attainment of Wiſdom, and therefore are ſuppoſed to be wiſe in ſome meaſure. r Neglected and deſpiſed, or removed from thoſe High places to which their merits had raiſed them.

7 I have ſeen ſervants s * upon horſes t, and princes walking as ſervants upon Earth u. * Prov. 19. 10.

s Men of a ſervile condition and diſpoſition, who are althogether & 30. unfit for places of Dignity. t Riding upon Horſes, as a Badge of their Dignity, as Eſth. 6. 8, 9. Jer. 17. 25. Ezek. 23. 23. u Which was the caſe of his own Father, 2 Sam. 15. 30.

8 * He that diggeth a pit x ſhall fall into it y; and whoſo breaketh an hedg z, a ſerpent a ſhall bite him. * Pſal. 7. Prov. 26.

x With this deſign that another may unawares fall into it. y Shall through God's juſt Judgment be deſtroyed by his own wicked devices. z Whereby another mans Fields, or Vineyards, or Orchards, are diſtinguiſhed and fenced, that he may either enter upon them and take away their fruits, or by that means enlarge his own adjoyning Fields. Poſſibly he may have a particular reſpect unto Magiſtrates or Rulers, whom God hath hedged or fenced in, both with his own Inſtitution of Magiſtracy, and with his Laws, ſtrictly requiring Obedience from their Subjects; and ſo he notes the danger of riſing and rebelling againſt them. a Which oft lurks in hedges, and bites thoſe who come within its reach.

9 Whoſo removeth ſtones b ſhall be hurt therewith c: and he that cleaveth wood d ſhall be endangered thereby e.

b Either 1. The ſtones which belong to others, and limit or diſtinguiſh their Grounds, of which ſee Deut. 27. 17. Or, 2. Great ſtones too heavy for them. Which raſhly attempt things too high and hard for them. Which ſeems better to agree with the following clauſe than the former Interpretation doth. c May eaſily receive hurt by the ſtones falling unexpectedly and violently upon him. d With an Iron inſtrument, as the manner is, he being unskilful in that art. Poſſibly he deſigns a man who cauſeth diſcord and miſchief among Friends, or in a Family, or Kingdom. e May peradventure cut himſelf.

10 If the Iron e be blunt, and he do not whet the edg, then muſt he put to more ſtrength f; but Wiſdom is profitable to direct g.

e To wit, the Ax whereby he cut the wood in the former Verſe, which by the danger there mentioned may be ſuppoſed to be ſharp, but now ſaith he, if it happen to be blunt. f Which is neceſſary to make it cut. g Heb. and wiſdom, &c. And as Wiſdom inſtructs a man in the ſmalleſt matters, ſo in this very matter of cutting of Wood, where it teaches him in this caſe to uſe his utmoſt ſtrength, ſo it is uſeful for a mans direction in all his great and weighty affairs. And ſo he inſenſibly ſlides into the commendation of Wiſdom, and the cenſure of folly, which is the principal deſign and buſineſs of this Chapter.

11 Surely the ſerpent will bite * without inchantment h, and † a babbler i is no better. * Jer. 8. 17. † Heb. a maſter of the tongue.

f If not ſeaſonably prevented by the Art and care of the Charmer; which practice he doth not juſtifie, but only mention by way of reſemblance. See on Pſal. 58. 5. i Heb. a maſter of the tongue: who like a Serpent bites ſecretly; who may be ſo called, becauſe he takes liberty to uſe his Tongue as he liſts, without any regard either to the offence of God, or to the injury of others; like them who ſaid, Our Lips are our own; Who is Lord over us? But I do not ſee either why this Phraſe ſhould be limited to the Detractor, which equally belongs to all abuſers of the Tongue in any other way; or how this particular Vice of Detraction comes to be inſerted here among things of a quite differing nature. Or, 2. Of an Eloquent Perſon, who may well be called a Maſter of the Tongue, or, of Speech, nothing being more uſual in the Hebrew, than to call a Man Maſter of that which he excels in, or hath a full and free power to uſe. And this clauſe is and may be rendred thus, And there is no excellency or profit to the Maſter of the Tongue, i. e. The moſt Eloquent perſon, who doth not underſtand, and in due time uſe the Charmers Art, cannot by all his eloquence afterward hinder the biting of the Serpent, or by all his eloquence afterward hinder the biting of the Serpent, or his miſchievous effects of it: And ſo this agrees with the principal ſcope of the Chapter, which is to ſhew the neceſſity and uſefulneſs of Wiſdom, and the miſchief of Folly.

12 * The words of a wiſe mans mouth are † gracious k: but the lips * of a fool will ſwallow up himſelf l. * Eccl. 10. † Heb. Grace.

k Heb. Grace; as profitable, ſo alſo acceptable to others, procuring him favour with thoſe who hear him. l His diſcourſes are ungracious and offenſive to others, and therefore pernicious to himſelf.

13 The beginning of the words of his mouth is fooliſhneſs: and the end of † his talk is miſchievous madneſs m. † Heb. before.

m All his talk from the beginning to the end is fooliſh and miſchievous, and the more he talks, the more doth his folly appear; he proceeds from evil to worſe, and adds wilfulneſs to his weakneſs, and never deſiſts till he hath done miſchief to himſelf or to others.

14 * A fool alſo † is full of words n: a man cannot tell what ſhall be; and * what ſhall be after him, who can tell him o? * Eccl. 10. 12. † Heb. multiplies.

n Either 1. Talkative. Or, 2. Forward to promiſe and brag what he will do, which is the common practice of fooliſh men: he is a man of words, as we uſe to ſay. o Theſe words contain either 1. A Mimical Repreſentation of his folly in uſing vain Repetitions of the ſame words, ſuch as thoſe, a man cannot tell, &c. and who can tell, &c. Or 2. A confutation of folly in promiſing or boaſting of things which are wholly out of his power: For what ſhall be, no man can either himſelf foreknow, or learn it from others.

15 The labour of the fooliſh wearieth every one of them p, becauſe he knoweth not how to go to the city q.

p Fools diſcover their folly, as by their words, of which he hath hitherto ſpoken, ſo alſo by their actions, and by their endleſs and fruitleſs endeavours after things which are too high and hard for them. q For he is ignorant of thoſe things which are moſt eaſie and moſt neceſſary for him, as of the way to the great City whither he is going, or obliged by his buſineſs to go, which being a great and beaten road, is known even to Children and natural fools, 16 * Wo to thee, O land, when thy king is a child r: and thy princes eat s in the morning t. * Eccl. 10.

r Either 1. In Age. Or, 2. (Which is more agreeable to the following clauſe) in Childiſh Qualities, as Ignorance, Inexperience, Injudiciouſneſs, Raſhneſs, Frowardneſs, Fickleneſs, or Wilfulneſs, and the like, in which ſenſe this word is uſed, 2 Chr. 13. 7. compared with 1 Kin. 14. 21. Iſa. 3. 4, 12. 1 Cor. 14. 20. Eph. 4. 14. s Give up themſelves to eating and drinking exceſſively and intemperately, as it is explained in the next Verſe. t The fitteſt time for God's ſervice, and for the diſpatch of weighty affairs, and for ſitting in judgment, Pſal. 101. 8. Jer. 21. 12. Which circumſtance is added as a plain evidence of men that wholly devote themſelves to vanity and Luxury; which muſt needs occaſion groſs neglect of the great concerns of the Kingdom, the oppreſſion of the people to ſupport ſuch extravagancies, and a woful and general corruption of the people by their example, and otherwiſe; which makes him ſay, Wo to that people.

17 Bleſſed art thou, O land, when thy king is the ſon of nobles u, and * thy princes eat in due ſeaſon x, for ſtrength y, and not for drunkenneſs z. * Pſ. 104.15.

u Not ſo much by Birth, as even the worſt of Kings commonly are, and have been, as by their noble and worthy diſpoſitions, and endowments, and carriages; for ſuch an one is oppoſed to the Child in the former Verſe. Sons of nobles are put for noble perſons, as the ſons of men for men, and the ſons of Phyſicians for Phyſicians. x So as may further and not hinder their main buſineſs. y To refreſh and ſtrengthen their Natures, that they may be fit for action and buſineſs. z Not only nor chiefly to pleaſe their palates, and indulge themſelves in ſenſuality, 18 By much ſlothfulneſs the building decayeth, and through idleneſs of the hands the houſe droppeth through a.

a That Houſe which is neglected by its owner, and not repaired, muſt needs come to ruin. Whereby he intimates, that the Church and careleſſneſs of Princes in the management of publick affairs, which is an uſual attendant upon that Luxury, of which he hath now diſcourſed, is moſt deſtructive both to themſelves, and to their people.

19 A feaſt is made for laughter, and * Wine † maketh merry b: but money anſwereth all things c. * Pſ. 104.15. † Heb. maketh glad the life.

b The deſign and effect of feaſting and drinking Wine, is, that Men may exhilarate their Minds with the ſociety of their Freinds, and with the uſe of the Creatures. c It procures not only Meat and Drink for Feaſting, but for all other things; as the Heavens are ſaid to anſwer the Earth, when they give it thoſe ſhowers which it deſires and needs to make it fruitful, Hoſ. 2. 21. And this clauſe ſeems to be added as an aggravation of the ſin and folly of Luxury, becauſe Princes do thereby waſte that Money and Treaſure which is ſo highly neceſſary for the ſupport and preſervation of themſelves, and of their Kingdoms, and are forced to ſqueeze Money out of their People by oppreſſive and diſhonourable and dangerous practices, that they may have more to ſpend in riotous courſes.

20 * Curſe not the king d, no not in thy † thought e; and curſe not the rich f in thy bed-chamber g, for a bird of the air ſhall carry the voice, and that which hath wings ſhall tell the matter h. * Ex 22.28. † Or, conſcience.

d Having ſpoken of the miſcarriages of Kings, he now gives a caution to their Subjects, that they ſhould not thence take occaſion to ſpeak irreverently or contemptuouſly of them, or wiſh or deſign any evil againſt their Perſons or Government: For though vices may be condemned, whereſoever they are, yet both Reverence and Obedience are due to Magiſtrates, as they are God's Vicegerents and Ordinances, notwithſtanding their vices, as is manifeſt from Rom. 13. 1, &c. 1 Pet. 2. 13, &c. e In the moſt ſecret manner, by giving way to ſuch thoughts or affections; for theſe will very probably break forth into ſuch words and practices. f The Princes or Governors under the King, who are commonly rich: Or any other rich men, who can oppreſs or puniſh thee by their Wealth, as well as Kings can do it by their Power. g Where thy Wife or Servant may hear thee, and afterwards through folly or paſſion diſcover it to thy ruine. h The King will hear of it by unknown and unſuſpected hands, as if a Bird had chanced to be at the window when thou didſt ſpeak the words, and did hear them, and carry the repoſt of it unto the King. It is a Proverbial expreſſion, as when we ſay, Hedges have Ears, and the Walls ſpeak. Hence Kings are ſaid to have long Ears.

CHAP. XI.

Liberality to the poor commanded. We know not what we may come to: God giveth Rain pleaſifully; and our time of doing good is ſhort: Not too much regarding Difficulties: The Providence of God is full of Myſterious Events; which muſt quicken us to Duty and Diligence, 1—6. Life ſweet; but the days of Death ſhall be many, 7, 8. Young Men are Exhorted in the midſt of their delights to think of the day of Judgment, 9, 10.

1 CAſt thy bread † upon the waters a; for thou ſhalt find it b after * many days c. † Heb. upon the face of the waters. * Deut. 15. 10. Pro. 19. 17. Mat. 10. 42

a Solomon having diſcovered diverſe vanities, and amongſt others the vanity of heaping up Riches, he now teacheth us that it is our Intereſt as well as Duty, not ſo much to lay them up, as to lay them out in pious and charitable uſes; and having taught us the true and beſt uſe of worldly things, for our preſent comfort and benefit, which is to enjoy them with a cheatful and contented Mind, he now directs us to the beſt improvement of them, for our future, and greater advantage: and having acquainted us with our duty towards our Superiors, he now directs us in our carriage towards our Inferiors, and eſpecially to ſuch of them as are poor. The ſenſe of theſe words is either, 1. Caſt thy ſeed (which is here called bread, as it is alſo Job 28. 5. Iſa. 28. 28. and elſewhere) beſide (for ſo the Hebrew particle, al, is oft uſed) the waters, i. e. either by the Rivers ſide, or in moiſt and waterſih grounds, which uſually are very fruitful. Or, 2. Caſt (freely and liberally beſtow) thy bread (i. e. thy Money or Proviſions, which are oft ſignified by the name of bread. By ſaying thy bread, he cautions us that we give away only that which is our own, and not that which is anothers; as they do who give either what they get from others by fraud or power, or what they owe to others, and are unable to pay, and ſo exerciſe Charity to the hindrance of Juſtice, or of the payment of their juſt debts.) upon the waters, i. e. upon thoſe poor Creatures upon whom, by reaſon of their unthankfulneſs or inability to make any returns to thee, it may ſeem to be as utterly loſt as the ſeed which a man caſts into the Sea or River. This ſenſe agrees much better, 1. With the words; for he doth not barely mention the waters, (for then the particle, al, might have been tranſlated beſide) but the face, i. e. the ſurface or top, of the waters, in which, and ſuch like caſes, al, conſtantly ſignifies upon. 2. With the deſign and ſcope of the place, which is to perſuade men to be liberal and charitable; notwithſtanding the diſcouragements which they meet with in ſo doing, of which ſee the next clauſe, and the next Verſe. b It ſhall not be loſt, as coverous men, or thine own corrupt heart, may ſuggeſt, but it ſhall certainly be reſtored unto thee, either by God or by Men, and that with great Honour and Advantage. This is added to prevent an objection, and to quicken us to the duty enjoined. c Not immediately, but in due time, and when you leaſt expect it. So you muſt be content to wait for it with Patience, as the Husbandman doth for the fruits of the Earth.

2 * Give a portion f to ſeven, and alſo to eight g, for thou knoweſt not what evil ſhall be upon the earth h. * Pſ. 112.9. Luk. 6. 30.

f A part of thy Eſtate or Proviſions. He alludes to the ancient cuſtom, whereby the Maſter of the Feaſt did diſtribute ſeveral parts to each Gueſt, and withall ſent portions to the poor: of which cuſtom ſee 2 Sam. 6. 19. Neh. 8. 10, 12. Eſt. 9. 22. g To as many as thou art able; a certain number for an uncertain, as, Mic. 5. 5. and oft elſewhere. h Great calamities may come, whereby thou muſt be brought to poverty, and ſo both utterly loſe that bleſſed opportunity of doing good, which now thou haſt in thine hands, whereby thou muſt gain unſpeakable Honour, and Comfort, and Advantage to thy ſelf, and moreover need the Charity of others, which thou muſt comfortably expect, either from Men, or at leaſt from the powerful Providence of God, disposing the hearts of men to pity and help thee, if thou hast been kind and merciful to others; as on the contrary they can expect no Mercy from God or Men, who have shewed no Mercy to others. Thus he not only answers but retorts the Argument by which the covetous man excuseth his uncharitableness, because he must lay up against a rainy day.

3 If the clouds be full of rain, they empty themselves upon the earth i: and if the tree fall toward the south, or toward the north, in the place where the tree falleth there it shall be k.

i Learn, O man, the practice of liberality from the very lifeless Creatures, from the Clouds; which when they are filled with water, do not hoard it up, or keep it to themselves, but plentifully pour it forth for the refreshment both of the fruitful field and of the barren wilderness. k These words contain either 1. An Argument to perfuade Men to Charity, because they must shortly fall or die, and then all opportunity of being charitable will be lost, and they must expect certainly and eternally to reap whatsoever they have sown, whether it hath been Mercy or Unmercifulness. Or rather 2. An Answer to a common Objection against it, because we are not certain whether the person who desires our Charity doth really need it, or be worthy of it. To this he answers, As a tree when it falls, either by the violence of the wind, or being cut down by its owners order, it is not considerable whether it falls Southward or Northward, for there it lies ready for the Masters use; so thy Charity, though it may possibly be misapplied by thee, or abused by the Receiver, yet being conscientiously given by thee, it shall assuredly return to thee, and thou shalt reap the fruit of it.

4 He that observeth the wind, shall not sow, and he that regardeth the clouds, shall not reap l.

l He who neglects or delays the necessary works of sowing and reaping, because the weather is not exactly suitable to his desires, may possibly lose his Harvest. Whereby he intimates what is easily understood out of the foregoing verses, that Men will never do good here, which is expressed by sowing, Psal. 112. 9. 2 Cor. 9. 6. and consequently not receive good hereafter, which is called reaping, Gal. 6. 7, 8. if they be discouraged and hindred from it by every doubt or difficulty, such as covetous worldlings object to themselves, that others either do not want their Charity, or will abuse it, that they may possibly need it hereafter.

‖Or, of the wind. John 3. 8. * Psal. 139. 14, 15.

5 As thou knowest not what is the way ‖ of the spirit m, nor * how the bones n do grow in the womb o of her that is with child; even so thou knowest not the works of God p who maketh all.

m Of the Spirit or Soul of Man, how it first comes into the body of the child in the Womb, whether from God by Creation, or from the Parents by Propagation; nor how it is united with, and so fixed in the Body that it cannot get out of it when it would, nor how and whether it goes out of the Body; all which things are great Mysteries. Others translate it, of the wind, whence it cometh, and whither it goeth, as is observed Joh. 3. 8. or how violently it will blow, or how long it will last. But the former Translation seems to agree better with the following clause. n i. e. The whole Body, which is elsewhere signified by the Bones, as Psal. 34. 20. & 35. 10. because they are a principal part, and the very foundation and support of the Body. o How it comes to pass that one and the same small quantity of seed should diversifie it self into skin, and flesh, and sinews, and veins, and bones, and intrals, or how it receiveth nourishment and growth. p What God is doing and will do with thee or others; the Counsels and Methods of God's Providence in the future time of thy Life, what evil God will send upon the Earth, v. 2. or what weather he will send, of which v. 4. how long or how little a while God will continue thy Life or Estate, and how soon God will call thee to an account. These and many other future events thou canst not foresee, and therefore thy Wisdom and Duty is to cast off all distracting cares, and distrustful fears about them, and chearfully to commit thy self, and all thy affairs, into the Hand of God in well doing.

6 In the morning q sow thy seed r, and in the evening q with-hold not thine hand s: for thou knowest not whether † shall prosper t, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good u.

q Early and late, in all seasons and occasions: do it speedily and continually, be not weary of it. r Do all good works, and especially that of Alms-giving, as sowing is understood, 2 Cor. 9 6. Gal. 6. 7. s From working or giving. t Which shall prosper most, as the next clause explains it; the positive Degree being put for the comparative, or the Superlative, which is not unusual in the Hebrew Text. Which shall best answer thine end, or do most good to others, or which shall tend most to the comfort of thy great and last account: for thy Morning-Alms may possibly be given to an unworthy person, or to one who did not need it, and will abuse it, and thy Evening-Alms may fall upon a person of eminent worth, yea, upon an Angel in humane shape, which is remembred as a motive to Hospitality, Heb. 13. 2. or upon one in extream necessity, who might possibly have perished both in Soul and Body, if thou hadst not comforted and relieved him: Or, one time thou maist give with more sincere Intention, and with more tender compassion than another time, and so one will be more right and more acceptable to God than the other. u Equally successful to the receiver, or to the giver.

7 Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun x.

x It cannot be denied that this present Life (which is called light, Job 3 20. & 33. 30. Psal 56. 13. and which is expressed Synecdochically, by seeing the Sun, Eccl. 6. 5. & 7. 11.) is in it self a great blessing, and very desirable; but it is not perpetual nor satisfactory; which is here implied and expressed in the next verse.

8 But if a man live many years y, and rejoice in them all z; yet let him remember a the days of darkness b, for they shall be many c. All that cometh d is vanity.

y Which is a priviledge granted but to few persons comparatively. z And suppose he enjoy all the comforts, and escape all the imbitterments of humane Life, all his days: which also is a great rarity. a It is his Duty and Interest seriously to consider. b Of death, or of the state of the dead, which is oft expressed by darkness, as Job 10. 21. Psal. 88. 12, &c. and hereis opposed to the foregoing light. c i. e. Far more than the days of this short Life, especially if to the time of lying in the Grave be added that greater and utter darkness which is reserved for impenitent sinners, and which is everlasting, Mat. 22. 13. & 25. 30. 2 Pet. 2. 17. Jud. v. 13. And this is added for the caution of mankind, that they may not rejoice excessively in, nor content themselves with the happiness of the present Life, but may seek for something more durable, and more satisfactory. d All things which befall any man belonging only to this Life, whether they be comfortable or vexatious, they are but vain and inconsiderable, because they are short and transitory.

9 Rejoice e, O young man f, in thy youth, and let thy heart chear thee g in the days of thy youth, and walk in the way of thy heart, and in the sight of thine eyes h: but know thou i, that for all these things k God will bring thee into judgment l.

e This verse is to be understood either 1. As a serious Advice to this purpose, seeing Life is short and transitory, improve it to the best advantage, take comfort in it whilst you may, only do it with moderation, and the fear of God. Or rather 2. As an Ironical concession, such as are usual both in Scripture, as 1 Kin. 18. 27. & 22. 15. Ezek. 28. 3, 4. Mat. 26. 45. and in other Authors. For this agrees much better with the context, and with the Expressions here used. And so the sense is, I foresee what evil use some men will make of what I have now said: Things being thus, Let us eat and drink, for to morrow we shall die; as they also reasoned, 1 Cor. 15. 32. f He speaks to young men particularly, because they have both the greatest ability, and the strongest Inclinations to pursue sensual pleasures, and are most impatient either of Restraint or Admonition. g Indulge thy frolick and jolly humour, and take thy fill of delights. h Whatsoever thine Eye or Heart lusteth after, deny it not to them; as this Phrase is taken, Num. 15. 39. nor is it ever used in a good sense. Compare Job 31. 7. Psal. 81. 12. Jer. 18. 12. 2 Pet. 2. 14. 1 Joh. 2. 16. i But in the midst of thy feastings and jollity it will become thee, if thou art a reasonable Creature, to consider thy reckoning, and whether thou dost not purchase thy Gold too dear. k For all thy follies and sinful Lusts, which thou fleighrest as tricks of youth. l Will force thee to appear before his Judgment-seat, to give a serious account of all thy youthful and exorbitant courses, and to recieve that sentence which thy own Conscience will then say thou dost justly deserve. And if thou likest thy sensuality upon these terms, much good may it do thee, I do not envy thee, nor desire to partake of thy delicates.

‖Or, anger

10 Therefore remove ‖ sorrow m from thy heart, and put away evil n from thy flesh o; for childhood and youth are vanity p.

m i. e. Sensual and disorderly Lusts, which he elegantly and emphatically calls sorrow, with respect to the foregoing words, to intimate, that although such practices do at present gratifie and delight mens Senses and vain Minds, yet they will shortly and certainly bring a man to intolerable and eternal sorrows, which it is thy Wisdom to prevent. m Or as it is rendred in the margent, and by divers others, anger; a passion to which men are most prone in the heat of youth. Whereby he may understand either anger against him for this sharp admonition; or rather against God, who hath laid such severe restraints upon them, and threatens such punishments to them for following their own natural Inclinations. So the sense is, do not quarrel with thy Judge, but submit and make thy Peace with him by declaring War against all thy Sins. n All evil Concupiscences or Lusts, which though now they seem good to thee, will another day appear to be very evil and bitter things. o From thy bodily members. Which he mentions not exclusively, as if he would allow them their spiritual evils, but Emphatically, because young men, to whom he is here speaking, are most given to fleshly or bodily Lusts. p i. e. Most vain, either 1. In their temper and dispositions. Young men are frothy, and foolish, and inconsiderate, whereby they run into manifold dangers, and therefore they shall do well to hearken to the Counsels of those who by their greater Wisdom and Experience, are more capable Judges of these matters. Or 2. In their condition. The time of Youth is vanishing and transitory, and Old-age and Death will speedily come, against which every man in his wits will take care to lay in solid provisions and comforts.

CHAP. XII.

Early Piety recommended before old age come on, and death be near: Old age described; and Death, 1—7. The Conclusion; all is Vanity, 8. The Preachers end in this Book, 9—12. The sum of all Learning, Experience, and Happiness is to fear God, and keep his Commandments; because God will bring all to Judgment, 13, 14.

1 * REmember a now thy Creator b in the days of thy youth c, while the evil days d come not, nor the years draw nigh * when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them e;

* See 2 Sam. 19. 35.

a To wit, practically, or so as to fear, and love, and faithfully serve and worship him, which when men do not, they are said to forget God, Psal. 9. 17 & 106. 21. and in many other places. b The first Author, and continual Preserver of thy Life and Being, and of all the perfections and enjoyments which accompany it, to whom thou hast the highest and strongest obligations to do so, and upon whom thou hast a constant and necessary dependance, and therefore to forget him is most unnatural, and inhumane, and dissingenous. c For then thou art most able to do it, and thou owest the best of thy Time and Strength to God; then thou hast opportunity to do it; and thou maist not live to Old-age: then it will be most acceptable to God, and most comfortable to thy self, as the best evidence of thy sincerity, and the best provision for Old age and Death; and then it is most necessary for the conquering those impetuous Lusts and Passions which drown so many Thousands of young Men in perdition, both in this Life, and in that to come, d The time of Old-age, which is evil, i. e. burdensom and calamitous in it self, and far more grievous and terrible when it is loaded with the sad remembrance of a mans youthful Follies and Lusts, and with the dreadful prospect of approaching Death and Judgment, which makes him see that he cannot live, and yet dare not die, and with the consideration and experience of the hardness of his heart, which in that age is rarely brought to true Repentance, and so generally expires either in vain presumption, or in hellish desperation. e My Life is now bitter and burdensome to me, and worse than death: which is frequently the condition of Old-age.

2 While the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars be not darkned f, nor the clouds return after the rain g:

f Heb. While the sun, and the light, and the moon, &c. That clause, and the light, seems to be added to signifie that he speaks of the darkning of the Sun, and Moon, and Stars, not in themselves, or in their own Bodies, but only in respect of that light which they afford to men. And therefore the same clause which is expressed after the Sun, is to be understood after the Moon and Stars, as is very usual in Scripture in like cases. And those Expressions are to be understood either 1. Literally, of the dimsightedness of old men, by reason whereof the light of the Sun, &c. seems dark to them. Which seems not to agree with the Context, partly because the dimness of their sight is expressed in the next verse, and partly because both this and the following verses are wholly Allegorical. Or rather 2. Figuratively, and that either 1. Of the outward parts of the Body, and especially of the Face, the Beauty of the Countenance, the lightsom and pleasant complexion of the Cheeks, the liveliness of the Eyes, which are compared to the Sun, and Moon, and Stars, and which are obscured in Old age, as the Chaldee Paraphrast understands it. Or 2. Of the inward parts of the Mind, the Understanding, Phancy, Memory, which may not unfitly be resembled to the Sun, and Moon, and Stars, and all which are sensibly decayed in most old men. For it may seem improbable, that Solomon in his description of the infirmities of Old-age should omit the decays of the most noble part of Man, which are commonly incident to Old age. And yet, with submission to those worthy persons who think otherwise, it seems not necessary that he should here speak of those inward decays, partly because they are not so general in old Men as the decays of the Body are; partly because he here directeth his Speech to sensual men who are more affected with corporal than with intellectual maladies; and partly because both the foregoing and following passages concern the state of Mens Bodies and their outward condition. Or rather 3. Of external things, and of the great change of their joy and prosperity, which they had in their youthful time, into sorrow, and manifold calamities, which are usually the companions of Old-age: For this interpretation seems best to agree both with the foregoing verse, in which he describes the miseries of Old-age, and with the following clause, which is added to explain and determine those otherwise ambiguous Expressions; and with the Scripture use of this Phrase, which is the best key for the understanding of Scripture; for a state of comfort and happiness is oft described by the Light of the Sun, &c. as Judg. 5. 31. 2 Sam. 23. 4. Isa. 30. 26. & 60. 20. and a time and state of great trouble is set forth by the darkning of the Light of the Sun, &c. as Isa. 13. 9. &c. & 24. 23. Joel 2. 10. & 3. 15. Mat. 24. 29. and oft elsewhere. g This Phrase notes a perpetual Succession, and Reciprocation of Rain, and Clouds bringing Rain, and then Rain and Clouds again, and so without end. Whereby he expresseth either 1. The Returns or Desluctions which do abundantly and incessantly flow in and from old Men, for want of natural heat and strength to prevent or remove them. Or rather 2. The continual vicissitude of Infirmities, Diseases, and Griefs, in old Men, one Deep calling upon another, and one Affliction beginning at the end of another; whereas in young Men after Rain the Clouds are dispersed, and fair weather succeeds.

‖ Or, the grinders that look out of the windows n be darkned.

3 In the day when the keepers of the house h shall tremble, and the strong men i shall bow themselves and the grinders k cease l because they are few m, and those that look out of the windows n be darkned.

h i. e. Of the Body, which is oft and fitly compared to an house, as Job 4. 19. Psal. 119. 54. 2 Cor. 5. 1. Whose keepers here are either 1. The Ribs and Bones into which they are fastened, which are the Guardians of the inward and vital parts, which also are much weakned and shaken by Old-age. Or rather 2. The Hands and Arms, which are mans best instruments to defend his Body from the Assaults of Men or Beasts, and which in a special manner are subject to this trembling, by paralitical or other like distempers, that are most incident to old Men. i Either the Back, or the Thighs and Legs, in which the main strength of the Body doth consist, which in old Men are very feeble, and unable both for the support of the Body, and for motion. k The Teeth, those especially which are commonly so called because they grind the Meat which we eat. l To wit, to perform their Office. m Heb. because they are diminished, either 1. In strength. Or 2 In number; being here one, and there another, and not united together, and one directly against another, and consequently unfit for their work. n The Eyes. By windows he understands either 1. The holes in which the Eyes are fixed, Zech. 14. 12. Or 2. The Eye-lids, which, like windows, are either opened or shut. Or 3. Those Humours and Coats of the Eyes, noted by Anatomists, which are the chief Instruments by which the Eye sees.

o Or, towards the streets: which lead into the streets. This is understood either 1. Literally; because men, when they are very old keep much at home, and have neither strength nor inclination to go abroad. Or rather 2. Allegorically, as all the other clauses are understood. And so the doors are either 1. The outward Senses, which, as doors, let in outward Objects to the Soul. Or rather 2. The Mouth, or the two Lips, here expressed by a word of the dual number, which are oft called a door, both in Scripture, as Psal. 141. 3. Micah. 7. 5. and in other Authors, which like a door, open or shut the way which leads into the streets or common passages of the Body, such as the Gullet, and Stomach, and all the Bowels, as also the Wind-pipe, and Lungs; which also are principal instruments both of speaking and eating. And these are said to be shut, not simply and absolutely, as if they did never ear, or drink, or speak, but comparatively, because Men in extream Old-age grow dull and listless, having little or no appetite to eat, and are very much indisposed for discourse, and speak but seldom. p Or, because the sound, &c. So this may be added, not as a new Symptom of Old-age, but only as the reason of the foregoing Symptom. The Sense is, When, or because the Teeth, called the grinders, v. 3. are loose and few, whereby both his speech is low, and the noise which he make in eating is but small, And this is one great cause of his indisposedness both to eating and to speaking. Some understand this of Concoction, which after a fort doth grind the Meat in the stomach, and in the other parts appointed by God for that work. But that is transacted inwardly, and Without all noise or sound. q To wit, from his Bed, being weary with Lying, and unable to get sleep. r Either 1. Upon the smallest noise. Which doth not consist with that deafness incident to old Men, and described in the next words. Or rather 2. As soon as the Birds begin to chirp, which is early in the morning, whereas Children and Young Men, can lie and sleep long in the morning. s All those Senses or parts of the Body which are employed in Musick and Song, as well those which make it, as the parts of and within the Mouth, as those which receive it, to wit, the Ears. t Shall be cast down from their former excellency; they are become incapable either of making musick, or of delighting in it.

5 Also when they shall be affraid u of that which is high x, and fears shall be in the way y, and the almond-tree shall flourish z, and the grashopper shall be a burden a, and desire b shall fail: because man goeth c to his long home d, and the mourners e go about the streets:

u The passion of Fear is observed to be most incident to old Men, of which divers Reasons may be given. x Either 1. Of high things, lest they should fall upon them. Or rather 2. Of high places, of going up hills or stairs, which is very irksome to them, because of their weakness, and weariness, and giddiness, and danger, or dread of falling. And this cause, together with the next may be rendred thus, and that agreeably to the Hebrew Text, Also they shall be afraid and terrified, (Two words expressing the same thing, which is very frequent in the Hebrew,) of that which is high in the way. When they walk abroad they will dread to go up any high or steep places. y Left as they are walking, they should stumble, or fall, or be thrust down, or some infirmity or mischief should befal them. z Their heads shall be as full of gray Hairs, as the Almond-tree is of white Flowers. Such Metaphors are not unusual in other Authors. Hence Sophocles calls a gray or hoary Head flowry, and again, covered with white flowers. a If it doth accidentally hop up and rest upon them. They cannot endure the least burden, being indeed a burden to themselves. But the words may be, and are by others rendred, the locust (as the ancient Interpreters, and many others render it; or, as ours, and some others, the grashopper, which comes to the same thing; for these two sorts of insects are much of the same nature and shape,) shall be a burden to it self. And by the locust or grashopper may be understood either 1. The old Man himself, who bears some resemblance to it, in shape, by reason of the bones sticking out, in the constitution of the Body, which is drie and withering, and in the Legs and Arms which are slender, the flesh being consumed. Or 2. The Back, which fitly follows after the Head upon which the Almond-tree flourisheth, in which the strength of the Body lay and which formerly was able to bear great burdens, but now through its weakness and crookedness, is a burden too heavy for itself. And some of the Jewish and other Interpreters understand this word, which others render locust or grashopper, to be some part of the Body, either the Back-bone, or the head of the Thigh-bone, or the Ankle-bone, any of which may well be said to be heavy or burdensome to itself, when it moves slowly and listlelly, and not without difficulty and trouble. b To wit, of Meats, and Drinks, and Musick, and other carnal Delights, which are vehemently desired by men in the heat of their Youth, but are unsavory to old men; of which see an instance, 2 Sam. 19. 35. It is true, the former Expressions are Metaphorical, but the two next following are proper, and to be understood literally, and so may this clause also. c Is travelling towards it, and every day nearer to it than other. d From this place of his pilgrimage into the Grave, from whence he must never return into this world, and into the state and place of the future Life, which is unchangeable and everlasting. e Either such as were hired to that end, of whom see on Jer. 9. 17. Mat. 9. 23. & 11. 17. or true Mourners, near Relations, and dear Friends, accompany the dead Corps through the streets to the Grave.

6 Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern f.

f This Verse is to be understood either 1. Literally, of the ornaments of Life, such as Chains, and Jewels, and Vessels of Gold and Silver, and of the instruments by which the necessary Provisions and supports of Life are conveyed to us, such as Fountains of Water, and Pitchers, &c. which may be said to be loosed or broken because they are neglected as useless things to the dead man. Or rather, 2. Allegorically, of those inward parts of Mans Body which are the chief Instruments of Life, or Sense and Motion, and of the vital or animal operations, whether such from which they first proceed, or in which they are first elaborated & contained, which may fitly be compared to a bowl, and fountain, or cistern; or such by which they are derived or conveyed to the several parts of the Body, which are very conveniently designed by the cord, and pitcher, and wheel; all which are truly said to be loosed or broken, i. e. dissolved, or become useless and insufficient for the performance of their several functions. This in the general. But it seems most probable that Solomon, who was so profound a Philosopher, and doubtless had an accurate knowledge of all the parts of mans Body, and their several offices and operations, doth by these several Expressions describe so many particular parts and offices. By the silver cord it is generally and most probably conceived, that he understands the pith or marrow of the back-bone, which comes from the brain, and thence goeth down to the very lowest end of the Backbone, together with the Nerves and Sinews, which, as Anatomists observe, are nothing else but the production and continuation of the Marrow. And this is most aptly compared to a cord, both for its figure, which is very long and round, and for its use, which is to draw and move the parts of the Body, and to silver, both for its excellency and colour, which is white and bright, even in a dead, and much more in a living Body. And this may properly be said to be loosed, or dissolved, or broken, or removed, as others render the word, the sense of all these Translations being the same, because it is relaxed, or obstructed, or otherwise disenabled for its proper service. And answerably hereunto by the golden bowl he understands the Membranes of the Brain, and especially that innermost Membrane which is called by Anatomists, the pious mother, because it doth with a motherly care defend the Brain, and assist and govern its actions, which insinuates itself into all the parts of the Brain, following it in its various windings and turnings, keeping each parcel of it in its proper place, and distinguishing and dividing one part from another, to prevent disorder and mischief. This is not unfitly called a bowl, partly because it is round, and partly because it receives and contains in it all the substance of the Brain; and a golden bowl, partly for its great preciousness and usefulness; partly for its ductility, being drawn out into a great thinness or fineness, as Gold is capable of being drawn forth into thinner plates than other metals can bear; and partly for its colour, which is somewhat yellow, and comes nearer to that of Gold than any other part of the Body doth. And this is well said to be broken, as for the reason above noted, so because upon the approach of Death it is comonly shrivel'd up, and many times broken. And as these two former clauses concern the Brain, and the animal Powers, so the two following clauses of this verse respect the Spring and seat of the vital Powers and Operations, and of the Blood, the great instrument thereof, which hath been commonly conceived, and consequently is here understood, to be the Liver, but more truly and certainly is the Heart, which is now known and confessed to be the source of the blood. And so Solomon here describes the chief Organs or Vessels appointed for the Production, and Distribution, and Circulation of the Blood in Man's Body. For although the Doctrine of the Circulation of the Blood hath lien hid and unknown for very many Generations together, and therefore the honour of the Invention of it is justly ascribed to a famous Physician of our Country, yet it is not improbably supposed by some, that it was well known to Solomon, although after his times it was lost, as doubtless many other thing were, which he wrote concerning Plants, and other things. According to this notion the fountain here is the right Ventricle of the heart, which is now acknowledged to be the spring of Life, and of the vital Spirits, and the pitcher is the veins which convey the Blood from it to other parts, and especially that arterious Vein, as Anatomists call it, by which it is transmitted to the Lungs, and thence to the left Ventricle of the Heart, where it is better elaborated, and then by the Pulse thrust out into the great Artery, called Arteria aorta, and by its branches dispersed into all the parts of the Body, to give them Life and Vigour, which being done, the residue of the Blood is carried back by the Veins into the right Ventricle of the Heart, whence it is disposed, as hath been now mentioned, and so runs in a perpetual round, unless it be obstructed by some disorder in the Body. And the cistern is the left Ventricle of the Heart, and the wheel seems to be the great Artery which is joyned to it, which is very fitly so called, because it is the first and great instrument of this Rotation or Circulation of the Blood, which by its Pulse is forcibly thrust out into all the parts of the Body, whence, by various windings and turnings, it returns thither again, and so is sent again upon the same journey, which in like manner it performs again and again, as long as Life and Health continue; and when any of these parts are disenabled for the discharge of their Offices, then are they fitly said to be broken. The pitcher may be said to be broken at the fountain, when the Veins do not return the Blood to the Heart, but suffer it to stand still and cool within them, whence comes that coldness of the outward parts, which is a near forerunner of Death. And the wheel may be said to be broken at the cistern, when the great Arteries do not perform their Office of conveying the Blood into the left Ventricle of the Heart, and of thrusting it out thence into the lesser Arteries, whence comes that ceasing of the pulse, which is a certain sign of approaching Death.

And this clause seems to be added partly as the reason of that admirable Harmony and Agreement which is amongst all the men of God in all ages and places, because they are all taught by one Master, and guided by the same Hand and partly to oblige us to the greater Attention and Reverence to all their Doctrines and Counsels, which we are to receive as the word of God, and not of Men only, as it is said, 1 Thes. 2. 13.

Make Conscience of practising whatsoever God requires, how costly, or troublesom, or dangerous, soever it be. n In the Hebrew it is only, the whole: it is his whole work and business, his whole perfection and Happiness, it is the sum of what he need either know, or do, or enjoy.

Or 2. As another Argument to press the foregoing Exhortation, Fear God, and keep his commandments, for you must be called to judgment about it, &c. p Not only outward and visible actions, but even inward and secret thoughts.

CANTICLES.

BEfore I come to the Explication of this Book, some things must be premised concerning it. 1. That it was of Divine Inspiration is so clear and certain, that as the Jewish Writers note, none ever questioned it, although some doubted of some other of Solomon's Writings. And the same Arguments which prove the Divinity of other Books, are found here, such as the quality of the Pen-man, who was confessedly a man inspired by God; the Excellency and Usefulness of the Matter; the sacred and sublime Majesty of the stile; and the singular efficacy of it upon the Hearts of sober and serious Persons, who read it with due preparation; and those other Characters which are commonly known, and therefore it is needless here to enumerate. 2. The form of this Book is dramatical, wherein several parts or parcels of it are uttered by, or in, the Name of several Persons, which are chiefly Four, the Bridegroom and the Bride, and the Friends or Companions of the one, and of the other. Nor is it declared what or when each of them speak, but that is secretly couched, and is left to the observation of the prudent Reader, as is usual in Writings of this Nature. 3. The design of the Book in general is to describe the passionate Loves and happy Marriage of two Persons, and their mutual Satisfaction therein, and the blessed Fruits and Effects thereof. But then it is not to be understood carnally concerning Solomon and Pharaoh's Daughter, as some have fancied, although the occasion of this Love and Marriage may be taken from that, or rather he makes an allusion to that, but spiritually concerning God, or Christ, and his Church and People. This is sufficiently evident from the descriptions of this Bridegroom and Bride, which are such as could not with any decency be used or meant concerning Solomon and Pharaoh's Daughter, as when he is brought in like a Country Shepherd, Chap. 1. 7. and is called his Brides Brother, Chap. 5. 2. and when he gives such high and excessive Commendations to himself, as we shall see, and when she is made the keeper of Vineyards and of Sheep, Chap. 1. 6, 8. and is said to be smitten and abused by the Watchmen, Chap. 5. 7. and to be terrible as an Army, Chap. 6. 4. and to be like Pharaoh's Horses, and to have an Head like Carmel, a Nose like a Tower, Eyes like Fishpools, Teeth like a flock of Sheep, &c. Chap. 7. 4, 5. And there are many such like Expressions and Descriptions, which being applied to them, are abhorred and monstrous. Hence it follows, that this Book is to be understood Mystically or Allegorically concerning that spiritual Love and Marriage which is between God or Christ, and his Church, or every believing Soul. And this will be more than probable to any man who shall consider the following particulars. 1. That the Scriptures both of the Old and New Testament are full of Mystical and Allegorical passages; which being known and confessed, it is needless to prove. 2. That the Doctrine of Christ, or the Messias, and of his being the Head, and Husband, and Saviour of Gods Church or People, was well known, at least to the Prophets, and the wise and pious Israelites, in the time of the Old Testament; whereof we have many manifest and unquestionable evidences, not only in the New Testament, but in the Writings of Moses, in the Books of Psalms and Proverbs, and in the Prophets, as hath been noted in part, and will, God assisting, be further observed in the proper places. 3. That God compares himself to a Bridegroom, and his Church to a Bride, Isa. 62. 5. and calls, and owns himself the Husband of his People, Isa. 54. 5. Hos. 2. 16, 19, 20. In which places, by comparing these with many other Texts of Scripture, by God, or the Lord, is meant Christ, the Second Person in the God-head, who then was to come down, and since did come from Heaven to Earth, for the consummation of that eternal project of Marriage between God and his People. Which also is fully confirmed by the writings of the New Testament, which were designed for the Explication of the Old, in which Christ is expresly declared to be the Bridegroom or Husband of his Church, as Mat. 9. 15. & 22. 2. John 3. 29. 2 Cor. 11. 2. Eph. 5. 23. Rev. 19. 7. & 21. 2. & 22. 17. 4. That the 45*th* Psalm, which is a kind of abridgment of this Book, although it had its rise from, or alludes to the Marriage between Solomon and Pharaoh's Daughter, was written concerning the Messias, as all Interpreters, both Christian and Jewish agree, and concerning the mystical Marriage between Christ and his Church; of which see my notes upon that Psalm. From these considerations, and many others which might be suggested, and which will offer themselves to our thoughts from several passages of it, it is sufficiently manifest, that the main scope and business of this Book is to describe the mutual Love, Union and Communion which is between Christ and his Church in the various conditions to which it is liable in this World, as in the state of Weakness, and Desertion, and Persecution from foolish Shepherds, and the like, Chap. 1. 6, 7. & 3. 1, 2, 3, 4. & 5. 2, 7, &c. Moreover it is to be considered, that Solomon doth here vary his Speech, sometimes speaking of the Church in general, as one Person or Body; and sometimes of the particular Members of it, or of several Believers, both of such as really and sincerely are so, or such as profess to be so, and of their various dispositions and conditions. And hence comes the difference of Persons here mentioned, the Mother, or Spouse, and the Children, or Daughters of Jerusalem, Sixty Queens, and Eighty Concubines, some that are Strangers to the Bridegroom, and some that are well acquainted with him, &c. These things being premised will give great light to the several passages of this Book.

CHAP. I.

A description of the earnest longing of the Church after Christ, 1—4. A confession of her deformity; Prayeth for direction, 5—7. Christ's direction and command, 8. He sheweth his love to Her both for her strength and comliness, 9, 10. and giveth her gracious promises, 11. The Churches commendation of Christ both for the sweetness of Fellowship with him, and the excellency of Ordinances, 12—17.

1 THE song of songs a, which is Solomons b.

a The most excellent of all Songs, whether composed by profane or sacred Authors, by Solomon, or by any other. So this Hebrew Phrase is understood in other cases, as the holy of holies signifies the most holy; and the highest King is called King of Kings; and there are multitudes of such instances, as hath been oft observed. And so this might well be called, whether you consider the Author of it, who was a great Prince, and the wisest of all mortal Men, the two Adams only excepted; or the Subject of it, which is not Solomon, but a greater, or than Solomon, even Christ, and his Marriage with the Church, as hath been noted; or the Matter of it, which is most lofty and mysterious, containing in it the greatest and noblest of all the mysteries contained either in the Old or the New Testament; most pious and pathetical, breathing forth the hottest flames of Love between Christ and his People, most sweet and comfortable, and useful to all that read it with serious and Christian Eyes. Nor is it the worse because prophane and wanton Wits abuse it, and endeavour to fasten their absurd and filthy senses upon some passages in it. The truth is, this Book requires a sober and pious, not a lascivious and foolish Reader: for which reason some of the ancient Hebrews advised young men to forbear the reading of it, till they were Thirty years old. b Which was composed by Solomon: but whether before his Fall, or after his Repentance, is not easie to determine, nor necessary to be known.

2 Let him kiss me with the kisses of his mouth c: * for † thy love d is better than wine e.

c The beginning of this Book is abrupt, and may seem disorderly; but is very suitable to, and usual in Writings of this nature, wherein things are not related in an historical and exquisite order, but that which was first done is brought in as it were accidentally after many other passages; as we see in Homer, and Virgil, and in the Greek and Latine Comedians. These are the words of the Spouse, as all acknowledg, wherein she breatheth forth her passionate Love to the Bridegroom, whom she doth not name, but only intimate by the Pronoun Relative, him, which is here put without and for the antecedent, as Psal. 87. 1. & 114. 2. John 20. 15. Which manner of Expression she useth because it was needless to name him, as being so well known to the person, or persons, to whom she speaks, and being the only person who was continually in her thoughts and speeches. By kisses, which were the usual tokens of Love and goodwill, she means nothing else but the communications and manifestations of his Love and Favour to her, as the following clause explains this; his Graces and Comforts breathed into her from the mouth and Spirit of Christ. d This sudden change of the person is frequent, especially in such pathetical discourses. First she speaks of him as absent, and at a distance, but speedily grows into more acquaintance with him, and by ardent desire and faith, embraceth him as present.

e Than the most delicious meats or drinks, or than all sensual delights, this one kind being Synecdochically put for all the rest, as it is Esth. 5. 6. Job 1. 13. Prov. 9. 2. Eccl. 2. 3.

3 Because of the savour of thy good ointments f, thy name g is as ointment poured forth h, therefore do the virgins i love thee.

f Because of those excellent Gifts and Graces of God's Spirit wherewith thou art replenished, and which flow from thee upon thy Members. g Either 1. Thou thy self, Names being oft put for Persons, as Acts 1. 15. Rev. 3. 4. Or rather 2. Thy fame or report, the very mention of thee, and all those things by which thou makest thy self known to men, thy Word, and particularly thine offers and promises of Pardon and Salvation made to sinners, and all thy works, both ordinary and miraculous, especially that great work of Redemption. h Most lovely, and acceptable, and refreshing. i Called the companions of the Bride, Psal. 45. 14. particular believers, who are called Virgins, 2 Cor. 11. 2. Rev. 14. 4. who have their senses exercised to perceive this sweetness and fulness of Christ.

*Joh.6.44. *Psa.45.14, 15. ‖ Or, they love thee uprightly.

4 * Draw me k, we l will run after thee m: the king n * hath brought me o into his chambers p: we will be glad and rejoice in thee q; we will remember r thy love more than wine: ‖ the upright s love thee.

k By thy Grace and holy Spirit effectually enclining my Heart to come unto thee, as this Phrase implies, Jer. 31. 3. Hos. 11. 4. Joh. 6. 44. 45. As thou hast outwardly called and invited me, so do thou inwardly move me, who am naturally averse and backward to follow thee. l Both I thy Spouse, and the Virgins my Companions. And this change of numbers teaches us that the Spouse in this Book is one great Body, consisting of many Members, of whom therefore he speaks sometimes in the singular, and sometimes in the plural number. m Will follow thee readily, and chearfully, and swiftly; which is opposed to her former sluggishness and listlessness. We will not receive thy Grace in vain, but will improve it, and co-operate with it, and stir up all our strength to serve and obey thee. n Christ, my Husband and Lord, the King of his Church, as he is oft called, the King of Kings, &c. o Heb. hath caused me to come, by drawing me as I desired. He hath answered my prayer. p Where I may most freely and familiarly converse with him, and enjoy him. He hath taken me into intimate communion with himself. These Chambers seem to note either 1. Those heavenly Mansions into which Believers are sometimes said to be brought, even in this Life, as Eph. 2. 6. because they have a lively Faith, and a well grounded Hope and Assurance, and some comfortable foretasts of that blessed State. Or rather 2. Those places and conditions upon Earth, in which they enjoy the special favour and fellowship of God in Christ, as the publick Assemblies, in which Christ is in a peculiar manner present, Mat. 18. 20. where his Word and Ordinances are dispensed, and where he poureth forth his Spirit and Blessings, and speaks great Peace, and gives forth his Loves unto his People. Yea, even the private Closets, wherein Believers enjoy much of Christ by Prayer, and Praise, and Reading, and Meditation, are such Chambers also: For it is not the Place, but the State, or Priviledge, which is here signified, and which is considerable. q Or, For thee, in, or for, thy Love and Favour to us, which is the principal cause of our Joy. r Or, commemorate or celebrate. This shall be the matter of our Thoughts and Discoures. s Those chaste and sincere Virgins mentioned v. 3. who are here opposed to hypocritical Professors.

5 I am black t, but comely u, O ye daughters of Jerusalem x, as the tents of Kedar y, as the curtains of Solomon z.

t It might be objected who art thou, that thou shouldst have or pretend to such a Royal Bridegroom, and such Honours and Favours? To this the Church answers, I confess, as to my self, and outward appearance in the Eyes of the World, I have not that Pomp and Beauty which Men admire, but am black, contemptible and deformed, both for my own Infirmities and Disorders, and for the scandals of some of my own Members, and for the Reproaches and Persecutions of worldly men. She alludes to the complexion of Pharaoh's Daughter, who was black. u Yet I am glorious within, Psal. 45. 13 and comely through the Beauty which my Husband hath put upon me, by his Graces and Blessings conferred upon me, such as Justification and Sanctification, &c. x By which she understands particular Believers, whose Mother Jerusalem is called, Gal. 4. 26. who had joined themselves to her, especially young Converts and weak Christians, who were startled and offended at the contemplation of her blackness. y i. e. Of the wild Arabians, the Posterity of Kedar, Gen. 25. 13. who dwelt in Tents, which were black and uncomely, both in themselves, and by the injuries of the weather, to which they were constantly exposed. z As the Hangings wherewith Solomon's House, was furnished, which none can doubt that they were most beautiful and glorious. So these two last clauses answer to the two first, and that in the same order in which they lie.

6 Look not upon me a because I am black, because the sun hath looked upon me b: my mothers children c were angry with me d; they made me the keeper of the vineyards e, but mine own vineyard have I not kept f.

a With wonder and disdain, because of my blackness, as it follows. b My blackness is not essential, and inseparable, but chiefly caused by the scorching beams of the Sun, i. e. of fore Persecutions and Tribulations, which by God's permission have befain me, which are represented by the Sun. Mat. 13. 6, 21. c False Brethren, who pretend that the Church is their Mother, when their Actions demonstrate, that God, the Husband of the Church, is not their Father; hypocritical Professors, who are, and ever were, the keenest Enemies to the true Church and People of God, Isa. 66. 5. Gal. 4. 29. false Teachers, and their followers, who by their corrupt Doctrines, and Divisions, and Contentions, which they raise, bring great mischief to the Church. See 2 Cor. 11. 26. Gal. 2. 4. d Or, fought against me, as the ancients render it, and so marred my Beauty. e i. e. Of their vineyards, for to these she opposeth her own, in the next clause. Having prevailed against me, they used me like a slave, putting me upon the most dishonourable and troublesom services, such as the keeping of the Vineyards was esteemed, 2 Kin. 25. 12. Isa. 61. 5. Mat. 20. 17. f They gave me such a full and constant employment in their drudging work about their Vineyards, that they left me no time to mind my own; they hindred me from doing my own duty, and from minding my own concerns. And therefore it is no wonder; if in this posture and condition I be uncomely and scorched by the Sun. But because Churches or Societies of Professors of Religion, whether good or bad, are oft called Vineyards, as Deut. 32. 32. Psal. 80. 8. Isa. 5. 1, 2, 7. this and the foregoing clause may be thus understood, that they endeavoured to seduce and corrupt the Church with false Doctrines, and Superstitious, or Idolatrous Worship, and to oblige her to countenance and maintain them, and thereby disturbed and hindred her from her proper work, which was the propagation and advancement of the true Doctrine and Worship in particular Assemblies and Persons, belonging, or to be brought in, to her.

7 Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth g, where thou feedest h, where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon i: for why should I be ‖ as one k that turneth aside l by m the flocks of thy companions n, ‖ Or, as that is g Notwithstanding all these Discouragements and Afflictions which I suffer for thy sake, and for my Love to thee. Being reproached and persecuted by others, I flee to thee, O my only Refuge and Joy, and so I beg direction and help from thee. h Understand thy flock, as Gen. 29. 7. & 37. 16. Seeing false Teachers and Churches bear thy Name, Mark 13. 21, 22. and thy true Church sometimes lies hid, Rev. 12. 14. discover to me which is thy true Church, and which are those Assemblies and People where thou art present, and where thine Ordinances are dispensed in purity and power, and where thou dost and wilst command the blessing, even Life for evermore, as it is expressed, Psal. 133. 3. that I may join my self to them. This is the request of particular Believers. For it must be minded, as that which will be be useful to explain many difficulties in this Book, that the Church in this Book is sometimes considered, and speaketh, or is spoken of, as one entire Body, and sometimes with respect unto, and in the name of her particular Members, and that promiscuously; and, in which of these capacities each place is to be understood, is left to the prudent and diligent Reader to gather out of the words and Context. i In the heat of the day, when the Shepherds in those hot Countries used to carry their flocks into shadowy places. Whereby he means the time of hot persecution, when it is hard to find and discover the true Church, partly because she is deformed by it, and partly because she is obscured and driven into the Wilderness, as is said, Rev. 12. 14. k i. e. Be really one, the particle, as, being here a note of truth, as it is in many other places. Why wilst thou by withdrawing thy self from me, and denying thy direction to me, suffer me, or give occasion to me to be such a one? l Or, a wanderer, or vagrant, like a neglected and forlorn Creature exposed both to censure and danger, from both which it belongs to thee, my Husband, to protect and save me. m Or, about, or towards, as this particle is elsewhere used. n The assemblies of corrupt and false Teachers and Worshippers, by which I am like to be enslaved, if thou dost forsake me. These he calls Christ's Companions, partly because they profess the name of Christ, and their conjunction with him in God's Worship; and partly because they set themselves up in Christ's stead, and usurp his Power in delivering and imposing their own Laws and Doctrines upon mens Consciences, and behave themselves like his equals or companions, not as becometh his Subjects.

8 If thou know not n, * O thou fairest among women o, go thy way forth by the footsteps of the flock p, and feed thy kids q beside the shepherds tents r. * Ch. 5. & 6. 1.

n To wit, where I feed my Sheep. For this is Christs answer to his Spouse or People. o Though thou art black in thine own and others Eyes, yet thou art very beautiful and amiable to me, as being washed white in my Blood, and beautified with my Gifts and Graces. p Observe and follow the paths which my Sheep had trodden before thee, of my faithful Servants, Abraham, and others, whose Examples are propounded for our Imitation, Rom. 4. 12. Heb. 6. 12. For the Church in all Ages is one and the same, and there is but one way for the subsistance, in which all the Saints from the beginning to the end of the World do walk, Christ being yesterday, and to day, and the same for ever, Heb. 13. 8. and the Lamb slain from the foundation of the World, Rev. 13. 8. q Take care for the feeding or teaching of all, and especially of young and weak Christians, who do and shall associate themselves to thee, whom the Holy Ghost calls Lambs, John 21. 15, 16. as here Kids. For although grown and wanton Goats are commonly used in Scripture in a bad sense, yet the Kids of the Goats do sometimes note Believers, as Isa. 11. 6. and Kids were among those Sacrifices which represented Christ, Heb. 9. 12, 13, 14. r Under the conduct, and according to the instruction of my Faithful Shepherds, or Pastors, first and chiefly those who have gone before thee, the Prophets and Apostles, and after, and in subordination to them, and to their Writings, others whom I shall raise from time to time to feed my People with Wisdom and Understanding.

9 I have compared thee s, * O my love, to a company of Horses in Pharaohs chariots t. * Ch. 2. 10, 13.

s Heb. I have made thee like; which may be understood either 1. Verbally, by comparing. Or 2. Really, by making a real resemblance in Quality or Condition. t Either 1. For comeliness; for an Horse is a very flately and beautiful Creature, and the Egyptian Horses were preferred before others, 1 King. 10. 28. Isa. 31. 1. and Pharaohs own Chariot-Horses were doubtless the best of their kind. Or 2. For excellent order and usefulness, as those Horses did equally and orderly draw the Chariot, and carried Pharaoh with ease and speed whither he designed to go. Or rather 3. For strength and courage, to overcome all thine Enemies. For Horses are famous for that property, Job 39. 21, &c. And the strength of the Battle was then thought to consist very much in Horses, Prov. 21. 31. and Chariots, and especially in a Company or Multitude of them. & 4. 1, 7. & 6. 4. Joh. 14. 1.

them. And the Church in this Book is represented not only as fair and beautiful, but also as terrible to her enemies, Cant. 6. 10. Compare Rev. 19. 11, 14.

10 * Thy cheeks are comely with rows of jewels u, thy neck x, with chains of gold y. *Gen.41.42.

u Which being fastened to the Heads of Brides, used to hang down upon and to adorn their Cheeks, according to the manner in those times. He mentions the Cheeks as the chief seat of Beauty: and he intimates that the Churches Beauty is not natural, nor from her self, but from the jewels wherewith Christ adorns her. x Which is mentioned as another visible part and seat of Beauty, Hos. 10. 11. But to accomodate every part and ornament named in this Book, to some particular thing in the Church, seems to have more of Curiosity and Artifice than of solidity and use. y Whereby, as well as by the rows of jewels, he may seem to design all those persons and things wherewith the Church is made beautiful in the Eyes of God, and of men, such as excellent Ministers, and Saints, righteous Laws, holy Ordinances, and the Gifts and Graces of God's Spirit, all which are given by God to the Church, and are her best ornaments.

11 We z will make thee borders of gold, with studs of silver a.

z I thy Bridegroom, with the co-operation of my Father, and of the holy Spirit. Such plural Expressions are sometimes used in Scripture concerning one God, to note the plurality of Persons in one Divine Essence, as hath been noted upon Gen. 1. 26. and elsewhere. a Beautiful and honourable Ornaments, such as those v. 10. Variety of Expressions are used to signifie the various kinds and Improvements of the Gifts and Graces which are bestowed by Christ upon the Church. The Phrase here used may be compared with that of Apples of gold in pictures of silver, Prov. 25. 11.

12 While the king b sitteth at his table, c my spikenard d sendeth forth the smell thereof e.

b My Royal Husband. c Either 1 With the spirits of just men and blessed Angels in heavenly Glory, to which Christ was advanced after his sufferings, and from which he poureth down his Spirit upon his People. Or rather 2 With me in his Gospel and Ordinances, in which Christ entertaineth his People, and is in a special, and gracious, and glorious manner present with them, Mat. 18. 20. & 28. 20. which also is oft represented in Scripture under the notion of a Feast or Banquet, of which see Prov. 9. 1, 2, 3, 5. Isa. 25. 6. Mat. 8. 11. & 22. 12. 1 Cor. 10. 21. d The Graces of his Spirit conferred upon me, and drawn forth by his powerful presence, which is here compared to those sweet Ointments which the Master of the Feast caused to be poured out upon the Heads of the Guests, of which see Mark 14. 3. Luk. 7. 38. in which Ointments Spikenard was a chief ingredient, Joh. 12. 2, 3. e Which notes the exercise and manifestation of her Graces, which is a sweet smelling favour in the nostrils of her Husband, and of her Companions.

13 A bundle of mirrh f is my beloved unto me g; he shall lie all night betwixt my breasts h.

f Or, A bag of mirrh, in which there was a considerable quantity of the Gum which droppeth from the Mirrh-Tree. Mirrh is bitter to the taste, but sweet to the smell, and therefore was ever reckoned amongst the best perfumes. See Exod. 30. 23. Psal. 45. 8. Joh. 19. 39. g He is most precious and comfortable to me, and the Author of my sweet smell last mentioned. h In the place where bundles or bags of Mirrh, or other perfumes hang down, being fastened about their Necks, which yet were taken away, and laid aside by night. But the Church intimates that she will not part with Christ, neither day nor night. Or this Phrase may note the Churches intimate Union with, and hearty Affection unto Christ.

14 My beloved is unto me, as a cluster of ‖ camphire i in the vineyards of En-gedi k. ‖ Or, Cypress

i Or, Cypress, as others render it. It was an odoriferous plant growing in Vineyards, and some think that it was a most pleasant kind of Vine, like that which bears Muscatella Grapes; yea some very learned men understand it of that Plant which dropped balm, which grew in, or near, the place here specified, as is affirmed not only by the Jews, but also by Pagan Writers; as Diodorus and Trogus. Nor are we concerned to know which or what it was; it being confessed and evident, that it was some pleasant and grateful Plant, and that it sets forth that great delight which the Church hath in the enjoyment of Christ. k A pleasant and well watered place in the Tribe of Judah, Jos. 15. 62. Ezek. 47. 10. where there were many pleasant Plants, whence it was called Hazazon Tamar, 2 Chron. 20. 2.

Cant.4.1. 15 * Behold, thou art fair, ‖ my love, behold, thou art fair l, thou hast doves eyes m. ‖ or, my l This is the Speech of Christ. The words are doubled, partly to note the certainty of the thing, notwithstanding her mean and modest opinion of her self, and partly to manifest his high esteem and fervent affection for her, and to assure her, that notwithstanding all her infirmities, he was very well pleased with her. m Which are 1. Comely and pleasant. 2. Modest and humble, not lofty, as the looks of some other Creatures are. 3. Mild and harmless, not fierce and fiery, not looking and watching for prey, as the Eyes of ravenous Birds are. 4. Chast and faithful looking only to their Mates: so that if any of them cast a lustful eye upon another, her companions are enraged against her, and quickly tear her in pieces; as some natural Historians write. And such are the Churches Eyes said to be. And by the Eyes he seems to design partly her Looks, and outward behaviour or Conversation, and partly and chiefly the inward disposition of her Mind, which is commonly discovered, and in Scripture is oft signified by the Eye, in which sense we read of an evil Eye, Prov. 23. 6. Mat. 6. 23. of a bountiful Eye, Prov. 22. 9. of a single Eye, Luk. 11. 34. of a proud or lofty Look, all which signifie such tempers of Mens Minds.

16 Behold, thou art fair, my beloved n, yea pleasant o: also our bed p is green q.

n The Church here again speaks, and retorts Christ's words upon himself; if I am fair, it is only by thy Grace, and favourable acceptation; thou, and thou only art fair indeed, thy beauty is exquisite and perfect. o As thou art beautiful in thy self, so thou art amiable and pleasant in thy condescension to me, and converse with me, in communicating thy blessed Counsels, and Graces, and Comforts to me. p Either 1. upon which we sit at meat, as the manner then was, Esth. 1. 5, 6. Ezek. 23. 41. Or rather 2. Upon which we lie, our nuptial Bed: for the Union and Communion between Christ and his Church is here represented under the notion of Marriage. And accordingly the Bed seems to denote the place or places where the Church enjoyeth fewer fellowship with Christ, by his Spirit accompanying his Ordinances, and imparting his Merits, and Graces, and Comforts to her. q Is pleasant, as that colour is to the Eye; is prepared for us, being adorned with green Garlands, or Boughs and Herbs, as the manner seems to have been with Country Brides, such as the Spouse in this Book is represented to be. Or, as others, both ancient and later Interpreters, render it, is flourishing, i. e. fruitful. So it is an happy presage, that the Church should not be barren, but bring forth many Children to Christ; of which see Isa. 54. 1. &c. By these and the following words, the Church invites Christ to her Bed and House, where she may freely and fully enjoy spiritual Communion with him.

17 The beams of our house are cedar and our ‖ rafters s of firre t. ‖ Or, galleries.

r Not only strong and incorruptible, but also fragrant and delightful. Though I am in my self but a mean and rustick person, yet the House to which I invite thee, and where thou and I shall dwell together, is, by thy favour, built with Cedar. Whereby is here signified the stability of God's Church upon Earth, which is called God's House, 1 Tim. 3. 15. and the firmness and sureness of God's Word and Promises. s The lesser Beams. Or, as it is rendred in our Margent, and by others, Galleries, wherein we may walk. t Or, as the ancients and others render it, of Cypress, which was used in buildings, which also was strong and fragrant, and therefore suits well with Cedars.

CHAP. II.

The excellency of the Majesty of Christ, 1, and of his Church, 2. The benefits which the Church receives from him, 3. Christ's love to his Church, 4. The Church sick of love; her Prayer for help, 5. His care for her in this condition, 6. The Hope and Calling of the Church, 10—13. Christ's care of the Church, 14, 15. The Profession of the Church, her Faith and Hope, 16, 17.

1 I Am the rose of Sharon; a and the lilly of the valleys a.

a These are the words either 1. Of the Spouse, continuing her discourse. Or rather 2 Of the Bridegroom, drawing forth the Churches Affections to him. He compares himself to the Rose and Lilly, for fragancy and beauty. Nor is it in the least degree indecent, that Christ should thus commend himself, partly because his excellency is so transendently great, that he is free from all suspicion of Vanity and Self-flattery; and partly because it is suitable to the stile of such Writtings, and to the present design of recommending himself to the affection of his Spouse. He mentions the Rose of Sharon, which was a very fruitful place, as is evident from 1 Chron. 27. 29. Isa. 33. 9. & 65. 10. and famous for Roses, as may seem probable from Isa. 35. 1, 2. Or, as others translate it, the Rose of the field, which may note that Christ is not only pleasant and beautiful, but free and communicative, offering himself to all that come to him. The Lilly is a beautiful and glorious Creature, Mat. 6. 29. especially to one who beholds it through a magnifying Glass. He saith, The Lilly of the valleys, because they grew and flourished best in such low and watersih grounds.

2 As the lilly among the thorns b, so is my love among the daughters c.

b Compared with Thorns, which it unspeakably exceeds in Glory and Beauty. c So far, and much more, doth my Church or People, excel all other Assemblies or People. The title of Daughter, is oft given to whole Nations; whence we read of the Daughter of Babylon, and of Egypt, and of Edom, &c. Isa. 47. 1. Jer. 46. 11. Lam. 4. 21. These are Christ's words, to which the Spouse makes the following Reply. And it is observable here, that as Christ is here represented as a Shepherd, and the Spouse as a Country Virgin, so the similitudes here used are agreeable to that estate.

3 As the apple-tree d among the trees of the wood e, so is my beloved among the sons. † I sat down under his shadow f with great delight, and his fruit g was sweet to my † taste. † Heb. I delighted and sat

d Whose fruit is very pleasant and wholsom. e Which are either down, &c. barren, or bear ungrateful and worthless fruit. f Being weary and † Heb. pa- heavy laden with manifold sins and troubles, inward and outward, I sat. confidently reposed my self under his Protection (which is commonly signified by a shadow, as Isa. 4. 6. & 25. 4, &c.) and by him was defended from the scorching heat of Gods Wrath, and from the Curse of his fiery Law, and from the mischief or hurt of all sorts of distresses. g The benefits which I received by him, the clear, and full, and certain knowledge of Gods Will, and the way of Salvation, Adoption, and Remission of Sins, Faith and Repentance, and all manner of Grace, and Assurance of Glory. Thus he was to me both a Sun, and a Shield, as is said, Psal. 84. 11.

4 He brought me to the † banqueting house h, and his banner over me i was love k. † Heb. house of wine.

h Heb. House of wine, or, by a common Synecdoche, of feasting. By which he understands the places in which, or the means and instruments by which Believers receive the Graces and Blessings of Christ, to wit, the Holy Scriptures, Ministers, and Publick Assemblies, and all Christ's Institutions. i Or, to, or towards me, by the lifting up or displaying whereof I was invited and encouraged to come into him, and to list my self under him, as Soldiers are by the lifting up of a Banner or Ensign, of which see Isa. 11. 10. and 49. 22. k The Love of Christ crucified, which, like a Banner, is displaid displaid in the Gospel, whereby Sinners are drawn and engaged to come to Christ, see Joh. 3. 14. and 12. 32. 2 Cor. 5. 14. The Motto or Device of Christs Banner was not like those of other great Generals, a Lion, or Leopard or Eagle, but Love, by which alone Christ made all his Conquests.

† Heb. strew me with apples

5 Stay me l with flagons m, † comfort me with apples n; for I am sick of love o.

l Or, Support me, keep me from sinking or fainting. The Spouse speaks this to her Bride-maids, the daughters of Jerusalem, as it is expressed v. 7. or to the servants or Friends of the Bridegroom there waiting, and to the Bridegroom himself; as a person ready to faint cries to any or all that are near to him, or her, for help. m With Wine, which is a good cordial, Psal. 104. 15. Prov. 31. 6, 7. and which was there present, v. 4. Flagons are here, and 1 Chr. 16. 3. put for Flagons of Wine, as it is fully expressed, Hos. 3. 1. or for the Wine contained in them, as the Cup is put for Wine, Luk. 22. 20. by a common Metonymy. n With odoriferous Apples, such as Pomgranates, or the like, the smell whereof was grateful and useful to persons ready to faint. By these Metaphors understand the application of the Promises, and the comfortable and quickning influences of the Spirit. o Either 1. With transports of joy, which sometimes causes a fainting of the Spirits, as Gen. 45. 26. 1 Kin. 10. 5. Or 2. With grief for his departure from her, of which we read, Ch. 3. 1, 2. or for fear of it. Or rather 3. With ardent desire of a stricter Union, and clearer discoveries of his Love, and perfect and uninterrupted Communion with him in Glory. That sickness is somtimes the effect of Love hath been oft observed by Physicians.

*Chap. 8 3. ‖ Or, was. ‖ Or, did.

6 * His left hand ‖ is under my head p, and his right hand ‖ doth embrace me.

p As a pillow for me to rest upon. No sooner did I cry out for help, but he was at hand to succour me, and did manifest his tender Care and dear Love to me.

† Heb. I adjure you. * Ch. 3. 5. & 8. 4.

7 † * I charge you q, O ye daughters of Jerusalem r, by the roes, and by the hinds s of the field t, that ye stir not up, nor awake u my love x, till he please y.

q This verse is spoken either 1. By the Bridegroom, who having reposed the sick Church in his Arms, chargeth them not to disturb her, till she please, as the last clause in this case must be rendred. Or rather 2. By the Bride, as may be gathered, 1. From the connexion because both the foregoing and following words are hers. 2. Because it was more decent for the Bride than for the Bridegroom to give this charge to the Bride maids, the daughters of Jerusalem; and therefore in all places in this Book, where they are mentioned, the person speaking to them is the Bride, and not the Bridegroom, and particularly Ch. 3. 5. & 8. 4. where this verse is repeated, and is confessedly and evidently spoken by the Spouse. r My Bride-maids, Friends, and Members, over whom I have Authority. s Either 1. By the kindness you have to those pretty and amiable Creatures, as you would not injure nor disturb them, nor drive them away, but please your selves with the sight of them, as Shepherds and Country-Damosels commonly do. Or 2. By the Example of those Creatures, which are pleasant, and loving in their carriage towards one another. t Which have their usual abode in the fields. u That you do not disturb nor offend him by your miscarriages, but permit him and me to enjoy a quiet repose. Do nothing to grieve him, or molest me. x My dearly beloved, called Love Emphatically, to express her great passion for him. So Love is used, Cant. 7. 6. and in other Authors. y i. e. Never, as this word, until, in such like Phrases, is commonly used, as Gen. 28. 15. 2 Sam. 6. 23. Isa. 22. 14. For neither can sin ever please him, nor can the Church bear it, that Christ should ever be offended, or that her sweet Fellowship with him should be interrupted.

8 The voice of my beloved z! behold, he cometh a leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills b.

z Methinks I hear his voice. The Spouse being now refreshed and revived with Christ's presence, awakes out of sleep, and breaks forth into this joyful Exclamation. Christ's voice is nothing else but the word of Grace revealed outwardly in the Gospel, or the Evangelical passages of the old Testament, and inwardly to the heart of the Spouse by the Spirit of God. a Either 1. He is coming, or will shortly come into the World; which Solomon and the rest of the old Testament Prophets, and Saints, did earnestly desire and confidently expect. Or 2. He is coming to me for my support and comfort. b He saith, leaping and skipping, to note that Christ came readily, and swiftly, with great desire and pleasure; and he adds, upon the Mountains and Hills, either with respect to Mount Zion or Jerusalem, in and from which Christ first discovered himself: or to signifie Christ's fixed resolution to come in spight of all discouragements and difficulties which stood in his way: or to shew that his coming was manifest and visible to the Eye of her Faith. Or, in this Phrase he may have a respect to the Roes and Harts here following.

* Verse 7. ‖ Or, leaps. † Heb. flourishing.

9 * My beloved is like a roe, or a ‖ young hart c: behold, he † standeth behind our wall d, he looketh forth e at the window f, † shewing himself through the latteſs.

c Either 1. In lovelineſs. Or rather 2. In ſwiftneſs, by comparing this verſe with the former. The ſwiftneſs of roes is noted 2 Sam. 2. 18. 1 Chr. 12. 8. He is coming to me with all ſpeed and will not tarry a moment beyond the appointed and proper ſeaſon. d And whilſt he doth for wiſe and juſt reaſons forbear to come; he is not far from us. Though he be not yet come into the door of our Houſe, yet he ſtands behind the wall of our Houſe, and is always at hand, to give me that ſuccour and comfort which I do or may need and deſire. Both this and the following Phraſes ſeem to note the obſcure and imperfect manner and degree of Chriſt's manifeſting himſelf to his People, either 1. Under the Law, in compariſon of his diſcoveries in the Goſpel. Or 2. In this Life, in compariſon of what he will do in the future Life. e From his high and heavenly palace towards me, to watch over me and refreſh me with the proſpect of his favour. f This Phraſe and that, through the latteſs, intimate that the Church doth indeed ſee Chriſt, but, as through a gloſs, darkly, as it is ſaid even of Goſpel-Revelations, 1 Cor. 13. 12. and was much more true of legal Adminiſtrations.

10 My beloved ſpake g, and ſaid unto me, Riſe up h my love, my fair one, and come away i.

g Invited and called me outwardly by his Word, and inwardly by his Spirit. h Shake off ſloth and ſecurity, and diſentangle thy ſelf more fully from all the ſnares of this World, and of thy own Luſts, that thou maiſt be more ready to come to me, and more fit for my embraces. i Unto me, and with me; follow me fully, ſerve me more perfectly, labour for a nearer Union, and more ſatisfying communion with me.

11 For lo, the winter k is paſt, the rain is over, and gone.

k Which made the ways in ſome ſort unpaſſable, and ſo might ſeem to hinder or affright thee from coming to me. This winter, and the following rain, may be underſtood either 1. Of worldly Tribulations, which he intimates to be paſt and gone, to wit, ſo far that they ſhall not deſtroy nor hurt the Church, but on the contrary do her much good, both by multiplying her Members, and increaſing her Graces, and promoting her Eternal Happineſs. Or rather 2. Of ſpiritual Troubles ariſing in the Minds and Conſciences of Sinners, from a deep ſenſe of the guilt of Sin, the Juſtice and Wrath of God, the Sentence and Curſe of the Law; all which made them afraid to come unto God, and deſirous, if poſſible, to run away from him. But, ſaith Chriſt, I have removed this great impediment, God is ready to be reconciled, and therefore caſt off all diſcouragements and excuſes, and come unto me.

12 The flowers appear on the earth l, the time of the ſinging of birds m is come, and the voice of the turtle n is heard in our land o.

l This and the following clauſes are here alledged as evidences of the Spring time, which, in the myſtical and principal ſenſe, ſeems to ſignifie the day of Grace, or the glad tidings of Salvation propoſed to Sinners in the time of the Law, by Types, and Shadows, and Promiſes, but much more clearly and fully in the Goſpel, and all the diſcoveries and communications of Gods Grace to Mankind in holy Ordinances, in the Gifts, and Graces, and Comforts of the Holy Spirit, vouchſafed unto, and appearing in Believers, as Buds and Bloſſoms do in the Spring time. m When Birds ſing moſt freely and ſweetly, as they do in the Spring. Or, as the ancient Tranſlators render it, of cutting or cropping, not Trees, which agrees not with that ſeaſon, but the flowers laſt mentioned; for Noſegays, or other uſes. n Which changeth its place according to the ſeaſon, as is obſerved, Jer. 8. 7. and by all other Writers, who affirm that it diſappears in Winter, and appears in the Spring, as ſome other Birds alſo do; but this ſeems particularly to be mentioned, becauſe it doth not only give notice of the Spring, but alſo doth aptly repreſent the Spirit of God, which even the Chaldee Paraphraſt underſtands by this Turtle, which appeared in the ſhape of a Dove, and which worketh a Dove-like Meekneſs, and Chaſtity, and Faithfulneſs, in Believers. o In Immanuels Land, as Canaan is called, Iſa. 8. 8. in the Church.

13 The fig-tree putteth forth her green figs p, and the vines, with the tender grape, give a good ſmell q. Ariſe my love, my fair one, and come away r.

p Which it ſhooteth forth as ſoon as it doth Leaves, in the Spring-time, Matth. 24. 32. q Which, though not ſtrong, is pleaſant and grateful, and given by it in the progreſs of the Spring. r Theſe words are here repeated, to ſhew both the Churches infirmity, and indiſpoſition, which needs ſo many Calls and Arguments to preſs to neceſſary and advantageous a Duty; and Chriſts tender compaſſion her weakneſs, and fervent deſire of converſe with her.

14 O my dove s, that art in the cleſts of the rock t, in the ſecret places of the * ſtairs u, let me ſee thy countenance x, * let me hear thy voice y; for ſweet is thy voice, and thy countenance is comely z.

* Ezek. 41. 7. * Ch. 8. 13.

s So the Church is called, partly for her Dove-like Temper and Diſpoſition, becauſe ſhe is chaſte, and mild, and harmleſs, &c. and partly for her Dove-like Condition, becauſe ſhe is weak, and expoſed to Perſecution, and given to Mourning, as Doves are, Iſa. 38. 14. & 59. 11. Ezek. 7. 16. and ſubject to many Fears, and therefore forced to hide her ſelf in Rocks, as it follows, t Where ſhe hid her ſelf, either 1. For fear of her Enemies, whom to avoid ſhe puts her ſelf into the Protection of the Almighty. Or 2. Out of Modeſty, and an humble ſenſe of her own Deformities, and Infirmities, which makes her endeavour to hide her ſelf even from her Beloved, as aſhamed to appear in his preſence, which is frequently the caſe of God's People, eſpecially after falls into ſin. And this ſenſe ſeems to be favoured by the following words, in which Chriſt relieveth her againſt ſuch diſcouraging thoughts. u In the holes of craggy and broken Rocks, which reſemble ſtairs. So the ſame thing is here repeated in other words. x Be not afraid nor aſhamed to appear before me, come boldly into my preſence and acquaint thy ſelf with me. y Thy Prayers and Praiſes z Thy Perſon and Services are accepted by me, and are amiable in my ſight.

15 Take a us * the foxes c, the little foxes d, that * ſpoil the vines e: for our vines have tender grapes f.

* Ezek. 13. 4. Luke 13. 32.

a The Bridegroom gives this charge to his Bridemen or Friends, whoſe Office it is to attend upon him, and to obſerve his Commands. 32. By whom he underſtands thoſe Magiſtrates and Miniſters to whom, under Chriſt, the cuſtody of the Vineyards, to wit, the Churches principally belong. Theſe he commands to take the Foxes, i. e. to reſtrain them from doing this miſchief. b Heb. for us i. e. at our inſtance, and for our common good, as this ſpoiling of the Vines was injurious and grievous to them both. c The diſturbers of the Vineyard, or the Church, Seducers or falſe Teachers, who are fitly compared to Foxes here, and Ezek. 13. 4. partly to diſtinguiſh them from great Tyrants and Perſecutors, who are compared to wild Boars, or other wild Beaſts, Pſal. 80. 13 as to Lions, 2 Tim. 4. 17. and partly for their fox-like qualities and actions, becauſe they are very crafty crafty and deceitful, 2 Cor. 11. 13, 14. Eph. 4. 14. and very miſchievous alſo, Ezek. 34. 2, 3. 2 Tim. 2. 17. Tit. 1. 10, 11. 2 Pet. 2. 2. He mentions Foxes, becauſe theſe abounded in that Country, as is manifeſt from Judg. 15. 4. Pſal. 63. 10. Lam. 5. 18. &c. but under them he comprehends all noxious Creatures, upon the ſame reaſon. d This he adds, not as if the great Foxes were excuſed or exempted, but for more abundant caution, to reach the Church to prevent Errors and Hereſies in the beginnings of them before they ſpread, and grow ſtrong and incurable. e Which Foxes do many ways, as thoſe who write of them have obſerved, by gnawing and breaking the little Branches and Leaves, and the Bark, by digging holes in the Vineyards; and ſo ſpoiling the Roots, by eating the Grapes, and other ways. f Which gives us hopes of a good Vintage, and which are eaſily ſpoiled, if great care be not uſed to prevent it.

16 * My beloved is mine, and I am his g: he feedeth among the lilies h.

* Ch. 6. 3.

g Theſe are the words of the Bride, who having come to him upon his gracious Invitation, now maketh her boaſt of him, and of that intimate Union and Communion which was between them. h Either 1. He feedeth his flock in ſweet and lovely Paſtures, where there is not only Herbage to feed them, but Lilies to delight them. Or rather 2. He feedeth himſelf, i. e. he abideth and refreſheth himſelf amongſt his faithful People, which are compared to Lilies, above v. 2. and Hoſ. 14. 5. as Chriſt alſo is here, v. 1.

* Ch. 4. 6. 17 * Until the day † break, and the ſhadows flee away i: turn k my beloved, and be thou * like a roe, or a young hart l upon the mountains ‖ of Bether m.

† Heb. blow. * Ch. 2. 17. & 4. 6.

i Until the morning of that great and bleſſed day of the general Reſurrection and Judgment, when all the ſhadows, not only of Ignorance, and Sin, and Calamity, but even of all Ordinances, and outward Adminiſtrations, ſhall ceaſe, and make way for the immediate enjoyment of my Beloved. And this clauſe may be joined, either 1. With the foregoing words, and ſo the ſenſe is, Chriſt doth and will abide with his Church as long as this Life and World laſts; which agrees with Chriſt's Promiſes of being with his Church to the end of the World, Mat. 28. 20. But neither that nor this place imply that Chriſt will then forſake his People, but only ſecures God's People againſt that which was the chief, if not only, matter of their fear, to wit, leſt Chriſt ſhould leave them, and caſt them off in this Life, which if he did not, they were aſſured that hereafter, they ſhould be ever with the Lord, 1 Theſ. 4. 17. For it is well known, and hath been oft obſerved already, that the word, until, doth not always exclude the time to come. Or 2. With the following words. Turn thou my Beloved until the day break, &c. k Return to me. For although Chriſt had come to her, and ſhe had gladly received and embraced him, yet he was gone again, as is here implied, and evidently appears from the next following verſe. Which ſudden change is very agreeable both to the nature and method of ſuch dramatical Writings, and amatorious Tranſactions, and to the ſtate of God's People in this World, where they are ſubject to frequent changes and viciſſitudes of Chriſt's withdrawing from them, and returning to them again. l In ſwiftneſs; make haſt to help me, for I am ready to faint. m A place in the Land of Promiſe, poſſibly the ſame called Bithron, 2 Sam. 2. 29. where it ſeems thoſe Creatures were in great abundance, or where they were commonly hunted, and ſo being purſued, they made all poſſible haſte to eſcape.

CHAP. III.

The Church ſeeking Chriſt, 1—3. Her great joy ſhe findeth him, 4. Her charge to the Daughters of Jeruſalem, not to awake Her Beloved, 5. The manner of Chriſts coming out of the Wilderneſs, 6. His Bed, Guard and Chariot, 7—9. Its Maker, Matter, and Furniture, 10. An invitation of the Faithful to the Kingdom of Glory, 11.

1 BY night on my bed a I ſought him b whom my ſoul loveth, I ſought him c, but I found him not d.

a Either 1. In a time of Tribulation, which is commonly ſignified by the Night, and ſometimes by a Bed, as Revel. 2. 22. Or 2. When I expected to find him; for the Huſband who by his occaſions is oft forced to be abſent from his Wife in the day time, but at night returns to her, and beds with her. Or 3. When others compoſe themſelves to reſt and ſleep, my Thoughts were troubled and my Affections were working towards him, and I was very deſirous to enjoy him. b I ſought for Chriſt's gracious and powerful Preſence, in, and by the Word, and Prayer, and Meditation. c This repetition notes her perſeverance and unwearidneſs in ſeeking him. d For he had withdrawn himſelf, and the manifeſtations of his Love from me, either becauſe I had not ſought him diligently, or becauſe I had abuſed his favour, or to try and exerciſe my Faith, and Patience, and Love, and other Graces.

2 Now I will riſe e and go about the city f in the ſtreets, and in the broad ways g, I will ſeek him whom my ſoul loveth: I ſought him, but I found him not h.

e I will immediately apply my ſelf to ſeek him, without whom my bed can give me no reſt nor comfort. f The City of God, the Church in which Chriſt reſides. g Not finding him in private Prayer, and Meditation, I ſought him in the places of publick Aſſemblies, and Ordinances; for the People frequently met together in the ſtreets, not only for civil, but for religious ends, 2 Chron. 32. 6. Neh. 8. 1, 3, 16. Prov. 1. 20, 21. Luk. 13. 26. h He ſaw fit ſtill to delay the diſcoveries of his Grace, partly to chaſtiſe my former folly, partly to try my ſincerity and conſtancy, and partly that he might be more welcome when he came to me.

3 * The watch-men i that go about the city k, found me l: to whom I ſaid m, Saw ye him whom my ſoul loveth n?

* Ch. 5. 7.

i The Miniſters of Chriſt, and Rulers of the Church, who are often called Watch-men, as Iſa. 62. 6. Ezek. 3. 17. and elſewhere. k To prevent diſorders and dangers by night. l Whilſt they walked round about the City, according to their duty. m Without either fear or ſhame, as being tranſported and wholly ſwallowed up with Love. n She doth not name him, becauſe ſhe thought it needleſs, as ſuppoſing that a Perſon of ſuch tranſcendent excellency could not be unknown to men in that publick capacity. Their anſwer is not mentioned either becauſe they gave her no anſwer, at leaſt no ſatisfactory anſwer, or becauſe by their ſilence ſhe gathered that they were unable, or unwilling to inform her; and being eager in the purſuit of her beloved, ſhe would not loſe time in impertinent diſcourſes with them.

4 It was but a little that I paſſed from them, but I found him o whom my ſoul loveth: I held him, and would not let him go p, until I had brought him into my mothers houſe q: and into the chamber of her that conceived me r.

o Chriſt met me, and manifeſted his Love to me, according to his Promiſe made to thoſe that ſeek him conſtantly and diligently, Prov. 8. 17. Mat. 7. 7. &c. p Being taught by my late experience how doleful a thing it was to loſe him, and how hard it was to find and recover him when he was loſt. q That there I might entertain and embrace him, and gain my Mothers conſent, and to proceed to the conſummation of the Marriage. She ſaith her Mothers, rather than her Fathers, Houſe, becauſe the Men and the Women had ſeveral and ſeparated apartments in the Houſe. For the myſtical meaning which is the principal ſenſe intended in this Book, as the Spouſe here, and in many other places of this Book, ſignifies particular Believers, ſo her Mother is the univerſal Church, or the true Jeruſalem, which hath its riſe from above, which is the Mother of us all, Gal. 4. 26. in which Chriſt and Believers are united, and have ſweet communion together in holy Ordinances, into which Believers are ſaid to bring Chriſt by Faith, and Prayer, and the preparation of their Hearts for him, whereby they invite and in ſome ſort ingage Chriſt to go with them into the publick Aſſemblies, and there to give them his Loves, although otherwiſe it is Chriſt who properly brings Believers into the Church. But all particulars in Allegorical Scriptures, are not to be ſtrictly urged, as all learned Interpreters agree, many being added only for the decency of the Allegory. r Chriſt is as it were the Father that begets, and the Church the Mother that conceiveth and bringeth forth Believers.

* Ch. 2. 7. & 8. 4.

5 * I charge you, O ye daughters of Jeruſalem, by the roes, and by the hinds of the field, that you ſtir not up, nor awake my love till he pleaſe s.

s This verſe is repeated from Ch. 2. 7. where it is explained. The Spouſe exhorts her ſelf, and all her Fellow-Members to be very circumſpect, leſt by any unkind or provoking carriage, they ſhould give Chriſt any cauſe to depart from them. He is ſuppoſed to allude to the cuſtom of awakening the Bridegroom and Bride by Songs and muſical inſtruments.

* Ch. 8. 5. 6 * Who is this t that cometh out of the wilderneſs u like pillars of ſmoak x, perfumed y with myrrh and frankincenſe, with all powders of the merchant z?

t The perſons ſpeaking ſeem to be the Daughters of Jeruſalem, who upon occaſion of the Brides Speech to them, make this reply, or the Friends of the Bridegroom: The perſon ſpoken of is the Spouſe or Bride. u From the Country, which in compariſon of Cities, is oft called a Wilderneſs, as Iſa. 42. 11. Luk. 1. 80. & 3. 2. and elſewhere, from whence we little expected to ſee ſo beautiful and glorious a Bride to come, ſuch Perſons being uſually bred in Courts or noble Cities. This Phraſe implies that Believers were, and were to be called out of the World, which for its barrenneſs, and diſorder, and repleniſhment with wild Beaſts, may fitly be compared to a Wilderneſs, and not only out of the Holy Land, which was as the Garden of God, but alſo out of the Gentile-World, which in Prophetical Writings is frequently deſcribed under the notion of a Wilderneſs, as Iſa 35. 1. & 43. 19, 20. Withal he ſeems to allude to the People of Iſrael, which to the wonder and aſtoniſhment of all thoſe parts came up out of the Wilderneſs into Canaan. x To which the Church may not unfitly be compared, partly for its excellent order and comely proportions, partly for its direct and conſtant motion towards Heaven, and partly to imply that though ſhe was really and inwardly glorious, yet ſhe was outwardly obſcure and deſpicable in the eyes of the World. Poſſibly the words may be rendred thus, as with (which particle is very frequently underſtood, as hath been ſhewed in divers foregoing Texts) Pillars or a Pillar (for the plural number is oft put for the ſingular) of ſmoak. And ſo the ſenſe may be either 1. Being conducted out of the Wilderneſs as by a Pillar of ſmoak going before them, as the Iſraelites were led through the Wilderneſs to Canaan, by a Pillar of Cloud and Fire, Exod. 13. 21, 22. Or rather 2. Attended with many Prayers and Praiſes, and other holy performances, which are perpetually aſcending from her, and offered by her unto God. So he alludes to thoſe Pillars of ſmoak which all the day long aſcended from thoſe numerous Sacrifices which were offered in the Temple, which alſo was a Type of the Prayers of the Saints offered by Chriſt unto his Father, as may be gathered from Rev. 8. 3, 4, 5. But this I only propoſe. y This doth not belong to the Pillars, as appears by the difference of the numbers in the Hebrew words, the Pillars being plural, and this word ſingular, but to the Perſon, to wit, the Spouſe, who is ſaid to be that perfumed, partly for her good Name or Renown, which is compared to perfumes, Eccl. 7. 1. partly for her excellent Virtues and religious Services which are pleaſant and acceptable to God, and to Angels, and Men; and partly for the Merits and Graces of Chriſt, which are a ſweet ſavour to God, Eph. 5. 2. and wherewith ſhe is enriched and beautified. z Which are fetched by the Merchants from Arabia, or other remote parts of the World for the uſe of perfuming.

7 Behold, his bed a, which is Solomons b, threeſcore c valiant men are about it, of the valiant of Iſrael d.

a Theſe are the words either 1. Of the Bride-men, who ſpake v. 6. and here continue their ſpeech, and from the admiration of the Bride proceed to the admiration of the Bridegroom. Or 2. Of the Spouſe, who being admired by the Bridemen, turns their Eyes and Thoughts to the Bridegroom, and directs them to the study of his excellencies, and intimates that all her comfort and safety is from him. The Bed, the place of rest and conjugal converse, seems to denote the Church, which is comely through Christ's Beauty, and safe by his Protection, in which Christ is glorified, and Believers enjoy sweet fellowship with him, both here in the Church militant, and especially hereafter in the Church triumphant. b Which is the Bed, not of an ordinary Man, but of a great King, whom Solomon represents or typifies, and who is greater than Solomon. Nor is it hard to understand the Messias under the name of Solomon, his Type and Progenitor, seeing he is, upon the same reason called David, Jer. 30. 9. Ezek. 34. 23. and elsewhere, especially considering that this whole Book is by the confession both of Jewish and Christian Interpreters to be mystically understood. c i. e. very many, the certain number being put for an uncertain, as is frequent. d He alludes to Solomon's Guard, or Watchmen, whereby he designs all those Creatures, whether Angels Princes, Ministers, or others, whose Ministry God useth for the Protection of his Church.

8 They all hold swords, being expert in war: every man hath his sword upon his thigh e, because of fear in the night f.

e Is prepared and ready to fight, as this Phrase notes, Exo. 32. 27. Psal. 45. 3. f To prevent those dangers and mischiefs which are most frequent, and most dreadful in the night season. The night may note either 1. The time of Tribulation, Temptation, or Desertion; Or 2. The whole time of this Life, which may well be called night in respect of that Ignorance and Error, and other kinds of Darkness wherewith it is attended, as the future Life is compared to a day, this Life being the only time wherein such a Guard is necessary.

9 King Solomon made himself a ‖ chariot g of the wood of Lebanon h. ‖ Or, bed.

g In which the Royal Bridegroom and Bride might ride together in State, as the manner was in the nuptial solemnities of such Persons. By this Chariot he seems to understand the Word of Christ dispensed by his Ministers in the Church, whereby both Christ is exalted and rides triumphantly in the World, conquering his Enemies, and subduing the World to the Obedience of the Gospel, and all Believers are carried with safety and comfort through this present evil World into those blessed Mansions of heavenly Glory. h i. e. Of Cedars, for which Lebanon was famous: which wood being incorruptible doth fitly signifie the Word of the Gospel, which endureth for ever, 1 Pet. 1, 25. and is called the everlasting Gospel, Rev. 14. 6. in oppositon to the Legal institutions, which were to continue only until the time of Reformation, as we read Heb 9. 10.

10 He made the pillars thereof i of silver, the ‖ bottom k thereof of gold, the covering l of it of purple m? the midst n thereof being paved o with love p, † for the daughters of Jerusalem q. ‖ Or, bed. † Heb. from the daughters.

i Whereby the Chariot is either supported or adorned. Which may signifie either 1. Ministers, who are called Pillars, Gal. 2. 9. and that of silver, because they are, or should be, pure and precious like silver. Or 2. The firmness and certainty of Christ's Word, both of his Doctrines and Promises, which also are pure as silver, Psal. 12. 6. Although there is no necessity that either this or the following particulars should be distinctly applied to several things in or about the Gospel; but this in the general may suffice, that as all these particulars are added to shew the perfection and Beauty of the Chariot, so they do imply that Christ's Word is every way amiable, and perfect, and able to make the man of God perfect. k Either 1. The couch or seat, which was made of, or covered with cloath of Gold. Or 2. The under and lower part, which was at least covered with pure Gold. Whereby he may seem to understand the foundation of the Word and Promises, which is either God's Covenant, or Christ's Mediation, in whom all the Promises are Yea and Amen. l Either 1. The curtains whereby Persons in the Chariot are covered or hid from the sight of the People. Or rather 2. The uppermost part of it, either in the outside or the inside of it. Some render the word, the seat or seats. m Which represents Christ's Blood, which is our Propitiatory or covering to shelter us from God's Wrath. n The inward parts, especially those between the upper and lower parts, which have been already mentioned. o Covered and adorned. p With beautiful and lovely Ornaments, such as curious Embroidery, enriched with Gold and precious stones: Love being here put for lovely Objects, as Fear is oft put for terrible things, as hath been oft noted. Whereby we may understand the Love of Christ to the Sons of Men, or his lovely Life, and Death, and Resurrection, &c. which is the most amiable part and matter of the Word or Gospel. q For their delight and comfort, who are all concerned, and bear a part in this Marriage.

11 Go forth r, O ye daughters of Zion s, and behold king Solomon t with the crown wherewith his mother crowned him u in the day of his espousals x, and in the day of the gladness of his heart y.

r The Bride, to wit, the Church, bids particular Believers go forth to see this sight. Whereby is implied, that Christians must go out of the World, to wit, in affection, and out of themselves, by denying themselves, and putting off the old man, their corrupt Nature, if they desire to see and enjoy Christ. s The same with daughters of Jerusalem; for Zion and Jerusalem are oft times promiscuously used in Scripture. t Looking in and through him upon the Messias, who is the King of Peace, and of whom Solomon was an illustrious Type u Which being applied to Solomon, may design either 1. The Crown Royal, wherewith his Mother, Bathsheba, is said to have crowned him, because Solomon was crowned by David's Order upon her suggestion, and by virtue of his Promise confirmed by an Oath to her, 1 Kin. 1. 16, &c. Or 2. That Garland or Crown which was usually worn in nuptial solemnities, as may be gathered from Ezek. 16. 12. and is expressly affirmed by divers ancient Writers. But being applied to Christ, it notes that Honour and Glory which was given to him, which though principally done by his Father, yet is here ascribed to his Mother, i. e. to the universal Church, or Congregation of Believers, which in respect of his Humanity may be called his Mother, partly because he was born in, and of her, and one of her Members, and therefore was subject to her Institutions, whence she is represented as a Woman in travel, bringing forth a Man-child, to wit, Christ, Rev. 12. 1—5. and partly because in a Spiritual sense she is said to conceive and bring forth Christ in particular Believers, Gal. 4. 19. And this Mother may be said to crown Christ, both because it is the great design and business of the Church to advance Christ's honour in the World, and because she brings forth Believers, whom Christ esteems as his Crown and Glory, as God calls them, Isa. 62. 3. x When the Church is betrothed or married to him, Jer. 2. 2. Hos. 2. 19. 2 Cor. 11. 2. which is done when the Covenant is made or confirmed between them, or when faithful persons are converted and united to Christ, and more compleatly when they are received by Christ into his more full and immediate fellowship in the Kingdom of Glory. y When he rejoiceth over his Bride, as the Phrase is used, Isa. 62. 5. So this is the same thing expressed in other words. The Conversation and Salvation of sinners is the joy of Christ, as appears from Isa. 53. 11. Luk. 15. 32. and many other places of Scripture.

CHAP. IV.

Christ commendeth his Church for her beauty, 1—7. He calleth her to go with him, 8. Manifesting his Love and Affection for her, 9. A further commendation of her, 10—15. She prayeth for the effectual operation of his Holy Spirit on her to make her fruitful, 16.

1 *Behold a, thou art fair b, my love, behold, thou art fair c, thou hast doves eyes d within thy locks e: thy hair f is as a * flock of goats g, ‖ that appear from h mount Gilead i. *Ch. 1. 15. & 5. 12. *Ch. 6. 5. ‖ Or, that sit

a These and the following words are evidently spoken by the Bridegroom to, and concerning, his Spouse. b Not in thy self, but by my beauty, being cloathed with my Righteousness, and adorned with all the Graces of my Spirit, which I acknowledge to be in thee. c He repeats it both to confirm the Truth of his Assertion, and to shew the sincerity and fervency of his Affection to her. d Thou art harmless, chaste, &c. as appears by thine Eyes, which commonly discover the temper of the Mind or Person. See more of this Phrase Ch. 1. 15. And whereas the beauty of the Spouse is here described in her several parts, we need not labour much about the Application of each particular to some distinct Member or Grace of the Church, this being the chief design of this description of a Bride which is beautiful in all points, to shew that compleatness and absolute perfection which the Church hath in part received, and shall more fully receive from Christ in the future Life. Yet because the Church is a Body, consisting of divers Members, and enriched with variety of Gifts and Graces, I know no reason, but the several parts of this description may have a more special regard to one or other of them. And to her Eyes may here note either 1. Her Teachers, who are instead of Eyes to her, as the Phrase is, Num. 10. 31. whence they are called Seers and Guides, &c. Or 2. The disposition of her Mind or Heart, which is compared to the Eye, Mat. 6. 22. 23. and is oft discerned in the Eye. e Which being decently composed make the Eyes appear more amiable; withal this intimates the modesty of her Looks: her Eyes are not wanton, and wandring, or lofty, but sober, and humble, and confined within their proper bounds, looking directly upon her Husband, not looking asquint upon other Lovers, nor minding other Gods or Christs. If the Eyes signifie Teachers, the Locks may note the People assembled together to hear their Teachers, to whom they are a great Ornament when they thrive by his Teaching. f The Hair of thine Head, which is a great Ornament to the Female Sex, 1 Cor. 11. 15. This Hair may signifie either 1. The inward Thoughts and Meditations: Or rather 2. The outward Conversation, and visible fruits of Holiness, which do greatly adorn the Professors and professionof Religion, as Hair doth the Head, as is implied 1 Tim. 2. 9. 10. 1 Pet. 3. 3, 4, 5. g Which are comely and orderly in going, Prov. 30. 29, 31. and afford a goodly prospect. Or rather, as the hair (which word is here to be understood, as appears both from the comparison itself, and from divers places where Goats are put for goats hair, as it is in the Hebrew Text, Exod. 25. 4. & 26. 7. & 35. 26.) of a flock of goats, which in these parts was of extraordinary length, and thickness, and softness, and comeliness, and much more like to the Hair of a Man or Woman than the Hair of our Goats is, as is evident both from Scripture, as Gen. 27. 16. 1 Sam. 19. 13. and from the Testimony of other ancient Writers, as Apuleius, Martial, &c. h That feeding there, or coming down thence, or going up thither, shew themselves evidently to those who stand below it, or near them. Or, as it is rendred in our margent, and by others, that eat, or graze of, or upon. i Which he mentions as a very fruitful place, and fit for the breeding of all sorts of cattel, as is manifest from Num. 32. 1. Jer. 50. 19. Mich. 7. 14. and especially of Goats, partly because it was an hilly and woody Country, and partly because it abounded with rosinous, and oily, and gummy Trees, as appears from Gen. 37. 25. Jer. 8. 22. & 46. 11. wherewith the Goats are much delighted, as Dioscorides observes. And some affirm that the Hair of these Goats, was commonly of a yellow colour, as may seem probable from Sam. 19. 13, 16. compared with 1 Sam. 16. 12. and from Cant. 7. 5. which also was in ancient times esteemed a beauty in Men or Women, as the Learned know.

2 Thy teeth are like a flock k of sheep that are even shorn m, which came up from the washing: whereof every one bear twins n, and none is barren among them o.

k Numerous and placed in due order. l Which is here fitly supplied out of Cant. 6. 6. where it is expressed. m Smooth and even, as also clean and white, whereas unshorn sheep retain much filth in their wool, even after their washing. n Which seems to note the two rows of Teeth, like Twins, one directly answering to the other; which is a great part of the Beauty or comeliness belonging to the Teeth. Not let any wonder to hear of sheep bearing Twins; for that there were many such in the Eastern Countries is apparent, not only from holy Scripture, but also from the express Testimony of Aristotle, and other ancient Writers. o Not one Tooth is lacking. By the Teeth some understand the Teachers, which may be compared to Teeth, because they prepare, and as it were chew spiritual Food for the People, and to such Teeth as are here described for their great number and excellent order, and for that purity and fruitfulness which is required of them, others understand some gracious qualification or action of the faithful, either their Faith, which is compared to eating Joh. 6. 41. &c. and elsewhere, which also purifies the Heart and Life, and produceth good works in abundance; or their Meditation or Study of God, and of his Word, whereby, like the clean Beasts under the Law, they chew the cud; which also much promotes their purity and fertility. But, as I said on the first verse, there is no need of a distinct Application of every particular, as it is in Parables, where many things are added for decency, which belong not to the main scope, and therefore are neglected in the interpretation of them. The scope of this place is only to set forth the Churches perfection and beauty by the resemblance of a beautiful Woman, and one part of beauty consists in the colour and order of the Teeth.

3 Thy lips are like a thread of scarlet p, and thy speech is comely q: * thy temples r are like a piece of a pomgranate s within thy locks t. *Ch. 6. 7.

p Fine, and smooth, and soft, and round, and red, in which the beauty of the Lips consisteth. q Which is added partly as another ingredient of an amiable Person; and partly to explain the foregoing Metaphor. The Communication or Discourse of Believers is edifying, and comfortable, and acceptable to God, and to serious men. Compare Psal. 45. 2. Col. 4. 6. r Under which doubtless he comprehends the cheeks, which are joined to them, and in which a great part of beauty lies, which therefore would not have been omitted in this description. s In which there is a lovely mixture of red and white. This may note both the Churches beauty and her modesty, which sheweth itself by blushes in those parts when she hath fallen into any sin, as the highest Believers in this World sometimes do. t A further evidence both of beauty and modesty. See on v. 1.

4 Thy neck s is like the tower of David t built for an armory, whereon there hang a thousand bucklers, all shields of mighty men u.

s This may seem to represent the Grace of Faith, by which we are united to Christ, as the Body is to the Head by the Neck, and through which Christians receive their spiritual Food, and consequently their strength and ability for action. t Round, and smooth, and white, long, and streight, and upright, firm, and strong; and moreover adorned with chains of Gold or Pearl, or the like Ornaments. All which things as they set forth the beauty of the Neck, so they may signifie the various excellencies and uses of Faith. By this Tower he understands either 1. The strong hold of Sion, of which see 2 Sam. 5. 9. Or rather 2. Some other Tower built by David, when he repaired, and enlarged, and fortified his Royal City, 1 Chr. 11. 8. and used by him as an Armory. See Neh. 3. 19, 25, 26, 27. u Either 1. Such as are fit and reserved for the use of mighty Men. Or 2. Such as had been used either by themselves, or by their Enemies, from whom they took them by force, and were hung up there as Trophies or Monuments of Victory. Which is added to shew that the Church is not only beautiful and glorious, but also strong and victorious over all her Enemies, and to intimate the great power and exploits of Faith, of which read Heb. 11. and which is compared to a shield, Eph. 6. 16. A thousand is here put indefinitely for a great number.

5 * Thy two breasts x are like two young roes that are twins, which feed among the lilies y.

x Another part in which beauty consists, Ezek. 16. 7. By which some understand the two Testaments, or the two Sacraments: but these are rather Christ's than the Churches Breasts. Others, the Churches fervent Love to Christ, and to all the Saints, for the Breasts signifie Love, Prov 5. 19. Cant. 1. 13. Others her fruitfulness, both in good works, and in bringing up Children unto Christ, like a Nurse with her Breasts. But the following similitude seemeth not to respect the use of the Breasts, or the Love which is signified or manifested by them, but their comeliness. And therefore this is generally to be understood of the Churches Beauty in all parts, as hath been said. y i. e. In the fields where Lilies grew, as is evident both from Mat. 6. 28. where they are called the Lilies of the field, and from other Scriptures, and from the Testimony of other Writers. The Lilies being white and swelling, and the Roses of a reddish colour, and their Bodies being hid from sight by the Lilies, their Heads only appearing above them, bear some resemblance to the red nipples appearing in the top of the Lilie white Breasts. But we must remember that this Book is a sacred Pastoral, and the Bridegroom is represented as a Shepherd, and the Bride as a Country-Maid, and therefore such similitudes are used as are agreeable to Persons of that Quality, and such are usual in prophane Writers of this kind, as the learned have observed. They are compared to Roes for their loveliness, of which see Prov. 5. 19. to young ones for their smalness, which in Breasts is a beauty, to Twins for their exact likeness.

6 * Until the day † break, and the shadows flee away z, I will get me to the mountain of myrrh, and to the hill of frankincense a. *Ch. 2. 17.

z These words are uttered by the Bride, Ch. 2. v. 17. and here returned by the Bridegroom as an Answer to that Request. And this place may be understood either 1. Of the day of the Gospel, when all legal shadows shall vanish: Or 2. Of the day of Glory, or of the general Resurrection, when all manner of shadows and Ordinances shall cease. Till which time either the Spouse feeds among Lilies, as was now said, v. 5. or the Bridegroom gets him to the Mountains, &c. as it follows. For the words are by most joined with the foregoing, and by some with the following clause. a Either 1. To the Temple at Jerusalem, which is oft and fitly expressed by the name of a mountain or hill, because it was built upon a Mountain, and which may be called a Mountain of Myrrh and Frankincense, because of the abundance of Myrrh and Frankincense which was there used and offered; in which place the Church was to feed, and Christ would continue his presence until the dawning of the Gospel-day. Or 2. To my Church upon Earth, which was typified by the Mountain of Moriah, and the Temple upon it, and which in prophetical Writings is called a Mountain, as Isa. 2. 2, 3. Mich. 4. 1, 2. and elsewhere, and which may well be called a Mountain of Myrrh and Frankincense, both for the acceptable services which are there offered to God, and for the precious Gifts and Graces, and Comforts of the Holy Spirit, which are of a sweet smelling savour to God and Men, and which there, and there only, are poured forth. Thus Christ directs his Bride, to with particular Believers, where they may find and enjoy him, namely in his Church and Ordinances.

7 * Thou art all fair b, my love, there is no spot in thee c. Eph. 5. 27.

b It is needless to mention the several beauties of all thy parts, for in one word thou art wholly beautiful; and it may be said more truly of thee than it was of Absalom, 2 Sam. 14. 25. that from the sole of thy Foot to the crown of thy Head there is no blemish in thee. c Which is not to be understood simply and absolutely, as if the People of God were really perfect, and free from all sin, but either 1. Comparatively, no such spot or blemish as is in worldly men, or, as is inconsistent with true Grace, of which Moses speaks, Deut. 32. 5. Or 2. In regard of God's gracious acceptation, in which respect he is said, not to behold iniquity in Jacob, Num. 23. 21. God doth not look upon them with a severe Eye, as they are in themselves, but in and through Christ, in whom he accepts them as if they were perfect, partly because it is their chief design, desire, and endeavour to be so, and partly because Christ hath undertaken to make them so, Eph. 5. 25, 27. and they shall one day be such.

8 Come with me d from Lebanon e, my spouse f, with me from Lebanon: look g from the top of Amana h, from the top of Shenir * and Hermon i, from the lions dens, from the mountains of the leopards k. Deut. 3. 9.

d Unto the Mountains of Myrrh, &c. mentioned v. 6. e A known Mountain in the North of Canaan, which is sometimes mentioned as a pleasant and glorious place, as Cant. 5. 15. Isa. 35. 2. Hos. 14. 6. &c. in regard of its goodly Cedars; and sometimes as a barren Wilderness, as Isa. 29. 17. and seat of Wild Beasts, as 2 Kin. 14. 9. &c. Which latter sense seems more agreeable, both to the opposition which is here tacitly made between this Mountain and the mountain of Myrrh, and to the quality of the other mountains here joined with Lebanon, and to the last clause of the verse. f This is the first time that Christ gives her this name, which he now doth both to encourage and oblige her to go with him. g To the place to which I invite thee to go, which from those high Mountains thou mayst easily behold, the sight of which will certainly enflame thee with desire to go thither. He alludes to Moses his beholding the promised Land from mount Pisgah. h Not that Amana which divided Syria from Cilicia, which was too remote from these parts, but another of that name not far from Lebanon. i Which may be the names of two tops of the same Mountain, as Horeb and Sinai seem to have been. Or, Shenir, or (the copulative, and, being put disjunctively for or, as it is in many places, which have been observed before) Hermon, for this Mountain is called both Shenir and Hermon, Deut. 3. 9. and the latter name, Hermon, may be added to the former, as being better known to the Israelites. k From these or other such like Mountains, which are inhabited by Lions and Leopards, Which seems to be added as an Argument to move the Spouse to go with him, because the places where now she was, were not only barren, but also dangerous, as being the Habitations of Tyrants and Persecutors, and wild or salvage People, who are oft described by the names of wild Beasts, whose natures they have, and whose practices they imitate.

9 Thou hast ‖ ravished my heart l, my sister m, my spouse; thou hast ravished my heart with one of thy eyes n, with one chain of thy neck o. ‖ Or, taken away my heart.

l I am overcome with thy beauty, and therefore am so desirous of thy company. m So he calls her, partly because both he and she had one and the same Father, to wit, God, yea, and Mother too, being both at this time born in and of the Common wealth and Church of Israel; and partly to shew the greatness of his Love to her, which is such as cannot be sufficiently expressed by any one Relation, but must borrow the Perfections and Affections of all to describe it. n With one glance of one of thine Eyes. By which Phrase he intimates the Modesty and Humility of the Church, which was ashamed or afraid to look fully and directly upon the Bridegroom with both her Eyes, and withal alludes to the ancient custom of Virgins, who used to cover their Faces with a veil, and to look out only with one of their Eyes for the direction of their Steps. By this one Eye he seems to mean that fundamental Grace of Faith, by which Christians look upon Christ, and discern his beauty, and which is precious in the sight of God and of Christ. o With one of those other Graces and Perfections wherewith thou art adorned. How then should I be ravished if thou didst discover both thine Eyes, and thy whole Countenance, and all thy excellent Gifts and Graces!

10 How fair p is thy love q, my sister, my spouse! * how much better is thy love than wine r! and the smell of thine ointments s than all spices! * Ch. 1. 2.

p How amiable and acceptable to me. q I do not disdain thy love, as I might do, but take it kindly, and prise it highly. r Of which see on, Ch. 1. 2, 4. s Of the Gifts and Graces of God's Spirit, wherewith thou art anointed. Compare Isa. 61. 1. 1 Joh. 2. 20, 27.

11 Thy lips, O my spouse, drop as the honey-comb: honey and milk is are under thy tongue x, and the smell of thy garments y is like the smell of Lebanon z.

x Thy Speeches both to me in Prayer and Praises, and to men for their Edification, are highly acceptable to me. u Words more sweet and comfortable than Honey or Milk. x By which Phrase he may possibly intimate, that her words were not uttered in Hypocrisie, or with evil design, as many fair and smooth Speeches are, but proceed from her very heart which is under her Tongue, as mischief is said to be under his Tongue, Psal. 10. 7. who devised it in his Heart. y Of that Righteousness wherewith I have cloathed and adorned thee. Christ and the Graces of the Spirit are oft compared to Garments, as Rom. 13. 14. Eph. 4. 24. 1 Pet. 5. 5. z Which is also mentioned and commended mended, Hos. 14. 6. which must needs be very sweet and grateful in regard of the great numbers of sweet-smelling Spices and Trees which grew in that Mountain.

† Heb. barred.

12 A garden a † inclosed b is my sister, my spouse: a spring c shut up d, a fountain sealed e.

a For Order and Beauty, for pleasant Walks, and Flowers, and Fruits. b Either 1. Defended by the care of my Providence: Or, 2. Reserved for my proper use. She will not admit of other Lovers, either false Teachers, or worldly Lusts, but keeps her self close for me. She is chast, and pure, and modest, as Virgins are or should be. c Either 1. For others, sending forth the wholsom streams of saving Doctrine, for the refreshing, and healing, and cleansing of those who receive it. Or 2. Within her self, being well watered, i.e. replenished with Spiritual Graces and Blessings, which are frequently compared to Waters, both in the Old and New Testament, as Isa. 44. 3. Joh. 4. 10. & 7. 38. for which the Church is compared to a watered Garden, or Spring of water, Isa. 58. 11. d Either 1. To preserve it from all pollution, or injury: Or 2. To reserve it for the use and service of its owner, for which reason Springs were shut up in those Countries where water was scarce and precious, as Gen. 29. 3. e The same thing is here repeated in other words.

13 Thy plants f are an orchard g of pomgranates, ‖ Or, cypress with other pleasant fruits, ‖ camphire with spikenard h.

f The plants of thy Garden, Believers which are planted in thee. g Are like the plants or fruits of an Orchard, which are pleasant to the Eye, and delicious to the tast or smell, such as are here mentioned in the following words. Whereby he signifies the variety and excellency of Gifts and Graces in the several members of the Church. h Which he mentions both here with camphire or cypress, and in the next verse with saffron, because it is mixed with both these, and being so mixed, yieldeth the more grateful smell.

14 Spikenard and saffron, calamus and cinnamon, with all trees of frankincese i, myrrh and aloes, with all the chief spices, i Such Trees as produce Frankincense. Or, as others, both ancient and modern, render it, Trees of Lebanon, such Sweet smelling Trees and Plants as grew in Lebanon, of which see above on v. 11.

15 A fountain of gardens, a well of living waters k, and streams from Lebanon l.

k These are the words either. 1. Of the Bride, who returns this Answer to the Bridegroom. Thou calleſt me a Fountain, but in truth thou only art that Fountain from whence I derive all my streams of comfort: Or rather 2. Of the Bridegroom, who hath hitherto been speaking to and of the Church, and still continues his Speech. He seems to add this by way of correction to, or exposition of what he said, v. 12. Though my Spouse be in some sort a Fountain shut up or sealed, yet that is not so to be understood as if she kept her Waters to her self, for she is like a Fountain or Well of living or running water, which floweth into Gardens, and maketh its Flowers and Plants to grow and flourish. The Church conveyeth those Waters of Life which she receiveth from Christ unto particular Believers and Congregations. l Like those sweet and refreshing Rivers which flow down from Mount Lebanon, of which Jordan is one.

16 Awake m, O north-wind, and come thou south, blow upon my garden n, that the spices thereof may flow out o: let my beloved come into his garden p, and eat his pleasant fruit q.

m Or, Arise, either 1. To be gone, as being commonly hurtful to Plants and Gardens: Or rather 2. To come, as the next clause explains it: For both the North-wind and the South wind have their several uses in Gardens, the former to purge and cool the Air, and to bring fair weather, the latter to warm and moisten the Earth, and cherish the Plants. And these Winds may signifie the several Dispensations either of Gods Providence, or rather of his Spirit, which is compared to the wind, John 3. 8. whereby the following effects are produced. n This Verse is spoken by the Spouse, as appears from the last clause of it. And she calls the Garden both hers and his, because of that oneness which is between them, ch. 2. 15. whereby they have a common Interest one in anothers person and concerns. o That my Graces may be exercised to thy Glory, the Edification of others, and my own comfort. p Let Christ afford his gracious presence more and more to his Church. q And let him delight himself in that Service and Glory which is given to him, both by the religious Worship, and by the holy conversations of his People.

CHAP. V.

Christ answereth the Church's invitation, and sheweth her the delight he took in her fruit, 1. She acknowledges her negligence to Christ in not opening the door, 2—6. Of the harsh usage she met with, 7. She tells the Daughters of Jerusalem she is sick of Love to Christ, 8. Their question concerning him, 9. A description of Christ by his Graces, 10—15. in whom she boasteth, 16.

I Am come into my garden a, my sister, my spouse; I have gathered my myrrh with my spice, I have eaten my honey-comb with my honey, I have drunk my wine with my milk b: eat, O friends c, drink, ‖ Or, and ‖ yea, drink abundantly, O beloved.

a This is the Bridegrooms Answer to her Request, delivered in the next foregoing words. b I have eaten of my pleasant fruits, as thou didst desire. I have taken notice of, and delight in the service and Obedience of my People. c The friends of the Bridegroom. Whereby he understands either 1. The holy Angels and glorified Saints, who in a sublime and spiritual sense may be said to eat and drink in Heaven, the happiness whereof is frequently represented under the name and notion of a Feast: Or rather 2. Believers or Members of the Church militant upon Earth, who by the Argument of Christs gracious presence with them, and acceptation of their works signified in the last words, are here invited and encouraged with great freedom and chearfulness to eat and drink their spiritual Food, to feed upon Gods Holy Word and Sacraments, to eat the Flesh and drink the Blood of the Son of God, who here gives them an hearty welcome to this Feast.

2 I sleep d, but my heart waketh e: it is the voice of my beloved f that knocketh g, saying, Open to me h, my sister, my love, my dove my undefiled i: for my head is filled with dew k, and my locks with the drops of the night l.

d Heb. I was asleep, i. e. I was dull, and sluggish, and insensible of his kind Expressions, and offers of Grace. e Yet in my very sleep my thoughts were running upon my Beloved, as is not unusual in such cases, which at last awakened me. Thus she implies the conflict which was between the Flesh and the Spirit, and the Spirits Victory in the Combate. f Between sleeping and waking I fancied that I heard his voice. g By his Word, and Providence, and Spirit, at the door of mine Heart, desirous that I would receive him by Faith and Love. Compare Rev. 3. 20. h Inviting me to accept of his gracious Offers, and to let him into my Soul. i This heap of kind compellations signifies Christs sincere and fervent Affection to his People, notwithstanding her manifold imperfections and infirmities. The title of Dove signifies her Chastity and constant Faithfulness to her Husband, for which Doves are famous. How she is undefiled see on ch. 4. 7. k Whilst I wait without thy door. He alludes to the custom of Lovers, which oft and willingly suffer such inconveniencies for their hopes and desires of enjoying their Beloved, and signifies his sufferings for the Churches good. l The dew which falls in the end of the night, or towards the morning, whence it is called morning dew, Hos. 6. 4.

3 I have put off my coat m, how shall I put it on n? I have washed my feet o, how shall I defile them?

m My day-cloaths, as persons use to do when they go to rest. n It is inconvenient and troublesom to do it at this time. Thus she tacitly reflects upon the Bridegroom for coming to her so unseasonably, and giving her such disturbance, and puts him off to another time, and excuseth her non-admission of him by her present indisposition, and the difficulty of the thing required of her. o Which the Eastern people commonly did when they went to Bed, partly to cool their Feet, and partly to cleanse them from that dust and sweat which they had contracted in the day time by Labour and Travel, as being used to go barefoot.

4 My beloved put in his hand by the hole of the door p, and my bowels were moved ‖ for him q. ‖ Or, (as some read) p He assayed to open the door. When his Word would not prevail, his Spirit, which is called the finger of God, Luk. 11. 20. in mt. compared with Matt. 12. 28. wrought inwardly upon my Conscience, and affected mine heart. q With compassion for him and his sufferings, and with affection to him: for both these ways is this Phrase oft used, as Job 37. 1. Phil. 2. 1, 2. &c.

5 I rose up to open to my beloved r, and my hands dropped with myrrh s, and my fingers with † sweet smelling myrrh, upon the handles of the lock t. † Heb. passing over.

r I repented of my former drowsiness and neglect, and went forth to receive him. s i. e. With Oil or Ointment made of Myrrh, which either 1. She had taken out of her own stock to prepare her self for the entertainment of the Bridegroom: Or rather 2. Dropped from the Bridegrooms hand upon the door in great abundance, when he put it into the hole of the door, v. 4. and consequently upon her hands and fingers when she touched the door to open it. By which she signifies that Christ though he withdrew himself from her, yet left a sweet savour behind him, infusing into her, and stirring up in her the Graces of the Spirit, such as Repentance, which is bitter as Myrrh, earnest desire after Christ, &c. t Heb. with Myrrh passing or flowing upon the handles of the lock, which place the Bridegroom had touched when he attempted to open it. sing. or nom. ning about Neh. 1. 8. Heb.

6 I opened to my beloved, but my beloved had withdrawn himself u, and was gone x: my soul failed y when he spake z: I * sought him a, but I could not find b him; I called him, but he gave me no answer b. * Ch. 3. 1.

u Denied me his gracious and comfortable presence, as a just punishment for my former neglect and folly. x Either she repents the same thing to shew how deeply she was affected with it: Or this is added to imply that he had not only stepped aside, but was quite gone away. y Heb. went out of me. I fainted and was ready to die away through excessive passion, as this Phrase is used, Gen. 35. 18. & 42. 28. and elsewhere. z Or, for what he spoke, for those endearing Expressions related, v. 2. which then I did not heed, but this sad occasion brings them to my remembrance: as oft times that word which is ineffectual when it is preached, is afterwards brought to a mans Mind, and produceth blessed effects. a By diligent enquiry and importunate Prayer. b That so he might both chastise her folly, and quicken her desires, and prepare the way for a more hearty welcome, and his longer abode with her.

7 The watch-men that went about the city c, found me, they smote me, they wounded me d; the keepers of the walls e took away my vail f from me.

c The Governours of the Church, as Chap. 3. 3. who, though by their place and office they be obliged to comfort and protect the faithful, do frequently discourage and oppress them, as they manifestly did both in the days of Isaiah, and Jeremiah, and the other holy Prophets, and in the time of Christ and his Apostles, and in divers other Ages. d With bitter Calumnies and Persecutions. e The same with the Watch-men, whose Office is to keep the Gates and Walls of the City. f Which was an ornament of her Sex, Isa. 3. 23. and a badge of her Modesty, Gen. 24. 65. or an ensign of her Relation and Subjection to Christ, Gen. 20. 16. 1 Cor. 11. 5. And so the taking of this Veil away, signifies their contemptuous and injurious usage of her, their endeavours to blast her Reputation, and to represent and treat her as a common and impudent prostitute, and as one that had no Relation to Christ.

8 I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem g, if ye find my beloved † that ye tell him, that I am sick of love h.

g Of whom see on ch. 1. 5. & 2. 7. The Church having passed the Watch-men, and patiently born, and in a manner forgotten their injuries, proceeds in the pursuit of her beloved, and enquires of every particular Believer or Professor whom she meets concerning him. h That I am ready to faint for want of his presence, and the tokens of his Favour. Use all your interest and importunity with him on my behalf.

9 What is thy beloved more than another beloved i, O thou faireſt among women k? What is thy beloved more than another beloved, that thou doſt ſo charge us? † Heb. his i. *

i Wherein doth he excel them? Which Professors of Religion might ask, because they were ignorant of Christs Excellency, and true Believers might ask it, that they might be more fully informed of it, and might give the Spouse occasion to discourse of that subject which was very grateful to them. k Whose Beauty may command the Respects and Affections of the most worthy persons; and therefore we conclude it must be some person of transcendent excellency with whom thou art so highly enamoured.

10 My beloved is white and ruddy l, † the chiefeſt m among ten thousand n. † Heb. lifted up l. *

l Which two colours rightly mixed together, make a Face beautiful. Or the white may note his pure and spotless Innocency, and the brightness of his Glory and Majesty, and the ruddy colour may intimate his bloody passion, which made him amiable both to God and Men. m Heb. the standard bearer; for such are usually persons of great Eminency, both for Stature, and Courage, and Dignity. n Among all persons, Angels or Men. A certain number is put for an uncertain. There are other Kings, and Priests and Prophets, but none to be compared with him.

11 His head is as the moſt fine gold o, his locks p ‖ bushy, and black as a raven q. ‖ Or, curled o It shines like Gold, not in respect of the Hair which is black, as it followeth, but by reason of his Crown of pure Gold upon his Head, Rev. 14. 14. Whereby he implies that her Bridegroom was a King, which she declared above, ch. 3. 11. p In which a part of Mans Beauty consists. I shall not trouble my Reader with a distinct application of this and the following particulars, unto some special part or excellency of Christ, because such things are meer conjectures without any solid grounds, and the only design of this description seems to be this, to set forth the Beauty of Christ under the notion of a most compleat and amiable person, in whom there is no defect nor blemish, from the crown of his Head to the sole of his Feet. q Which is mentioned, partly because this was esteemed a beauty, and partly because it was an evidence of his Youth and vigor, as grey hairs are characters of age and infirmity, Hos. 7. 9.

12 * His eyes are as the eyes of doves r by the rivers of waters s, washed with milk t, and † fitly ſet u. † Heb. fitly sitting. *

r Lovely and pleasant, chast and innocent. s Where they delight to abide, and where with they bath themselves, and wash their Eyes; where also their Eyes are most lively and beautiful, both by the reflection of the waters, and from that pleasure which they take in such places. t Which may belong either 1. To the Eyes, which are supposed to be washed with water, as white and pure as Milk: Or 2. To the Doves, which are intimated to be of a milk-white colour, which in those parts was most esteemed, which colour also made the Eyes appear more lovely. u Neither sinking into the Head, nor standing out too much, but in a moderate and comely situation. Heb. sitting in fulness: which may note a full and competently large Eye, which is esteemed one beauty of the Eye.

13 His cheeks x are as a bed y of spices z, as ‖ sweet flowers a: his lips like lilies b, dropping ſweet ſmelling myrrh c. ‖ Or, towers x His Face or Countenance, an eminent part whereof is the Cheeks, in which the Beauty or Deformity of a Face doth much consist. y Which being higher than other parts of the Garden fitly represents the Cheeks, which are higher than other parts of the Face. z Not of dry spices, for they are not in Beds, but of Aromatical Flowers which delight both the Eye with a pleasant prospect, and the smell with their fragrancy. This may also signifie the down or hair upon the Bridegrooms cheeks, which is the evidence of his mature and vigorous Age, and may denote that Christs sweetness and gentleness is accompanied with Majesty, and Gravity, and just severity. a This may be added to explain the former Phrase. Or, towers of perfumes, i. e. Boxes in which perfumes were put, which by their height or form, had some resemblance to a Turret. b Beautiful and pleasant. Or this is meant of that sort of Lilies which were of a red or purple colour, as ancient Writers affirm, and so signifie the grateful colour of the Lips. This may note that Grace which was poured into Christs Lips, and which flowed from them in sweet and excellent discourses. c Not only graceful to the Eye, as Lilies are, but also fragrant to the smell.

14 His hands d are as gold-rings set with the beryll e: his belly f is as bright Ivory overlaid with Saphires g.

d The instruments of Action and of Distribution, which may design the actions of Christ and particularly his distributing Gifts and Graces to his Members. e Beautiful, and precious, and richly adorned, as it were with Gold Rings set with precious stones. f Which seems to be here used, either 1. Metonimically, for the Bowels which are contained in the Belly: Or rather 2. Synecdochically, for the whole Body, reaching from the neck to the bottom of the Belly, which is distinguished from the Face, and the joints, which are described in the other clauses. For he speaks here of those parts which are visible to the Eye. And thus here is a compleat description of Christs beauty in all parts from his Head to his Feet. g Of a pure and bright white colour, intermixt with blue veins; for some Saphires are of a bright blue colour.

15 His legs h are as pillars of marble i, set upon sockets of fine gold k: his countenance l is as Lebanon m, excellent as the cedars.

h The instruments of local motion, and the supporters of the body. i White, and streight, and well shaped, and strong. Which may note the firmness and stability of Christs Kingdom in spight of all opposition. k Which add both beauty and strength to them. These may note his Feet compared to Gold, either for their great price and worth, or for their singular brightness, for which they are compared to fine-brass, Rev. 1. 15. or, as others, for his golden shoes wherewith they were covered or adorned, as the Spouse is commended from her shoes, Cant. 7. 1. l Heb. his aspect or appearance, his form or Person, as this Hebrew word is elsewhere used. m In respect of its Cedars, as the next words explain it, to wit, tall, and upright, and stately, and withal pleasant to the Eye.

16 † His mouth is † most sweet n, yea, he is altogether † lovely o. This is my beloved, and this is my friend, O daughters of Jerusalem p. † Heb. his † Heb. palate. † Heb. sweetneſs. † Heb. desires.

n Which was said before in other words, v. 13. and is here justly repeated, because it was a principal part of Christs beauty, and the chief instrument of the Spouses Comfort and Happiness, which wholly depends upon his sweet and excellent Speeches, his holy Precepts, and gracious Offers and Promises contained in the Gospel. o Not to run out into more particulars, in one word there is no part of him which is not exquisitely beautiful. p And therefore you have no cause to wonder or to blame me if I am transported with Love to so excellent a personage.

CHAP. VI.

An Enquiry after Christ, 1. The Churches Answer, 2. The Church confesseth her Faith in Christ, 3. Christ sheweth the Graces of his Church, 4. and the Beauty of Several parts, 5—10. He acquaints her where he had been, and what he had been a doing, 11. and discovers his affection to her, 12. with an invitation of her to return to him again, 13.

1 WHither is thy beloved gone a * O thou faireſt among women? whither is thy beloved turned aside b? that we may seek him with thee c. * Chap. 1. 8.

a These are the words of the daughters of Jerusalem, last mentioned, whom this full and pathetical description of the Bridegrooms Excellency had inflamed with Love to him. b To wit, from thee, as thy words imply, v. 6, 8. where dost thou use to look for him, and to find him when thou hast lost him? c O thou who art well acquainted with all the places both of his usual abode, and of his diversion, inform us who are ignorant of them. d We ask not with any evil design, but only because we desire an interest in him.

2 My beloved is gone down into his garden d, to the beds of ſpices e, to feed f in the gardens, and to gather lilies g.

d The Spouse had hitherto been at a loss for her beloved, but having diligently sought him, and enflamed both her own and others Affections with Love to him by her just commendations, now at last she meets with a gracious Answer from God, directing her where to find him, which also comes very seasonably, not only for her own relief and comfort, but also for the benefit of others, who enquired after him. The garden seems to signifie the Church Catholick, and the gardens, as it follows here, as also the beds, may note the particular Assemblies of the faithful, in which Christ affordeth his Presence, and his blessing. e In which the Gifts and Graces of God's Spirit, which are fitly compared to Spices, or aromatical Flowers, do appear and grow. f To refresh and delight himself, or to gather the flowers and fruits of it, as men use to do in their gardens. g Which may note either, 1. Particular Believers, whom Christ gathereth to himself in his Church, who are compared to Lilies, Cant. 2. 2. Or 2. The Prayers and Praises tendered to him by his People in the publick Congregations, and all their gracious dispositions and actions.

3 * I am my beloveds, and my beloved is mine: he feedeth among the lilies. * Ch. 2. 16. & 7. 10.

4 Thou art beautiful, O my love h, as Tirzah i, comely as Jerusalem k, terrible l as an army with banners.

h These are the words of Christ, who had now again manifested himself to his Church, whereby he declares, that though he had for a season hid his Face from her, yet still he retained a sincere and fervent affection to her, and that notwithstanding her manifold infirmities she was yet beautiful in his Eyes. i A very pleasant City, as its very name signifies, and therefore made the Royal Seat of the Kings of Israel; of which see 1 Kin. 14. 17. & 15. 21, 33. & 16. 6. &c. k Which was beautiful both for its situation, Psal. 48. 2. and for its goodly buildings, especially the Temple. See Lam. 2. 15. l Either 1. To strangers, whom by her grave and Majestick looks and carriage she affrights from rude or bold attempts, whereas some Women invite others to familiarity with them by their loose and wanton carriage. Or 2. To her Enemies, whom God will certainly destroy.

5 Turn away thine eyes from me m, for ‖ they have overcome me: thy hair is as a flock of goats that appear from Gilead n. ‖ Or, they have puſſed me up.

m For I can scarce bear the Lustre of them. It is a poetical and amatorious Expression, signifying how beautiful the Church was in Christ's Eyes, and how passionately he loved her. n This clause, and the whole following verse are repeated from Ch. 4. 1, 2. And this repetition is not vain nor absurd, but very agreeable to the nature of a Pastoral and Song of Love, as being an effect and testimony of vehement Affection, and besides it confirms what was said before and sheweth that the Churches miscarriage and Christ's desertion of her upon it, had not made him change his Opinion of her, or Affection to her.

6 Thy teeth are as a flock of sheep which go up from the washing, whereof every one beareth twins, and there is not one barren among them.

7 As a piece of a pomgranate are thy temples within thy locks o.

o This is also repeated from Ch. 4. 3.

8 There are threescore queens, and fourscore concubines p, and virgins q without number.

p A certain number for an uncertain. The sense seems to be this, There are many beautiful Queens and Concubines in the World, in the Courts of Princes, and particularly in Solomon's Court, but none of them is to be compared with my Spouse, and my heart is set upon none of them, but only upon my Spouse, as the following verse declareth. Or, the Queens and Concubines may note the particular Congregations which are called by Christ's name, and the Virgins may signifie the particular Believers or Professors; all which do make up one Catholick Church, as it follows. Compare the notes on Psal. 45. 10, 14, 15. q Either 1. Which wait upon the Queens and Concubines. Or 2. Which were referved as a Nursery, out of which Queens and Concubines were to be taken.

9 My dove, my undefiled is but one r she is the only one of her mother s; she is the choice one of her that bare her: the daughters t saw her, and blessed her; yea, the queen and the concubines, and they praised her u.

r The only beloved of my Soul, my only Spouse, in opposition of whom I despise all others. s Of Jerusalem above, she is the Mother of us all, Gal. 4. 26. Or, if this seem to confound the Mother and Daughter, the words may be thus rendred, she is the only one of her Mother, i. e. she is as dear and as precious to me as only Children use to be to their Parents, and especially to their Mothers. So there is only a defect of the note of similitude, which is frequently understood, as hath been formerly noted and proved by undeniable instances. t Called Virgins, v. 8. u As more beautiful and worthy than themselves, which was so evident that they were forced to confess it.

10 Who is she x that looketh forth as the morning y, fair as the moon z, clear as the sun a, and terrible as an army with banners b?

x These are the words either 1. Of the Bridegroom: Or 2. Of the Queens and Concubines last mentioned, as praising of her. And they are either words of enquiry, or rather of Admiration and commendation: Who, i. e. what manner of person is this, how excellent and glorious? and so this pronoun, who, is understood, Psal. 24. 8. Mark 4. 41. compared with Mat. 8. 27. y As the morning light, which coming after the darkness, of the night is very pleasant and amiable, which also suddenly spreadeth it self from the East to the West: z To wit, when it is full and walking in brightness, as the Phrase is, Job 31. 26. But withal he seems to intimate that the Church, like the Moon, may have her Eclipses, and be in darkness for a time, a Without any such spots or dark specks as are in the Moon. Which is to be understood in the same sense, that she is said to be without spot, or wrinkle, or blemish, Eph. 5. 27. which she is partly by God's gracious acceptation of her as such in Christ, and through his Righteousness; and partly because she shall be such in the future Life. b See above, v. 4.

‖ Or, abounds. *Ch. 7. 12. 11 I went down c into the garden of ‖ nuts d, to see the fruits of the valley e, and * to see whether the vine flourished, and the pomgranates budded f.

c To wit, when I went away from thee. So this is an account of the reason of his former departure from her. Or, I am come down to visit thee, my garden, Cant. 4. 12. Either way these are the words of the Bridegroom. d In which Nuts and other fruits are planted. By Nuts may be meant either 1. Ordinary Nuts, and so this is supposed to intimate the mean and contemptible condition of the Church in her outward Estate, and that her sweetnesse is all inward and spiritual. Or 2. Aromatical Nuts, to wit, Nutmegs, and so this notes how acceptable the Church and her productions are to Christ. e Which being low, and well watered, is most fruitful. f What beginnings or appearances there were of good fruits or works among Believers; whether their Practices answered their Professions.

† Heb. I knew not. 12 † Or ever I was aware g, my soul ‖ made me h like the chariots of Ammi-nadib i.

‖ Or, set me on the chariots of willingness of my people. g I was surprized with a sudden and vehement desire of enjoying my Spouse, which is to be understood figuratively, and so as to agree with the Majesty and Omniscience of Christ. h I made myself; which may signifie Christs activity in stirring up his Affections to the Church; or I was made; for the active Phrase is oft understood passively; and the Soul is commonly put for the Person. i Eager in my desire, and swift in my motion towards the Church. Ammi-nadib is supposed to be some eminent Charioteer then well known, and famous for his speed in driving Chariots. But this clause with the former is otherwise rendred, both in the margent and by others, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew words, my soul set me on the chariots of my willing (or as others, noble or princely) people, i. e. which mine and the Brides friends had prepared to bring me to the Bride with more expedition, into which I ascended with all my Soul, as longing to come to my Bride.

13 Return k, return l, O Shulamite m, return, return, that we may look upon thee n: what will you see ‖ Or, of Mahanaim. o in the Shulamite? as it were the company p ‖ of two armies q.

k Christ recalls his Spouse, who as when Christ was gone she pursued after him, so now when Christ was coming or come to her, she was ready to wander and go astray from him, according to the common and corrupt disposition and custom of Mankind, and therefore he seeks to stop or to reclaim her, and to oblige her to return to her first Love, and to repent more throughly than she had yet done. l This word is here repeated four times to signifie both Christ's passionate Love to her, and earnest desire of her return, and her backwardness to it, which made so many calls necessary. m This title signifies either 1. One born in, or belonging to Jerusalem, called also Salem, Psal. 76. 2. Or 2. The Wife of Solomon, thus called after her Husbands name, see Isa. 4. 1. And as Christ is called by the name of Solomon, Ch. 3. 7, 9, 11. so the Church is fitly described by the title of Solomon's Wife. n That I and my companions, and friends may contemplate thy Beauty. o But what do you my friends expect to discover in her? Christ proposeth the question, that he may give the following answer; and that they should take special notice of this as a very remarkable thing in her. p Whereby he intimates that this one and onely Spouse was made up of the whole multitude of Believers. q Either 1. Opposite one against the other; and so this may note the conflict between the Flesh and Spirit, which is in all the faithful in this Life. Or 2. Confederate together, and so this may signifie either 1. The recollection and Union of Jews and Gentiles which shall one day be under Christ as their common head, Eph. 2. 15. Or 2. The safety and strength of the Church, which is compared to an army with banners, above v. 4, 10. and here to a numerous Host distributed into two Armies. Wherein also there may be in allusion to that story, Gen. 32. 1. where this very word, here rendred, two armies, is used.

CHAP. VII.

A further description of the Church's Graces, 1—7. His design to visit the Church, with the Blessed effects thereof, 8, 9. She professeth her Faith, and desire, 10. She inviteth him to communion with her, 11. The end thereof, 12, 13.

The Bridegroom who spake the last words, here continueth his speech, and breaks forth into an elegant and particular description and commendation of the Spouse, partly from the parts of her Body, and partly from her Ornaments. In which the same thing is to be observed which was noted concerning her description of the Bridegroom, that there is no necessity of a distinct application of every parcel of its the design being only this, to describe the Beauty and Glory of the Church under the representation of a beautiful and noble Woman. This also is observable, that in the description of Christ she begins at the Head, and so goeth downward, Ch. 5. 11, &c. but Christ in the description of the Spouse proceedeth from the Feet upwards.

1 HOw beautiful are thy feet a with shoes b, O princes daughter c! the joints of thy thighs d are like jewels, the work of the hands of a cunning workman e.

a Which being the chief instrument of our motion from place to place, is oft used metonimically for the motion itself, and so may here signifie either the inward motions, the workings of the affections, or the outward motions, the steps or actions of the Life, both which are right and amiable in Believers. b Which were anciently evidences of a free and comfortable state, whereas slaves and mourners use to go barefoot, 2 Sam. 15. 30. Isa. 20. 4. which also in Women of high quality were adorned with Gold and other Ornaments; of which see Isa. 3. 18. These may also signifie that the Feet of Believers should be shod with the preparations of the Gospel of Peace, Eph. 6. 15. c Both by Birth, being born of God, and by disposition and deportment agreeable to that quality. d Either 1. The hollow place in which the Hip or Thigh-bone moveth and turneth it self: Or rather 2. The Hip or Thigh-bone which moveth there: for this is more fitly compared to a jewel well set. Some understand this of some Ornaments worn by Women upon those parts: for the word rendred joints may signifie girdles, or any Ornament which encompasseth any part of the Body, and the same words which signifie thighs are both in Hebrew, and other Languages, sometimes used concerning the legs. Which being admitted, this might seem to be understood of the Brides Garters about her Legs, which not unfitly follows the Shoes upon her feet last mentioned. But this sense seems not to suit so well with the following comparison as the former doth. e Like jewels orderly and excellently set by a skilful Artist. So this signifies the uprightness and decency of her going, which depends very much upon the right situation of the Hip or Thigh-bone, which when it is dislocated or disordered causeth a lameness or uncomliness in going; whereby he understands the orderliness and amiableness of her conversation.

2 Thy navel is like a round goblet f which wanteth not † liquor g: thy belly h is like an heap of wheat i, set about with lilies k. † Hebrew mixt.

f To which it is not unfitly compared because it is of a round form, and hollow, and hath windings and circlings in it. g Thy Navel is ment of nourishing the Child or Children which are in the Womb. And so this seems to signifie the Churches fruitfulness partly in her self, in cherishing and improving all the Graces and good motions of God's Spirit within her; and principally in reference to those many Children which she bears and feeds in her Womb with the wholsom liquor of God's Ordinances. h In which thy Children are for a time contained and fed. i i. e. Of wheat corn, round and swelling, as it is in Women with child, and full of nourishment, not only of Liquor, as was last said, but also of Meat, which may note the various provisions which Christ hath laid up in his Church according to the several capacities of her Children, Milk for Babes, and stronger Meat for those who are grown up. k Not for defence, which the Church doth not need, having the strong God for her Protector, but for Ornament and Beauty. Whereby is implied, that she is not only fruitful but beautiful, and that her Children are not only numerous and well fed, but also comely and delightful to the Eye, as Lilies are, and withal pure and innocent, in which respect both Christ and the Church are compared to Lilies, Cant. 1. 1, 2.

3 * Thy two breasts are like two young roes that are † twins l. † Ch. 4. 5.

l Which is repeated from Ch. 4. 5. where it is explained.

4 Thy neck m is as a tower of ivory n, thine eyes o like the fishpools p in Heshbon q, by the gate of Bath-rabbim: thy nose r is as the tower of Lebanon s which looketh towards Damascus t.

m Of which see on Ch. 4. 4. n Clear, and smooth, and long, and streight, and erected. o Of which see on Ch. 1. 15. & 4. 1. p Full, and clear, and quiet, and pleasant. Possibly here were two fishpools, which being conveniently seated in a large field, might bear some resemblance to the Eyes placed in the Head. q A pleasant and well watered watered City, beyond Jordan, as we may guess from Num. 32. where doubtless there were some eminent and well known fish-pools, as further appears by the exact description of the particular place here following, in which they were. r The instrument of smelling and discerning between pleasant and loathsom things; which may signifie the Churches sagacity in discerning between good and evil. Which though it be not elsewhere mentioned, was in all probability built by Solomon in the Mountain of Lebanon which was the Northern Border of the Land of Israel towards Damascus, and therefore a very fit place for a watch Tower. To this Tower her Nose is compared, not for its greatnesse, but for its comely and convenient proportions, and beautiful aspect, which doubtless were in this as well as in the rest of Solomon's Buildings. s Which words seem to be added to distinguish this from another Tower or Building, in, or near to Jerusalem, which was called the house of the forest of Lebanon 1 Kin. 7. 2.

5 Thine head u upon thee x is like ‖ Carmel y, and the hair of thine head like purple z; the king is † held in the galleries a.

u Which may signifie the Churches Mind or Understanding which is seated in the head. x Which is upon thee, or above the rest of thy Body. y Eminent and pleasant to the Eye, and fruitful as Mount Carmel was, as hath been formerly noted. Which may note that her Mind was adorned and replenished with knowledge and other excellent Gifts of the Holy Ghost. Or, as others render it, like crimson or purple, which is called Carmel, 2 Chron. 2. 7. & 3. 14. because those fishes out of which they had their purple, were taken in the Sea bordering upon Mount Carmel. And so the same thing is repeated in the next clause in other words. z Which colour was anciently much esteemed, and commended as by sacred, so also by prophane Writers. a In which he walketh, and having once espied thee, is captivated by thee, and unable or unwilling either to depart, or to take off his Eyes from thee, as he if were fast bound and chained to thee. The galleries may note either the Ordinances, or rather the Churches, in which Christ walketh, Revo. 2. 1. in which Christ and Believers converse together.

6 How fair and how pleasant art thou b, O love, for delights c!

b It were infinite to reckon up all the particulars of thy Beauty, in one word, thou art universally amiable beyond Expression. c For those various lovely features which are in thee, and for the great and manifold delights which are or may be enjoyed in conversing with thee.

7 This thy stature is like to a palm-tree d, and thy breasts to clusters e of grapes f.

d Tall and streight, or upright, as a Tree. And he seems to mention the Palm-tree, rather than any other, partly because it grows more directly upward than other Trees; and partly because it is constantly green and flourishing, and groweth upward in spight of all pressures, and therefore was used in festival solemnities, Levit. 23. 40. Joh. 12. 13. and was a symbol of Victory, Rev. 7. 9. In all which respects it fitly represents the state of Believers. e Large, and round, and full of juice. See on v. 3. This particular is added as an evidence of her maturity and married estate, and of her fruitfulness. f Which word may easily be supplied out of the next Verse. Although the fruit of the Palm-tree also is said to grow in clusters.

8 I said g, I will go up to the palm-tree h, I will take hold of the boughs thereof i: now also thy breasts shall be as clusters of the vine, and the smell of thy nose k like apples l.

g Within my self, I resolved. h I will climb up, that so I may take hold, as it follows of the boughs, which do not grow out of the sides, as in other trees, but only at the top of it. i Partly to prune and dress them, and partly to gather the fruit. Whereby is signified Christ's care of his Church, and his delight in her. k Of thy breath; which is oft called the breath of, or in, a man's nostrils, Gen. 7. 22. Isa. 2. 22. Lam. 4. 20. l Either 1. Common Apples, which sometimes yield a very pleasant smell: Or 2. Odoriferous Apples. See on Chap. 2. 5.

9 And the roof of thy mouth m like the best wine n, ‖ Or, for my beloved o, * that goeth down † sweetly p causing the lips ‖ of those that are asleep, to speak q

m Either 1. Thy speech, the palate being one of the principal instruments of Speech: Or rather 2. Thy taste, whereof the Palate or Roof of the Mouth is the most proper and principal instrument, Job 34. 3. But then this is not to be understood actively of her taste, but passively of the taste or relish, which her beloved had of her; as in the foregoing clause, the smell of her nose was not meant subjectively, or actively of that sense of smelling which was seated in her Nose, but objectively or passively of the breath of her Nostrils, which was sweet to the smell of her beloved. n Grateful and refreshing. o Either 1. For thee my beloved, who reapest the comfort and benefit of that pleasure which I take in thee: Or 2. For me thy beloved, or, according to thy usual expression, for my beloved. Which words Christ takes as it were out of her Mouth, and repeats them emphatically. Which agrees very well to the stile and usage of these dramatical and amatorious Writings. And this clause further intimates the Churches Loyalty or Faithfulness to Christ, that she reserves her self, and all her Loves for Christ alone. p Whereas bad Wine either goeth down slowly and tediously, or, that moveth it self aright, which is given as the Character of good Wine, Prov. 23. 31. q Causing the most dull, and stupid, and sleepy headed persons to speak, and that fluently and eloquently, which is a common effect of good Wine.

10 * I am my beloveds r, and his desire is towards me s.

r This and the following verses contain the words of the Bride, in answer to the Bridegrooms most indearing Expressions delivered in the foregoing verses. s I perceive, and am fully satisfied, that he heartily loves me. It is my duty to have my desire towards him as my Husband, according to Gods Sentence, Gen. 3. 16. but it is a wonderful condescension in him, that his desire is towards me.

11 Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field t: let us lodge in the villages u:

t That being retired from the crowd, we may more freely and sweetly converse together, and may observe the state of the fruits of the Earth. u In one of the villages, as Cities is put for one of the Cities, Judg. 12. 7.

12 Let us get up early x to the vineyards y, let us see if the vines flourish, whether the tender grapes † appear, and the pomgranates bud forth z: there will I give thee my loves a. † Heb. open.

x The Church having offended and lost her beloved by her former laziness, now doubles her diligence, and discovers how earnestly she was set upon the following work. y To particular congregations. See Cant. 6. 11. Isa. 5. 1. z Let us inquire into the success of our Labours, what Souls are brought in and built up, how they prosper and grow in Grace, whether they abound in good Works, &c. a There I will discover the sincerity and fervency of my affections to thee, and maintain communion with thee in thy holy Ordinances.

13 The mandrakes b give a smell, and at our gates c are all manner of pleasant fruits, new and old d, which I have laid up for thee e, O my beloved.

b This Hebrew word is used, Gen. 30. 14, 15. and the signification of it is very much doubted and disputed by Interpreters; of which see my Latin Synopsis on that place. But this is certain that the word signifies sweet and pleasant flowers, and therefore if it be understood of Mandrakes, they were of another sort than ours, as it is no unusual thing for flowers of the same kind in several Climates to have very differing Natures and Qualities. c Either 1. Growing there upon the Walls, or in Gardens, or Orchards, near the door of our dwelling-House: Or rather 2. Brought thither by divers Persons to congratulate and adorn our Nuptials, or laid up for our entertainment, as may be gathered from the nature of the fruits, which were not only new, and growing, but also old, and laid up, as it here follows. d Fruits of this year, and of the former, that the variety might delight. Which seems to be spiritually meant of the various fruits and operations of the Spirit, and degrees of Grace in several Believers. e Which have been produced by my Ministry for thy Service and Glory.

CHAP. VIII.

The Church expresseth her desire of familiarity with Christ, 1. by the entertainment she'd make him, 2, 3. She charges the Daughters of Jerusalem not to disturb her beloved, 4. A commendation of the Church for her Faith in Christ, 5. She prayeth for full assurance of his Love, her invincible desire, 6. Which is infatiable, 7. The calling of the Gentiles with their intent, and her condition, 8—13. Christs coming prayed for, 14.

OH that thou were as my brother a that sucked the breasts of my mother b; when I should find thee without c, I would kiss thee d, yet † I should not be despised e. † Heb. they should not despise me.

a Most intimate, and free, and familiar with me, as Brethren and Sisters commonly are. b That came out of the same womb, and sucked the same breasts, and consequently were Brother and Sister by Father and Mother too; for such are most dear to one another. See Gen. 43. 29. Deut. 13. 6. Heb. Sucking the breasts, &c. So she wisheth that he were as a little sucking Brother, with whom she might innocently and inoffensively delight her self, as Sisters do with such a Brother. The Church here expresseth her passionate desire of a stricter Union, and closer Communion with Christ than yet she had attained. And in particular, these may be the breathings of the ancient Jewish Church after Christs Incarnation, whereby he was to be their Brother, Rom. 8. 29. Heb. 2. 11, 12. and a sucking Infant. c In the open streets; I might then express my Affections to thee, and kiss thee openly without any scandal or contempt. Or, without, i. e. come forth from the Fathers bosom into the World, Joh. 16. 28. d I would demonstrate my Reverence, and Subjection, and Affection to thee, of all which kissing was a token in those times and places, as hath been oft observed in divers foregoing Texts. e Then should I not be ashamed or censured, as if I had done an indecent or immodest action, because such Expressions of Love are usual amongst Persons so nearly and dearly related.

2 I would lead thee, and bring thee f into my mothers house g, ‖ who would instruct me h: I would cause thee to drink of * spiced wine, of the juice of my pomgranate i. ‖ Or, them shouldest. * Prov. 9. 2.

f With joy and triumph, as the Bridegroom was usually brought to the Brides house. See Psal. 45. 15, 16. g Either 1. My Mothers in Law, my Husbands Mother, as the custom was, Gen. 24. 67. Judg. 12. 9. Or 2. My own Mothers; to shew her extraordinary Respect and Affection to him. In the mystical sense both come to one; for the universal Church was in some sort both his and her Mother. h To wit, how I should behave my self towards thee. Or, where she did instruct or educate me. i I would give thee the best entertainment which the House affords. My Gifts and Graces should all be employed to serve and glorifie thee.

3 * His left hand should be under my head, and his right hand should embrace me k. * Chap. 2. 6.

k The same expressions are used, ch. 2. 6. The sense is, He would not despise me for my forwardnels in shewing my affections to him, as men commonly do in like cases, but would kindly accept of my Love, and return Love for it.

4 * I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem, † that ye stir not up, nor awake my love until he please l. * Chap. 2. 7. & 3. 5. † Heb. why

l This verse is here repeated again from ch. 2. 7. & 3. 5. where should ye stir up, or see the Explication of it.

5 * (Who why, &c.

Ch. 3. 6. 5 (Who is this that cometh up from the wilderness m, leaning upon her beloved n?) I raised thee up o under the apple-tree p; there thy mother brought thee forth q; there she brought thee forth that bare thee.

m These words are repeated from ch. 3. 6. of which see the notes there. This and the next clause are the words either. 1. Of the Daughters of Jerusalem, or the Friends of the Bride and Bridegroom, admiring and congratulating this happy conjunction: Or 2. Of the Bridegroom, who proposeth the Question, that he may give the Answer here following. n Which implies both great freedom and familiarity, and fervent affection, and dependence upon him. If these be the Bridegrooms words, he speaketh of himself in the third Person, which is usual in the Hebrew Language. o When thou wast fallen, and laid low, and wert dead in trespasses, and in the depth of misery, I revived thee. p Under my own shadow; for she had compared him to an apple-tree, and declared, that under the shadow of the Tree she had both delight and fruit, Cant. 2. 3. which is the same thing with this raising up. q Under that Tree, either the Universal or the Primitive Church did conceive and bring thee forth.

6 Set me as a seal upon thine heart, as a seal upon thine arm r: for love s is strong as death t, jealousie u †Heb hard is † cruel x as the grave: the coals thereof are coals of † Heb. fire y, which hath a † most vehement flame. flame of the Lord.

r These are undoubtedly the words of the Bride. The sense is, Let thy Mind and thy Heart be constantly set upon me, let me be engraven upon the Tables of thine Heart. He seems to allude to the engraven Tablets which are frequently worn upon the Breast, and to the signet on a mans arm or hand, which men prize at a more than ordinary rate, as appears from Jer. 22. 24. Hag. 2. 23. and which are continually in their sight. s My Love to thee, from whence this desire proceeds, t Which conquers every living thing, and cannot be resisted nor vanquished. u Or, zeal; my ardent Love to thee, which also fills me With Fears and Jealousies, lest thou shouldst bestow thine affections upon others, and cool in thy love to me, or withdraw thy Love from me: for true Believers are subject to these passions. x Heb hard, grievous and terrible, and sometimes ready to overwhelm me, and swallow me up; and therefore have pity upon me, and do not leave me. y It burns and melts my heart like fire.

7 Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the *Pro. 6. 35. floods drown it: * if a man would give all the substance of his house for love, it would utterly be contemned z.

z It is the nature of Love in general; and of my Love to thee, that it cannot be taken off, neither by Terrors and Afflictions, which are commonly signified in Scripture by waters and floods, Psal. 32. 6. & 42. 7 and elswhere; nor by temptations and allurements. Nothing but the presence and favour of the beloved person can quiet and satisfie it. And therefore do not put me off with other things, but give me thy self, without whom, and in comparison of whom, I despise all other persons and things.

8 We a have a little sister b, and she hath no breasts c: what shall we do for our sister d in the day when she shall be spoken for e?

a These are manifestly the words of the Bride, still continuing her speech. The present Church, which was that of the Jews, speaks of another future Church, which was to consist of the Gentiles, which she calls little, because she was the younger Sister, and then scarce had a being; and she calls her her Sister, partly because she was so in the purpose of God, their common Father, though at present she was a stranger to him; and partly to intimate that the Gentile-Church should be admitted to the participation of the same priviledges with that of the Jews. c No grown and full Breasts, as Virgins have when they are ripe for Marriage, Ezek. 16. 7. This signifies the present doleful estate of the Gentiles, which as yet were not grown up into a Church Estate, and wanted the milk or food of Life, as for itself, so also for its Members. d Teach us to know and perform our duty to them, which is to embrace them with sincere and fervent affections, to promote their coming in to Christ, and to rejoice in it, and not to envy it, and murmur at it, as the Jews did in the days of Christ, and of his Apostles. e To wit, for bringing her into the state of Matrimony: when Christ and his Apostles, and others the first Ministers of the Gospel, who were Members of the Jewish Church, did speak and act for the conversion of the Gentiles.

9 If she be a wall, we will build upon her a palace of silver: and if she be a door, we will inclose her with boards of cedar f.

f This seems to be Christ's Answer to the foregoing question of the Jewish Church concerning their Sister Church of the Gentiles, for which they were very solicitous. Christ therefore engageth himself to take care of her, and to provide for her, as the matter doth require, and as suits best with her condition. If the Gentiles when they are converted shall be like a Wall, strong and firm in Faith, fledged against all Assaults and Temptations, for a Wall in Scripture use signifies strength, Isa. 26. 1. Jer. 15. 20. and elsewhere; We, my Father, and I, and the Holy Ghost, as the principal Builders, and my Ministers as workers with, and under us, will build upon her a palace of silver, will add more strength and beauty to her, will enlarge and adorn her, make her more amiable in mine Eyes, and more visible and glorious in the Eyes of the World: And if she be as a Door, which is weaker than a Wall, and where the Enemy doth or may break in upon her; if she be weak in Faith, and sometimes overcome by the tempter, yet we will not therefore reject and forsake her, but we will inclose or (as many others render the word) strengthen or fortifie her with Boards of cedar, which are not only beautiful, but also strong, and durable. If she be sincere, and open the door of her Heart to me, †Heb. p though she be weak, I will come into her, and make her stronger.

10 I am a wall g and my breasts like towers h: then was I in his eyes, as one that found † favour i.

g These seem to be the words of the Jewish Church to Christ, O Lord, by thy Grace I am what thou wouldst have my Sister to be, a Wall, and therefore do humbly beg and hope, that according to thy promise to her in that case, thou wilt build upon me a Palace of Silver. h Which stand out from and above the Wall, and are an ornament and defence to it. Of the Churches Breast, see before ch. 4. 5. & 7. 3, 7. i When by his Grace I was made a wall, he was well pleased with me, and with his own workmanship in me.

11 Solomon had a vineyard at Baal-hamon k; he let out the vineyard unto keepers: every one for the fruit thereof was to bring a thousand pieces of silver l.

k A place not far from Jerusalem, where Solomon, had as it seems, a noble vineyard. l Whereby he signifies both the vast extent of the Vineyard which required so many keepers, and its singular fertility which afforded so great a Rent.

12 My vineyard m which is mine n, is before me o: thou O Solomon, must have a thousand p, and those that keep the fruit thereof, two hundred q.

m My Church, which is oft compared to a vineyard, and is here opposed to Solomon's vineyard. It is much doubted and disputed whether this verse be spoken by Christ or by the Spouse; the first clause seems to agree best to the former, and the following clause to the latter. Possibly the difficulty may be reconciled by ascribing the first clause to Christ, and the latter to the Spouse: such interlocutions being familiar in this Book, and in other Writings of this kind. n This Repetition is not idle, but very emphatical, to shew that Christ had a more eminent and special title to his Vineyard, the Church, than Solomon had to his Vineyard, because it was purchased not by his Money, but by his Blood, and because it was his, not only for the short time of this present Life, as Solomon's was, but to all eternity. o Is under my own Eye and Care, and is not wholly committed to the Care and Management of others, as Solomon's was; I the Lord do keep it night and day, as we read Isa. 27. 3. I am with it to the end of the world Mat. 28. 20. p These are the Churches return to Christ, who is here called Solomon, as he was ch. 3. 9, 11. as elsewhere he is called David. Dost thou, O Christ, keep thine own Vineyard, which Solomon did not? Then surely it is meet that thou shouldst receive, and thou shalt receive as large a Revenue from thy Vineyard, as he did from his. q Though the chief Revenue belongeth, and is justly given to thee, yet thy Ministers, who serve thee in thy Vineyard, shall have, and are allowed by thee to receive, some encouragement for their service. See 1 Cor 9. 7.

13 Thou that dwellest r in the gardens s, the companions t hearken to thy voice u: * cause me to hear Ch. 2. 14. it x.

r The Hebrew word is of the feminine gender, which plainly sheweth that Christ speaks here to his Spouse, being about to depart from her for a season, as the next verse sheweth. s Not in the Wilderness of the World, for believers are chosen or called out of the World, Joh. 15. 19. but in the Church, the Garden of God, which God hath fenced and appropriated to himself. He saith, Gardens, because of the many particular Congregations, into which the Church is divided. t The friends of the Bride and Bridegroom. u Diligently observe all thy words and carriages towards me, and all the transactions between thee and me. x When I am gone from thee, let me hear thy Prayers, and Praises, and the Preaching of my Gospel in the World.

14 † * Make haste, my beloved, and be thou like † Heb. fa to a roe, or to a young hart upon the mountains of aro- spices y. Rev. 22

y Seeing we must part for a time, make haste, O my beloved 17, 20 Bridegroom, and speedily finish the work which thou hast to do in the World, that so thou mayst take me to thy self, that I may live in thine everlasting embraces. The words of this verse are borrowed from Ch. 2. 17. where they are explained.

ISAIAH.

The ARGUMENT.

THE Teachers of the ancient Church were of two sorts, 1. Ordinary, the Priests and Levites: Extraordinary, the Prophets. These were immediately called by God, and inspired, as with other singular Gifts and Graces, so particularly with a supernatural knowledge of Divine Mysteries, and of future things, and invested by God with an Authority Superiour not onely to the ordinary Teachers of the Church, but in some sort, even to the Civil Powers of the Nation. These Holy Prophets, whose Writings are contained in the Sacred Scripture, are sixteen. Of these Isaiah, is first in place, and, as may seem probable, in time also. But undoubtedly he was contemporary with Hosea, whom others suppose to have been before him. Compare Isa. 1. 1. with Hosea 1. 1. The Jews tell us that he was of the Blood Royal of Judah, which is uncertain. But undoubtedly he was the Prince of all the Prophets, whether we consider the great extent and variety of his Prophecies, the excellency and sublimity of those Mysteries which were revealed to him and by him, the Majesty and Elegancy of his style, or the incomparable liveliness and power of his Sermons. He doth so evidently and fully describe the Person, and Offices, and Sufferings, and Kingdom of Christ, that some of the Ancients called him the fifth Evangelist. And it is observed, that there are more Testimonies and Quotations in the New Testament taken out of Isaiah, than out of all the other Prophets.

CHAP. I.

Judah's Sins. 1. 4. her Judgments: 5. 9. her Worship is rejected. 10. 15. Exhortations to Repentance: Promises of Grace and Mercy: threatnings of sore Judgments: and Complaints by reason of their Backsliding: 16. 31.

THE Vision a of Isaiah the Son of Amoz b, which he saw c concerning Judah and Jerusalem d, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah e, Kings of Judah.

a Or, The Visions; the word being here collectively used, as it is ch. 22. 1. 1 Sam. 3. 1. The sense is, This is the Book of the Visions or Prophecies. As Prophets were called Seers, 1 Sam. 9. 9. so Prophecies are called Visions, because they were as clearly and certainly represented to the Prophets minds, as bodily Objects are to mens eyes. b Either the Brother of Amaziah King of Judah, as the Hebrew Writers fancy: Or, rather some other person then well known. c i. e. Foresaw and foretold. But he speaks, after the manner of the Prophets, of things to come, as if they were either past or present. d Principally, but not exclusively. For he Prophesieth also concerning Egypt and Babylon, and divers other Countries; which yet he doth with respect to Judah. e In time of their Reign. Whence it may be gathered, that Isaiah exercised his Prophetical Office above fifty years together, See 2 Kings 15, and 16.

2 * Hear, O Heavens, and give ear O Earth f; for the Lord hath spoken g, I have nourished and brought up Children h, and they have rebelled against me.

f He directeth his speech to these senseless Creatures, that thereby he might more awaken and affect the Israelites, whom he hereby proclaimeth to be so dull and stupid that they were past hearing, and therefore he gives them over as desperate, and calleth in the whole Creation of God to bear witness against them. g. This is his Plea against them, of the equity whereof he is willing that all the Creatures should be Judges. h I first made them a People, and until this time I have sustained and blessed them above all other

3 * The Ox knoweth his Owner, and the Ass his Master's Crib i: but Israel doth not know k, my People doth not consider.

i The most stupid bruit beasts acknowledge and obey their Lord and Benefactor, as experience sheweth. k To wit, me their Owner and Master, which is easily and necessarily understood out of the former Clause. Knowing is here taken practically, as it is usually in Scripture, and includes reverence and obedience.

4 Ah l sinful Nation, a People † laden with iniquity m, a seed of evil-doers n, children that are corrupters o, they have forsaken the LORD p, they have provoked the holy One of Israel unto anger q, they are † gone away backward r.

l This Particle implies both his wonder, and anger, and grief, and shame that they were such. m Heb. Of heaviness of Iniquity, i. e. of heavy or great sins, for heavy is commonly put for great or grievous, as Isa. 21. 15. and 30. 27. Laden not with the sense of sin, as Mat. 11. 28. but with the guilt and bondage of sin. n The Children of wicked Parents, whose guilt they inherit, and whose evil Example they follow. o Heb. that corrupt, to wit, themselves or their ways, or others by their counsel and example. Or, that destroy themselves and their land by their wickedness. p Not in profession, but in practice and reality, neglecting or corrupting his Worship, refusing his yoke and conduct. q They have lived as if it were their great design and business to provoke him. r Instead of proceeding forward and growing in grace, which was their duty, they are all fain from their former professions, and grown worse and worse, and have impudently turned their backs upon me.

5 Why should ye be stricken any more s, ye will † revolt more and more t: the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint u.

s It is to no purpose to seek to reclaim you by one Chastisement after another: and therefore I will utterly forsake and destroy you at once. t I see you are incorrigible, and turn even your afflictions into sin. u Your disease is mortal, as being in the most noble and vital parts, the very head and heart of the body politick, from whence the plague is derived to all the other Members, as it follows. And this is to be understood either, 1. Of their sins; or rather, 2. Of their miseries. Which best suits, 1. with the foregoing words, this being added as a reason why it was in vain to strike them any more, or to expect any amendment that way, because he had stricken them already, and that very terribly, even in their head and heart, whose wounds are most dangerous, and yet they were not at all better for it. 2. With verse 7, 8. where this Metaphor is so explained.

6 From the sole of the foot even unto the head, there is no soundness in it x; but wounds and bruises, and putrifying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ‖ ointment y. ‖ Or, Oil.

x You have been all of you punished, from the highest to the lowest, from the worst to the best. y I have suffered you to lie under your maladies for a time, without applying any remedies, to try whether the length and continuance of your affliction might not work that Cure which the strength of it could not do, but all in vain.

7 * Your country is desolate, your cities are burnt with fire: your land, strangers devour it z in your presence a, and it is desolate †, as overthrown by strangers b. Deut. 28. 51, 52. Chap. 5. 5. † Heb. as the over-throw of strangers.

z All this and what follows was verified in the days of King Ahaz, 2 Chron. 28. in whose time, and upon which occasion, this Prophecie seems to have been delivered, as more exactly agreeing with that time than with any other. If any object, That this being the first of his Prophecies, must rather belong to the days of Uzziah, they must take notice, and it is agreed by Interpreters, and it is undeniably true, that the Prophecies of Isaiah, as also of the other Prophets, are not set down in the same order in which they were delivered, but oftentimes the latter are put before the former. a Which your eyes shall see to torment you, when there is no power in your hands to deliver you. b Heb. As the overthrow of strangers, i. e. which strangers bring upon a land which is not theirs, nor likely to continue in their hands, and therefore they spare no persons that come in their way, and they spoil and destroy all things, which is not usually done in wars between Persons of the same, or of a neighbour Nation.

8 And the daughter of Zion c is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodg in a garden of cucumbers d, as a besieged city.

c i. e. Zion, or Jerusalem; for these two names are promiscuously used of the same place. The name of daughter being frequently given to cities or countries. Thus the daughter of Babylon is put for Babylon it self, Psal. 137. 8. Isa. 47. 1. In the same sence we read of the daughter of Tyre, Psal. 45. 12. and of Zidon, Isa. 23. 12. and of Egypt, Jer. 46. 11. 24. and of Edom, Lam. 4. 21. d Is left solitary, all the neighbouring villages and country round about it being laid waste.

9 * Except the LORD of hosts had left unto us a very small remnant e, we should have been as * Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrah f. *Lament. 3. 22. Rom. 9. 29. Gen. 19. 24.

e If God, by his Infinite Power and Goodness, had not restrained our enemies, and reserved some of us. f The whole nation and race of us had been utterly cut off, as the people of Sodom and Gomorrah were. So great was the rage and power of our enemies, and so utterly unable we were to deliver our selves.

10 Hear the word of the LORD g, ye rulers of Sodom h; give ear unto the law i of our God, ye people of Gomorrah.

g I speak not my own fancies or passions, but the message of your Lord and governour, to whom you owe all reverence and obedience.

dience. b So called for their resemblance of them in wickedness, Comp. Deut. 32. 32. Ezek. 16. 46, 48. i Or, Doctrine, as this word is commonly used: the message which I am now to deliver to you from God, your great Lawgiver, which ought to have the force of a Law with you.

11. To what purpose k is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? saith the LORD: I am full of the burnt-offerings m of rams, and the fat of fed beasts, and I delight not in the blood n of bullocks, or of lambs, or of † he-goats.

k They are vain and useless, being neither accepted by me, nor beneficial to you. l Who am a Spirit, and therefore cannot be satisfied with such carnal Oblations, but expect to be worshipped in spirit and truth, and to have your Hearts and Lives, as well as your Bodies and Sacrifices, presented unto me. m I am glutted with them, and therefore loath them. n He mentions the fat and blood, because these were in a peculiar manner reserved for God, Levit. 3. 15, 16. & 17. 11. to intimate, that even the best of their Sacrifices were rejected by him.

† Heb. to be seen.

o Upon the three Solemn Feasts, Exod. 23. 17. & 34. 23. or upon other occasions. p To wit, in this manner, and upon these terms. The thing that I commanded, was not onely, nor chiefly, that you should offer external Sacrifices to me, but that you should do it with true repentance for all your sins, with Faith in my Promises, with hearty Love to me, and sincere Resolutions of devoting your selves to my Service, without which you offer me a dead Carcass instead of a living Sacrifice. q The Courts of my Temple, which were two, that of the Priests, and that where the People assembled, 2 Chron. 4. 9. So this Reproof seems to be directed against both Priests and People, as unworthy to enjoy this Privilege.

13 Bring no more r vain oblations s, incense is an abomination unto me t, the new-moons u and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies x, I cannot away with y, it is also ‖ iniquity z, even the solemn meeting a.

Or, grief.

r I neither desire nor will accept of any upon these terms. s Heb. Meat-offerings; of which see Levit. 2. 1. Numb. 15. 4. t So far is it from being a sweet savour to me, as you foolishly imagine. u Which were holy to God, and observed with great solemnity. See Numb. 28. 11, 14. Psal. 81. 3. x All other Solemn times wherein the People were obliged to meet together, as the three great yearly Feasts, and other extraordinary Seasons. y Heb. I cannot bear: It is burdensom and grievous to me. z So far is it from pleasing me, that it is an offence to me, and instead of reconciling me to you, which is your design, it provoketh me more against you. a The most Solemn Day of each of the three Feasts, which was the last day, which is called by this very name, Levit. 23. 36. Numb. 29. 35. and elsewhere; although the word be sometime more generally used of any other Solemn Festival-day.

24 Therefore saith the Lord, the LORD of hosts, the mighty One of Israel, Ah, * I will ease me k of mine adversaries l, and avenge me of mine enemies.

* Deut. 28. 63.

k Heb. I will comfort my self, ease my Mind, and satisfie my Justice, by taking vengeance, as the next Clause explains this. The same Expression is used in the same sense, Ezek. 5. 13. l Of the Israelites, who, though they have called themselves my Children and Friends, yet by their Temper and Carriage towards me have shewed themselves to be mine Enemies.

25 And I will turn my hand upon thee m, and † * purely purge away thy dross, and take away all thy tin n.

† Heb. according to purenesse. * Jer. 6. 29. Mal. 3.

m To chastise thee again, which God threatned that he would not do, v. 5. but now promiseth that he will do it, not in fury, or so as utterly to destroy them, but in mercy, and with moderation, so as to purge them, as it here follows. n. I will purge out of thee and destroy those wicked Men that are incorrigible, and infectious to others; and for those of you that are curable, I will by my Word, and by the Furnace of Affliction, purge out all that Hypocrisie and Corruption that yet remains in you, and requires so sharp a Cure.

26 And I will restore thy judges o as at the first p, and thy counsellers q as at the beginning: afterward * thou shalt be called q, The city of righteousness, the faithful city.

o I will give thee such Princes and Magistrates. p Heb. As thou hadst in the beginning, either, 1. of thy Common-wealth; such as Moses, and Joshua: or, 2. of thy Kingdom, such as David. q Thy Princes shall have and hearken to wise and faithful Counsellors, which is a singular blessing to a Prince and People. q To wit, justly and truly; thou shalt be such: for, to be called is oft put for to be, as Isa. 4. 3. & 61. 6. Mat. 5. 9.

27 Zion r shall be redeemed s with judgment t, and ‖ her converts u with righteousness x.

‖ Or, that repent of her.

r The Jews that live in or near Zion, and worship God in Zion. s Shall be delivered from all their Enemies and Calamities. t Or, by judgment, i. by God's righteous Judgment, purging out those wicked and incorrigible Jews, who by their sins hindered the Deliverance of the People, and punishing and destroying their unmerciful Enemies, who kept them in cruel Bondage, as he did to the Babylonians, whereby he made the way open for their deliverance. u Heb. her returners, those of them who shall come out of Captivity into their own Land. x Or, by righteousness, i.e. either by by my Faithfulness, in keeping my Promise of delivering them after seventy Years; or by my Goodness; for both these come under the name of Righteousness in Scripture-use.

28 And y the * † destruction of the transgressors and of the sinners shall be together z, and they that forsake the LORD shall be consumed.

* Jer. 30. 11. & 46. 28. † Or rather, But, as that Particle is oft used; for here is a manifest opposition. z Though I will deliver my People from the Babylonish Captivity, yet those of them who shall still go on in their wickedness, shall not have the benefit of that Mercy, but are reserved for a more dreadful and total destruction.

29 For they shall be ashamed a of the oaks ‖ which ye have desired b, and ye shall be confounded for the gardens c that ye have chosen d.

a Not with an ingenuous and penitential shame for the Sin, but with an involuntary and penal shame for the disappointment of their hopes which they had in their Idols. b Which, after the manner of the Heathen, you have consecrated to Idolatrous Uses, that under them you might worship your Idols, as they did Ezek. 6. 13. Hos. 4. 13. See also Isa. 57. 5. Jer. 2. 20. and 3. 6. c In which, as well as in the Groves, they committed Idolatry; of which we read Isa. 65. 3. and 66. 17. d To wit, for the Place of your Worship, which is opposed to the Place which God had chosen and appointed for his Worship.

30 For ye shall be as an oak whose leaf fadeth, and as a garden that hath no water e.

e As you have sinned under the Oaks and in Gardens; so you shall be made like unto Oaks and Gardens, not when they are green and flourishing, but when they wither and decay.

31 And the strong f shall be as tow g, ‖ and the maker of it h as a spark; and they shall both burn together, and none shall quench them.

‖ Or, his work.

f Either 1. your Idols, which you think to be strong, and able to defend you, as appears by your Confidence in them; or 2. the strongest Persons among you, who think to secure themselves against the threatned danger by their Wealth, or Power, or Wisdom; and much more they that are weak and helpless. g Shall be as suddenly and easily consumed by my Judgments, as Tow is by Fire. h The Maker of the Idol, who can neither save himself nor his Workmanship. Or, his Work; either all that he doth or can do, or that which he hath done, his wicked course of Life, shall bring him to ruine.

CHAP. II.

A Prophecy of Christ's Kingdom, and the Calling of the Gentiles, 1, 5. And Rejection of the Jews for their Idolatry and Pride, 6, 9. The great Majesty and Power of God: And his Terrours on the Wicked: With an Exhortation to fear God, and not to trust in Man, 10, 22.

THE word a that Isaiah the son of Amoz saw, concerning Judah and Jerusalem.

a Or, the matter or thing, as this Hebrew word commonly signifies; the Prophecy or Vision.

2 And b * it shall come to pass in the last days c, that the mountain of the LORDS house d shall be ‖ established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills e: and all nations f shall flow g unto it.

* Mic. 4. 1, &c.

b Or, Now, as this Particle is rendred 1 Sam. 9. 1. Ezra 1. 1, &c. c In the Times of the Messias or the Gospel, as the generality both of Jewish and Christian Writers understand it, and as may further appear both from the use of this Phrase in this sence, Jer. 48. 47. and 49. 39. Ezek. 38. 8, 16. Dan. 10. 14. Hos. 3. 5. Acts 2. 17. Heb. 1. 2. 1 John 2. 18. and from the Conversion of the Gentiles here promised, which was not to be till that time; and from the Nature of the Thing, for this really was the last Time and State of the Church in the World; the Jewish Pedagogy was to be abolished, but Christ's Institutions were to continue to the end of the World. d The Temple of the Lord which is upon Mount Moriah; which yet is not to be understood literally of that Material Temple, but mystically of the Church of God, as appears from the next following Words, which will not admit of a literal Interpretation, and from the flowing of all Nations to it, which was not to that Temple, nor indeed was fulfilled till that Temple was destroyed; and from the frequent use of this Metaphor, the Temple, or the House of the Lord, concerning the Christian Church, both in the Old and the New Testament. e Shall be placed and settled in a most conspicuous and glorious manner, being advanced above all other Churches and Kingdoms in the World. f Those Gentiles, whom you now despise, and judge to be abhorred and quite forsaken by God. g Shall come in great abundance, and with great eagerness, like a River, as the Word signifies.

3 And many People shall go h and say i, * Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob, and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths k; for l out of Zion shall go forth the Law m, and the Word of the LORD from Jerusalem n.

* Isa. 30. 29. Mic. 4. 2, &c.

h Shall not only have some weak desires of going, but shall be ready to take pains, and shall actually go. i Such shall be their Zeal, that they shall not only go themselves, but shall perswade and press others to go with them. k They shew the Truth of their Conversion, by their hearty desire to be instructed in the way or method of worshipping and serving God acceptably, and by their firm purpose of practising the Instructions given to them. l This last Clause contains the Reason why the People should be so forward to go, and to invite others to go with them; and they may be the Words either of the People, continuing their Speech; or of the Prophets now returning to speak in his own Name. m The New Law, the Doctrine of the Gospel, which is frequently called a Law, because it hath the Nature and Power of a Law, obliging us no less to the Belief and Practice of it, than the Old Law did. n For the Accomplishment of this Promise, see Luke 24. 47. Acts 1. 8. Rom. 10. 18.

4 And he shall judge among the Nations o, and shall rebuke p many people: and * they shall beat their swords into plow-shares, and their spears into ‖ pruning-hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more q.

* Psal. 46. 9. Hos. 2. 18. Zech. 9. 10. ‖ Or, Sithes.

o Christ shall set up and use his Authority among and over all Nations, not only giving Laws to them, as other Rulers do, but doing that which no other Powers can do, convincing their Minds and Consciences, conquering and changing their Hearts, and ordering their Lives. p Either verbally, by his Word and Spirit reproving or convincing the World of Sin; or really, by his Judgments upon his implacable Enemies, which obstruct the Propagation of the Gospel. q He shall root out those great Animosities and Hostilities which were between the Jews and Gentiles, Eph. 2. 13, &c. and between several Nations, subduing Mens Pride, and Passions, and Lusts, which are the Causes of all Wars and Contentions; and working Humility, and Meekness, and Self-denial, and true and fervent Love to all Men, from whence Peace necessarily follows. This was the Design of the Gospel in all, and the Effect oft in those that rightly received it. And that War and Dissension which was occasioned by the Preaching of the Gospel, as was foretold Mat. 10. 21, 22. it was wholly accidental, by reason of Mens corrupt Interests and Lusts, which the Gospel opposed; and it was not amongst those who received the Gospel in the love of it, but between them and those who were either open Enemies or false Friends to them and to the Gospel. But if this Place be understood of an external and general Peace which was to be in the World in the Days of of the Messias, this also may in due time be verified, when all Israel shall be saved, and the fulness of the Gentiles shall be brought in, and both Jews and Gentiles shall be united together into one Fold, under Christ their great Shepherd; all which is prophesied and promised John 10. 16. Rom. 11. and elsewhere. For it is not necessary that all the Prophecies concerning the Kingdom of the Messias should be accomplished in an instant, or at the beginning of it; but it is sufficient if they be fulfilled before the end of it. And some of them do manifestly belong to the last days of that Kingdom. And therefore there is no truth nor weight in that Argument which the Jews bring from this Place, against our Messias, because of those Wars that have hitherto been and still are amongst Christians; for this doth not prove that these Wars shall never cease, or that there shall not be such a Peace in the World as they understand, before the end of Christ's Kingdom.

5 O house of Jacob, come ye r, and let us walk in the light of the LORD s.

* Chap. 60. 1, 3.

r Seeing the Gentiles are thus ready and resolved to go to the Lord's House, let this oblige and provoke you, O ye Israelites, to go with them, or before them. Whereby he secretly intimates their backwardness, and that when the Gentiles did come into the Church, they would apostatize from it. s Take heed that you do not reject that Light which is so clear that even the blind Gentiles will discern it.

6 Therefore t thou hast forsaken u thy people the house of Jacob x, because they be replenished ‖ from the east y, and * are soothsayers z, like the Philistines a, and they ‖ please themselves b in the children of strangers c.

‖ Or, more than the east. * Deut. 18. 14. ‖ Or, abound with their Children, &c.

t For the following Reasons. Or, But, as this Particle is oft used. But why do I perswade the Israelites to receive the Light of the Gospel? My labour is in vain. t forefee they will refuse it; and God, for their many and great Sins, will give them up to Apostasy and Infidelity. u Wilt certainly forsake and reject. x The Body of that Nation. y Their Land is full of the impious, and superstitious, and idolatrous Manners of the Eastern Nations, the Syrians and Chaldeans. z These undertook to discover secret things, and to foretel future contingent things, by the superstitious Observation of the Stars, or Clouds, or Birds, or other ways of Divination, which God had severely forbidden. See Lev. 19. 26. a Who were infamous for those Practices; of which see one Instance, 1 Sam. 6. 2. b They delight in their Manners, and Company, and Conversation, making Leagues, and Friendships, and Marriages with them. c Either, 1. in the Children begotten by them upon strange Women; or rather, 2. in strangers, as this Phrase is used, Neh. 9. 2. Isa. 60. 10. and elsewhere.

7 There land also is full of silver and gold, neither is there any end of their treasures d: their land also is full of horses e, neither is there any end of their chariots.

d They have heaped up Riches immoderately, (which was forbidden even to their King, Deut. 17. 17.) and by wicked Practices; they are never satisfied, but still greedily pursuing after more and more Wealth, making this their chief Business and Joy. e Which even their King was forbidden to multiply, Deut. 17. 16. much more his Subjects.

8 Their land also is full of idols: they worship the work of their own hands f, that which their own fingers have made.

f They give that worship to their own Creatures which they deny to me their Creator, than which nothing can be more impious and absurd.

9 And the mean man boweth down, and the great man humbleth himself g: therefore forgive them not h.

g Men of all Ranks fall down and worship idols. h Cut off these incorrigible Idolaters. Such an Imprecation is not strange, considering the hainousness and inexcusableness of the Crime, the singular Condition of the Prophets, who spake such things not from any disorderly Passion, but by Divine Inspiration, and from a fervent Zeal for God's Glory, which ever was and ought to be dearer to them than all the Interests of Men; and from a pious Care and Fear leſt others ſhould be infected by their Counſel or Example. Yet the Words may be taken as a Prediction, Thou wilt not forgive them: By this I know thou haſt determined utterly to deſtroy them; for the Hebrew Particle al is ſometimes taken only for a ſimple denial, as Pſalm 121. 3. Prov. 12. 28.

10 Enter into the rock, and hide thee in the duſt i, for fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majeſty k.

i This is ſpoken ironically, and with deriſion. The ſence is, Such dreadful Calamites are coming upon you, that you will be ready to hide your ſelves in Rocks and Caves of the Earth, but all to no purpoſe. k For fear of the glorious and terrible Judgments of God.

*Chap. 5. 15. 11 The * lofty looks of man ſhall be humbled, and the haughtineſs of men ſhall be bowed down l, and the LORD alone ſhall be exalted in that day m.

l Judicially, as they bowed down voluntarily before their Idols. So the Puniſhment is very ſuitable to the Sin. m His Juſtice and Power ſhall be magnified, and the Vanity and Impotency of all other gods ſhall be detected.

12 For the day of the LORD n of hoſts ſhall be upon every one that is proud and lofty, and upon every one that is lifted up, and he ſhall be brought low;

n The time of God's taking vengeance upon Sinners, which is called God's day, Iſa. 13. 6, 9. Ezek. 13. 5. and 30. 3. and oft elſewhere.

*Zech. 11. 1, 2. 13 And upon all * the cedars of Lebanon, that are high and lifted up, and upon all the oaks of Baſhan o.

o Either, 1. Metaphorically, upon the higheſt and proudeſt Sinners; or, 2. Literally, as may ſeem probable from the following Verſes, where there is diſtinct mention made of mountains and hills, v. 14. of towers and walls, v. 15. of ſhips and pictures, v. 16. Whereby he intimates, that the Judgment ſhould be ſo univerſal and terrible, that it ſhould not only reach to Men, but to things alſo, whether Natural or Artificial, in all which there ſhould be manifeſt Tokens of God's Diſpleaſure againſt the Land. The cedars and oaks ſtanding in the Mountains ſhall be either thrown down by furious Winds or Earthquakes, or torn in pieces by Thunder and Lightning; and the ſtately Houſes built with Cedars and Oaks ſhall be deſtroyed.

14 And upon all the high mountains, and upon all the hills that are lifted up p, p To which Men uſed to betake themſelves in times of War and Danger. It is uſual with the Prophets to deſcribe God's Judgments upon Men by the ſhaking and ſmoaking of the Mountains, the trembling of the Earth, and the like.

15 And upon every high tower, and upon every fenced wall q, q To which you reſorted and truſted for your defence.

† Heb. Pictures of deſire.

r The Ships of the Sea, as that Word is uſed, Pſalm 48. 7. whereby you fetched Riches and Precious things from the remote Parts of the World.

17 And the loftineſs of man ſhall be bowed down, and the haughtineſs of men ſhall be made low ſ: and the LORD alone ſhall be exalted in that day.

ſ This he repeats again, partly to aſſure us of the certainty of it, and partly to fix it deeper in mens Minds, becauſe they are very backward to believe and conſider things of this Nature.

‖ Or, the idols ſhall utterly paſs away. 18 And ‖ the idols he ſhall utterly aboliſh t.

t God will diſcover the Impotency of Idols to ſuccour their Worſhippers, and thereby deſtroy their Worſhip in the World.

z Into the meaneſt and darkeſt Places, in which Moles and Bats have their abode; whereas before they ſet them up in high and honourable Places, where they might be ſeen and worſhipped. This great and ſudden Change proceeded either from true Repentance, which filled them with ſhame, and grief, and indignation againſt themſelves, and all the Inſtruments of their Wickedneſs; or from a Conviction of the Vanity of their Idols, which afforded them no help in the time of their need; or from a juſt Fear leſt God's Judgment ſhould have fallen more heavily upon them, if it had found them in the Practice of Idolatry; and that by this Profeſſion of Repentance, they might, if it were poſſible, either prevent or mitigate their Calamity.

21 To go into the clefts of the rocks, and into the tops of the ragged rocks, for fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majeſty, when he ariſeth to ſhake terribly the earth.

22 Ceaſe ye from man a whoſe breath is in his noſtrils b: for wherein is he to be accounted of c?

a Seeing God will undoubtedly bring down the higheſt and proudeſt of the Sons of Men into ſo much Contempt and Miſery, from henceforth never admire nor place your truſt in Man. b Whoſe Breath, upon which his Life and Strength depends, is in his Noſtrils, and therefore is quickly ſtop'd and taken away. c What reed in himſelf, and without dependence upon God?

o The Princes or Rulers, as it is explained in the next Clauſe, who are oft called Elders, becauſe ſuch were commonly and fitly choſen out of thoſe who were ripe in years. p Deſtroyed in ſtead of preſerving and dreſſing it, as you ſhould have done. q The Church and Commonwealth of Iſrael, which is oft called God's Vineyard, as Pſalm 80. 8, 14, 15. Iſa. 5. 1. Jer. 2. 21, &c. and here the Vineyard, by way of eminency: Or, the Vineyard which was committed to your care to keep. r The Goods which you have violently taken away from the Poor.

15 What mean ye ſ that ye beat my people to pieces, and grind t the faces of the poor? ſaith the Lord GOD of hoſts.

ſ What Warrant have ye for it? How durſt you preſume to do it? t Or, batter, as the Word is uſed Exod. 32. 20. Smite them cruelly. See Chap. 58. 4.

16 ¶ Moreover, the LORD ſaith, Becauſe the daughters of Zion u are haughty, and walk with ſtretched-forth necks x, and † wanton eyes y, walking and ‖ mincing as they go z, and making a tinkling with their feet a:

† Heb. deceivers. ‖ Or, going with ſtately treſſes.

u The Women; as hitherto he reproved the Men. x Affecting Statelineſs, Pſalm 75. 5. and to ſeem tall. y Or, as others, twinkling with their Eyes in a laſcivious manner. z After the manner of looſe and wanton Perſons. a By ſome Ornaments which they wore upon their Shoes.

17 Therefore the Lord will ſmite with a ſcab the crown of the head b of the daughters of Zion, and the LORD will † diſcover their ſecret parts c.

† Heb. make bare.

b Will by ſending Scabs, or by other ways, take off the Hair of their Head, which is a Womans Glory, 1 Cor. 11. 15. and which doubtleſs miniſtred to their Pride and Wantonneſs. Others render it, He will make bald, &c. c By giving her into the power of thoſe Enemies that ſhall either ſtrip her of all her Raiments, not leaving her ſufficient to cover her Nakedneſs; or otherwiſe abuſe her, by ſuch immodeſt and contemptuous Actions, Compare Iſa. 47. 3. Ezek. 16. 37. and 23. 10, 26.

18 In that day the Lord will take away the bravery of their tinkling ornaments about their feet, and their ‖ cauls d, and their round tires like the moon e.

‖ Or, ſnets.

d As for this and the other Hebrew words here following, I judge it unneceſſary and improper to trouble the Engliſh Reader with the differing Interpretations given of them by Learned Men, which the Curious may find in my Latin Synopſis. It is agreed by all, that they were Ornaments uſed by that People in thoſe Times; and made Fewel to their Luſts. And it is of no concernment to the Direction either of our Faith or Manners, exactly to underſtand the Nature and Differences of them. And therefore I ſhall take them as they are in our Tranſlation. e There were in ancient Time, and at this day there are ſome Jewels or other Ornaments worn, which carry a manifeſt reſemblance to the Moon or Half-moon. Compare Judg. 8. 21, 26.

19 The ‖ chains, and the bracelets, and the ‖ muffers.

‖ Or, round tires like the moon. ‖ Or, ſweet ſmelling ſavours.

20 The bonnets f, and the ornaments of the legs, and the head-bands, and the † tablets g, and the ear-rings.

† Or, houſes of the ſoul.

f Theſe were Ornaments to cover the Head, common both to Men, as Exod. 39. 28. and to Women, as here. g Heb. the houſes of the Soul, or, of Life, or, of Breath. Whereby he ſeems to mean Boxes of excellent Perfumes, which are of great efficacy to revive our drooping Spirits, and to that end are oft applied to ſuch as are ready to faint away.

21 The rings, and the noſe-jewels h.

h Which were faſtned to the Head, and hung down upon the Forehead to the beginning of the Noſe. Of which ſee Gen. 24. 22, 47. Judg. 8. 24, &c.

22 The changeable ſuits of apparel, and the mantles, and the wimples, and the criſping pins i.

i Of Silver or Gold, either uſed to curl the Hair, or rather faſtned and worn in the Hair; which Cuſtom is not altogether diſuſed at this day.

23 The glaſſes k, and the fine linen, and the hoods, and the vails.

k The Looking-glaſſes, as we call them, though in Truth they were not made of Glaſs, but of bright and burniſhed Braſs.

24 And it ſhall come to paſs, that in ſtead of ſweet ſmell l, there ſhall be ſtink m; and in ſtead of a girdle n, a rent o; and in ſtead of well-ſet hair, baldneſs; and in ſtead of a ſtomacher, a girding of ſackcloth; and burning p, in ſtead of beauty.

l Thoſe Perfumes mentioned v. 20. m From their Scabs mentioned v. 17. or from other ill uſages of their Enemies. n Which were fine and coſtly, and uſeful to gird their Garments about them. o Either the rending of their Garments for grief; or torn and tattered Garments, not ſufficient to cover their Bodies. p By the heat of the Sun, to which they are now commonly expoſed, from which they uſed formerly to guard themſelves with great care.

† Heb. might.

26 And her gates q ſhall lament and mourn, and ſhe being ‖ † deſolate, ſhall ſit upon the ground r.

‖ Or, emptied. † Heb. cleanſed.

q The Gates of Zion or Jeruſalem, which, by a Figure very uſual in Sacred Scripture, and all Authors, are ſaid to lament, to imply the great Deſolation of the Place; that there ſhould be no more People to go out and come in by the Gates, or to meet together in the Gates, as they uſed to do. r Like a mournful Woman bewailing the loſs of her Husband and Children.

CHAP. IV.

In the Extremity of Evils, Chriſt's Glorious Kingdom ſhould appear to thoſe who are left alive, 1, 2. Two ſhall be Holy, 3. Purged, 4. A Glory and a Defence upon them, 5. A Sanctuary from Evils, 6.

AND in that day a ſeven b women ſhall take hold c of one man d, ſaying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel e: only † let us be called by thy name f, ‖ to take away our * reproach g.

† Heb. let thy name be called upon us. ‖ Or, take thou away. * Luk. 1. 25.

a Of which he hath hitherto been ſpeaking, Chap. 2. and 3. and ſtill continueth to ſpeak. In that calamitous Time. b Many. A certain number for an uncertain. c Shall ſue to him, and even lay hands upon him, contrary to their Cuſtom, and their natural Modeſty. d Becauſe few Men ſhall ſurvive that dreadful Stroke. They who before were not contented with their own Husbands, are now glad of a ſeventh part of a Husband. e We will caſt thee of that Charge, which otherwiſe would fall upon thee by God's Law, Exod. 21. 10. f Own us for thy Wives. g Virginity was eſteemed a Reproach, eſpecially among that People, becauſe it was a Token of Contempt from Men, and of the Curſe of God; Children, the uſual Fruit of Marriage, being both an Honour to their Parents before Men, and a great Bleſſing of God, eſpecially to that People, from ſome of whoſe Loins the Meſſiah was to ſpring.

2 In that day h ſhall the Branch of the LORD i be † beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the earth ſhall be excellent k and comely † for them that are eſcaped l of Iſrael.

† Heb. beauty and glory. † Heb. for the eſcaping of Iſrael.

h About and after that time: when the Lord ſhall have waſhed away (as this Time is particularly expreſſed, v. 4.) the filth of Zion, by thoſe dreadful Judgments now deſcribed. i Either, 1. the Church and People of Iſrael, oft called God's vine or vineyard, as we ſaw before, and the Branch of God's planting, Iſa. 60. 21. or, 2. the Meſſiah, who is commonly defined in Scripture by this Title, the Branch, Iſa. 11. 1. Jer. 23. 5. and 33. 15. Zech. 3. 1. whoſe Name is expreſly ſaid to be the Branch, Zech. 6. 12. of whom not only Chriſtians, but even the Hebrew Doctors underſtand it. For after the foregoing Miſeries were brought upon the Jews, by the Remainders of the Grecian Empire, of which Daniel Propheſies of exactly and particularly, and afterwards by the Roman Empire, the Meſſiah was born; and after that utter Deſtruction brought upon the Jewiſh City, and Temple, and Nation, by Titus, the Kingdom of the Meſſiah became beautiful and glorious, as it here follows. k The Land which for the Sins of the People was made barren, upon their Repentance and return to Chriſt ſhall recover its former Fertility. Under this one Mercy he ſeems to underſtand all Temporal Bleſſings, which, together with ſpiritual and eternal, God ſhall confer upon them; and withal to intimate the Fruitfulneſs of the People (the Earth or Land being oft put for its Inhabitants) in Knowledge, and Grace, and all good works. l That ſhall ſurvive all the forementioned Calamities.

3 And it ſhall come to paſs, that he that is left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jeruſalem, ſhall be called holy m, even every one that is written ‖ among the living n in Jeruſalem o:

‖ Or. to life. So Gr.

m i. e. Shall be really holy, as is ſaid Chap. 60. 21. To be called is oft put for to be, as Gen. 21. 12. Iſa. 1. 26. and 44. 5. So this is a Reſtriction of the foregoing indefinite Propoſition. Not all all that are left, but a great number of them, ſhall be holy, even all that are written, &c, i. e. all the Elect, who are frequently deſcribed by this Character, that they are written in God's or the Lamb's Book, or in the Book of Life, or of the Living, Pſalm 69. 28. Dan. 12. 1. Phil. 4. 3. Rev. 3. 5. and 13. 8. and 17. 8, &c. But this laſt Clauſe of the Verſe is by ſome Learned Interpreters rendred thus, all that are in Jeruſalem (i. e. a very great number of them, as ſuch general Expreſſions are frequently uſed, or the generality of them) ſhall be written unto Life, i. e. ſhall be ſuch as are elected unto Salvation through Sanctification: Which may deſerve conſideration. So he notes the ſingular Privilege of this People at this time, above the former Ages, in which many were called, but few were choſen. o Of the People living in or belonging to Jeruſalem.

4 When the Lord ſhall have waſhed away the filth of the daughter of Zion p, and ſhall have purged the blood q of Jeruſalem from the midſt thereof, by * the ſpirit of judgment, and by the ſpirit of burning r.

* Chap. 32. 15, 16.

p This ſhall be accompliſhed when God hath thoroughly cleanſed the Jewiſh Nation from their Sins. q The Blood-guiltineſs, and eſpecially that of killing the Lord of Life, their own Meſſiah. r This is oppoſed to the former Legal way of Purification, which was by Water. By the ſpirit he ſeems to underſtand the Holy Spirit of God, to which this waſhing and purging Work is commonly aſcribed, as 1 Cor. 6. 11. and elſewhere; which Spirit did accompany the Preaching of the Goſpel, and did this Work in part in ſome of the Jews, and will do it more fully in the Body of the Nation. And this Spirit may well be called a ſpirit of Judgment, becauſe it executes Judgment in the Church, and in the Conſciences of Men, ſeparating the precious from the vile, convincing men of Sin, and Righteouſneſs, and Judgment, John 16. 8, 9. manifeſting the Secrets of mens Hearts, in the Preaching of the Word, 1 Cor. 14. 25. accuſing and terrifying and punithing ſome, witneſſing for and with others, and filling them with Peace and Joy in believing, hardning ſome, and ſoftning and ſubduing others to God, as this Spirit is particularly promiſed to do to the Jews, Zech. 12. 10. And the ſame Spirit may be fitly called the ſpirit of burning, as he is compared to Fire, Mat. 3. 11. becauſe he doth burn up and conſume the Droſs which is in the Church, and in the Minds and Hearts of men, and enflames the Souls of Believers with Love to God, and Zeal for his Glory.

5 And the LORD will create ‖upon every dwelling place of mount Zion, and upon her aſſemblies, a * cloud, and ſmoak by day, and the ſhining of a flaming fire by night s: for ‖upon all the glory u ſhall be † a defence.

* Exod. 13. 21. ‖ Or, above. † Heb. a covering.

s Will in a marvellous manner produce, as it were by a new Work of Creation. t A Pillar of Cloud and Fire, like that wherewith the Lord directed and protected and honoured the Iſraelites, when they came out of Egypt: Whereby he implies, That God would be their Protector, and their Glory. u Upon all that Church and People, which God will make ſo glorious, not only in his own Eyes, but even in the Eyes of the World; upon all holy Aſſemblies of ſincere Chriſtians.

6 And there ſhall be a Tabernacle x for a ſhadow in the day time from the heat, and for a place of refuge, and for a covert from ſtorm and from rain.

x Or, he, i. e. the Lord, ſhall be a Tabernacle, or a tent, to defend them from the violent Heat of the Sun, and other Injuries of the Weather, which was the Uſe and Benefit of Tents.

a I will record it to be a Witneſs for God, and againſt you, as Moſes did his Song, Deut. 31. 19. and 32. 1. b To the Lord of the Vineyard, as appears by the laſt Clauſe of the Verſe, to God or Chriſt, whom I love and ſerve, and for whoſe Glory, eclipſed by you, I am greatly concerned. c Not deviſed by me, not the Effect of my Envy or Paſſion; but inſpired by God, which therefore it behoveth you to lay to heart. d His Church, oft and very fitly called a Vineyard, becauſe of God's ſingular Reſpect to it, and Care of it, and his Delight in it, and expectation of good Fruit from it, &c. e Hills being Places moſt commodious for Vines; ſee Pſalm 80. 10. Heb. in an horn (which may ſignifie either, 1. The Figure or Shape of the Land of Canaan, which reſembles an Horn; or, 2. The Heighth and Hillineſs of that Land, as Horns are the higheſt parts of Beaſts; or, 3. The Goodlineſs and Excellency of it, as an Horn, when it is aſcribed to a Man, ſignifies his Glory and Dignity, as Job 16. 15. Pſalm 89. 17, 24, &c.) the Son of Oil, which, by a vulgar Hebraiſm, notes an oily or a fat Soil.

2 And he ‖ fenced it, and gathered out the ſtones thereof g, and planted it with the choiceſt vine, and built a tower h in the midſt of it; and alſo † made a wine preſs therein: and he looked that it ſhould bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes.

‖ Or, made a wall about it. † Heb. hewed.

f That neither Men nor Beaſts might ſpoil it. g Which otherwiſe would have marred the Land; of which ſee 2 Kings 3. 19. The fence is, He removed all Hinderances, and gave them all the Means of Fruitfulneſs. h For the Reſidence of the Keepers, that they might be obliged and encouraged to watch over it with more diligence.

3 And now, O inhabitants of Jeruſalem, and men of Judah, judge, I pray you, betwixt me and my Vineyard i.

i I dare make you Judges in your own Cauſe, it is ſo plain and reaſonable.

4 What † could have been done more to my Vineyard, that I have not done in it k? wherefore when I looked that it ſhould bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes l?

† Heb. there is do.

k What Work is there belonging to the Office of a Maſter or Keeper of the Vineyard, which I have neglected? l How unworthy and inexcuſable a Crime is it, that you have not only been unfruitfull in good Works, but alſo filled with all the Fruits of Wickedneſs.

5 And now go to; I will tell you what I will do to my Vineyard m; * I will take away the hedge thereof, and it ſhall be eaten up: and break down the wall thereof, and it ſhall be † trodden down n.

* Pſal. 80. 12. † Heb. treaded.

m He graciouſly warns them before-hand, that they may have ſpace and invitation to repent, and ſo to prevent the threatned Miſeries. n I will withdraw my Preſence and Protection from them, and give them up into the Hands of their Enemies.

6 And I will lay it waſte: it ſhall not be pruned, nor digged o, but there ſhall come up briars and thorns p: I will alſo command the clouds, that they rain no rain upon it q.

o Vine-dreſſers uſe to dig up and open the Earth about the Roots of the Vines, for divers good purpoſes. The meaning is, I will remove my Miniſters, who uſed great care and diligence to make you fruitful. p I will give you up to your own wicked Luſts. q I will deprive you of all my Bleſſings, which are oft compared to rain, &c.

7 For the Vineyard of the LORD of hoſts is the houſe of Iſrael, and the men of Judah † his pleaſant plant r: and he looked for judgment, but behold † oppreſſion; for righteouſneſs, but behold a cry ſ.

† Heb. plant of his Pleaſures. † Heb. ſcab.

r In whom God formerly delighted to dwell and converſe. Compare Prov. 8. 31. Jer. 31. 50. ſ From the Oppreſſed crying to Men for Help, and to God for Vengeance.

* Micah 2. 2.

t That add new Purchaces of Houſes and Lands to their former Poſſeſſions. Not that this was in itſelf unlawful, but becauſe they did this from an inordinate and inſatiable deſire of Riches, and with the Injury of their Brethren, as is manifeſt from the foregoing and following Words. u That they alone may be the Lords and Owners, and all others only their Tenants and Servants.

9 ‖ In mine ears ſaid the LORD of hoſts, † Of a truth many houſes ſhall be deſolate y, even great and fair, without Inhabitant.

‖ Or, in the ears of the Lord. † Heb. not;

To the foregoing Words; The Cry of your Sins, and of the Oppreſſed, is come into God's Ears; he hears and ſees it, and will certainly puniſh it: Or, 2. To the following Clauſe, which, being of great importance, he uſhers in with an Oath; I ſpeak it in God's Ears, as well as in yours; I call God to witneſs the Truth of what I ſay. y The Houſes which you have ſo greedily coveted, ſhall caſt you out, and become deſolate.

10 Yea, ten acres of Vineyard ſhall yield one bath z, and the ſeed of an omer ſhall yield an ephah a.

z To wit, of Wine. The Bath contained about eight Gallons. Thus an Acre did not yield one Gallon. a Which was of the ſame Quantity with the Bath, only the Bath was the Meaſure of Liquid things, the Ephah of Dry things; and an Ephah was the tenth part of an Homer, Ezek. 45. 11. So in ſtead of that great Increaſe which that fruitful Land commonly yielded, they ſhould loſe nine parts of their Seed. Thus a fruitful Land was made barren for their Wickedneſs, according to God's threatning, Pſalm 107. 34. and they had as little comfort in their Lands, as in their Houſes; which were the two kinds of their Purchaſes, v. 8.

11 * Wo unto them that riſe up early in the morning b, that they may follow ſtrong drink; that continue until night c, till wine ‖ enflame them d.

* Prov. 23, 30. ‖ Or, purſue them.

b Which was unuſual, and ſcandalous in that caſe, Eccleſ. 10. 16. Acts 2. 15. They made Drinking their daily Trade and Buſineſs. c Thereby waſting both precious Time, and God's good Creatures, and the Health of their Bodies, as well as of their Souls. d He uſeth this Word partly to ſhew their Folly and Miſery, becauſe the Wine was ſo far from quenching and ſatisfying their Appetites, that it did indeed inflame and increaſe them; and partly to prevent the vain Excuſe of them who thought themſelves innocent, becauſe they did not drink to Drunkenneſs, although they caſt themſelves into an intemperate Heat through their Exceſs.

12 And * the harp and the viol, the tabret and the pipe, and wine are in their feaſts: but * they regard not the work of the LORD ſ, neither conſider the operation of his hands.

* Amos 5. 6. Job 21. 12. Pſal. 28. 5.

e They give up themſelves wholly to Luxury, and that in a very unſeaſonable time, as it follows. f What God hath lately done, and is yet doing, and about to do among them; his grievous Judgments, partly inflicted, and partly threatned, which required another Courſe of Life, even to give themſelves to Faſting and Prayer and Reformation, that ſo they might remove the incumbent, and prevent the approaching, Calamities.

13 * There-

13 * Therefore my people are gone into captivity g, becauſe they have no knowledge h: and † their honourable men i are famiſhed, and their multitude † dried up with thirſt.

† Heb. their glory. † Heb. their.

g Either, 1. Are actually gone, which was true of the Ten Tribes in Hezekiah's Reign, 2 Kings 18. 9. under whom this Prophecy might be uttered; or, 2. Shall certainly and ſhortly go, as the Two Tribes afterward did. h No ſerious Conſideration of God's Works, and of their own Duty and Danger. i Who thought themſelves quite out of reach of Famine.

14 Therefore hell k hath enlarged † her ſelf, and opened her mouth without meaſure l: and their glory m, and their multitude, and their pomp n, and he that rejoyceth o, ſhall deſcend into it.

† Heb. her.

k Or, the grave, as this Word moſt commonly ſignifies. l To receive thoſe vaſt Numbers which ſhall die by this Famine, or otherwiſe, as is here implied. m Their Honourable men, as they were called, v. 13. being diſtinguiſhed both here and there from the multitude. n All their Glory ſhall die with them. o That ſpendeth all his days in Mirth and Jollity, and caſteth away all Cares and Fears.

15 And * the mean man ſhall be brought down, and the mighty man ſhall be humbled p, and the eyes of the lofty ſhall be humbled.

* Pſal. 49. 2.

p All of them, both high and low, ſhall be brought to deſtruction.

16 But the LORD of hoſts ſhall be exalted in judgment q, and ‖ † God that is holy ſhall be ſanctified r in Righteouſneſs ſ.

‖ Or, the holy God. † Heb. the holy.

q By the execution of this juſt Judgment upon his incorrigible Enemies. r Shall appear to be an holy God. ſ By his righteous Judgments.

17 Then t ſhall the lambs u feed after their manner x, and the waſte places y of the fat ones z ſhall ſtrangers a eat.

t When God ſhall have finiſhed that Work of Judgment upon the Ungodly, he will extend Mercy to a Remainder. This is very uſual in this Prophet, in the midſt of his Threatnings, to inſert ſomething for the ſupport of Believers. u The poor and harmleſs People, who ſhall be left in the Land when the Rich are carried into Captivity, as it fell out 2 Kings 25. 12. x Or, by their Fold, as this Word is manifeſtly uſed Mic. 2. 12. the only place of Scripture, except this, in which this Word is found. y The Lands left by their Owners, who were either ſlain, or carried into Captivity. z Of the Rich and Great men, ſo called Pſalm 22. 29. and 78. 31. Iſa. 10. 16. a The poor Iſraelites, who were left to be vine-dreſſers and husbandmen, 2 Kings 25. 12. who are called ſtrangers, becauſe they were ſo in reference to that Land, not being the proper Owners of it, nor related to them; as the Iſraelites of other Tribes are called ſtrangers, in oppoſition to the Levites, as Numb. 1. 51. and elſewhere; yea, and the Levites are ſo called, in oppoſition to the Seed of Aaron, Numb. 16. 40.

18 Wo unto them that draw Iniquity b with cords of vanity c, and ſin as it were with a cart-rope d.

b That are not only drawn to ſin by the Allurements of the World, or by the Perſwaſions of wicked men, being ſurpriſed and overtaken by Sin, as ſometimes good men are, Gal. 6. 1. but are active and induſtrious in drawing Sin to themſelves, or themſelves to Sin; that greedily and ſteadily purſue Sin, and the Occaſions of it, and are not at reſt till they have overtaken it; that ſin wilfully, and reſolvedly, and induſtriouſly. c Or, with ends of lying, as the laſt Word frequently ſignifies, i. e. with vain and deceitful Arguments and Pretences, whereby Sinners generally draw themſelves to Sin, among which, one follows in the next Verſe, to wit, the Impunity which they promiſe to themſelves. Or theſe Cords may note the Means which they uſe to accompliſh that Iniquity which they have deviſed. d. With all their might, as Beaſts commonly do that draw Carts with Ropes.

19 * That ſay, Let him e make ſpeed, and haſten his work, that we may ſee it f: and let the Counſel of the holy One of Iſrael g draw nigh and come, that we may know it.

* Pſal. 73. 11.

e To Wit, God, in whoſe Name thou and other Prophets are always repoving and threatning us. f He only thinks to affright us with Bugbears; but he either cannot, or will not do us any harm: we do not fear him, let him do his worſt; let him begin as ſoon as he pleaſeth. Not that any of the Iſraelites were ſo impudent as to uſe theſe Expreſſions; but this was the plain Language of their Actions; they lived as if they were of this Opinion; their Preſumption and Security ſhewed their deſperate Contempt of God, and of all his Judgments. g Who by his Holineſs is engaged to puniſh us. They ſcornfully repeated the Title, uſually given by the Prophets unto God.

20 Wo unto them † that call evil good, and good evil h; that put darkneſs for light, and light for darkneſs; that put bitter for ſweet, and ſweet for bitter.

† Heb. that are called.

h That take away the difference between Good and Evil; that juſtifie and approve wicked Men and Things, and condemn Piety, or Vertue, or righteous Perſons. Compare Prov. 17. 15. Thus many call Serious Godlineſs, Humourous Singularity; and Juſtice, Moroſity; and Meekneſs, Stupidity, &c. as on the contrary, they call Pride, Magnanimity; and Covetouſneſs, Good-husbandry. And men are very apt to follow the Courſe of the World in their falſe Judgments of things: which therefore the Prophet ſo severely forbids.

21 Wo unto them that are * wiſe in their own eyes, and prudent † in their own ſight i.

* Iſa. 5. 21. † Heb. before their faces.

i That being puffed up with an Opinion of their own Wiſdom, deſpiſe the Counſels and Inſtructions of God by his Prophets, and prefer their own vain Fancies before the Judgment of the All-wiſe God, as appears by the Errour beforementioned, v. 20. that they affirmed that to be Evil, which God had declared to be Good.

22 Wo unto them that are mighty to drink wine k, and men of ſtrength to mingle l ſtrong drink.

k That can drink much without Intoxication, in which they gloried, as too many do at this day. l i. e. To drink: the Antecedent being put for the Conſequent; which is uſual: for they mingled it in order to drinking.

23 Which * juſtifie the wicked for reward m, and take away the righteouſneſs of the righteous from him n.

* Prov. 17. 15. & 24. 24.

m Not by miſtake or incogitancy, but wilfully for Bribes. n To wit, juridically; they pronounce Sentence againſt him, as if he and his Cauſe were unjuſt.

24 Therefore as † the fire devoureth the ſtubble, and the flame conſumeth the chaff, ſo their root ſhall be as rottenneſs o, and their bloſſom ſhall go up as duſt p: becauſe they have caſt away q the law of the LORD of hoſts, and deſpiſed the word of the holy One of Iſrael.

† Heb. the tongue of Fire.

o They ſhall be like a Tree which not only withers in its Branches, but dies and rots at the Roots, and therefore is paſt all hopes of recovery. The fence is, They ſhall be deſtroyed both Root and Branch. p Shall vaniſh (for ſo the Word aſcend or go up is oft uſed, as Exod. 16. 14. Job 5. 26. Jer. 48. 15. Ezek. 11. 23, 24.) as the Duſt, which is blown away with every Wind; or, ſhall be reſolved into Duſt, and yield no Fruit. q Which implies Diſobedience joyned with Contempt.

25 Therefore is the anger of the LORD kindled againſt his people, and he hath ſtretched forth his hand againſt them, and hath ſmitten them: and the hills did tremble r, and their carcaſes were ‖ torn in the midſt of the ſtreets. * For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is ſtretched out ſtill ſ.

This is not the end, as you vainly imagine; but, if you repent not, the beginning of your Sorrows, and an Earneſt of further Calamities.

26 And he will lift up an enſign t to the nations from far u, and will * hiſs unto them x from the ends of the earth y: and behold, they ſhall come with ſpeed ſwiftly.

* Chap. 7. 18.

t To call them together for his Service, as Generals uſe to do for the raiſing of Armies. u Either, 1. To the Aſſyrians, of whom he ſpeaks more particularly, ch. 10. and that under this ſame Character of a People that come from far, v. 3. and who did not long after this Prophecy invade Judea, and did much miſchief in it. Although that part of the Prediction, v. 29. They ſhall lay hold of the prey, and ſhall carry it away ſafe, and none ſhall deliver it, do not ſeem to agree to them, nor that Invaſion; for the Aſſyrians were forced to retreat with great ſhame and loſs, and the Jews were delivered from them. Or, 2. To the Chaldeans; for even Babylon is called a far Countrey, Iſa. 39. 3. And he ſaith Nations, becauſe the Chaldean Army was made up of ſeveral Nations. x Or, will whiſtle unto, or for them: Will gather them together by his Word, as Shepherds gather their Sheep. He intimates how eaſily and ſpeedily God can do this Work. y Which is not to be underſtood ſtrictly, but popularly, and with a latitude, from very remote Places; although part of the Chaldean Army did come from Places not very far diſtant from the end of that Land of the World, ſo far as it was then known.

27 None ſhall be weary z, nor ſtumble amongſt them: none ſhall ſlumber nor ſleep a: neither ſhall the girdle of their loins be looſed, nor the latchet of their ſhoes be broken b.

z Though their March be long and tedious. As I have called them to this Work, ſo I will ſtrengthen and aſſiſt them in it. a They ſhall all be watchful and diligent to take all Opportunities and Advantages of executing my Judgments upon my People. b Which otherwiſe would hinder, or at leaſt ſlacken them in their March. I will take all Impediments out of their way.

28 Whoſe arrows are ſharp, and all their bows bent c: their horſes hoofs ſhall be counted like flint d, and their wheels like a whirlwind e.

c Who are every way furniſhed and ready for my Work, waiting only for my Command. d Becauſe they ſhall not be broken or battered by the length or ſtonineſs and ruggednes of the Way. e Partly for the ſwiftneſs of their March, and partly for the force and violence of their Chariots in Battle.

29 Their roaring ſhall be like a lion, they ſhall roar like young lions f; yea, they ſhall roar and lay hold of the prey, and ſhall carry it away ſafe, and none g ſhall deliver it.

f Which ſignifies both their Cruelty, and their greedineſs and eagerneſs to catch and devour the Prey. g Neither the Jews themſelves, nor the Egyptians, to whoſe help they will truſt, nor any of their Confederates.

30 And in that day they ſhall roar againſt them, like the roaring of the ſea h: and if one * look unto the land, behold, darkneſs and ‖ ſorrow i, ‖ and the light is darkned in the heavens thereof k.

* Chap. 8. 22. ‖ Or, diſtreſs.

h Which is violent and frightful. i Darkneſs, to wit, Sorrows; ‖ Or, when the latter Word explains the former, and the Particle and is put it is light, expoſitively, as it is frequently. k When they look up to the Heavens, as men in diſtreſs uſually do, they ſee no Light there; their dark in the Comforts are wholly eclipſed, and their Hopes are like the giving deſtruction up of the Ghoſt.

CHAP. VI.

The Glory of the Lord 1,—4. Isaiah is terrified. 5. Is Confirmed for his Message. 6,—8. Toe People's obstinacy unto desolation. 9,—12. A Remnant shall be saved, 13.

* 2 Kings 15. 7. * John 12. 41. || Or, the skirts thereof.

IN the year that * king Uzziah died, I * saw a also the Lord b sitting upon a throne c high and lifted up d, and || his train e filled the temple f.

a In a Vision or Extasie. q Either, 1. God the Son, who frequently appeared to the Patriarchs and Prophets, and that sometimes in the form of a Man: Or rather, 2. the Divine Majesty as he subsisteth in Three Persons, as may be gathered both from the Plural Number us, used of this Lord, v. 8. and comparing other Scriptures; for God the Father is described as sitting upon a Throne, Dan. 7. 9. 13. and elsewhere; and the Glory of God here manifested is said to be Christ's Glory, Joh. 12. 41. and the Words of the Lord here following, are said to be spoken by the Holy Ghost, Act. 28. 25. c In the posture of a Judge, to hear Causes, and give Sentence. d Towards the Roof of the Temple. e Or, as the Word properly signifies, and is here rendred by divers, the skirts or borders of him, or of it, to wit, his Royal and Judicial Robe; for he is represented as a Judge. f His glorious Robes reached down to the bottom of the Temple, and were spread abroad in the Temple, which was an Evidence of a more than ordinary Majesty. The Temple may be here taken either, 1. largely, and so it includes the Courts as well as the House, as that Word is oft used; or, 2. strictly, for the House it self, or for that part of the Temple in which this Vision was exhibited, which may seem to have been the Porch, for that was much higher than the other Parts.

2 Above it stood g the Seraphims h: each one had six wings; * with twain he covered his face i and with twain he covered his feet k, and with twain he did flie l.

g As Ministers attending upon their Lord, and waiting to receive and execute his Commands. e Certain holy and blessed Angels, thus called from fire and burning, which this word properly signifies; to represent either, 1. their Nature, which is bright and glorious, subtil, and pure, and spiritual, like Fire; or, 2. their Property, of fervent Zeal for God's Service and Glory; or, 3. their Office and present Employment, which was to execute God's Vengeance upon the Jews, and to burn them up like Dross. i Out of profound Reverence, as being so sensible of the infinite distance between God and him, that he durst not presume to look directly upon him, and judg'd himself neither able nor worthy to behold the Brightness of his Glory. k Either, 1. his secret Parts, which sometimes come under that name, as Deut. 28. 57. Isa. 7. 20. & 36. 12. of which see more in my Latin Synopsis upon Exod. 4. 25. And so this is done for our Instruction, to teach us Modesty and Chastity: Or, 2. their Feet properly so called, as that Word is generally used; from which use we should not depart without necessity, which, with submission seems not to be in this place. And so this may signifie a fence of their own natural, though not moral Infirmity, and a desire that God would not too severely examine all their Ways and Actions, which the feet commonly signifie, because though they did not swerve from God's Commands, yet they were not worthy of the acceptation, nor suitable to the Dignity of so glorious a Majesty. l Which signifies their great forwardness and expedition in executing God's Commands. Comp. Dan. 9. 21.

† Heb. this cried to this.

3 And † one cried unto another m, and said * Holy, holy, holy n is the LORD of hosts, † the whole earth o is full of his glory p.

* Rev. 4. 3. † Heb. his glory is the fulness of the whole earth.

m Singing in Consort the Praises of their Lord. n This is repeated thrice, either, 1. to intimate the Trinity of Persons united in the Divine Essence; or, 2. that he was most eminently and unquestionably holy in his present Work of Judgment, and in all his Ways; such Repetitions being very frequent in Scripture, for the greater assurance of the thing, as Jer. 7. 4. Ezek. 21. 9. o Not only Canaan, to which the Jews did vainly and arrogantly confine the presence of God, but all the World: Which seems to have a respect to the Conversion of the Gentiles, which did accompany the plenary and last Execution of this Judgment here threatned against the Jewish Nation, v. 10. as is evident by comparing this with Mat. 13. 14, 15. & Act. 28. 19. and other places of the New Testament. p Of the Effects and Demonstrations of his glorious Holiness, as well as of his Power, and Wisdom, and Goodness.

† Heb. threshold.

4 And the posts of the † door q moved at the voice of him that cried r, and the house was filled with smoak s.

q Together with the Door it self, as if the Door was to be removed, and the Temple thereby to be exposed to the view and rapine of profane Persons. Such violent Motions were commonly Tokens of God's Anger. r To wit, the Angel, which cried, v. 3. s Which elsewhere is a Token of God's Presence and Acceptance, as Exod. 40. 34. 1 Kings 8. 10. but here of his Anger, as Psal. 18. 8. and elsewhere.

† Heb. cut off.

5 Then said I, Wo is me, for I am † undone, because I am a man of unclean lips t, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips u: for mine eyes have seen the king, the LORD of hosts x.

t I am a great Sinner, as many other ways, so particularly by my Lips, which being in a special manner consecrated to God by my Prophetical Office, should have been intirely devoted to him: But, alas! my Speeches, either to God in prayer, or from God in preaching and prophesying to the people, have been mixed and defiled with so much irreverence, dulness, distraction of Thoughts and Affections, carnal Fear, and many other Infirmities, that I dread the thoughts of appearing before thy Judgment-seat, which I see erected in this place. For Isaiah had been a Prophet before this time, chap. 1. 1. and was now called, not in general to his Prophetical Office, but to the delivery of this special Message. u I am an unclean Branch of an unclean Tree; and besides my own Uncleanness, I have both by my Omissions and Commissions involved my self in the guilt of their Sins, and therefore may justly fear to partake with them in their Plagues. x The sight of this glorious and holy God gives me cause to fear that he is come to Judgment against me, together with others. Whilst Sinners are secure and presumptuous, the holiest persons have ever been filled with great Reverence, and oft times with Doubts and and Fears, at any extraordinary Manifestation of God's presence. See Gen. 15. 13. & 17. 3. Judg. 13. 23.

† Heb. having a live coal in his hand

6 Then flew one of the Seraphims unto me y, † having a live coal z in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar a, y By God's Command. z Both a Token and an Instrument of purification, as the next Verse explains it. a Of Burnt-offering, which stood in the Court of the priests near the porch, and which had always Coals of Fire upon it, Levit. 6. 12, 13. Hence he took it, to shew that Men are to expect purification and expiation of sin only by such means as God hath appointed, and particularly by Christ, whom that Altar did manifestly represent, Heb. 13. 10.

† Heb. laid it

7 And he † laid it upon my mouth b, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips, and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin † purged c.

b Slightly, so as only to touch my Lips, and not to burn them; which God could easily effect. c This is a Sign that I have pardoned and purged the Uncleanness of thy Lips, and do own and accept thee as a fit Minister for my Service.

8 Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for * us? Then said I, † Here am I, send me e.

d To deliver the following Message. The change of the Number, I and us, is very remarkable; and both being meant of one and the same Lord, do sufficiently intimate a plurality of Persons in the Godhead. e God's last and great Favour to him did both encourage and oblige him to be forward in God's Service.

9 And he said, Go and tell this people f, * Hear || † ye indeed, but understand not; and † see ye indeed, but perceive not g.

* Mat. 13. 14. Mar. 4. 12. Luk. 8. 10. Joh. 12. 40. Act. 28. 26. Rom. 11. 8. || Or, among the Hebrews are frequently put for the future, as is well out of known to the Learned. The fence is, because you have so long ing, heard my Words, and seen my Works, to no purpose, and have † He hardned your Hearts, and will not learn nor reform, I will punish Hear you in your own kind, your Sin shall be your Punishment. I will hear- still continue my Word and Works to you, not in Mercy, and for ing, your Good, but to aggravate your Sin and Condemnation; for I † He will blind your Minds, and withdraw my Spirit, so that you shall scarce be as unable, as now you are unwilling, to understand or perceive any thing that may do you good.

10 Make the heart of this people fat h, and make their ears heavy i, and shut their eyes k: * lest they see l with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert m and be healed n.

* Mat. 13. 15. Joh. 12. 40. Act. 28. 27. Rom. 11. 8. b i. e. Stupid and senseless: For the Fat which is in the Body is without sense; and Fatness in the Heart, makes it dull and heavy. Thus this Phrase is used, Psal. 119. 70. And this seems best to agree with the following Words. This making of their Hearts fat, is here ascribed to the Prophet, as it is ascribed to God in the repetition of this Prophecy, Joh. 12. 40. because God inflicted this Judgment upon them by the Ministry of the Prophet, partly by way of Prediction, foretelling that this would be the effect of his Preaching; and partly by way of Judicial Operation, withdrawing the Light and Help of his Spirit, and giving them up to the Power and Arts of Satan, and to their own Mistakes and Lusts, whereby they are easily and commonly lead to turn God's Word, as they do other things, into Occasions of Sin. i Make them dull of hearing, as Isa. 59. 1. Zech. 7. 11. as sometimes the Ears are made by an excessive Noise. k Heb. daub their eyes, as the Word is used also, Isa. 44. 18. l That they may not be able, as before they were not willing, to see. m Turn from their sinful Practices unto God. n Of Sin, which is the Disease of the Soul, by Remission and Sanctification, and of all the deadly Effects of Sin.

11 Then said I, Lord how long o? And he answered, Until the cities be wasted without Inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be † utterly desolate p, o An abrupt Speech, arising from the Prophet's great Passion and Astonishment: How long shall this dreadful Judgment last? p Until this land be totally destroyed, first by the Babylonians, and afterward by the Romans.

† Heb. for a fall

12 And the LORD have removed men far away q, and there be a great forsaking in the midst of the land r.

q Hath caused this People to be carried away Captive into far Countries. r Till Houses and Lands be generally forsaken of their Owners, either because fled away from the Sword into strange Lands, or because they went into Captivity.

13 But

13 But yet in it shall be a tenth s, || and it shall return t, and shall be eaten u: as a teil-tree, and as an oak x whose || substance is in them, when they cast their leaves y: so the holy seed shall be the substance thereof z.

|| Or, stock

s A small Remnant reserved, that Number being put indefinitely, as is very usual. t To wit, out of the Babylonish Captivity, into their own Land. u That Remnant shall be devoured and destroyed a second time, by the Kings of Syria, and afterwards more effectually by the Romans. x Or, Yet as, &c. Or, nevertheless as, &c. such Particles being frequently understood in the Hebrew, as hath been noted again and again. So the Sence of the following Words of the Verse seems to be this, although the Jewish Nation shall undergo a second and a greater Desolation by the Romans, yet there shall be another Remnant, not such an one as that which came out of Babylon, which for the most part, were corrupt and degenerate, as appears by the Sacred Histories and Prophecies relating to that time; but an holy Seed, a number of Elect and Godly Israelites, who shall afterwards look upon him whom they pierced, and mourn over him, as is said Zech. 12. 10. and by me be received to Mercy. y Who when their Leaves are withered and cast, as it is in Winter, have a Substance, or Subsistence, or support within themselves, to wit, a Vital Principle, which preserves Life in the Root and Body of the Tree, and in due time sends it forth into all the Branches. But others take the Hebrew Word, Shallecheth, for the proper name of a place, to wit, a Causeway which led from the Palace to the Temple, 1 Chron. 26. 16. and so the place is and may be rendred thus, As a teil-tree, (or, an elm) and as an oak (the Singular Number for the Plural, as is very frequent) As the elms and the oaks which are at or by Shallecheth (on both sides of which Way such Trees were planted, to beautifie and to support that Causeway, as some have observed) have subsistence or support in them, either, 1. for themselves; they stand fast and firm, when other Trees are blown down: or, for the way which they uphold. z Or rather, the support (as the same Word seems to be taken in the next foregoing Clause) thereof, to wit, of the Land or People, which, were it not for the sake of these Elect Persons, should be totally and finally rooted out; or, of that Tenth part, which shall be delivered and preserved for the sake of that holy Seed, those true-hearted Israelites which are among them.

CHAP. VII.

Ahaz afraid of Rezin and Pekah is comforted by Isaiah. 1,—9. refusing to chuse a sign, Christ is promised for one. 10,—16. his judgment should come by Assyria. 17,—25.

AND it came to pass in the days of * Ahaz a the son of Jotham, the son of Uzziah king of Judah, that Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel, went up towards Jerusalem to war against it b, but could not † prevail against it.

* 2 Kings 16. 5. † Heb. overcome

a A most wicked King: Yet no Prophecies are more comfortable than those which were delivered in his time; God so ordering it, partly for the encouragement of the Faithful that lived under his tyrannical and impious Reign; and partly to manifest the Riches and Freeness of his Grace, in conferring such Favours upon a most worthless Generation. b Which they attempted before in Jotham's Reign, 2 Kings 15. 37. but now more seriously undertook, though without success, as is noted here, and 2 Kings 16. 5.

2 And it was told the house of David c, saying, Syria † is confederate with Ephraim d. And his heart was moved e, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the wood shaken with the wind.

† Heb. resteth upon

c Ahaz, and his Royal Relations and Courtiers. He calls them the house of David, to intimate that the following comfortable Message was sent to Ahaz, not for his own sake, but only for the sake of his worthy Progenitor, David, to whom God had promised an everlasting Kingdom. d The Kingdom of the Ten Tribes, commonly called Ephraim, as Isa. 28. 1. Hos. 12. 1. because that was far the most numerous and potent of all of them. e With excessive fear, arising partly from the conscience of their own guilt, whereby they had put themselves out of God's Protection; and partly from the consideration of the great Strength and power of his Enemies, who having prevailed against him severally, 2 Chron. 28. 5, 8. and having now united their Forces, he, having no Faith in God, nor Confidence to desire or expect his help, concluded his Case desperate and deplorable.

3 Then said the LORD unto Isaiah, Go forth now to meet Ahaz f, thou, and || Shear-jashub g thy son, at the end of the * conduit of the upper pool in the || high-way of the fullers field h:

* 2 Kings 18. 17. Isa. 36. 2. || Or, field

f Though he do not seek nor send to thee, as he ought. This v. 21. is an eminent instance of preventing Mercy. g Whose very Name 2 Kings 18. carried in it a Sign and Pledge of the promised Deliverance. h Isa. 36. Whither he probably went to take care about the Waters which thence were brought into the City, either to secure them to himself, or to keep them from the Enemy, as Hezekiah afterward did, 2 Chron. 32. 3, 4.

4 And say unto him, take heed, and be quiet i; fear not, † neither be faint-hearted for the two tails of these smoaking fire-brands k, for the fierce anger of Rezin with Syria, and of the son of Remaliah l.

† Heb. let not your heart be tender.

i See that thou be quiet, abandon thy Fears, and settle thy Mind by the belief of that joyful Message and Promise which I am now to deliver thee from the Lord. k They are not whole Firebrands burning in the Fire, but small pieces or ends of them, taken out of the Fire, in which there is more Smoke than Fire, and the Fire will be speedily extinguished. They have more of Shew and Terrour, than of Strength. Pekah King of Israel, v. 1. whom here, and in the next Verse, he calls only the son of Remaliah, to intimate, that he was unworthy of the Name of King, as having got that Title and Power by Usurpation, and the Murder of his Master and King Pekahiah, 2 Kings 15. 25.

5 Because Syria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah have taken evil counsel against thee, saying,

6 Let us go up against Judah, and || vex it, and let us make a breach therein m for us, and set a king in the midst of it, even the son of Tabeal n.

|| Or, waken; || Or, break

m Either, 1. break and divide that Country into two parts, one for thee, and another for me; or rather, 2. break their Power and Kingdom, and subdue it to our selves: For, 1. the same Word and Phrase is so used, 2 Chron. 32. 1. where there was no such Division intended. 2. Because the next Clause intimates, that the Kingdom of Judah was still to be united under another King, who should pay Tribute to them severally, as they should agree. n Some considerable Captain, in whose Fidelity both of them had good confidence; but whether he was an Israelite or Syrian, is uncertain, and not material.

7 Thus saith the LORD God, It o shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass.

o Their evil Counsel, as it is called, v. 5.

8 For the head of Syria is p Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and within threescore and five years q shall Ephraim be broken, † that it be not a people.

p Or, rather, shall be: for the Verb is not expressed in the Hebrew Text, and therefore may be either way supplied. The sence is, Damascus shall still continue to be the Capital and Chief City of the Kingdom of Syria; and therefore Jerusalem shall not be taken, nor become a part of Rezin's Dominion; but he shall be kept within his own Bounds, and be King of Damascus only, and not, as he hopes, of Jerusalem. q To be computed either, 1. from the Prophecy of Amos, who Prophesied in the days of Uzziah, two years before the earthquake, Amos 1. 1. which the Jews affirm to have hapned about the time of his Usurpation of the Priest's Office, and being smitten with Leprosie, 2 Chron. 26. 16, &c. which though it be not proved, yet it may be admitted, because it cannot be disproved. And it is more than probable, that that Action and Accident was divers years before his death, during which time Jotham acted as his Viceroy, 2 Chron. 26. 21. And the Prophecy of Amos being expresly and full concerning the Destruction of the People and Commonwealth of Israel, being also fresh in the memory of many now living, the Prophet Isaiah might well have respect to it. So the sense is as if he had said, There shall be but 65 years between the Delivery and the Execution of that Prophecy. And so the number of years may be thus made up. Fix the beginning of them Ten years before Uzziah's death, add the Sixteen Years of Jotham's Reign, and then the Sixteen years of Ahaz his Reign, and then Six of Hezekiah's Reign, in which Israel was carried Captive, 2 Kings 18. 10. these make up 48 years: And for the 17 years, which yet remain of the 65, they may be taken out of the rest of Hezekiah's Reign. For although the Transportation of that People began in the Sixth year of Hezekiah, yet it might be continued or repeated divers years after, and compleated 17 years after, Jer. 52. 28, 29, 30. Or rather, 2. these years may be computed from the time of this Prophecy of Isaiah. And whereas it may objected against this Opinion, That the Judgment here threatned was executed in the Sixth year of Hezekiah, as was before noted, and therefore within 18 or 19 years of this Prophecy, which was delivered in the third or fourth year of Ahaz; Two things may be answered, 1. That the Israelites were not transported in the Sixth year of Hezekiah: For although Samaria be said to be taken in the Sixth year of Hezekiah, 2 Kings 18. 10. and the Transportation of the Israelites be mentioned immediately after it, v. 11. yet it doth not thence follow, that it was done immediately, and at that one time; because this is not unusual in Scripture, in Historical Relations to mention those things together which were done at a considerable distance of time one from another; as it is recorded, Act. 7. 15, 16. Jacob——died, he and our fathers, and were carried over into Sychem, and laid in the Sepulchre of Abraham, &c. although it was above 200 years e'er all which is said in those few words was done. And other instances of like nature might easily be produced. 2. That this Work of Transportation was not done at once, but successively, and by degrees. Thus it certainly was in the Transportation of Judah, which was begun in Nebuchadnezzar's Seventh year, continued in his Eighteenth year, and perfected in his Three and Twentieth year, Jer. 52. 28, 29, 30. And thus it might be, and probably was, in this Transportation. It might be begun prefently after the taking of Samaria, and afterwards continued, until at last the whole Body of the People was removed. And as soon as that was done, and not before, the King of Assyria brought into their place those new Colonies mentioned, 2 King. 1. 24. Which that it was not done at the time of the taking of Samaria, but many years after it, seems to me evident, because those Colonies were not brought thither by Shalmaneser, who took Samaria, 2 Kings 18. 10. no nor by Sennacherib, his next Successour; but by Esarhaddon, as is affirmed Ezra 4. 2. who was the Son and Successour of Sennacherib, 2 Kings 19. 37. and reigned above Fifty years; for he seems to have began his Reign about the Fourteenth year of Hezekiah's Reign, by comparing 2 Kings 18. 13. and 19.

35, 36, 37. and so he reigned with Hezekiah about Fifteen years, and with Manasseh above forty years, as the Learned Sir John Marsham affirms in his Chronicus Canon, &c. page 496. And this Work of Transporting the Remainders of the Israelites, and bringing the new Colonies, might not be done till towards the end of his Reign: Which delay might be occasioned by his Wars, or other great Affairs. And lest this should seem to be only my own private Conjecture, if the Reader consult Sir John Marsham's fourth and last Chronological Table, inserted after page 589. of his Work, he will find that Learned Chronologer to be of the same mind, and to make above Fifty years distance between the taking of Samaria, and the Translation of the new Colonies into those Parts. And thus these Sixty five years might well be accomplished in his time. And so this Place agrees with other Scriptures, and the Difficulties objected against other Interpretations, seem to be avoided.

* See 2 Chr. 20. 20.

9 And the head of Ephraim is r Samaria, and the head of Samaria is Remaliah's son *: ‖ If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established s.

‖ Or, Do ye not believe? it is because ye are not stable, or shall not be established.

r Or either, shall be; and the sence is the same as in the foregoing Verse, Samaria shall continue to be the Chief City of the Kingdom of Israel, and Pekah shall not conquer Jerusalem, as he hoped and designed to do. s If you do not believe this and the other Promises of God, but, in distrust of God, shall seek to the Assyrians for Succour, to which I perceive you are inclined, instead of that Deliverance and Settlement which you expect, you shall be distressed and consumed thereby; the Accomplishment of which Threatning is recorded 2 Chron. 28. 20. And by this Threatning he implies, That if they did rely upon God's Word and Help, they should be established. Only he delivereth it in the form of a Threatning, rather than of Promise, partly because he foresaw that they would chuse the worse part, and bring the Judgment threatned upon themselves; and partly because this was most necessary for them, to affright them out of their present Security and Infidelity.

† Heb. And the LORD added to speak.

10 † Moreover, the LORD spake again unto Ahaz, saying,

‖ Or, make thy petition deep.

11 Ask thee a sign of the LORD t thy God u, ‖ ask it either in the depth, or in the heighth above x.

t I perceive thou dost not believe God's Word and Message now delivered by me; yet God is so patient and merciful to thee, that he gives thee liberty to demand of him any Signal or miraculous Work, whereby thou mayst be assured of the Truth and Certainty of this Promise. u Both by right of Dominion, and by vertue of his gracious Covenant made with all Israel, of whom thou art a Member, and Kings and by thy own Profession, for he still worshipped God together with his Idols; and by the continuance of his Care and Kindness to thee, and to thy People, notwithstanding all your Wickedness; whereof this Promise and Offer is a clear Demonstration. a Demand some Prodigy to be wrought, either in Earth or in Heaven, at thy pleasure.

12 But Ahaz said, I will not ask y, neither will I tempt the LORD z.

y This Refusal proceeded not from the strength of his Faith, but from his Contempt of God, and total distrust and disregard of his Word, and inward Resolution to take another Course; as is manifest both from the following words, and from the History of Ahaz, 2 Chron. 28. z Either, 1. By asking a Sign, as if he questioned the Truth of his Word: So this was deep Hypocrisie: Or, 2. By neglecting any means necessary for my preservation, which were indeed a tempting of God. And therefore I shall not sit still and rely upon God till I be destroyed, which will be the effect of thy Counsel; but I shall do as becometh a wise King, seek for Succour from Potent Allies, such as the Assyrian is. So this is that Rebellion against God.

13 And he said, Hear ye now, O house of David a, Is it a small thing for you b to weary men c, but will ye weary my God also d?

a Of which, see above, v. 2. He reproveth them all, because they were the King's Counsellours, and promoted the Design of sending for the Assyrian Succours. b Is not that Wickedness more than enough? Must you add more to it? c To vex God's Prophets and People, and the generality of your Subjects, with your Oppressions and horrid Impieties. d By your cursed Ingratitude and Unbelief, and Disobedience to his Commands. He saith, my God, i. e. the God whose Servant and Prophet or Messenger I am; to intimate, that this heinous Offence was not committed against a weak and foolish Man, such as they might think the Prophet to be, but against God himself, who sent the Message. Compare Exod. 16. 8.

* Mat. 1. 23. Luke 1. 31.

14 Therefore e the Lord himself shall give you a sign f; * Behold g, a virgin h shall conceive, and bear i a son, and ‖ shall call k his name Immanuel l.

‖ Or, thou, O Virgin, shalt call.

e Because you despise me, and the Sign which I now offer to you, God of his own free Grace will send you a more honourable Messenger, and give you a nobler Sign, to try whether that will cure you of your Infidelity. Or, Nevertheless, as this Particle seems to be understood, Isa. 30. 18. Jer. 16. 14. and 30. 16. Although you deserve no Sign nor Favour, yet for the comfort of those few Believers which are among you, and to leave you without excuse, I shall mind you of another and a greater Sign, which God hath promised, and will in his due Time perform; which also is a Pledge of the certain Accomplishment of all God's Promises. Or, Surely, as this Particle is sometimes used, as Gen. 4. 15. Jer. 2. 23. & 5. 2. Zech. 11. 7. f To wit, of your Deliverance. Quest. How was this Birth of a Virgin, which was not to come till many Ages after, a Sign of their Deliverance from the present Danger? Answ. 1. Because this was a clear Demonstration of God's infinite Power and Goodness, and Faithfulness, and consequently of the certain Truth of all God's Promises from time to time, which can never fail so long as those Attributes of God stand: And mens Faith is either strong or weak, as they believe them or doubt of them. Of which see Psalm. 77. 8, and 78. 19, 20. Rom. 4. 20, 21. And so this was a proper Remedy for Ahaz his Disease, which was a secret Suspicion that God either could not, or would not deliver them. 2. Because that Promise, I say not only the actual Giving, which was long after, but even the Promise of the Messiah, which had been made long since, and oft renewed, and was universally believed by all the People, was the Foundation of all God's Mercies and Promises unto them, 2 Cor. 1. 20. and a Pledge of the Accomplishment of them. 3. Because this promised Birth did suppose and require the Preservation of that City, and Nation, and Tribe, in and of which the Messiah was to be born; and therefore there was no cause to fear that utter Ruine which their Enemies now threatned to bring upon them. 4. This is one, but not the only Sign here given, as we shall see at v. 16. g You who will not believe that God alone is able to deliver you from the united Force of Syria and Israel, take notice, for your full satisfaction, that God is not only able to do this Work, but to do far greater and harder things, which he hath promised, and therefore both can and will accomplish. h Strictly and properly so called. The Jews, that they may obscure this plain Text, and weaken this Proof of the Truth of Christian Religion, pretend that this Hebrew Word signifies a young Woman, and not a Virgin. But this corrupt Translation is easily confuted, 1. Because this Word constantly signifies a Virgin in all other places of Scripture where it is used, which are Gen. 24. 43. compared with v. 15. Exod. 2. 8. Psalm 68. 25. Cant. 1. 3. & 6. 8. To which may be added Prov. 30. 19. The way of a Man with a Maid, or a Virgin: For, though it be supposed that he did design and desire to corrupt her, and afterwards did so; yet she may well be called a Virgin, partly because he found her a Virgin, and partly because she seemed and pretended to others to be such, which made her more careful to use all possible Arts to preserve her Reputation, and so made the discovery of her impure Conversation with the Man more difficult, whereas the filthy Practices of Common Harlots are easily and vulgarly known. 2. From the scope of this Place, which is to confirm their Faith by a strange and prodigious Sign, which surely could not be, that a young Woman should conceive a Child, but that a Virgin should conceive, &c. i Or rather, bring forth, as it is rendred Mat. 1. 23. and as this Hebrew Word is used Gen. 16. 11. and 17. 19. Judg. 13. 5. k The Virgin, last mentioned, shall call: Which is added as a further Evidence of her Virginity, and that this Son had no Humane Father, because the Right of Naming the Child (which, being a Sign of Dominion, is primarily in the Husband, and in the Wife only by his consent or permission, as is evident from Gen. 5. 29. and 35. 18. Luke 1. 60, 63. and many other places of Scripture) is wholly appropriated to her. l Which signifies, God with us, God dwelling among us, in our Nature, John 1. 14. God and Man meeting in one Person, and being a Mediator between God and Men. For the design of these Words is not so much to relate the Name by which Christ should commonly be called, as to describe his Nature and Office: As we read that his Name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, &c. Isa. 9. 6. and that thin is said to be his (the Messiah's) Name whereby he shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness, Jer. 23. 6. although he be never called by these Names in any other place of the Old or New Testament; but the meaning of these Places is, He shall be Wonderful, and our Counsellor, &c. and our Righteousness: For, to be called is oft put for to be, as Isa. 1. 26. and 4. 3, &c

15 Butter and honey m shall he n eat, that he may know o to refuse the evil, and chuse the good p.

m The common Food of Children in that Country, where they were in great abundance, and of the best sort. n The Virgins Son last mentioned, who, though he be God blessed for ever, yet shall become Man, and, to shew the Truth of his Humanity, shall not only be conceived and brought forth, but also shall be nourished and brought up by the same means and steps as other Children; which is justly mentioned here as a stupendous and miraculous Work of God. o That by this Food he may grow up, and so may know, &c. Or, until he know, as it is rendred by divers Learned Men, and, among others, by the Chaldee Interpreter, who best knew the use of this Particle among the Hebrews. p To discern between things morally good and evil; which Children are capable of doing in some measure, when they are five or six years old. Compare Deut. 1. 39. where young Children are described by this Character, that they had no Knowledge between good and evil.

* See 8. 4.

16 * For q before the child r shall know to refuse the evil, and chuse the good, the land s that thou abhorrest t shall be forsaken of both her Kings u.

q Or, Yea; for so this Particle is used by way of amplification or Addition, Isa. 32. 13. Jer. 14. 5, 18. So the sence is, Not only this Land of thine shall be preserved until the Virgin's Son be born, but thine Enemies Land shall be sorely scourged, and these two Kings destroyed, within a very little time. r Heb. thin Child; not the Virgin's Son, but the Prophet's Child, Shear-jashub, whom in all probability the Prophet, to prevent mistakes, pointed at, and who was brought hither by God's special command, v. 3. and that for this very use; for otherwise his Presence was wholly insignificant. s The Lands, to wit, of Syria and Israel, as is evident from the next Words. It is an Enallage of the Singular for the Plural. t For its cruel Designs and Practices against. Or, which vexeth or molesteth thee, as this Word is used Exod. 1. 18. Numb. 22. 3, &c. u So far shall Pekah and Rezin be from conquering thy Land, that they shall lose their own Lands, and their Lives too; which they did within two Years after this Time, being both slain by the King of Assyria, 2 Kings 15. 29, 30. and 16. 9.

17 The LORD shall bring x upon thee y and upon thy thy People and upon thy Father's house z, days a that have not come, from the day that * Ephraim departed from Judah b, even the King of Assyria c.

x But although God will deliver you at this Time for his own Name's sake, yet he will remember and requite all your present and following Wickedness, and hath a dreadful Judgment in store for you. y For part of this Assyrian Storm fell in Ahaz his Reign, 2 Chron. 28. 20. z Upon thy Sons and Successours, the Kings of Judah: The Accomplishment whereof is recorded in their History. a To wit, evil days, by a Synecdoche; or Calamities: For days are oft put for the Events which happen in them, and especially for Judgments or Tribulations, as Job 18. 20. Psalm 137. 7. Isa. 9. 4. Obad. v. 12. b When Ten Tribes revolted from thy Father's House, and set up another opposite Kingdom. c Who may well be called their Plague or Calamity, as he is called the Rod of God's Anger, Isa. 10. 5. Or, with (as this Hebrew Particle oft signifies) the King, &c. or, by the King, &c. And King is here put for Kings, as Dan. 2. 37. and 8. 21.

18 And it shall come to pass in that day d, that the LORD shall hiss e for the flie f, that is in the uttermost part g of the Rivers h of Egypt, and for the Bee i that is in the land of Assyria k.

d Known to God, and appointed by him for the Execution of these Judgments. e See on Isa. 5. 26. f The Flies. So he calls these Enemies, to imply either their great Numbers, or their speedy March, or their unavoidable Assault. g In, or near, or towards their Extremity or End, where they go out into the Sea. h Of the River Nilus, which may be called Rivers, either for its greatness, for which cause the Title of Rivers is given also to Euphrates, Psalm 137. 1. and to Tigris, Nah. 2. 6. or because, towards the end of it, it is divided into seven famous Streams, by which it emptieth it self into the Midland Sea, Isa. 11. 15. He seems plainly to design and describe the Egyptians, who were always dangerous Neighbours to Judah, and did probably animate and assist the Philistines, and Edomites, and others, against them, and at last made a formal Invasion and Conquest of their Land, 2 Kings 23. 33, &c. Besides, when the Chaldeans had in good measure subdued the Egyptians, it is very probable that great numbers of the Egyptian Soldiers did list themselves in the Chaldean Army, and with them invade the Land of Judah. i The Bees, the Assyrian Army, who are compared to Bees, as for their numerous Forces and orderly March, so for their fierce Attempts and mischievous Effects. k In the Empire of Assyria, or Babylon; for these two were united into one Empire, and therefore in Scripture are promiscuously called sometimes by one Title, and sometimes by the other.

19 And they l shall come, and shall rest all of them m in the desolate valleys n, and in the holes of the ‖ rocks o, and upon all thorns, and upon all ‖ bushes p.

‖ Or, brooks

l The Flies, and especially the Bees. m They shall have an easie Victory; few or none of them shall be slain in the Attempt. n Either, 1. Such as were and had long been desolate. So it signifies the vast Numbers of their Enemies, which filled all Places, both such as are well inhabited, and such as were in a great measure desolate: Or, 2. Such as they found very fruitful, but made them desolate. o To which possibly the Israelites fled for Refuge. p Which he mentions partly because Flies and Bees use frequently to rest there; and partly to intimate, that no Place should escape the fury of this Enemy.

20 In the same day shall the LORD shave with a * rasour q that is hired r, namely by them beyond the River s, by the King of Assyria t, the head and the hair of the feet u: and it shall also consume the beard x.

* Chap. 32. 20.

q i. e. Utterly spoil and destroy, as shaving takes away all the Hair, and leaves not any thing of it visible, as there is when the Hair is only cut or polled. r Either, 1. By Ahaz, who did hire them, 2 Kings 15. 7, 8. And so the Prophet notes the just Judgment of God, in scourging them with a Rod of their own making; and by this Threatning he endeavours to prevent that wicked Design which then was on foot, of hiring Assyrian Succours: Or, 2. By God, who did stir them up, and send them upon his Errand against Judah, as he threatens Isa. 10. 6. and paid them liberally for that Service, as he did Nebuchadnezzar, of which see Jer. 25. 9. and 27. 6, 7. Dan. 2. 37, 38. s Euphrates, called the River by way of eminency, Psalm 72. 8. Jer. 2. 18. beyond which Assyria lay. t By the Successive Kings of the Assyrian Empire, Sennacherib, 2 Kings 18. 13, &c. Esarhaddon, 2 Chron. 33. 11. and especially by Nebuchadnezzar, who having subdued the Assyrian Monarchy, from thenceforth was King of Assyria as well as of Chaldea. And the Prophet rather mentions Assyria than Chaldea, or Babylon, partly because the Assyrian began and continued to execute this Judgment, although the Babylonian compleated it; and partly to inform them, that they laid the Foundation of their own Ruine, by opening the Door to the Assyrian, who afterwards entred at his Pleasure, and left it open for Nebuchadnezzar. u Of the lower or secret Parts, which come under that Name, Ezek. 16. 7, 25. and elsewhere, as it hath been noted again and again; and which the Jewish Writers affirm to have been shaved in the Purification of Lepers and Levites, Lev. 14. 8, 9. Numb. 8. 7. x Which they highly esteemed, as a great Ornament. By these Metaphorical Expressions he signifies the total Destruction of their State, from head to foot, from the highest to the lowest.

21 And it shall come to pass in that day, that a man shall nourish a young cow, and two sheep y.

y This and the following Verse contain either, 1. A Mitigation of the foregoing Calamity, or some Comfort for the Remainders of the People, after the publick Devastion; or rather, 2. A further Declaration of the threatned Desolation; which best agrees not only with the foregoing, but also with the following Verses. So the sence of this Verse is this, They who formerly used to keep great Herds of Cattel, and many Flocks of Sheep, shall esteem it a great happiness if they can keep but one Cow and two Sheep, to keep themselves from Extremity of Famine.

† Heb. in the midst of the Land.

22 And it shall come to pass for the abundance of milk that they shall give z, he shall eat butter: for butter and honey a shall every one eat that is left † in the Land.

z Because they shall have excellent and large Pastures, by reason of the great scarcity of Cattel; whereas formerly their Lands were oft times over-stocked with Cattel. a Which may be here mentioned, either, 1. As mean and vulgar Food, being very common in those Parts; which are opposed to that Flesh and Corn, and other excellent Fruits of the Earth, wherewith their Land formerly abounded; or, 2. As very good and pleasant Food, which the poorer sort had formerly used to sell, to procure more necessary and cheaper Food for themselves: But now the Land should be so destitute of People, that there were none to whom they could sell them, and those few who did survive might freely eat all sorts of Provisions.

23 And it shall come to pass in that day, that every place shall be, where there were a thousand vines at a thousand silverlings b, it shall even be for Briars and Thorns c.

b Or, pieces of silver, as the same Word is commonly rendred. Whereby we may understand either, 1. So many Pounds; a Pound for each Vineyard, to wit, for the Annual Rent: Or, 2. So many Shekels, which Word is most commonly understood, when no particular kind of Coin is expressed, as 2 Sam. 18. 11, 12. Mat. 26. 15. and then the meaning is, not that the thousand Vineyards were lett for a thousand Shekels, a Vineyard for a Shekel, which is a contemptible price; but that each of the thousand Vineyards might have been sold or let for a thousand Shekels, which was the yearly Rent of some excellent Vineyards, as may be gathered from Cant. 8. 11. Except we understand this not of so many Vineyards, as other Interpreters do, but of so many single Vines, as the Word properly and generally signifies, planted together in one large Vineyard, which may be here meant by the place of the River; and then each Vine may be valued at a Shekel. But this place may possibly be otherwise rendred, and that exactly according to the Hebrew Text, Every place where there are a thousand Vines, shall be for a thousand pieces of Silver, i. e. It shall be valued, or offered, either to be let, or rather to be sold, at that Price; which was a very low Price, and therefore fitly signifies the greatness of the Desolation. c Because it shall be utterly neglected, and therefore overspread with them. Or, yea it shall be for Briars and Thorns. No man will either buy or hire it upon any terms.

24 With arrows and with bows d shall men come thither: because all the land shall become briars and thorns.

d Either to hunt, or to defend themselves from Wild Beasts, which commonly abide in such desolate and overgrown Grounds.

25 And on all hills that shall be digged e with the mattock, there shall not come thither the fear of briars and thorns f: * but it shall g be for the sending forth of oxen, and for the treading of lesser cattel h.

* Chap. 32. 20.

e Or, that were digged, to wit, formerly; that used to be digged and dressed for the planting of Vines, or other choice Fruit-trees. f The Words thus rendred, found like a Promise: But that doth no way agree with the scope of the Place. And they may be, and are by some, understood not of Briars and Thorns growing in those Grounds, which would hinder the feeding of Cattel there, but of such wherewith they were fenced, and by which the Cattel were affrighted or hindred from breaking into them, which cause of their Fear being now removed by the general Devastation, they might now enter there, and feed at pleasure, as the next Words imply. Or they may be rendred thus, as they are by a late Learned Interpreter, That there might not come thither, &c. which is mentioned as the Reason why they were digged and dressed, that they might be freed from Briars and Thorns. And so there is only a defect of the Hebrew Particle asher, which is frequent, and that not only as it signifies which, but as it is taken finally for that, as Isa. 5. 11. and 10. 2. and elsewhere. g Or, even (as this Particle is oft rendred) there shall be, to wit, a place; which Word is understood, 2 Sam. 7. 1. 1 Kings 18. 12. Or the Words may be thus rendred, And all Hills that shall be digged—and thorns, even they or each of them shall be, the Singular being taken collectively, as is very usual. h All forts of Cattel may fairly enter, and feed there, the Fences being broken down, and the Owners generally slain, or carried into Captivity.

CHAP. VIII.

Syria and Israel should be subdued by Assyria, 1.—4. Judah also should be afflicted, 5.—8. God's Judgments irresistible, and to be feared, 9.—13. The Lord is a Sanctuary to the Godly, a Stone of stumbling to the Wicked, 14.—15. The Prophecy sure, God to be waited on, Necromancers not to be consulted, but the Prophecy, their Misery, 16.—22.

MOreover the Lord said unto me, Take thee a great roll a, and write in it with a mans pen b, † concerning † Maher-shalal-hash-baz c.

† Heb. in making speed to the spoil.

a Or, A great Volume, because the Prophecy to be written in it was large, and God would have it written in very large and legible Characters. b With such a Pen as Writers use, Psalm 45. 1. Jer. 8. 6. that so all may read and understand it. c Concerning that he hastens thing which is signified by the Name of thy Child, which is here expressed mentioned by way of Anticipation, as not being given him till v. 3. i. e. concerning that which God is making haste to do, the make giving up the Kingdoms of Syria and Israel for a Prey to the Assyrian, as this Name is explained, v. 4.

2 And I took unto me faithful witnesses, to record d, * Uriah the Priest, and Zechariah the son of Jeberechiah.

* 2 Kings 16. 10.

d Persons of unquestionable Reputation, who should bear witness that the following Name and Prophecy was written and published by me according to God's Command.

† Heb. approached unto.

3 And I † went unto e the prophetess f, and she conceived and bare a son: then said the LORD to me, Call his name Maher-shalal-hash-baz.

e Heb. I came near to her. A modest Expression of the Conjugal Act. f So called, partly as she was the Prophet's Wife, Wives being frequently denominated from their Husbands Titles, as the Wives of Mayor, or Doctor, &c. are commonly called Mayoress, Doctoress, &c. and partly because she did concur with the Prophet to the procreation of this Prophetical Child.

4 For before the child shall have knowledge to cry, My father, and my mother g, ‖ * the riches of Damascus, and the spoil of Samaria shall be taken away h before the king of Assyria i.

‖ Or, he that is before the King of Assyria shall take away the riches, &c.

* 2 Kings 15. 9.

g To speak, and to know his Parents; which is within the space of two years. And this agrees with the other Prophecy, Isa. 7. 16. Before the child shall know to refuse the evil and chuse the good, which requires a longer time than to distinguish his Parents from Strangers; which suits well to Shear-jashub, who, being born some years before this, was capable of that further degree of Knowledge, as soon as this was capable of the lower degree. h The Kingdoms of Syria and Israel, here signified by their two Capital Cities, shall be stripped of their Wealth and Power, as they were by Tiglath Pileser, within the time here limited, 2 Kings 15. 29. i In his presence, and by himself and his Forces: For in Scripture use that is said to be before a Man, which is in, or is put into a man's power, as Gen. 13. 9. & 20. 15. &c. and men are said to be smitten before their enemies, when they are smitten by them, as Numb. 14. 42. Deut. 1. 42. Judg. 20. 39. and oft elsewhere. Others refer this Phrase to the ancient Custom of Conquerors, of sending or carrying their Spoils before them into their own Country.

5 The LORD spake also unto me again, saying,

6 For as much as this people ‖ † refuseth l the waters of Shiloah m that go softly n, and rejoyce in Rezin and Remaliah's son:

k Either, 1. the People of Judah, which are suppos'd to have grown weary of their present Government, and out of distrust of God's protection, designed to revolt from God, and from the House of David, and to put themselves under the power and protection of the Kings of Syria and Israel. But there are no Footsteps of any such Design or Practice of that People. And the following Clause of rejoycing in Rezin, &c. cannot with any colour be ascribed to the Jews, whom at this time they fought to destroy: or, rather, 2. the People of Israel, of whom he last spake, v. 4. and who are the chief Subject of this whole Prophecy, contained in this and the foregoing Chapter; and who did rejoyce not only in their own King Pekah, but also in the Assistance of so powerful an Allie as Rezin was. l Or rather, despiseth, as the Word properly and most frequently signifies. m That small and contemptible River or Brook which ran by that City, which is here secretly opposed to the great Rivers of Tigris and Euphrates, by which the Assyrian Empire was fortified. Hereby he understands the munitions and strength of the Jews, which their Enemies derided and contemned. n Gently, as little Rivers do.

7 Now therefore o behold, the LORD bringeth up upon them p the waters of the river q strong and many, even the king of Assyria, and all his glory: r and he shall come up over all his chanels s, and go over all his banks.

o Because they despise the Opposition which they have from Shiloah and Jerusalem, they shall have a more potent Enemy. p Upon Israel. See on the foregoing Verse. q of Euphrates, oft called the river, for its eminent greatness: Whereby he understands the Assyrian Forces, as the next Words explain the Metaphor. r His numerous and puissant Army, in which he gloried. See Isa. 10. 8. s This great River shall overflow its own proper Channels. The meaning is, This Great Monarch shall enlarge his Dominions, and add the Lands of Syria and Israel to them. Some render the Words, he shall come up with all his channels or streams; for the Hebrew Particle al sometimes signifies with, as Job 38. 32. But it seems hard to understand the same Particle one way in this Clause, and another in the last Clause. Besides, the last Clause favours the former interpretation, the same thing being repeated in it, as is usual in the Sacred Writings. Or, this may be understood of the Channels and Banks of the People or Land of Israel. The Enemy being represented under the Metaphor of a River breaking in upon their Land, may fitly be said to overflow all their Channels and Banks, to wit, all places both low and high, so that nothing shall be able to withstand his Fury.

8 And he t shall pass through Judah u; he shall overflow and go over; he shall reach even to the neck x, and † the stretching out of his wings y shall fill the breadth of thy land, O * Immanuel z.

† Heb. the fulness of the breadth of thy land shall be the stretchings out of his wings.

* Ch. 7. 14.

t Or, it, to wit, the River, v. 7. which yet designs the same Person and Thing, to wit, the Invasion of the King of Assyria. u And when he shall have finished his Work against you, he shall invade the Land of Judah, as Sennacherib did some few years after his Conquest of Samaria, 2 Kings 18. 9, 13. x So as they shall be in great danger of being drowned or destroyed. He persists in the Metaphor of a River swelling so high as to reach to a man's Neck, and be ready to overwhelm him. Such was the danger of Judah's Land, when Sennacherib took all the fenced Cities of Judah, 2 Kings 18. 13. and sent his Army against Jerusalem. y Of his Forces, or of the Wings of his Army, as they anciently were and still are called. z Of the Land of Judah, so called because the Messiah, who is called by God himself Immanuel, ch. 7. 14. should certainly be born and live and die there. And this is added emphatically for the Consolation of God's People, to assure them, that notwithstanding this dreadful Scourge, yet God would make a difference between Israel and Judah, and whereas Israel should be so broken by the Assyrian, that they should not be a People, as was threatned, ch. 7. 8. Judah should be restored and preserved, for the sake of the Messiah, to be the place of his Birth and Ministry, according to that famous Prophecy, Gen. 49. 10.

9 Associate your selves, O ye people a, ‖ and ye shall be broken in pieces; and give ear all ye of far countries b: gird your selves, and ye shall be broken in pieces; gird your selves c, and ye shall be broken in pieces d.

‖ Or, yet.

a Syrians and Israelites. Immanuel's Name inspireth the Prophet with new Courage, and makes him send a Challenge to all God's Enemies, and foretell their certain downfall. b Whosoever you be, whether far or near, who do or shall conspire against Immanuel's Land. c With Sword and Belt. Prepare your selves for War. d This is repeated for the greater Assurance of the thing, and the Comfort of God's people, who are apt to despond upon such occasions.

10 Take counsel together, and it shall come to nought: speak the word e, and it shall not stand: for God is with us f.

e Declare and fix your purpose, and make your boast of it. f The Almighty and only true God fighteth for us, and against you. He gives the Interpretation of the Name Immanuel expressed before, v. 8. for though the Word in the Hebrew be the same here and there, yet there it seems to be taken properly, and here appellatively.

11 For the LORD spake thus to me † with a strong hand g, and instructed me, that I should not walk in the way of this people h, saying, † Heb. in strength of hand.

g With a vehement and more than ordinary Inspiration, strongly imprinting it in my Mind. h Of the generality of the People of Judah; whose eminent Danger and Calamity he foretells, v. 8. but withal gives them full assurance that God would deliver them out of it, v. 9, 10. Which he doth to aggravate the present Sin of Ahaz and his People, in forsaking God, and seeking to the King of Assyria for help, as they did 2 Kings 16. 6, 7, 8.

12 Say ye i not, A confederacy k, to all them to whom this people shall say, A confederacy: neither fear ye their fear l, nor be afraid.

i Thou Isaiah, and thine and my Children. k Do not approve of or consent to this wicked Design of making a Confederacy with the King of Assyria. l That thing which they fear, that, if they do not call in the Assyrian Succours, they shall certainly be destroyed by those two Potent Kings united against them, and that God either cannot or will not deliver them.

13 Sanctifie the LORD of hosts m himself, and let him be your fear n, and let him be your dread.

m Give him the Glory of his Power, and Goodness, and Faithfulness, by trusting to his Promises for your Deliverance. n Let God, and not the Kings of Syria and Israel, be the chief object of your Fear.

14 And he shall be your sanctuary o: but for * a stone of stumbling, and for a rock of offence p to both the houses of Israel q, for a gin, and for a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem r.

* Chap. 28. 16. Luke 2. Rom. 9. 1 Pet. 2.

o A sure Refuge to all that truly fear him, and relie upon him. p An occasion of Sin and Ruine, at whom they will take offence and stumble, so as to fall and be broken, as it is expressed, v. 15. q To the two Royal Families of Israel, largely so called; that of Judah, to wit, the House of David; and that of Ephraim: or, to the two Kingdoms, that of the Ten Tribes, and that of the Two Tribes. r Which are distinctly mentioned, as a very observable and wonderful thing, because Jerusalem was the Seat of the Temple, and of God's solemn Worship, where all the Means of Knowledge and Grace were in greatest Power and Plenty, where the Thrones of Civil and Ecclesiastical Judicature were established, where the most Wise and Learned Doctors had their constant or frequent abode. And that such a Place and People should reject Immanuel, or their Messiah, when he should appear, was so great and strange an Occurrent, that the Prediction of it was highly necessary, lest otherwise, when it came to pass, it should shake the Faith of all who did believe on him; whereas now the Accomplishment hereof was a notable Confirmation of their Faith, and an Evidence that Christ was the true Messiah.

15 And many among them s shall * stumble t, and fall, and be broken, and be snared, and be taken.

* Mat. 24. Luke 20. 18.

s Not all; for there shall be a Remnant, as was foretold, Isa. 4. 2. & 6. 13. t At that Stone or Rock, mentioned v 14. This was accomplished at the coming of the Messias, whom the Jews rejected to their own destruction.

16 Bind up the testimony, seal the law among my † disciples u.

u These are by the consent of all, God's Words to the Prophet. By the testimony and the law or doctrine (for so this Word is frequently taken) he understands one and the same thing, as he doth also, v. 20. to wit, the Word of God, and especially that which is the main Scope and Substance thereof, the Doctrine of the Messias, which, though now professed by all the Israelites, shall be disowned by the generality of them, when the Messiah shall come. Bind up and seal are to be understood Prophetically, Declare and prophesie that it shall be bound up and sealed; as Isaiah is said to make fat and to blind, &c. Isa. 6. 10. and Jeremy to root out and make full down, &c. Jer. 1. 10. when they foretell these Events. Moreover, bind up and seal design the same thing, and that is, either, 1. Security and certainty, as things are bound up or sealed that they may not be lost. So he signifies, That although this Doctrine would be lost among the Body of the Israelites, yet it should be preserved among his Disciples. Or, 2. Secresie, as many things are bound up or sealed that they may be hid from the Eyes of others. And so he informeth them, that this Doctrine now was and should be hid in a great measure among all God's People, even till the Accomplishment of it; and that even when it was accomplished, it should still continue to be as a Secret and Mystery, known indeed to his true Disciples, but hid from the Body of the Nation, who would not see it, and therefore should be blinded by God's just Judgment, that they should not see it, as was prophesied, Isa. 6. 9, 10. Or, 3. both Security and Secresie, signifying, That it should certainly be fulfilled, yet withall kept Secret from the unbelieving Jews. For why may not these two be joyned in the Exposition of this Text, as they were in the Event? By God's Disciples he means those who were taught of God, as it is expressed, Isa. 54. 13. where this very word is used; or, every one that hath heard and learned of the Father, and therefore cometh unto Christ, as it is explained, John 6. 45.

17 And x I will wait upon the LORD y that hideth his Face z from the house of Jacob a, and I will look for him b.

x Or, as this Particle is rendred, Jer. 2. 32, 35. and elsewhere, Yet, notwithstanding this dreadful Prophecy concerning the Unbelief and Rejection of Israel. y I will refer my self and this Matter unto God, casting my Care upon him, and expecting the Accomplishment of his Promise, in sending the Messiah, and in conferring upon me and all believing Israelites all his Mercies and Blessings, to be procured by and through his Blood and Merits. z That now doth, and threatneth that he will hereafter, withdraw his Favour and Blessing, as this Phrase signifies, Psal. 10. 1. & 27. 9. and oft elsewhere. a From the Family or People of Israel. b With an Eye of Faith and Expectation, till his time cometh.

18 * Behold c, I and the children d whom the LORD hath given me, are * for signs, and for wonders e in Israel f, from the LORD of hosts g, which dwelleth in mount Zion h.

* Heb. 2. 13.

c It is worthy of your observation and admiration. These Words are literally spoken by Isaiah concerning himself, but withal mystically concerning Christ, of whom he speaks more frequently and fully than any other Prophet, and of whom he was an evident Type; and therefore they are fitly applied to Christ, Heb. 2. 13. d Either, 1. his natural Children, whose very Names were Prophetical, and Signs of future Events, ch. 7. 3. & 8. 3, 4. or, 2. his spiritual Children, whom he had either begotten or brought up by his Ministry. For the Prophets were called Fathers not only with respect to the young Prophets, who were commonly called the Sons of the Prophets, but also in relation to others, as 2 Kings 2. 12. & 13. 14. And this sence seems more probable than the former, because it agrees best, 1. with the following Words, which seem to be too lofty and emphatical to be used concerning his natural Children; for their Prophetical Names, which, if they were Signs, could not properly be called Wonders: 2. with the Context, and scope of the Place, which is to set forth the Incredulity of the Israelites, and their Contempt and Rejection of Christ, and of a Thus saith the Lord Messengers, both the Prophets, who were sent as Harbingers before his coming, and the Apostles, who were Witnesses of his coming. 3. with Heb. 2. 13. where they are expounded of spiritual Children. e Are a Gazing-stock to, and admired by them, for our folly in believing God's Promises: For so the believing Jews now were, to Ahaz and the generality of the People, who thought it their Wisdom and Interest to procure Aid from Assyria, and esteemed those Fools who, upon pretence of relying upon God, would neglect so great an Advantage. And so the Prophet foretells that they should be when the Messiah did come; which is the mystical, as the other is the literal sence: and so both of them may be meant in this place. f Even amongst the Israelites, who have been taught and do profess better things. g Which come to pass by the wise Counsel and Providence of God, in which I willingly acquiesce. h Where the Temple now was, and where the Messiah was to set up his Kingdom.

19 And when they i shall say unto you k, Seek unto them l that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards m that * peep, and that mutter n: should not a people seek unto their God o? for the living to the dead p?

* Isa. 29. 4.

i The Israelites, to whom I and my Children are Signs and Wonders, who are fallen from God, and his true Religion and Worship, into Superstition and Idolatry, and will endeavour to seduce you into the same impiety. k My Children, whom the Prophet here arms against the common Temptation. l For Advice and Help, and seek no more to the Prophets who have hitherto deluded you with vain Words. This was the Counsel of the ungodly and unbelieving Jews. m Of whom see Levit. 19. 31. & 20. 27. & Deut. 18. 11. n That speak with a pulling and low voice, as these two Words signifie; which they affected to do, speaking rather inwardly in their Bellies, than outwardly and audibly with their Mouths and Voice, as the Title of Ventriloqui, commonly given to them, signifies. o This Answer the Prophet puts into their Mouths, to the foregoing Counsel: Doth not every Nation, in Cases of Difficulty or Distress, seek to their own Gods for relief? Much more should we do so, that have the only true God for our God. p Shall they seek (which Words are easily understood out of the foregoing Clause) for the living, &c. That Living Men should enquire of the Living God, is proper and reasonable; but it is highly absurd for them to forsake him, and to seek to dead Idols, either to the Images, or to the Spirits of dead Men, which are supposed to dwell and speak in them.

20 * To the law and to the testimony q: if they † speak not according to this word, it is because there is † no light in them s.

* Luke 16. 29.

q Let this Dispute between you and them be determined by God's Word, which is here and in many other places called the law, to signifie their Obligation to believe and obey it; and the testimony, because it is a Witness between God and Man, of God's Mind and Will, and of Man's Duty; and so these two Titles contain two Arguments against these Idolatrous Practices. r Your Antagonists, that seek to pervert you, v. 19. s This proceeds from the darkness of their Minds, because they are blind, and will not see, and God hath shut their Eyes that they cannot see. But these Words are by divers Learned Interpreters understood not as a Declaration of their Ignorance, but a Commination and Prediction of their Misery, light being most commonly used in Scripture for Comfort and Happiness, and darkness for Sorrows and Calamities. And this sence seems to be much favoured by the following passages. And then the Words may be thus rendred, Assuredly (for the Hebrew Particle asher is frequently used as a Note of Affeveration, as 1 Sam. 15. 20. Psal. 10. 6. & 95. 11. &c. as hath been more than once observed before) no light or morning-light shall be (for that may as well be understood as it) to them, a Night of Misery to all come upon them, and they shall never have a Morning of Deliverance from it; they shall be swallowed up in endless Calamities.

21 And they t shall pass through it u hardly bestead x and hungry y: and it shall come to pass, that when they shall be hungry, they shall fret themselves, and curse their king z, and their God a, and look upward b.

t The Idolatrous and Apostatical Israelites. u Or, in it, to wit, their own Land, which is easily understood out of the Context, and from the Phrase it self, the Pronoun Relative being put without an Antecedent, as it is in other places which have been formerly noted. They shall either pass through it into Captivity, or wander hither and thither in it, like distracted men, not knowing whither to go, nor what to do; whereas if they had not forsaken God, they might have had a quiet and setled abode in it. x Sorely distressed, as this Word is used, Gen. 35. 16. & Job 30. 25. y Destitute of Food, and of all Necessaries, which are oft signified by Food. z Either because he doth not relieve them; or because by his foolish Counsels and Courses, he brought them into these Miseries. a Either, 1. the True God; or rather, 2. their Idols, to whom they trusted, and whom they now find too late unable to help them. b To Heaven for help, as Men of all Nations and Religions in great Calamities use to do.

22 And * they shall look unto the earth c: and behold, trouble and darkness, dimness of anguish; and they shall be driven to darkness d.

* Ch. 5. 30.

c Finding no help from Heaven, they turn their Eyes downward, looking hither and thither for Comfort. d Many Words expressing the same thing are put together, to signifie the variety and extremity and continuance of their Miseries.

CHAP. IX.

Joy in the midst of Affliction. 1,—15. The Birth: Person: Office, and Kingdom of Christ. 6,—7. Judgments for their Pride. 8,—12. for their Impenitency and Hypocrisie. 13,—21.

NEvertheless, the dimness shall not be such as was in her vexation a, when at the first b he c lightly afflicted d the land of Zebulun, and the land of Nephtali e, and afterward did more grievously afflict her f by the way of the sea g, ‖ beyond Jordan h in Galilee ‖ of the nations i.

a The Words thus rendred contain a Mitigation of the foregoing Threatning: And so the sence of the Verse may be this, The Calamity of this Land and its Inhabitants shall be great, yet not such as that which was brought upon the Kingdom of the Ten Tribes by the King of Assyria, who at first indeed dealt more gently with them, but afterwards quite rooted them out, and carried them away into a dreadful Captivity, from whence they were not to return, no not when the Messiah came into the World; for, after this Darkness, of which I have now spoken, there shall come a glorious Light, as it follows in the next Verse. The Dutch Interpreters take it in the same sence, and render the Words thus, But the Land that was distressed shall not be utterly darkened. To the same purpose they may be thus rendered, according to the Hebrew, But darkness shall not be (i.e. shall not abide or continue; for to be is sometimes put for to abide or continue to be, as 1 Sam. 12. 14. Prov. 23. 5. Mat. 17. 4. Heb. 8. 4.) unto her (to wit, the Land, which by the consent of Interpreters is understood here, as it was ch. 8. 21.) to whom this distress is or shall be. She shall be distressed and darkned, as I said before, ch. 8. 22. but not irrecoverably, nor for ever. Some understand the Words to be an aggravation of the Darkness or Misery threatned, ch 8. 22. rendring the Words thus, for the dimness shall not be, &c. And so the sence is, This shall not be so slight an Affliction as that which befell them by Pul, 2 Kings 15. 19. nor as that which succeeded it by Tiglath-Pileser, who, at the desire of Ahaz, did about this time make another Invasion into the Land of Israel, 2 Kings 15. 29. and was an heavier Stroke than the former; but this shall be far heavier than either of them. But the former sence seems better to agree both with the following Verses and with Mat. 4. 13, 14, 15. where these Words are expounded as

as a Promise, and said to be fulfilled by Christ's preaching the Gospel in these Parts. h In the first Invasion which the King of Assyria made upon Israel. c To wit, God, who is oft underflood in such Cases, and who is here supposed to be the Author or Inflicter of this Judgment. Or, it is an Impersonal Speech, he afflicted for was afflicted, than which nothing is more common in the Hebrew Language. d Either, 1. By Pul; or rather, 2. By Tiglath-Pilefer, who at this time invaded and subdued these Parts, as is expressed 2 Kings 15. 29. e These Parts are particularly mentioned, because this Storm fell most heavily upon them; but under them the other Parts of the Land are understood by a common Figure called Synecdoche. f Either, 1. By Tiglath-Pilefer; or rather, 2. By Shalmaneser, who took Samaria, and carried Israel into Captivity, 2 Kings 17. 5, 6. Of which Calamity, though yet to come, the Prophet speaks as if it were past, as the manner of the Prophet is. g In that part of the Land which bordereth upon the Sea, to wit, the Lake of Genesareth, which is very commonly called a Sea, as Mat. 4. 18. John 21. 1, &c. and upon which the Portions of Zebulun and Nephtali bordered. h Or, on this side Jordan; for this Preposition is used both ways, and this Land might be said to be either beyond or on this side Jordan, in divers respects. i Or, Galilee of the Gentiles, to wit, the Upper Galilee, so called because it bordered upon the Gentiles. But this last Clause, and the two foregoing Clauses, are otherwise rendred and interpreted by divers Learned men, as a Prophecy concerning the Light of the Gospel that should shine in those Parts. As at the first time (to wit, in the former Ages of the Israelitish Church and Commonwealth) he made the Land of Zebulun and the Land of Nephtali vile or contemptible (as he might be said to have done, partly by putting those People at so great a distance from his Sanctuary, partly by exposing them to some Calamities which other Tribes escaped, and partly by denying them those Honours and Privileges which he afforded to other Tribes, of which see John 7. 52. Out of Galilee ariseth no Prophet; and John 1. 46. Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? which was an eminent City of Galilee); so in the latter or last time (to wit, in the days of the Messiah, or of the Gospel, which are frequently so called in the Scriptures both of the Old and New Testament) he made it, (i. e. he will make it, for the Prophet speaks of things to come as past, as he doth most commonly in this Prophecy) glorious (to wit, by Christ's first preaching the Gospel in those parts) in or towards the way of the Sea (to wit, of Galilee or Genesareth) beyond or on this side Jordan, in Galilee of the Gentiles. Which Interpretation I thought fit to propose, as deserving farther Consideration.

*Mat. 4. 16. Eph. 5. 14. 2 * The people that walked t in darkneſs m, have ſeen n a great light: they that dwell in the land of the ſhadow of death o, upon them hath the light ſhined.

‖ Or, to him. 3 Thou haſt multiplied the nation p, and ‖ not increaſed the joy q: they joy before thee r, according to the joy in harveſt ſ, and as men rejoyce when they divide the ſpoil t.

p Thou haſt made good thy Promiſe to Abraham concerning the Multiplication of his Seed, Gen. 15. 5. and 22. 17. by adding his Spiritual Seed unto the Carnal, by gathering in the Gentiles to the Jews, and making them both one People in Chriſt, John 10. 16. Eph. 2. 14, &c. For in Scripture-account the Believing Gentiles are the Seed of Abraham, as well as the Jews; of which ſee Gal. 3. 7, 8, 9. Or, thou haſt magnified the Nation, honoured them with peculiar Privileges above all other Nations, and eſpecially with this tranſcendent Privilege, that the Meſſiah and Saviour of the World ſhould be born of them, and live among them; of which he ſpeaks more fully, v. 6, 7. q Or, yet not encreaſed their joy. Which might very truly and fitly be ſaid of the Jewiſh Nation, upon this occaſion, partly becauſe they did not rejoyce in the Converſion of the Gentiles, as they ſhould have done, but murmured, and grieved, and ſtumbled at it; and partly becauſe, through their perverſeneſs and unbelief, that would be unto them an occaſion of their utter ruine, the Converſion of the Gentiles being attended with the Rejection of the Jews. But becauſe this Tranſlation ſeems not to agree with the following Words, which aſcribe great Joy to them, ſome render the Words otherwiſe; either thus, and wilt thou not encreaſe their joy? To which Queſtion, the next Words give an affirmative Anſwer. So the Hebrew Particle lo is put interrogatively for halo, as it is in many other places which I have formerly obſerved. Or thus, and haſt increaſed to it, or him, or them (to that Nation) their joy. For though the Hebrew lo be written like an Adverb, yet it may be read like a Pronoun, as it is both by Jewiſh and Chriſtian Interpreters acknowledged to be in many places; of which ſee more in my Latin Synopſis. r In thy Preſence, and in the Place of thy Worſhip; not with a Carnal and Worldly, but with a Spiritual and Religious Joy, giving thee the Praiſe and Glory of all thy Favours afforded to them. ſ When Men receive with great Joy, that for which they have laboured much, and long waited. 6 For f unto us g a child h is born i, unto us a * ſon k is given l, and the government m ſhall be upon his ſhoulder n: and his name ſhall be called o, Wonderful, Counſellor p, The mighty God q, The everlaſting Father r, The prince of peace ſ.

* John

f Having ſpoken of the glorious Light, and Joy, and Victory of God's People, he now proceeds to ſhew the Ground of it, and by what Perſon theſe things are procured. g Unto us Jews, of whom Chriſt was born, and to whom he was primarily ſent, Mat. 15. 24. for our uſe and Benefit. h The Meſſiah by the conſent of Interpreters, not only Chriſtian, but Jewiſh: For ſo the ancient Hebrew Doctors underſtood the Place, and particularly the Chaldee Paraphraſt; although the later Jews, out of oppoſition to Chriſt, wreſt it to Hezekiah. Which extravagant Conceit, as it hath no Foundation at all in this or any other Text of Scripture, and therefore may be rejected without any further Reaſon, ſo it is fully confuted by the following Titles, which are ſuch as cannot without Blaſphemy and Nonſence be aſcribed to Hezekiah, nor indeed to any meer mortal Man, as we ſhall ſee. But all the following Particulars do ſo truly and exactly agree to Chriſt, that they cannot without great violence be alienated from him, or aſcribed to any other. i For, ſhall be born, as the Prophets generally ſpeak. k So he determines the Sex of the Child. Or, the Son, to wit, of the Virgin, of whom I ſpake before, ch. 7. 14. l Is freely and graciouſly given to us by God. Other Children alſo are ſaid to be given by God, Gen. 30. 6. and 48. 9. but this in a peculiar manner, and therefore he is called the Gift of God, John 4. 10. m To wit, of Iſrael, or of God's People, to whom he is given. n i. e. Upon him, or in his Hands. He mentions Shoulders, becauſe great Burdens are commonly laid upon Mens Shoulders; and, as all Government, if it be rightly managed, ſo this eſpecially, is a very heavy Burden, requiring extraordinary Care and Diligence and Self-denial. Poſſibly here may be alſo an Alluſion to the ancient Cuſtom of carrying the Enſigns of Government before the Magiſtrate, upon the Shoulders of their Officers; or to the Croſs of Chriſt, which was laid upon his Shoulders, John 19. 17. which alſo was the way to his Kingdom or Government, Luke 24. 26. o Either, 1. He ſhall be called; for Names are oft put for Perſons, as Acts 1. 15. Rev. 3. 4. and 11. 13. or, 2. His Name ſhall be; for, to be called in Scripture is oft put for to be, as I have noted before on ch. 1. 26. and oft elſewhere. But this is not to be taken for a Deſcription of his Proper Name, by which he ſhould be commonly called, but of his glorious Nature and Qualities. See my Notes on Iſa. 7. 14. p Theſe Words may be taken either, 1. Severally, as they are in our Tranſlation, and by many others. This the Jews apply to Hezekiah, who, as they ſay, is called Wonderful, becauſe of the Miracle which God wrought for him, 2 Kings 20. 2, &c. and Counſellor, becauſe he took Counſel with his Princes about God's Worſhip, and the Defence of the City, 2 Chron. 29. 4, &c. and gave good Counſel to others. Which ridiculous Account is ſufficient to overthrow that Expoſition. But they agree moſt eminently to the Lord Chriſt, who is truly Wonderful, in his Perſon, and Natures, and Words, and Works, being made up of Wonders, in whom there was nothing which was not Wonderful; who alſo may well be called Counſellor, becauſe he knew the whole Counſel of God, and (ſo far as it was neceſſary) revealed it to us, and is the Great Counſellor of his Church and People in all their Doubts and Difficulties. Or, 2. Jointly, Wonderful Counſellor: Which may ſeem beſt to agree both with the following Titles, each of which is made up of two Words, and with Iſa. 28. 29. where God is called Wonderful in counſel, and makes the Title more full and emphatical. To call Chriſt ſimply a Counſellor, may ſeem too mean a Character, being common to many others with him: But to ſay he is a Wonderful Counſellor, is a ſingular Commendation. And ſo Chriſt is, becauſe he hath been the Counſellor of his Church in all Ages, and the Author and Giver of all thoſe excellent Counſels delivered not only by the Apoſtles, but alſo by the Prophets, as is evident from 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. and hath gathered, and enlarged, and preſerved his Church, by admirable Counſels and Methods of his Providence, and, in a word, hath in him all the Treaſures of Wiſdom and Knowledge, Col. 2. 3. q This Title can agree to no man but Chriſt, who was God as well as Man, to whom the Title of God or Jehovah is given, both in the Old and New Teſtament, as Jer. 23. 6. John 1. 1. Rom. 9. 5. and in many other Places. And it is a moſt true Obſervation, That this Hebrew Word El is never uſed in the Singular Number, of any Creature, but only of the Almighty God, as is evident by peruſing all the Texts where this Word is uſed. And although the Title of Elohim, which is of the Plural Number, be twice or thrice given to ſome Men, yet there is conſtantly added ſome diminiſhing Expreſſion to it, as when they are ſaid to be afraid, Joh 41. 25. and to die, Pſalm 49. 10. whereas here he adds the Epithet of Mighty, which is aſcribed to the Great God, Deut. 10. 17. and elſewhere. r Heb. the Father of Eternity. Having called him a Child, and a Son, in reſpect of his Humane Nature, leſt this ſhould be miſinterpreted to his diſparagement, he adds that he is a Father alſo, even the God and Father of all things, the Work of Creation being common and commonly aſcribed to each of the Perſons of the Bleſſed Trinity, the Maker and Upholder of all Creatures, as he is ſaid to be John 1. 3. and the Father of all Believers, who are called his Children, Heb. 2. 13. and the Father of Eternity; either, 1. The firſt Author (ſuch Perſons being called Fathers, as Gen. 4. 20. and elſewhere) of eternal Salvation, as he is called Heb. 5. 9. Or, 2. As we render it, the Everlaſting Father, who, though as Man he was then unborn, yet was and is from Everlaſting to Everlaſting. They who apply this to Hezekiah render it, the Father of an Age, and expound this of his long Life and numerous Poſterity: Which I the rather mention, to ſhew what abſurd Shifts they are forced to uſe, who interpret this Text of any other but Chriſt. For, he did not live very long, nor had he, that we read of, more than one Son, Manaſſeh. And if both theſe things had been true of him, they were more eminently true of many other men. Beſides, this Hebrew Word being uſed of God, as here it is of him who was now called the mighty God, conſtantly ſignifies Eternity, as Iſa. 26. 4. and 57. 15, &c. ſ This Title doth not fully agree to Hezekiah, whoſe Reign was not free from Wars, as we ſee 2 Kings 18. but it agrees exactly to Chriſt, who is called our Peace, Mic. 5. 5. Eph. 2. 14. and is the only Purchaſer and Procurer of Peace between God and Men, Iſa. 53. 5. and of Peace between Men and Men, Jews and Gentiles, Eph. 2. 15. and of the Peace of our own Conſciences; and leaves Peace as his Legacy to his Diſciples, John 14. 27. and 16. 33.

7 Of the increaſe of his Government and Peace, * there ſhall be no end t, upon the Throne of David u and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to eſtabliſh it with Judgment and with Juſtice x, from henceforth even for ever y: the * zeal of the LORD of hoſts will perform this z.

* Or, they

t His peaceable and happy Government ſhall be enlarged without end: Either, without end of Duration, for ever; but that is expreſſed in a following Clauſe of this Verſe: Or, without end of Limitation, or without Bounds. It ſhall not be confined to a narrow ſpot of Ground, the Land of Canaan, but ſhall be extended far and wide to all the ends of the Earth. u Which was promiſed to David, and to his Seed for ever. x Not with Oppreſſion and Tyranny, by which other Kingdoms are commonly managed, but by the Adminiſtration of Juſtice. y From the beginning of it, unto all Eternity. z This great Work, which ſurpaſſeth all the Power and Skill of Men, ſhall be brought to paſs by Almighty God, out of that fervent Affection which he hath to his own Name and Glory, and to the Honour of his dearly beloved Son, and unto his Church and People.

8 The Lord ſent a word a into Jacob, and it lighted b upon Iſrael c.

a A Prophetical and threatning Meſſage by me: For now the Prophet, having inſerted ſome Conſolatory Paſſages for the ſupport of God's faithful People, returns to his former Work of Commination againſt the rebellious Iſraelites. b Heb. it fell, i. e. it ſhall fall, in the Prophetical Stile. It ſhall certainly be accompliſhed. c The ſame with Jacob in the former Clauſe, the Poſterity of Jacob or Iſrael.

9 And all the people ſhall know d, even Ephraim e and the inhabitant of Samaria f, that ſay g in the pride, and ſtoutneſs of heart, d To wit, by experience: They ſhall know whether my Word be true or falſe; they ſhall feel the effects of it. e The People of the Ten Tribes, and particularly Ephraim, the ſtrongeſt and proudeſt of them all. f The ſtrongeſt Place, and the Seat of the King and Court, who were moſt ſecure and preſumptuous. g Within themſelves, and one to another. They purpoſe and boaſt of it.

10 The bricks are fallen down, but we will build with hewn ſtones h: The Sycomores i are cut down, but we will change them into Cedars k.

h It is true, we have received ſome Damages from our Enemies; but, Rezin and the Syrians being now our Friends and Confederates, we doubt not we ſhall quickly repair them with great Glory and Advantage. i Wild Fig-trees, a contemptible ſort of Trees, if compared with Cedars, 1 Kings 10. 27. k Putting Cedars into our Buildings inſtead of Sycomores. See Jer. 22. 13, 15.

11 Therefore l the LORD ſhall ſet up m the Adverſaries of Rezin n againſt him o, and † joyn p his q enemies together.

l To chaſtiſe your Pride, and defeat your Hopes and Reſolutions. m Heb. exalt, advance their Power, and give them Succeſs againſt him. n The Aſſyrians, who, preſently after this Prophecy, fought and prevailed againſt him, 2 Kings 16. 7. He mentions Rezin, partly becauſe he was Confederate with Ephraim, and ſo his Enemies were their Enemies alſo, and partly becauſe the Iſraelites truſted to his powerful Aſſiſtance. o Either, 1. Againſt Rezin laſt mentioned; or rather, 2. Againſt Ephraim or Iſrael, who may eaſily be underſtood either from the foregoing or following Verſe: For againſt them this Prophecy is directed, and of them he ſpeaks both in the next Clauſe of this Verſe, and in the next Verſe; and it ſeems reaſonable, that him in this Clauſe, and his in the next Clauſe, ſhould be underſtood of the ſame Perſons. p Heb. mingle, i. e. unite them ſo that they ſhall agree together to fight againſt Iſrael, and ſhall invade him from ſeveral Quarters. q Not Rezin's, but Ephraim's, as appears from the next Verſe, which is added to explain this Clauſe.

12 The Syrians r before ſ, and the Philiſtims behind t, and they ſhall devour Iſrael † with open mouth u: * For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is ſtretched out ſtill x.

† Heb. with whole mouth. * Chap. 5. 25. and 10. 4.

r For although Rezin King of Syria was deſtroyed, yet the Body of the Nation ſurvived, and ſubmitted themſelves to the King of Aſſyria, and ſerved under him in his Wars, and upon his Command invaded Iſrael afterwards. ſ Heb. on the Eaſt: For Syria ſtood Eaſtward from Iſrael. t On the Weſtern ſide of the Land of Iſrael. u Like wild and furious Beaſts, with great greedineſs and cruelty. x His Juſtice is not fully ſatisfied, but he will yet take further vengeance upon them.

13 For the people turneth not y unto him that ſmiteth them, neither do they ſeek the LORD of hoſts z.

y From their wicked Courſes unto God, by true Repentance. z They do not ſtudy and endeavour to procure his Favour, by ſincere and fervent Supplication, and by removing the Cauſes of his juſt Diſpleaſure.

14 Therefore the LORD will cut off from Iſrael, head and tail a, branch b and ruſh c in one day d.

a High and low, honourable and contemptible. as the next Verſe explains it. b The goodly Branches of tall and ſtrong Trees, the Mighty and Noble. c The Bulruſh, the weakeſt and meaneſt Perſons. d All together, one as well as another, without any diſtinction.

15 The ancient and honourable, he is e the head: and the prophet that teacheth lies f, he is the tail g.

e i. e. Signifies, as that Word is commonly uſed in the Hebrew Tongue, as Gen. 41. 26, 27. and every where. f Whoſe Deſtruction he mentions, not as if it were a Puniſhment to them to be deprived of ſuch Perſons, but partly to ſhew the Extent of the Calamity, that it ſhould reach all ſorts of Perſons; and partly to beat down their vain Preſumptions of Peace and Proſperity, by ſhewing that thoſe falſe Prophets, which had fed their vain Hopes, ſhould periſh, and all their falſe Prophecies of Peace with them. g Theſe I mean by the Tail, as being in Truth the baſeſt part of the whole Body of the People.

16 * For ‖ the leaders h of this People cauſe them † to err i, and ‖ they that are led of them are † deſtroyed k.

* Chap. 3. 12. ‖ Or, they that call them bleſſed. † Heb. ſwallowed up.

h Their Governours both Civil and Eccleſiaſtical, and eſpecially the latter, their Teachers, even the falſe Prophets laſt mentioned. Or, they that Bleſs or Praiſe them, to wit, the falſe Prophets, that flatter them in their wicked Ways, with Hopes and Promiſes of Peace, as their manner was, Jer. 6. 14. and 28. 5. Both ways the ſence is the ſame. i Either compelling them by Power, or deceiving them by falſe Doctrines and evil Counſels and Perſwaſions. k Shall certainly periſh; nor will it excuſe them that they followed the Counſel and Conduct of their Leaders.

‖ Or, they that are bleſſed. † Heb. ſwallowed up.

17 Therefore the LORD ſhall have no Joy in their young men l, neither ſhall have mercy on their Fatherleſs and widows m: For every one n is an Hypocrite o, and an evil doer p, and every mouth ſpeaketh ‖ folly q: For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is ſtretched out ſtill.

‖ Or, villany.

l Shall not rejoyce over them to do them good, as he doth to his People, Iſa. 62. 5. Zeph. 3. 17. will not have mercy or pity on them, as the next Clauſe explains it, but will abhor and utterly deſtroy them; for more is here intended than is expreſſed, as Prov. 17. 21. m Who are the ſpecial Objects of his Care and Pity, Deut. 16. 11, 14. and 24. 19, 20. and much leſs upon others. n Not preciſely; for there were ſeven thouſand Elect Perſons among them, when they ſeemed to Eliſah to be univerſally corrupt, 1 Kings 19. 18. but the Body or generality of the People. o For though they profeſſed to worſhip and ſerve the true God, yet indeed they had forſaken him. Or, a prophane Perſon, as this Word is rendred, Jer. 23. 15. as alſo Iſa. 32. 6. p Elſewhere called, a worker of Iniquity, as Job 31. 3. Pſalm 5. 5. Mat. 7. 23. one that gives up himſelf to a conſtant courſe and cuſtom of Sinning. q i. e. Wickedneſs, which is commonly called folly. They are not aſhamed to proclaim their own Wickedneſs, and the Corruption of their Hearts breaketh forth into ungodly Speeches.

18 For wickedneſs burneth r as the fire, * it ſhall devour the briars and thorns ſ, and ſhall kindle in the thickets of the forreſt t, and they ſhall mount up like the lifting up of ſmoak u.

* Chap. 10. 17.

r i. e. Shall burn you, as it follows, ſhall devour. Your Iniquity ſhall be your Ruine, as God threatens, Ezek. 18. 30. ſ Either, 1. The Wicked, who are oft compared to Briars and Thorns, as 2 Sam. 23. 6. Iſa. 27. 4. or rather, 2. The low and mean Perſons; for theſe are oppoſed to the thickets of the Foreſt, in the next Clauſe. t In the Wood, where the Trees are tall, and ſtand thick, having their Boughs entangled together, which makes them more ready both to catch and to ſpread the Fire. u Sending up Smoak like a vaſt Furnace. Heb. with heights or pride of Smoak, i. e. with aſpiring Smoak, which in that caſe riſeth high, and ſpreadeth far, and filleth all the neighbouring Air.

19 Through the wrath of the LORD of hoſts is * the land darkened x, and the People ſhall be as the † fewel of the fire: no man ſhall ſpare his brother y.

* Chap. 8. 22. † Heb. meat.

x Either with the Smoak laſt mentioned, or with Miſery. Or, burnt up, as the LXX. Chaldee and Arabick Interpreters render it. y They ſhall deſtroy one another, as they did in their Civil Wars, which were frequent among them. The Name Brother ther is oft largely used among the Hebrews, even of the remoter Kindred, yea of the Fellow-members of one City, or Tribe, or Nation.

† Heb. cut. 20 And he shall † snatch z on the right hand, and be hungry, and he shall eat on the left hand, and *Ch.49.26. they shall not be satisfied: * they shall eat every man the flesh of his own arm a.

z Every one shall greedily and violently seise upon any Provisions that come in his way. Which implies, either great Scarcity, or insatiable Covetousnes, as is manifest from the next Clause. a Either, 1. properly; so it notes extream Famine: in which case men are apt to eat their own Flesh. Compare Jer. 19. 9. Or, 2. Metaphorically, which seems best to suit with the following Verse, the Flesh of his Brethren by Nation and Religion, which are as it were our own Flesh, and are so called, Isa. 58. 7. Zech. 11. 9. and consequently, the Flesh of their Arm, is in a manner the Flesh of our own Arm. And one Tribe was to another as an Arm, i. e. a Support or Strength, which is called an arm, 2 Chron. 32. 8 Jer. 17. and elsewhere.

*Chap. 11. 13. shall eat. 21 * Manasseh, Ephraim b; and Ephraim, Manasseh: and they together shall be against Judah c. For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

b Though more near and dear to one another, than any other Tribe, being both Sons of Joseph. c Which might be accomplished either before Shalmaneser took Samaria, or afterwards. For though the Israelites were miserably destroyed at that time, yet they were not utterly rooted out. Of which, see my Notes on Isa. 7. 8.

CHAP. X.

The woe of unjust oppressors. 1,—4. Of Assyria for their Pride and Ambition: His folly in it. 5,—19. A Remnant of Israel shall be saved: and that speedily. 20,—27. Sennacherib marching toward Jerusalem. 28.—31. His judgment, 32,—34.

* *Psa.*58. 1. & 94. 20. ‖ Or, to the writers that write grievousness. VVO unto them that * decree unrighteous decrees a, and † that write b grievousness c, which they have prescribed:

a Unto those Magistrates who make unjust Laws, and give unjust Sentences. b Either, 1. the Scribes, who were assistant to the Magistrates, and oft-times did promote or execute such Decrees; or, 2. the unjust Magistrates, whose Decrees were usually written. So the same thing is repeated in other Words. Only this writing may note their Obstinacy or Perseverance in their unjust Decrees, and their proceeding to the Execution of them. c Grievous things, such unjust Decrees as cause Grief and Vexation to their Subjects.

2 To turn aside the needy from Judgment d, and to take away the right from the poor e of my people f, that widows may be their prey, and that they may rob the fatherless.

d Or, from their right, as it is in the next Clause: or, from obtaining a just Sentence, because they either denied or delayed to hear their Causes, or gave a wrong Sentence. e Whom I have in a special manner committed to your Care. f Of Israelites, who professs themselves to be my People, and whom I did take into Covenant with my self; and therefore this is an injury not only to them, but to me also.

* Job 31. 14. 3 And * what will ye do g in the day of visitation, h, and in the desolation which shall come from far i? to whom will ye flee for help k? and where will you leave l your glory m?

g To save your selves. h When I shall come to visit you in wrath, as the next Words limit it, and as this Phrase is oft used; although sometimes it signifies a Visitation in mercy, as Luke 19.44. and elsewhere. i From the Assyrians. This he adds, because the Israelites, having weakned the Jews, and being in Amity with the Syrians their next Neighbours, were secure. k To the Syrians, as now you do? But they shall be destroyed together with you, as those were, 2 Kings, 16. l To be kept safe for your use, and to be restored to you when you call for it. m Either, 1. your Power and Authority, which now you so wickedly abuse; or, 2. your Wealth, got by Injustice, as glory is taken, Gen. 31. 1. Psalm 49. 16, 17, &c.

*Ch.5. 25. & 9. 12. 4 Without me they shall bow down n under o the prisoners, and they shall fall under the slain: * For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

n The Words thus translated seem to contain an Answer to the foregoing Questions: In vain do you seek for a Refuge and Help from others; for without me, without my Favour and Help which you have forfeited, and do not seek to recover, and which I shall withdraw from you; or, because you are without me, or forsaken by me, you shall bow down, notwithstanding all your Succours. In the Hebrew here is a change of the Person and Number, which is very usual in Prophetical Writings. The Seventy, and some others, joyn these Words to the foregoing Verse, and translate them thus, that you may not bow down: So the fence of the Place is, What will you do to prevent your Captivity or Slaughter? And it is true, that the first Word is elsewhere taken for a Negative Particle. But the former Translation seems more genuine. o Or rather, in the place (as this Particle signifies, and is rendred by Interpreters, Gen. 30. 2. & 50. 19. Exod. 16. 29. Jos. 5. 8. and elsewhere) of the prisoners, or among the prisoners: And so in the next Clause, among or in the place of the slain.

‖ Or, Woe to the Assyrian. 5 ‖ O † Assyrian p, * the rod of mine anger q, ‖ and the staff in their hand is mine indignation r.

p So it is God's Call or Invitation to him to take the Charge, and set upon the Work. Or, Woe to the Assyrian, because though † Heb. he do my Work, yet he doth it in a wicked manner, and for wicked Ends, as we shall see. q The Instrument of mine Anger, wherewith I shall chastise my People. r Mine Anger against my People puts the Weapons of War into their Hand, and gives them Strength and Success in this Expedition. Assur.

6 I will send him s against an hypocritical t nation, and against the people of my wrath u will I give him a charge x to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and † to tread them down like the mire of the streets y. † Heb. Lay them treadin.

s Not by express Commission, but by the secret yet powerful Conduct of my Providence, giving him both occasion and inclination to this Expedition. t See on ch. 9. 17. u The Objects of my just Wrath, devoted to destruction. x by putting this Instinct into his mind. y Which signifies that he should easily conquer them, and utterly destroy them, as he did after this time.

7 * Howbeit, he † meaneth not so z, neither doth his heart think so, but it is in his heart to destroy, and † cut off nations not a few a. * Mic. 4. 11. † Heb. not so. nor his heart so.

z He doth not at all design the Execution of my Will, and the Glory of my Justice, in punishing mine Enemies; but only to enlarge his own Empire, and satisfie his own Lusts. Which is seasonably added, to justifie God in his Judgments threatned to the Assyrian, notwithstanding this Service. a To sacrifice multitudes of People to his own Ambition and Covetousnes; which is abominable Impiety.

8 * For he † saith, Are not my Princes altogether kings b? * Kings 18. 24 & 19. 6, &c. † Heb. say.

b Equal for Power, and Wealth, and Glory, to the Kings of other Nations, though my Subjects and Servants.

9 Is not Calno, as Carchemish c? is not Hamath, as Arpad d? is not Samaria as Damascus e?

c Have not I conquered one Place as well as another, the stronger as well as the weaker? Have I not from time to time added new Conquests to the old? Calno seems to be the same with Calneh, Gen. 10. 10. Amos 6. 2. a great and strong City. Carchemish was a City upon Euphrates, of which 2 Chron. 35. 20. Jer. 46. 2. Hamath was an eminent City of Syria, not far from Euphrates, called Hemath, or Hamath the Great, Amos 6. 2. of which see 2 Kings 14. 28. & 17. 24. Jer. 49. 23, 27. Arpad seems to have been an obscure Place, not being elsewhere named. Is not that as soon conquered as this? e Or, Shall not Samaria be as Damascus? Shall I not take that, as I have done this City? For although Damascus possibly was not yet taken by the Assyrian, yet the Prophet speaks of it as actually taken, because these Words are Prophetically delivered, and supposed to be uttered by the King of Assyria, at or about the Siege of Samaria, when Damascus was taken.

10 As my hand hath found f the kingdoms of the idols g, and whose graven images did excel them h of Jerusalem, and of Samaria.

f i. e. Hath taken, as this Word is used, Prov. 1. 13. and oft elsewhere, the Antecedent being put for the Consequent, because what men find they commonly take to themselves. g Which worshipped their own proper Idols, and vainly imagined that they could protect them from Power. He calls the Gods of the several Nations, not excepting Jerusalem, Idols by way of contempt, because none of them could deliver their People out of his hands, as he brags, Isa. 37. 11, 12. and because he judged them to be but Petty-Gods, far inferiour to the Sun, which was the great God of the Assyrians. h To wit, in Reputation and Strength. Which Blasphemy of his proceeded from his deep ignorance of the True God.

11 Shall I not, as I have done unto Samaria and her idols, so do to Jerusalem and her idols i?

i I shall certainly do it, and neither God nor Man can hinder me.

12 Wherefore k it shall come to pass, that when the LORD hath performed his whole work l * upon mount Zion, and on Jerusalem, I will † punish m the fruit † of the stout heart of the king of Assyria, and the glory of his high looks n. * 2 Kings 19. 35. † Heb. fruit up. † He. the fr.

k Because of this impudent Blasphemy. l Of chastising his People so long and so much as he sees fit and necessary for them. m Heb. visit, to wit, in wrath, as before on v. 3. n His insolent Words and Carriages, proceeding from intolerable Pride of Heart. most heart.

13 For he saith o, By the strength of my hand I have done it, and by my wisdom p; for I am prudent: and I have removed the bounds q of the people, and have robbed their treasures r, and I have put down s the inhabitants ‖ like a valiant man. ‖ Or, many.

o Not only within himself, but before his Courtiers and others. p I owe all my Successes to my own Power, and Valour, and wise Conduct, and to no other God or Man. q I have invaded their Lands, and added them to my own Dominions, as this Phrase is used, Prov. 22. 28. Hos. 5. 10. r Heb. their prepared things, their Gold, and Silver, and other precious things, which they had long been preparing and laying in store s Deprived of their former Glory and Power.

14 And my hand hath found as a Nest t the riches of the People: and as one gathereth eggs that are left u, have I gathered all the earth x, and there was none that moved the wing, or opened the mouth or peeped y. t As t As one findeth young Birds in a Nest, the Nest being put for the Birds in it, as Deut. 32. 11. No less easily do I both find and take them. u Which the Dam hath left in her Nest. This is more easie than the former; for the young Birds might possibly make some faint resistance, or flutter away; but the Eggs could do neither. x All the Riches of the Earth or World. An Hyperbole not unusual in the Mouths of such Persons, upon such Occasions. y As Birds do, which, when they see and cannot hinder the robbing of their Nests, express their Grief and Anger, by hovering about them, and by mournful Cries.

15 Shall the ax boast it self against him that heweth therewith z? or shall the saw magnifie it self against him that shaketh it? † as if the rod should shake it self against them that lift it up a, or as if the staff should lift up it self, as if it were no Wood b. † How absurd and unreasonable a thing is it, for thee, who art but an Instrument in God's hand, and canst do nothing without his leave and help, to blaspheme thy Lord and Master, who hath as great a power over thee, to manage thee as he pleaseth, as a Man hath over the Ax wherewith he heweth? a Or, as it is rendred in the Margin, and by other Interpreters, as if a rod should shake (i. e. shall pretend to shake, or, should boast that it would or could shake; which may easily be understood out of the foregoing words) them that lift it up. b As if a Staff should forget that it was Wood, and should pretend or attempt to lift up it self either without or against the man that moveth it. Which is absurd in the very supposition of it, and were much more unreasonable in the practice. Nor are thy Boasts less ridiculous.

16 Therefore shall the Lord, the Lord of hosts c, send among his † fat ones leanness d, and under his glory he shall kindle a burning like the burning of a fire e. † Heb. fatness.

c The Sovereign Lord and General of thine and all other Armies. d Strip him, and all his great Princes and Commanders, of all their Wealth, and Might, and Glory. e He will destroy his numerous and victorious Army, and that suddenly and irrecoverably, as the Fire doth those combustible things which are cast into it. Which was fulfilled 2 Kings 19. 25.

17 And the light of Israel f shall be for a fire g, and his holy One for a flame: and it shall burn and devour his thorns and briars h in one day.

f That God who is and will be a comfortable Light to his People. g To the Assyrians, who shall have Heat without Light, as it is in Hell. h His vast Army, which is no more able to resist God, than dry Thorns and Briars are to oppose the Fire which is kindled among them.

18 And shall consume the glory of his forest i, and of his fruitful field k, † both soul and body l: and they shall be as when a standard-bearer fainteth m. † Or, but he shall lift up his staff for thee.

i Of his great Army, which may not unfitly be compared to a Forest, either for the multitude of their Spears, which, when lifted up together, resemble the Trees of a Wood or Forest; or for the numbers of Men, which flood as thick as Trees do in a Forest. k Of his Soldiers, which flood as thick as Ears of Corn do in a fruitful Field. Heb. of his Carmel. Wherein it is not improbably conjectured by our late most Learned Mr. Gataker, that there is an Allusion to that Brag of the Assyrian, who threatens that he would go up to the sides of (Israel's) Lebanon, and to the Forest of his Carmel, and there cut down the Tall Cedars thereof. Which though it was not uttered by the Assyrian till some years after this Time, yet was exactly foreknown to God who understandeth mens Thoughts, and much more their Words, afar off, Psalm 139. 2, 3, 4. and therefore might direct the Prophet to use the same Words, and to turn them against himself, Whereas thou threatnest to destroy Israel's Carmel, I will destroy thy Carmel. I. e. Totally, both inwardly and outwardly, both Strength and Life. Heb. from the Soul to the Flesh. Which may possibly signifie the manner of their Death, which should be by a sudden Stroke of the destroying Angel upon their inward and vital Parts, which was speedily followed by the Consumption of their Flesh. See Isa. 37. 35, 36. m The State of that King, and of his great and valiant Army, shall be. n Like that of an Army when their Standard-bearer either is slain, or rather flees away, which strikes a Panick Terrour into the whole Army, and puts them to flight.

19 And the rest of the trees of his forest o, shall be † few, that a child may write them p. † Heb. easily numbred.

o The Remainders of that mighty Host. p That they may be easily numbred by the meanest Accomptant. A Child may be their Muster-master.

20 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the remnant of Israel, and such as are escaped of the house of Jacob q, shall no more again stay upon him that smote them r: but shall stay upon the LORD, the holy One of Israel in truth s.

q Such Jews as shall be preserved from that sweeping Assyrian Scourge, by which great numbers both of Israel and Judah were destroyed, and from their succeeding Calamities. For that this Place looks beyond the Deliverance from the Assyrian Army, and unto the Times of the New Testament, seems probable, 1. From the following Verses, which belong to that Time, as we shall see: 2. From the State of the Jewish Nation, which, after that Deliverance, continued to be very bad and corrupt, and averse from that Reformation which Hezekiah and Josiah prosecuted with all their might; and therefore the Body of that People had not yet learned this Lesson of sincere Trusting in God alone. 3. From St. Paul's Explication and Application of these Words, Rom. 9. 27. of which more may be said when I come thither. And for the Words in that Day, which may seem to restrain this to the time

Name of God's anointed, as Psalm 20. 6. and 89. 20. and 132. 17. and elsewere; and for whose sake God gave many Deliverances to the succeeding Kings and Ages, as is expressly affirmed, 1 Kings 11. 32, 34. 2 Kings 8. 19. And, which is more considerable, God declareth, that he would give this very Deliverance from the Assyrian for David's sake, 2 Kings 19. 34. and 20. 6. But the Messiah, I doubt not, is here principally intended, of whom David was but a Type; and who was in a peculiar manner anointed above all his fellows, as is said, Psal. 45. 7. For he is the Foundation of all the Promises, 2 Cor. 1. 20. and of all the Deliverances and Mercies granted to God's People in all Ages; whence this very Prophet makes use of this great promise of the Messiah, as an Assurance that God would make good his promises of particular Deliverances from their present or approaching Calamities, as Isa. 7. 14, &c. and 9. 4, &c.. And therefore the Prophet might well say, that God would grant this Deliverance for Christ's sake: Especially if it be considered, that this was the very Reason why God had promised, and did so constantly perform his Mercy promised unto the Tribe of Judah, and unto the House of David, until the coming of the Messiah, because the Messiah was to come of the Tribe of Judah, and of the Posterity of David, and was to succeed David in his Throne and Kingdom; and he was to be known by this Character: and therefore this Tribe and House and Kingdom were to continue, and that in a visible manner, till Christ came.

28. He is come to Ajath r, he is passed to Migron: at Michmash he hath laid up his carriages s.

r Here the Prophet returns to his former Discourse concerning the Assyrian Invasion into Judah; which he describes, after the manner of the Prophets, as a thing present, and sets down the several Stages by which he marched towards Jerusalem. The Places here named are most of them Towns of Benjamin, and some of Judah, as appears from other Scriptures; of which it is needless to say more in this place. He, to wit, Sennacherib King of Assyria, he come in his way to Jerusalem. [Leaving such things there as were less necessary, that so he might march with more expedition. Heb. he visited his vessels or instruments: which may be meant of his taking a Survey of his Army and Artillery, to see that all things were ready for his Enterprise.

29 They are gone over the passage t: they have taken up their lodging at Geba, Ramah is afraid, Gibeah of Saul is fled u.

t Some considerable Passage then well known; possibly that 1 Sam. 14. 4. The People fled to Jerusalem for fear of the Assyrian.

30 † Lift up thy voice, O daughter of Gallim x: cause it to be heard unto Laish, O poor Anathoth.

x Jerusalem was the Mother City, and lesser Towns are commonly called her daughters, as hath been oft noted.

31 Madmenah is removed, the inhabitants of Gebim gather themselves to flee.

32 As yet shall he remain at Nob that day: he shall shake his hand y against the mount of the daughter of Zion, the hill of Jerusalem.

y By way of Commination. But withal he intimates that he should be able to do no more against it, and that there his proud Waves should be stayed, as it is declared in the following Verses, and in the History.

33 Behold the Lord, the LORD of hosts shall lop the bough z with terrour a: and the high ones of stature shall be hewn down, and the haughty shall be humbled.

z The top-bough, Sennacherib; or, the boughs, his valiant Souldiers or Commanders of his Army, which he compareth to a Forest, v. 18. & 34. a With a most terrible and amazing stroke by an Angel.

‖ Or, mightily.

34 And he shall cut down the thickets of the forrest with iron b, and Lebanon c shall fall ‖ by a mighty one d.

b Or, as with iron, as the Trees of the Forrest are cut down by Instruments of Iron. c Or, his Lebanon, the Pronoun being oft understood in the Hebrew Text: the Assyrian Army, which being before compared to a Forrest or Wood, and being called his Carmel in the Hebrew Text, v. 18. may very fitly, upon the same ground, be called his Lebanon here; especially considering that the King of Assyria is called a Cedar of Lebanon, Ezek. 31. 3. & by a mighty Angel, Isa. 37. 36.

CHAP. XI.

Christ, a Branch out of the Root of Jesse, endued with the Spirit of the Lord, should set up a Kingdom by the Preaching of his word, 1,——15. The Members of his Church should live in Peace and Unity. 6,——9. and be Victorious over their Enemies: and to him should the Gentiles seek. 10,——16.

* Ch. 4. 2. God's People with the Promise of their Deliverance from that

Jer. 23. 5. formidable Enemy, now he proceeds further, and declares, That God will do greater things than that for them, that he will give them their long-expected and much-desired Messiah, and by him will work Wonders of Mercy for them. For this is the manner of the Prophets, to take the occasion of particular Deliverances, to fix the Peoples Minds upon their great and everlasting Deliverance from all their enemies by the Messiah. And having said that the Assyrian yoke should be destroyed because of the anointing, ch. 10. 27. he now more particularly explains who that anointed Person was. b Or, twig, called a branch in the next Clause. Parents are oft compared to Roots or Trees, and their Children to Branches. He speaks of the most eminent Branch, of that famous Son of a Virgin, Isa. 7. 14. of that Wonderful Child, Isa. 9. 6. not of Hezekiah, as some of the Jews and Judaizing Christians conceit; but of the Messiah, as will evidently appear from the following Description. c Or, trunk; or rather, stump: for the Word properly signifies a Trunk cut off from the Root: Or, root, as the LXX here render the Word, and as it is explained in the next Clause. By which he clearly implies, that the Messiah should be born of the Royal House of David, at that time when it was in a most forlorn and contemptible condition, like a Tree cut down, and whereof nothing is left but a Stump or Root under Ground. Which really was the State of David's Family when Christ was born, as is notoriously known; but was in a far better condition when Hezekiah was born. d He doth not say of David, but of Jesse, who was a private and mean Person, 1 Sam. 18. 18, 23. & 20. 30. to intimate, That at the time of Christ's Birth the Royal Family should be reduced to its Primitive Obscurity. e He speaks of one not yet born, and therefore not of Hezekiah, who was born divers year before his Father Ahaz (in whose time this Prophecy was delivered) was King, by comparing 2 Kings 16. 2. & 18. 2. but of the Messiah. f Out of one of his Roots, i. e. Branches, as this Word root is sometimes used, by a very usual Figure called a Metonymy, as it is here below, v. 10. Isaiah 53. 2. Hosea 14. 5.

2 And the spirit of the LORD g shall rest upon him h, the spirit of wisdom and understanding i, the spirit of counsel and might k, the spirit of knowledge l and of the fear of the LORD m:

g The Holy Ghost, wherewith he was anointed, Act. 10. 38. and by whom his Mother was overshadowed, Luke 1. 35. h Not only come upon him at certain times, as he did upon the Prophets now and then at his pleasure, but shall have its constant and settled abode in him; although the same Phrase be sometimes used of other Prophets in an inferiour sense, as Numb. 11. 17. 2 King. 2. 15. i Which hath these Perfections in it self, and confers them upon him. It is neither easie, nor at all necessary, exactly to distinguish these two Gifts; it is sufficient that they are necessary Qualifications for a Governour, and for a Teacher, both which Offices were to meet in the Messiah; and it is evident that they signifie a practical and perfect Knowledge of all things necessary for the discharge of his Trust, and for his own and Peoples Good, and a found Judgment, to distinguish between things that differ. k Of Prudence, to give good Counsel; and of Might and Courage, to execute it; which are two necessary Qualifications of a Ruler. l Of the perfect Knowledge of the whole Will and Counsel of God, especially that which concerns the Salvation of Men, the profession whereof was his great Work, as also of all secret and hidden things, yea of the Hearts of Men, the Knowledge whereof is ascribed to Christ, Mat. 9. 4. Revel. 2. 23. m Not a fear of Diffidence or Horrour, but of Reverence, a Care to please him, and lothness to offend him; which well became the Messiah towards his God and Father.

† Heb. or smell.

3 And shall make him of † quick understanding n in the fear of the LORD o, and he shall not judge p after the sight of his eyes q, neither reprove r after the hearing of his ears s.

n Heb. he shall make him smell, i. e. perceive, as that Word is used, Judg. 16. 9. Job 39. 25. understand or judge, as it is explained in the next Clause. Or, his smelling shall be. Smelling is put for Judging, because the Sense of Smelling, where it is quick and good, is more exact and sure in the judging of its proper Objects, than the Senses of Seeig and Hearing are. o Which is added, either, 1. as the Object of his Judging: He is most perspicacious and judicious in the things which concern the fear, i. e. the Worship and Service of God, which he was to erect and establish in his Church: Or rather, 2. as the Rule and Manner of his Judging, as may be gathered from the opposite and following Clause. So the sence is, He shall not judge rashly and partially, but considerately and justly, as the Fear of God obligeth all Judges to do. p Of Persons or Causes. And judging seems to be here Synecdochically put for all absolving or giving Sentence for a Person, as it is used, Psal. 7. 9, 11. and in many other places, because this is opposed to reproving in the next Clause. q According to outward Appearance, as men must do, because they cannot search mens hearts, 1 Sam. 16. 7. or with respect of Persons, but with righteous judgment, which is opposed to judging by appearance, Job. 7. 24. r i. e. Condemn or pass Sentence against a Person: For Christ is here supposed to be a Judge, and so he speaks of a Judicial Reproof. s By false or uncertain Rumours or Suggestions, but shall throughly examine all Causes, and search out the Truth of things, and the very Hearts of Men.

* Psal. 72. 2, 4. Rev. 19. 11.

4 But * with righteousness shall he judge the poor t, and ‖ reprove u with equity for the meek x of the earth: and he shall * smite y the earth z with the rod † of his mouth a, and with the breath of his lips ‖ shall he slay the wicked c.

‖ Or, argue.

* Job 4. 9.

t Defend and deliver them, as judging is oft used, as Deut. 32. 36. 2 Thess. 1. 5. Jer. 5. 28. & 22. 13. &c. Or, judge for the poor, the Hebrew Article being put for the Possessive Pronoun, as Rev. 1. 16. lamed, being understood out of the next Clause, as is usual in the Hebrew Language. He mentions the poor, partly to signifie the Justice of this Judge, because Humane Judges commonly neglect the poor, and oppress the Poor; and partly to declare the Nature of Christs Kingdom, and the Quality of his Subjects, who should, for the generality of them, be the poor and contemptible sort of men Mat. 11. 5. Jam. 2. 5. u Or, as this Word seems to be taken, v. 3. condemn, to wit, their malicious and furious Enemies. x On their behalf, or giving Sentence for them. He calls them meek, whom before he called poor, partly to shew his Justice in defending them who are most exposed to the Contempt and Injuries of Men; and partly to signifie that his Subjects should be poor in Spirit as well as in the World, and not poor and proud, as many worldly men are. y i. e. Slay, as this Word is used, Isa. 37. 36. and very commonly, and as it is expounded in the next Clause. z The men of the Earth, the wicked, as it is in the next Branch of the Verse: fitly called earth, either because of their Earthly Minds and Conversations, as they are called the men of this World, that have their portion here upon the Earth, Psal. 17. 14. or because the far greatest part of the Inhabitants of the Earth is wicked: the whole world lies in wickedness, 1 John 5. 19. for which reason they are oft called the world, as John 16. 20. & 17. 9. 25. &c. a With his Word, which is his Scepter, and the rod of his power, Psal. 110. 2. which is sharper than a Sword, Heb. 4. 12. by the preaching whereof he subdued the World to himself, and will destroy his Enemies, 2 Thes. 2. 8. This he adds, further to declare the Nature of Christ's Kingdom, that it is not of this World, and that his Scepter and Arms are not Carnal but Spiritual, as it is said, 2 Cor. 10. 4. b With his Word breathed out of his Lips; whereby he explains what he meant by the foregoing rod. c Either spiritually, by inflicting deadly Plagues upon their Souls; or properly, which he doth very frequently by his terrible Judgments executed upon many of them, and will certainly do, and that fully and universally, at his coming to Judgement.

5 And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins d, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins e.

d It shall adorn him, and be the Glory of his Government, as a Girdle was used for Ornament, Isa. 3. 24. and as an Ensign of Power, Job 12. 18. and it shall constantly cleave to him, in all his Administrations, as a Girdle cleaveth to a mans loins, which is the Prophets Similitude, Jer. 13. 11. e The same thing in other Words.

6 * The Wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the Leopard shall lie down with the kid f: and the Calf and the young Lion, and the fatling together, and

Ch. 65. 25. Hos. 2. 18. a little child shall lead them g.

f The Creatures shall be restored to that State of Innocency in which they were before the Fall of Man. But this is not to be understood literally, which is a grosse and vain Conceit of some Jews; but spiritually and metaphorically as is evident. And the sence of the Metaphor is this; Men of fierce, and cruel, and ungovernable Dispositions, shall be so transformed by the Preaching of the Gospel, and by the Grace of Christ, that they shall become most humble, and gentle, and tractable, and shall no more vex and persecute those meek and poor ones mentioned v. 4. but shall become such as they: of which we have Instances in Saul being made a Paul, and in the rugged Jaylour, Act. 16. and in innumerable others. But how can this be applied to Hezekiah with any colour? g They will submit their proud and rebellious Wills to the Conduct and Command of the meanest Persons that speak to them in Christ's Name.

7 And the cow and the bear shall feed h, their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw i like an ox.

h Together, as if it follow'd without any Danger or Fear. i The Grass and Fruits of the Earth, as they did at first, Gen. 1. 29, 30. and shall not devour other Living Creatures, as now they do.

8 And the suckling child shall play on the hole of the asp k, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the ‖ cockatrice l den.

k A most fierce and poisonous Serpent, Deut. 32. 33. Job 20. 14, 16. which also will not be Charmed by any Art of Man, Psal. 58. 5. l A Serpent of more than ordinary Cunning and Cruelty, Prov. 23. 32. The meaning is, They shall not fear to be either deceived or destroyed by those who formerly watched all Opportunities to do it.

9 * They shall not hurt nor destroy in my Holy mountain m: for the earth n shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD o, as the Waters cover the Sea p.

m In Zion, in my Church. Where-ever the Gospel comes and prevails, it will have this effect. n Metonymically put for the Inhabitants of the Earth; and as before it was used for the greater part, v. 4. so here it is used for the better part of the World. o Of saving and practical Knowledge. Whereby he intimates, That all that Savageness and Maliguity which is in wicked men towards true Christians, proceeded from their deep Ignorance, and particularly from Ignorance of God; and withal, that a right Knowledge of God will make a marvellous and thorow Change in the Dispositions and Conversations of men. p The Channel of the Sea, the thing contained being put for the thing containing, by a Metonymy common in Scripture, and all Authors.

13 And in that day there shall be a root q of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign r of the people s: to it shall the * Gentiles seek t, and his rest u shall be † glorious x q A Branch growing upon the Root: of which see on v. 1. r Shall grow up into a great and high Tree, shall become a visible and eminent Ensign. s Which not only the Jews, but all Nations, may discern, and to which they may, and shall resort. t As the Gospel shall be preached to the Gentiles, so they shall receive it, and believe in the Messiah. u His Resting-place, as this Word frequently signifies, as Gen. 8. 9. & 49. 5. Psal. 132. 8, 14. Isa. 34. 14. Mich. 2. 10. his Temple or Church, the Place of his Presence and Abode. x Shall be filled with greater Glory than than the Jewish Tabernacle and Temple were; of which see on Hag. 2. 9. only this Glory shall be Spiritual, consisting in Glorious Ordinances, in the plentiful Effusions of the excellent Gifts, and Graces, and Comforts of the Holy Spirit.

11 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time y, to recover the remnant of his people which shall be left, * from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea z.

* Zech. 10. 10, 12.

y The first time, to which this Word second relates, seems to be either, 1. the Deliverance out of Egypt, as most both Jewish and Christian Interpreters understand it: And then this second Deliverance must be that out of Babylon: Or, 2. the Deliverance out of Babylon: And then this second Deliverance must be in the days of the Messiah. Which, with submission to better Judgments, seems to me more probable; 1. because that first Deliverance is supposed to be, like the second, a Deliverance of the Remnant of this People from several Countries, into which they were dispersed: whereas that out of Egypt was a Deliverance not of a Remnant, but of the whole Nation, and that out of Egypt only: 2. because this second Deliverance was universal, extending to the generality of the Outcasts and Dispersed ones, both of Israel or the Ten Tribes, and of Judah or the Two Tribes, as is evident from v. 12. 13. whereas that out of Babylon reached onely to the Two Tribes, and to some few of the Ten Tribes which were mixed with them, as is acknowledged both by Jews and Christians: 3 because this second Deliverance was given them in the days of the Messiah, and did accompany or follow the Conversion of the Gentiles, as is evident from v. 9. 10. whereas that out of Babylon was long before the coming of the Messiah, and the calling of the Gentiles. z From all Places both far and near, into which either the Ten Tribes or the Two Tribes were carried Captives; for the Places of both their Captivities are here named, Of which it is needless to discourse particularly, because they are well known, and have been considered in former Texts. Onely Pathros was not named before; and that was a Province in Egypt, which yet is sometimes distinguished from Egypt strictly so called. See on Jer. 44. 1, 15. Ezek. 29. 14. & 30. 14.

Of the Ten Tribes, frequently called by the name of Ephraim, as hath been already and frequently observed, between whom and Judah there were great Emulations and Contentions. e Of Enemies they shall be made Friends, and of Wolves, Lambs; as was said before on v. 6. they shall be united together in one Church, under the Messiah, keeping the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace. f Not the Body of Ephraim, for they are supposed to be reconciled, and they shall not be cut off, but live in love with Judah, as we see by the next Clause; but those few of them which possibly may continue in their Enmity against them, together with all the rest of their Adversaries. g Not onely all outward Hostilities shall cease, but also their inward Animosities.

14 But they shall flie upon the shoulders b of the Philistins toward the West, they shall spoil † them i of the East together: † they shall lay their hands upon Edom and Moab, † and the Children of Ammon shall obey them.

† Heb. Edom and Moab shall be the Layders, that they may throw them down.

† Heb. the children of Ammon

b Either it is a Metaphor from Birds and Beasts of Prey, which commonly fasten upon the Shoulders of Cattel; or from Wrestlers, who endeavoured to catch hold of their Adversaries Shoulders, that they may throw them down. Or, shoulder is put for ing on of a side, as Numb. 34. 11. Jos. 15. 8, 10. or, for Part or Quarter of their hands. to be understood of the Spiritual Victory which the Jewish Messiah shall obtain by his Apostles and Ministers over all Nations, in bringing them to the Obedience of his Gospel. For it is the manner of their obedience. such Corporal Representations.

15 And the LORD shall utterly destroy k the tongue of the Egyptian sea l, and with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand m over the River n, and shall smite it in the seven streams o, and make men go over † dry-shod

k Shall not onely divide it, as of old, but will quite dry it up, that it may be an High-way, as it is explained in the next Verse. l. The Red Sea, which may well be called the Egyptian Sea, both because it borders upon Egypt, & because the Egyptians were drowned in it, which is called a Tongue in the Hebrew Text, Isa. 15. 2, 5. as having some resemblance with a Tongue: For which reason the name of tongue hath been given by Geographers to Promontories of Land which shoot forth into the Sea, as this Sea did shoot out of the Main Ocean into the Land. m He alludes to Moses his shaking of his Hand with the Rod of God in it over the Sea; n to wit, of Egypt, Nilus, as appears both from the foregoing and from the following words. o For which Nilus

Nilus is Famous in all Authors, and by which it emptieth it self into the Sea.

*Chap. 19. 23. 16 And * there shall be an High-way for the remnant of his people, which shall be left from Assyria p, *Exod. 14. 26, 29. * like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.

p As there was another High-way from Egypt, in the former Verse. So the fence is, That all Impediments shall be removed, and a way made for the Return of God's Israel from all Parts of the World. He mentions Assyria, because thither the Ten Tribes were carried, 2 Kings 17. 23. Whose Case seemed to be most desperate.

CHAP. XII.

Thanksgiving of the Faithfull for their Redemption. 1,—6.

AND in that day a thou shalt say, O LORD I will Praise thee: though thou wast Angry with me, thine anger is turned away, and thou comfortest me.

a When this great Work of the Reduction of God's Israel, and of the Conversion of the Gentiles, promised in the foregoing Chapter, shall be fulfilled.

2 Behold, God is my salvation b: I will trust, and *Exod. 15. 2 Psal. 118. 14. not be afraid; for the LORD JEHOVAH is my * strength and my song, he also is become my salvation.

b My Salvation hath not been brought to pass by Man, but by the Almighty Power of God.

*Joh. 4. 14. & 7. 37, 38. 3 Therefore with joy shall ye draw * water out of the wells of salvation c.

c Your thirsty and fainting Souls shall be filled with Divine Graces and Comforts, which you may plentifully draw from God, in the use of Gospel-Ordinances, which was oft signified by water, both in the Old and in the New Testament. He seems to allude to the State of Israel in the Wilderness, where when they had been tormented with Thirst, they were greatly refreshed and delighted with those Waters which God so graciously and wonderfully afforded them in that dry and barren Land, Numb. 20. 11. & 21. 16, 17, 18.

*1 Chr. 15. 8. Psa. 105. 1. ‖ Or, proclaim his name. 4 And in that day shall ye say, * Praise the LORD ‖, call upon his name, declare his doings among the people d, make mention that his name is exalted.

d In all the earth, as it follows v. 5. unto the Gentile-world, who shall partake in the Blessing, and will joyn with you in the praising of God for it.

† Heb. excellency. 5 Sing unto the LORD, for he hath done † excellent things: this is known in all the earth e.

e The Knowledge of this glorious Work of our Redemption by the Messiah shall no longer be confined to Israel's Lan, as it hitherto hath been; but shall reach to all Nations.

*Chap. 54. 1. Zeph. 3. 14. † Heb. inhabiteress. 6 * Cry out and shout, thou † inhabitant of Zion: for great is the Holy One of Israel in the midst of thee.

CHAP. XIII.

God's Armies. 1,—5. The destruction of Babylon by the persians and Medes: Their great distress and Anguish: and their utter Desolation. 6,—22.

*Chap. 21. 1. & 47. 1. Jer. 50. & 51. THE * burden a of Babylon b which Isaiah the son of Amos did see.

a This Title is commonly given to sad Prophecies, which indeed are grievous Burdens to them upon whom they are laid. See 2 Kings 9. 25. Jer. 23. 33, 36. b Of the City and Empire of Babylon by Cyrus, for their manifold and great Sins, and in order to the deliverance of his People.

*Chap. 18. 3. 2 * Lift ye up a banner c upon the high mountain d, exalt the voice unto them e, shake the hand f, that they may go into the gates of the nobles g.

c To gather Soldiers together for this Expedition. d Whence it may be discerned at a considerable distance. Withal he seems to intimate, that their Enemies should come from the Mountainous Country of Media. e To the Medes, who are named below, v. 17. f Beckon to them with your Hand, that they may come to this Service. g That they may go and fight against Babylon, and take it, and so enter into the Palaces of the King, and of his Princes, and spoil them at their pleasure; which the Medes and Persians did. The manner of Expression implies how easily and expeditiously they did their Work, that, like Cæsar, they might say, they only came, and saw, and overcame.

‖ Or, prepared ones. *Jer. 6. 4. 3 I have commanded my ‖ sanctified ones h, I have also called my mighty ones i for mine anger, even them that rejoyce in my highness k.

h The Medes and Persians, fitly so called, because they were solemnly defigned and set apart by God for his own Service, and for this holy Work of executing his just Vengeance upon them. i Those whom I have made Mighty for this Work. k Or, as others render it, in my glory, materially considered, to wit, in the doing of that Work which tends much to the Advancement of my Glory, in destroying of the Babylonian Empire. For otherwise the Medes had no regard to God nor to his Glory, but only to their own carnal Ends.

† Heb. the likeness of. 4 The noise of a multitude in the mountains, † like as of a great people: a tumultuous noise of the kingdoms of nations l gathered together: the LORD of hosts mustereth the host of the battel.

l The Medes and Persians, and other Nations which served under them in this War: of which see Jer. 25. 14. & 27. 7. & 50. 41.

5 They come from a far Country, from the end of heaven m, even the LORD, and the weapons of his indignation n, to destroy the whole land o.

m From the ends of the Earth under Heaven, as Mat. 24. 30. Which is not to be understood strictly and properly, but popularly and hyperbolically, as such Expressions are commonly used in Sacred and Profane Authors. And yet in some respects this might be truly said of Persia, which on the South-side was bounded by the Main Ocean; as for the same reason Sheba, a Part of Arabia, is called the utmost parts of the earth, Mat. 12. 42. n The Medes and Persians, who were but a Rod in God's Hand, and the Instruments of his Anger, as was said of the Assyrian, Isa. 10. 5. o To wit of Babylon, of which he is now speaking.

6 Howl ye, for the day of the LORD is at hand;
* *Joel 1. it shall come as a destruction p from the Almighty q.

p Or rather, a destruction or devastation shall come, as the LXX 23. Joel and Vulgar Latin render it. For this was not as a destruction, but 15. was a Destruction indeed. And the Particle as is seldom used to express not the likeness, but the reality of the thing, as Joh. 1. 14. q Who fighteth for your Adversaries, and against you, and therefore your Destruction is unavoidable.

‖ Or, faint. 7 Therefore shall all hands ‖ be faint, and every mans heart shall melt.

8 And they shall be afraid: pangs and sorrows shall take hold of them, they shall be in pain as a woman † Heb. amazed. † Heb. one. † Heb. a man his neighbour. † Heb. faces of the flames. that travelleth: they shall † be amazed † one at another r; their faces shall be as † flames s.

r To see so populous and impregnable a City as Babylon was, so easily and unexpectedly taken. s Heb. faces of flame, either pale with Fear, or inflamed with Rage and Torment, as men in misery frequently are. Some render it the faces of Lehabim, a People descending from Misraim, Gen. 10. 13. 1 Chron. 1. 11. i. e. black with pain, as men use to be: of which see Joel 2. 6. Nah. 2. 10.

9 Behold, the day of the LORD cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger t, to lay the land desolate; and he shall destroy the sinners thereof u out of it.

t Divers Words are heaped together, to signifie the extremity of his Anger. u The Inhabitants of that City, who were guilty of so much Idolatry and Cruelty, and all sorts of Luxury.

10 For the stars of heaven, and the constellations x thereof shall not give their light: the sun shall be
* *Ezek. 32. 7. Joel 2. 31. & 3. 15. Mat. 24. 29. Mar. 13. 24. Luk. 21. 25. *darkned y in his going forth z, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine.

x Which consist of many Stars, and therefore give a greater light. y Either, 1. properly and really, by an Eclipse; for Prodigies in Heaven do sometimes go before or accompany great and publick Calamities upon Earth: Or, 2. figuratively, and in appearance. All things shall look darkly and dismally; men shall have no comfort nor hope. See the like Descriptions of a most calamitous State, Isa. 5. 30. & 34. 4. Joel 2. 10, 31, &c. z As soon as he riseth, when he is most welcome to men, and giveth them hopes of a pleasant Day. As soon as they have any appearance or hope of amendment, they shall be instantly disappointed.

† Heb. evil upon the wicked and upon wicked. Iniquity. 11 And I will † punish the world a for their evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; and I will cause the arrogancy of the proud to cease, and will lay low the haughtiness of the terrible b.

a The Babyloniſh Empire, which is called the world, as the Roman Empire afterward was, Luke 2. 1. because it was extended to a great part of the World, and because it was vastly populous, and Babylon it self looked more like a World than one City. b Of them who formerly were very terrible for their great Power and Cruelty.

12 I will make a man more precious than fine gold; even a man than the golden wedge of Ophir c.

c The City and Nation shall be so depopulated, that few men shall be left in it.

‖ Or, throughly. 13 Therefore I will shake the heavens, and the earth shall remove out of her place d in ‖ the wrath of the LORD of hosts, and in the day of his fierce anger.

d A Poetical and Prophetical Description of great Horrours and Confusions, as if Heaven and Earth were about to meet together.

14 And it e shall be as the chaſed roe f, and as a sheep that no man taketh up g: they shall every man h turn to his own people, and flee every one into his own land.

e To wit, Babylon. f Fearful in it self, especially when it is pursued by the Hunter. g In a most forlorn and neglected condition. h Those Souldiers of other and more warlike Nations, whom she had hired to assist her; which she used to do at other times, but especially upon this great occasion: of which see on Jer. 50. 16. & 51. 9.

15 Every one that is found i shall be thrust through: and every one that is joyned unto them, shall fall by the sword.

i In Babylon, at the taking of it. The Expectation whereof made them flee away with all speed.

* *Psal. 9. Nah. 3. 10. 16 Their children also shall be * dashed to pieces before their eyes k; their houses shall be spoiled, and their wives ravished.

k As a just Recompence for the like Cruelty acted by them upon the Jews, 2 Chron. 36. 17. which also was foretold Psal. 137. 9.

17 Behold, * I will stir up the Medes l against them, which shall not regard silver, and as for gold, they shall not delight in it m.

l Under whom he comprehends the Persians, who were their Neighbours, and Confederates in this Expedition. m Which is to be understood comparatively. They shall more eagerly pursue the Destruction of the People, than the getting of Spoil; whereby it shall appear, that they are only the Executioners of my Vengeance against them; they will accept no Ranson to save their Lives.

18 Their bows n also shall dash the young men to pieces o, and they shall have no pity on the fruit of the womb; their eye shall not spare children.

n Under which are comprehended their Arrows, and possibly other Weapons of War; for so generally sometimes is the bow used in Scripture, as 2 Sam. 1. 18. Psal. 78. 9. Isa. 41. 2. o Or, shall pierce the young men through, as the Chaldee renders it.

19 And Babylon the glory of Kingdoms p, the beauty of the Caldees excellency q, shall be † as when * *Deut. 29. 23. Isa. 1. 9. Jer. 49. 18. & 50. 40. Amos 4. 11. Zeph. 2. 9. God overthrew * Sodom and Gomorrah r.

p Which once was the most noble and excellent of all the Kingdoms then in being, and was more glorious than the succeeding Empires, whence it was represented by the head of Gold, Dan. 2. 37. q The famous and beautiful Seat of the Chaldean Monarchy. r Shall be totally and irrecoverably destroyed, as is more fully expressed in the following Verses. Which yet was not done immediately upon the taking of the City by Darius and Cyrus, but was fulfilled by degrees, as is confessed by Historians, and appears this day.

20 It shall never be inhabited s, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation: neither shall the Arabian t pitch tent there, neither shall the shepherds make their fold there.

s After the Destruction threatned shall be fully accomplished. t Who dwelt in Tents, and wandred from place to place, where they could find Pasture; but shall avoid this place, either because the Land, once noted for great Fruitfulness, is now become Barren; or because the Land is accursed by God, and abhorred by all men; or for fear of the Wild Beasts, as it follows.

† Heb. Lilin. 21 But † wild beasts of the desart shall lie there u, and their houses shall be full of † doleful creatures, and ‖ † owls shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there x.
